Order of WORKERS PARTY, 799 Broadway, New York City.

Workers Party Members! A Great Task Lies Before You!

To All Branches and Members of the Party!

Comrades: The Chicago Convention, representing SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND ORGANIZED WORKERS has spoken. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been organized.

Our party has said over and over again that the organization of such a mass party to fight the political battles of the industrial workers and farmers in the present struggle would be the greatest step forward in the history of the labor movement in this country.

This step has been taken. The Chicago Convention in spite of petty opposition practically unanimously declared for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The organized workers and farmers of this country are at last on record and on the march.

Our work of agitation and education in favor of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party contributed a great deal to the achievement of this result. Thru our work in the various workers' organizations we won the confidence of thousands of workers who have taken a position of leadership in the struggle for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

At the Chicago convention we proved thru our actions that we would not hamper the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The convention had but one plank in their program—THE FEDERATED FARMER-LABOR PARTY MUST COME OUT OF THE CONVENTION. It will be a sorry day for us if the delegates stood on the same platform. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party was born.

Comrades! Now that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been born an even greater task than the work of agitation and organization lies before us.

The principles, the organization structure of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party were created by the Chicago Convention. The representatives of the Hundred Thousand Workers and Farmers approved of the statement of principles and organizational structure. Now we must build the organization itself.

We must put flesh and muscles upon the structure which has been created. We must rally, not only the six hundred thousand workers and farmers whose representatives were at Chicago, but even greater masses in support of the new party.

Our party must devote itself to this task as energetically as it did to the task of agitation and education. For the immediate future the greater part of our energies, our organizational strength must go into the work of building the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Our party has proven itself a real Communist party in its work for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. It has proven its strength and discipline. Every party member who saw the party at work in Chicago was proud of his party.

Let us prove that we are worthy of the name Communists even more definitely in the new great task that lies ahead of us.

Let every party member, every party unit, go to work at once to build the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

This is the program of action:

1. Endorsement of the work of the Chicago Convention and affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party must be secured from workers' and farmers' organizations.

2. The formation of provisional committees of action should become the order of the day. Every party unit should immediately call conferences of all workers' and farmers' organizations in the territory in which they are members. Resolutions of endorsement of the affiliation should be sent to The Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Clark Building, 800 North Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

3. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party must be built up in every city and town and in every rural district. The party branches should take the initiative in forming a local committee, on which should be represented, in addition to the party branches, co-operative organizations, political groups which should call a city convention to organize the local unit of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The Organization Rules of the Party explain the method of forming such branches.

The Labor Party Fund

3. The "For A Labor Party Fund" to which the party requested party branches and sympathisers to contribute is needed more today than it was before the Chicago Convention. The response which the branches make to the party appeal will determine the resources of the National Organization in carrying on the work to help build the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Every party unit which has not done its share toward raising the $10,000 fund should send in its contribution immediately. The prompter the action the greater the results.

Comrades! The party has never asked funds for a greater work than the "For A Labor Party Fund." Now your appreciation of the importance of this task by acting quickly on the party appeal.

TO WORK, COMRADES!

The three definite points above give every party member the opportunity to go to work at once and to help develop the work of the Chicago Convention so that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will quickly become a powerful, functioning organization carrying on the political struggles of industrial workers and farmers.

Comrades! There never was such an opportunity to make labor count in the United States. The hopes and aspirations which have inspired tens of thousands of workers who have suffered and sacrificed in the interest of the labor movement in this country can be realized.

Labor, the giant challenging the rule of the exploiters, is coming into being. The mighty strength of the masses of industrial workers and farmers is being mobilized.

AS COMMUNISTS WE MUST BE THE LEADERS, THE VANGUARD IN THIS WORK.

TO WORK!

LET US SHOW THAT WE ARE EQUAL TO THE GREAT OPPORTUNITY THAT LIES BEFORE US.

Fraternally yours,

Central Executive Committee, Workers Party of America,

C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

determined of the miners' union here) have pledged their support to the struggle of the steelworkers. In spite of the threats of Lewis and his gang at Indianapolis that expulsion would follow any strike to help the steelworkers. At the district convention of the miners last month a resolution was unanimously carried pledging the full support of the miners to the steelworkers in their struggle. Immediately the news of the attack upon the pickets spread around the miners called a mass meeting on Monday evening and despite the fact that it was a holiday about 7500 miners attended. The officers of the Steel Workers Union told the story of the attack on the pickets, and the miners were fighting mad when they realized the lengths to which the governments are willing to defend the profits of the corporation. A resolution giving the governments until midnight Tuesday to withdraw the police and troops was carried unanimously.

On Tuesday afternoon the miners did not wait for the signal to start the strike, they quit work in a body. The mass meeting in the evening heard the District Officers relate their conversation with the Provincial Secretary in Sydney. He had urged that the miners do not strike until an investigation was held on the actions of the police and troops. The miners replied that this call was a fight and they were not prepared.

The capitalist papers have carried the report that if the miners strike on any pretext whatever in this District Lewis will withdraw the charter of the District. The decision of the District Convention to take a ballot on a strike for the 1921 rates showed Lewis to be on the side of the corporation when he ordered the miners to live up to a contract that was extracted from them by force and which the corporation has repeatedly broken. Lewis will do all in his power to smash the solidarity of the miners here but he is going to meet with a most determined resistance. The miners here will maintain the solidarity of their ranks despite the governments and their troops, the corporation, and John L. Lewis.

The International Union to which the steel workers belong is a farce. It has 8000 members and is led by the best friends of the steel magnates, "Grandma" Tighe came here and bestowed his blessing upon the union and advised them to respect the law. The opinions of the steel workers of him are unprintable. The action of the steel workers of Sydney should be an inspiration for the thousands of steel workers of the United States to organize and fight the long hours and low wages under which they suffer. One thing is certain Tighe and his sewing circle will not organize the steel workers—the militants of the labor movement will have to take up that task.

The steel workers are fighting for a slight increase in wages and their union. The attack of the mounted police and the troops on the pickets has resulted in a united front of the miners and the steel workers. The rest of the labor movement of this country under the thumbs of traitors like Tom Moore will deplore the "rash actions" of these workers. But these workers are fighting for the whole of the labor movement. They are battling to prevent the smashing of the entire movement by armed force. The labor fakers can be relied upon to sabotage them as much as they can. But the miners and steel workers of Cape Breton will fight to the last ditch to save their union and their lives from the attacks of the troops and the mounted police sent by the "Democratic" Government of Canada to protect the profits of the British Empire Steel Corporation and force men to work for 32 cents an hour and work brutally long hours.

Harding Reaches Alaska

An eminent diplomat once said: "Give your enemy the right kind of a bad name and half your battle against him is won." Harding is apparently resorting to this political refuge in order to keep his Party's house in order. Having reached Alaska after a series of disappointing campaign speeches, he has changed his campaign somewhat.

Harding now dubbs himself "an apostle of understanding." He made a fervent plea to the Alaskans to have his Administration go down in history "as a period of understanding."

All of which leads one to believe that "normalcy," which rode in on a wave of a seven million majority in 1920, is now dead beyond any hope of resurrection, even thru the most devout prayers. A new national election is in sight, New smoke screens must be manufactured to hide the crimes of the reactionary Government. Behind all this talk of "understanding" there are sinister capitalist forces at work spreading the most dangerous brand of misunderstanding amongst the workers and farmers.

The last Congress was the most costly one the American masses have ever had to bear. Instead of a period of "understanding" Harding's first two years should go down in history as a period of fabulous bonuses to the powerful employing class interests. The railroads, the packing and shipping and banking interests have all been handed handsome gifts totalling $14,000,000,000. Thru the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Law the capitalists will clean up a bonus of $1,715,000,000 on agricultural products and $2,282,000,000 on light and heavy steel products. At the same time Congress reduced every appropriation for research and education and put the soldiers' bonus on the fire.

En route to Alaska Gamaliel spoke the same Gospel of the employing class tho he attempted, within the limits of his temperament, to hide his real plans behind glittering generalities. All in all, Harding's tour may be summed up as a series of promises to the big industrial and financial interests to render them increasing services. So obvious has this effort of Harding been that the Republican Standpatter Press, seeking Minnesota's vacant seat in the Senate has been forced openly to repudiate the Fordney Tariff Act. Press is throwing Harding overboard in order to prevent the Minnesota working and farming masses from understanding the real conditions prevailing in the country.

Yet, we welcome Harding's plea for a period of "understanding." We hope the working and farming masses will take the President's advice not only to heart but also to mind. The sooner the exploited masses will understand the true class relationship in the United States, the sooner are they likely to kick and to bite hard. And the sooner they kick hard, the sooner the employing class will be put out of business and relegated to the limbo of forgotten tyrannies.

A Timely Pamphlet

By ELMER T. ALLISON

"The American Foreign-Born Worker," By Clarissa S. Ware, Published by the Workers Party, 799 Broadway. Price 15 cents.

The present industrial activity of the country has brought up for attention of the employing class and, therefore, of the government, the matter of the immigration laws. Naturally, the puppets of Big Business sitting in places of governmental authority have leaped with alacrity into the spot-lights to give voice to their masters' wishes.

The remedies proposed by the two most outspoken Heralds of the Empire of Steel, Coal, etc., President Harding and Secretary of Labor Davis, are most enlightening as showing their end, of course, their masters' attitude toward the new comer to our shores. The President wants registration boards established at the points of embarkation abroad in order that only "desirables" may be able to run the gauntlet. We can imagine what a perfect system of registration could be instituted with, say, Mussolini.

Secretary of Labor Davis is for a finger-print, registration, annual enrollment system which would place every unnaturalized resident of the United States under supervision. Assuredly, the American foreign-born is up against a new game.

In "The American Foreign-born Workers," Clarissa S. Ware has given a little mine of information on America's foreign-born population, to which has been added colored charts which elucidate the statistics most interestingly.

No student of American labor history can leave out of calculation the foreign-born workers—we are a nation of foreign-born. The source of these streams of immigrants at different periods constitute an important phase of knowledge on this question. The Empire of Steel has been built on the mangled bodies and crushed bones of workers from one section of Europe. There are a hundred and one other points of equal worth developed in this pamphlet.

The pamphlet is an unanswerable argument for industrial and political unity of America's workers, foreign-born and native. And this, alone, can uproot the plans of the capitalist class from inaugurating a system of registration-espionage of the millions of foreign-born here, which would undoubtedly be followed by some similar registration of the native-born workers.

Our recommendation to you is that you send 15 cents in postage to the Workers Party and get a copy of this new up-to-date pamphlet.

Order of WORKERS PARTY, 799 Broadway, New York City

Young Workers League in Fight on Militarism

The Young Workers League of New York has sent the Central Trades and Labor Council a stiff protest against their action in allowing the Citizens' Military Training Camps to solicit recruits in the unions. A letter was also sent to every union affiliated with the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York asking them to demand that their delegates to the central body vote to reconsider their action. Here is the letter:

Central Trades and Labor Council
New York City.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

It has been brought to our attention that your body, representing the organized workers of this city, has officially permitted representatives of the Citizens' Military Training Camps Association to appear before Local Bodies to appeal for recruits to the military training camps.

The Young Workers League, representing that section of the working class which is directly affected by all militaristic preparations, protests against your action, which is, in effect, an official sanction of an attempt to plant the seeds of militarism among our young people.

The Citizens' Military Training Camp is but a subterfuge for the preparation of an army for possible wars, and your organization in permitting itself to be used in the furnishing of cannon-fodder for the benefit of war profiteers. It is extremely regrettable that the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York should be party to such an antiworking class move as to aid in the recruiting of an unnecessary armed force, especially in the experience of Organized Labor during and following the World War. The horrors of the war, in which millions of young workers took part and lost their lives, was a signal for the onslaught on the Labor Unions. The only thing to drive began with the disbanding of the army.

We, the youth of the working class, take part in all your struggles for higher wages, better working conditions and more effective organization. With you we are fighting against the enslavement of the youth of this country. In our fight against militarism, we deem it our duty to take part in protecting the youth against their militarization.

The Young Workers League of New York appeals to you as brothers in our common struggle to await the word that you have reconsidered your step in aiding in the militarization of the youth of our country.

Fraternally yours,

Young Workers League of America,
Local New York.

Shopmen Hear Labor Party Talk

CONCORD, N. H.—In the hall of the Central Labor Union here many striking shopmen heard a talk on "The Labor Party" by William Sinness, District Organizer for New England of the Workers Party. It was the first attempt in recent times to hold a Workers Party meeting in Concord, which is mainly a railroad shop town.

Gompers' policy on the Labor Party and his "friends of the workers" were stripped naked, since at least one of those present stated before the meeting that the Governor was a "friend of labor."

The shopmen were very much interested in the work of the Railway Amalgamation Committee, and ordered a number of copies of the official organ of the committee.

Brutal Dictatorship of Bosses Backs 12-Hour Day

the Steel Trust a total loss of over two billion dollars, Senator Underwood declared that the steel industry "is the most FEUDAL thing that it is a crime and a shame to tolerate in the midst of this country."

Governor Is Responsible for Continuation of 12-Hour Day

Coming to the very core of the question of the persistence of the 12-Hour Day and the Steel Strike, the Interchurch Report says: "Governor Pinchot has said that: 'The Government at most is the chief cause for the loss of the 1919 strike was the refusal of the Steel Magnates to invoke governmental agencies and by public opinion.' In this sense it is easy to understand that it is the strike 'the foundations of the United States Government were involved.'"

But perhaps the most imposing evidence of the relationship between the Steel Trust and the Government is to be found in the fact that the Chairman of the Steel Strike Committee investigating the Steel Strike bowed to Mr. Gary that he himself was in favor of the Open Shop. Tersely put, the basic feature of the Government's whole policy is thus shown in the following from the Interchurch report:

"In the twenty-eight pages of the Senate Committee's Report on the Steel Strike much space is devoted to the need for Americanization. Only a few lines were devoted to the 12-Hour Day."

And this Americanization has meant to the Steel workers only gruesome suffering and unrestrained terrorism!

Local Government Tyranny Rampant in Steel Area

As soon as the steel workers went into the struggle against the 12-Hour Day the Government—Municipal, State, and National—leaped to the defence of the employers. Describing this situation confronting the strikers the Interchurch investigators reported that:

"Local magistrates, police authorities, etc., around Pittsburgh were frequently steel mill officials. In other cases steel mill officials exercised police authority without the excuse of having been previously elected to public office. For example, besides Sheriff Haddock of Allegheny County whose brother was superintendent of an American Sheet and Tin Plate plant (Corporation subsidiary), Mayor Crawford of Duquesne was the brother of the President of the McKeesport Tin Plate Co.; President Moon of the Borough of Homestead was chief of the mechanical department of the Homestead Mills; Burgess Lincoln of Munhall was a department superintendent in the same mill. The Burgess of Clairton was a mill official, etc., etc. . . . When a striker was taken before the mill official public-official he was likely to suspect connections between his fate and the steel company's desires. In many other cases officials of the mills only, personally, gave the orders for arrests, and the decisions whether the arrested should be jailed or not, generally after learning whether the striker would return to work or not.

"The charges on which strikers were arraigned before local magistrates, then imprisoned or fined, were often never recorded and never learned by the prisoners. Regarded formal specifications included 'stopping men from going to work,' 'cursing' (the State police or deputies), 'abusing,' 'refusing to obey orders' (to move on, etc.), 'going out of his house before daylight,' 'laughing at the police,' 'throwing strike cards out on the street,' 'smiling at State police.' Fines ran from $10 to $50 or $600 Imprisonment terms ran up to months. Arrested men were frequently taken, not to jail, but inside the steel mill and held there. The charges of beatings, clubbings, etc., often substantiated by Doctors and eye-witnesses' affidavits, were endless and monotonous; in most communities the only public official to appeal to turned out to be another steel mill official.

The terrible odds overwhelming the workers in their fight against the Two-Shift System is thus brought home forcefully in the following from the answer of the Strike Committee to Wilson's request for a postponement of the strike.

"Thru the efforts of the representatives of the Steel Industry, officials in various localities have denied the men free assembly and free speech. Instances are too numerous where meetings have been suppressed, men arrested, charged on unfounded charges, excessive bail required, and cruel punishment imposed, all without warrant in law and justice.

"As one of many examples: In the city of McKeesport a meeting held by the men within their constitutional rights was broken up and men arrested and thrown into jail, charged with riot, and held to the excessive bail of $5,000 each, while one of the hirelings of the steel industry, arrested for the murder of a woman speaker at Brackenridge, Pa., is being held under bail of about $2,500. Another patent example is Hammond, Indiana, where four defenseless union men were charged upon and killed by hired detectives of the steel industry, and witnesses on behalf of their survivors have been so intimidated and maltreated that the truth of the killing was suppressed.

"Guns and cannon have been planted in mills, and highly charged electric wires have been strung around their premises.

"Armed men in large numbers are patrolling about intimidating not only the workers but, in many communities, anyone showing the slightest sympathy with the men."

White Terror in Pennsylvania

Regarding the ruthless suppression of the steel workers in Pennsylvania the Interchurch investigators had this to say:

"In Western Pennsylvania the civil rights of free speech and assembly were abrogated without just cause, both for individuals and the strikers' organizations, and rights of strikers were violated by the State constabulary and sheriff's deputies.

"Police authorities, in some cases, acted against groups of workmen in the interests of the steel companies. Instances of many cases in Western Pennsylvania, consistently authorities and institutions were subservient to the maintenance of one corporation's anti-union policy."

Typical of the inestimable aid given by the Government to the Steel Trust is the following conditions portrayed by the Senate Committee:

"In the Pittsburgh district, however, meetings have been prohibited from time to time in the campaign for organization started in McKeesport and Duquesne, several months before the strike was called, the organizers were forbidden to hold meetings of any sort in halls within the city or on vacant lots anywhere in the vicinity. Appeal was made without avail to the Mayor of the city and the Governor of Pennsylvania. In Clairton meetings were held on Sundays for several weeks prior to the strike, but on September 21 the sheriff proclaimed that there should not be any meetings of any kind anywhere."

Shedding further light on the plight of the workers, the Monthly Labor Review for December, 1919, says:

"There were 15,000 men on strike in Pittsburgh proper. The mayor of the city permitted these men to hold meetings in their own Labor Temple which accommodates only 2,000 men and one other place which the strikers maintained was inaccessible because of the distance from the strike district. Permits to hold meetings were refused at Bradock and in other towns where meetings were permitted it was stipulated that there should be no speeches in foreign languages. The union organizers were not permitted to pass handbills containing a notice of meetings even tho such meetings were to be held on private property with the consent of the owner. Not more than two persons were allowed to congregate on the streets at one time. Newspapers refused to publish notices of union meetings. In some instances in which halls had been rented by the union organizers notices were found posted, on the night of the meeting, declaring the halls closed by the order of the Board of Health. All owners of halls were instructed not to rent them without a permit from city authorities. The authorities, usually the sheriff or the mayor, refused to grant the permit."

The whole situation on this section of the Strike Army's front is thus summed up by the Interchurch Report:

"Free elections were customarily impossible in steel towns in Western Pennsylvania due to clearly understood manipulations by the steel company officials who were public officials.

"That is, democratic practices as well as constitutional rights are decisively modified by the Steel Companies in Western Pennsylvania, and the 'modifications' are for the purpose of defeating labor organizations. . . . During the strike terms of personal rights and personal liberty were wholesale; men were arrested without warrants, imprisoned without charges, their homes invaded without legal process, magistrates' verdicts were rendered frankly on the basis of whether the striker would go back to work or not."

Military Rule in Indiana

In Indiana the conditions were not different from those in Pennsylvania, as can be seen from the following despatch appearing in the New York Times of October 16, 1919:

"The first outdoor meeting of the strikers since the arrival of the troops in Gary was held this afternoon by permission of Colonel Hagen, who sat on the speakers' platform during the meeting. Several service men were in the crowd of nearly 3,000 strikers, and soldiers were stationed on the outskirts. Near the park machine guns were held in readiness."

On the developments in this strike area the Interchurch Report said:

"General Wood declared that the army would be neutral. He established rules in regard to picketing. These rules were so interpreted and carried out as to result in breaking up the picket-line. One picket, for example, would be permitted at a certain spot; if the striker who came up to relieve the picket, stopped to converse with him and to receive reports and instructions, both strikers would be arrested. Delays and difficulties would attend the release of these men from jail or 'bull pen.' The picket line thus dwindled and its disappearance signalled to the Gary workers that the strike was breaking. Army officers sent soldiers to arrest union officers in other trades, for example, for threatening to call a strike on a local building operation. Workers thruout the city believed that the Federal Government opposed them and that the regulations would stay as long as the steel workers remained on strike. The army was not withdrawn until the strike was declared off."

Interlocking System of Company Spies and Federal Agents

In many instances the spies of the Steel Trust are the same ones who are agents of the Department of Justice. In other instances they work hand in glove in keeping the workers chained to the 12-Hour Day. Apropos of this interlocking system of slave-driving, the Interchurch investigators showed:

"The Commission's investigators, asking the officers of a company in the Pittsburgh district for information concerning their machinery for ascertaining strikers' needs, encountered this thing: Lying in the labor file. The labor file, the company's basis for a labor policy, consisted of the secret service report of various detectives and of 'labor agencies.' There were misspelled reports of 'undercover-men,' 'operatives X, Y, and Z,' contracts for their services, official letters exchanged between companies giving lists of strikers, commonly known as 'black lists.' In some instances original confidential scraps of paper contained secret denunciations of workers, which denunciations, raised to the dignity of typed documents, were then circulated to other companies and sent on to the Federal Department of Justice. The names of independent concerns and of subsidiary companies of the Steel Corporation appear on letterheads showing how this information or misinformation was passed along."

The Commission further reported that:

"In McKeesport in one raid 79 workmen were taken, three were detained and one on final examination was held by the Federal authorities. Federal officers testified that the denunciations which had led to these arrests were made by plant detectives or 'under-cover-men' of the steel companies, many of them sworn in as Sheriff's deputies during the strike. In the Pittsburgh district raids and arrests for Bolshevism were made on the sole complaint of company 'under-cover-men' . . .

"These company spy-systems carry right thru the United States Government . . . Federal immigration authorities testified to the Commission that raids and arrests for 'radicalism', etc., were made, especially in the Pittsburgh district, on the denunciation and secret reports of the steel company's 'under-cover-men,' and the prisoners turned over to the Department of Justice. The Commission's labor file enabled the student to follow one such paper thru to the Government. It is given here as offering light upon the question why many workingmen, especially steel workers, have come to assert that the Government, AS GOVERNMENT, has taken sides in industrial warfare; has taken sides against striking working men . . .

The testimony of a Federal officer of long official experience, made at a hearing of the Commission of Inquiry in November in Pittsburgh was: . . . 90 per cent of all the radicals arrested and taken into custody were reported by one of the large corporations, either of the steel or coal industry. I mean by that, that these corporations are loaded up with what they call 'under-cover' men who must earn their salaries, and they go around and get into these organizations and report the cases to the detectives for the large companies. The detectives in turn report to the Chief of Police of the city. Generally, the chiefs of police in these small cities around Pittsburgh were notified. They send a man to examine them to see if there are any extreme radicals or anarchists among them."

Conclusion

The 12-Hour Day is still in force because the workers have not been able to compel the Steel Trust to drop it, largely because of the unlimited aid rendered to the Steel bosses by the Government. The entente cordiale between the Steel Trust and the Government runs into every ramification of the Governing agencies of the country—Municipal, State, and Federal.

When the strike deputations of workers sought aid from Attorney General Palmer his only answer was a commendation of a "patriotic" society's effort to run labor "agitators" out of Pennsylvania. Thus wrote the Attorney General on November 25, 1919: "It is a pity that more patriotic organizations do not take action similar to that of your order."

According to the Interchurch Commission the attitude of the Government towards the struggle of the workers against the 12-Hour Day could be summed up in these words: "Civil peace could be preserved only by interference with the existence of ordinary civil liberties on the part of a large proportion of the population."

How deadly effective a strike-breaking policy this practice of the Government is, is proven by the following estimate of the Senate Committee:

"This denial of free speech and assemblage had an undeniable influence on the strike. In Duquesne, for example, where meetings were prohibited, only 5 per cent of the men were reported to be organized. In Cleveland and Lackawanna, where the men were allowed to meet, approximately 80 per cent were reported to be organized, and the mills practically closed down when the strike was called."

No worker should or can take seriously Harding's last plea in behalf of the abolition of the 12-Hour Day. The very reply of Gary accepting the President's plea in instituted the 8-Hour Day "when there is a surplus of labor available" unmasks the joint hypocrisy and fraud of the promises of the Chief Executive of the country and the Chief Executive of the Steel Trust. On this basis, the President has actually not gone one bit further than the Iron and Steel Institute. Harding has only lightened his burden of apologies for the coming campaign and saved the Republican Party the Steel campaign contributions.

write as follows after reading a copy of this new, bold book on the working class struggle in America.

"It is one of those books which brings to mind the ancient formula, 'I would like to distribute a million copies.' It is a most useful collection of the facts of the use by the capitalist class of the forces of government, in place of their own hired strike-breaking agencies. I will help to pass the word on to the leaders of labor in this country that here is a mine of information which they should possess and pass on to the workers."—Upton Sinclair.

"I am very much pleased with 'The Government—Strikebreaker' and consider it a distinctive contribution to American labor literature."—William F. Dunne, Editor, Butte, Mont., Bulletin.

"I have read 'The Government—Strikebreaker' with more than a keen interest. I wish I were in a position to place a copy in the hands of every American worker, but since I am not I will ask you to send me five copies for which I will send check."—Duncan McDonald, Editor, Illinois Industrial Review.

Men who lead the American working class and workers who do their own thinking and draw their own conclusions appreciate this book, this mine of authentic information on the government of the U. S. A. and its official and unofficial actions during the most critical labor situation of a decade.

Upton Sinclair's Latest and Greatest Work. What One Critic Says:

H. L. MENCKEN on "The Goose-Step":

"The Goose-Step" came in yesterday afternoon, and I fell on it last night. My sincere congratulations. I have read on and on with constant joy in the adept marshaling of facts, the shrewd presentation of personalities, the lively and incessant humor. It is not only a fine piece of writing; it is also a sound piece of research. It presents a devastating, but, I believe, thoroly fair and accurate picture of the American universities today. The faults of "The Brass Check" and "The Profits of Religion" are not in it. It is enormously more judicial and convincing than either of those books. You are here complaining of nothing. You simply offer the bald and horrible facts—but with liveliness, shrewdness, good humor. An appalling picture of moral and mental debasement. Let every American read it and ponder it!

Lewis, Weak, in Resort to Mob Tactics

tinued loss of prestige among the coal miners. He was especially smarting under the defeat of his candidate in District No. 1.

"Lewis launched forth into a premeditated attack on the Trade Union Educational League," declares Manley, "charging that William Z. Foster and his many agents are subsidized by Moscow, from which source, Lewis said, according to the files of the government, $7,000,000 had been received during the last two years."

After ridiculing this charge Manley said that, "All those present at the convention admitted that Lewis' attack was the most violent and vitriolic he was capable of. It aroused his payroll gang to a pitch of frenzy, especially when he said, 'You, Joseph Manley, and you, J. P. McCarthy, go to your beloved Russia,' followed by the statement, 'Remove your carcasses from this convention.' This was the signal for the payroll gangsters and the coal operators' agents to make a rush for the foot of the stairs, almost cutting off our exit," continued Manley. "The two of us, with Mrs. McCarthy between us, walked quietly thru this mad gang.

"The only words passed were when I demanded the right to be heard. My request was scoffed at. I couldn't be heard over the mad, frantic cry of the machine gangsters.

"I want to emphasize that the rank and file delegates kept to their seats in spite of the obvious attempts of Mr. Lewis and his crowd to incite the entire convention.

"On reaching the street, a newspaperman rushed up to my side and requested me to make a statement. He said he thought what had happened constituted the most outrageous situation he had ever witnessed. When the payroll gang overheard this statement of the newspaperman and my reply, that I would be glad to make a statement, but not on the sidewalk, they made a mad rush at us. They followed us as we walked the full block to the Court House Square. Here their mad threats of bodily injury took the form of action. They made wild lunges at us and when we attempted to defend ourselves some of them held our arms. If it had not been for our presence of mind, and I have the to be stampeded, no doubt a real riot would have developed. As it was, we walked thru the streets of Scranton, with this wild payroll gang uttering all kinds of dire threats. They followed us as far as the Casey Hotel. In the lobby of this hotel I made my statement to the newspapermen, in spite of the threats of violence of the boldest of the gangsters. So far as I know, my statement was never published in any paper.

"I want to say the worst story printed about this affair appeared in the columns of the Socialist daily, the New York Call. It worse than misrepresented the whole proposition. It tried to show that the progressive elements in the convention supported Lewis' lynching tactics. Nothing could be farther than the truth. The Call representative was not present when I gave out my statement in the lobby of the Casey Hotel. He kept at a safe distance during the entire melee.

"There is no doubt that the direct cause of this attack was the great progress being made by the International Progressive Miners' Committee. I might also mention as a contributing cause the successful efforts of J. P. McCarthy and Mrs. Ida McCarthy for the Labor Defense Council in District No. 1, where, against the most bitter opposition of the Lewis machine and the coal operators' agents, they succeeded in getting many local unions to donate large sums of money for the defense of the Communists on trial in Michigan."

In giving his views of the Scranton outrage Foster said:

"In all the history of the American labor movement, there has been no more disgraceful deed committed than the attack engineered by John Lewis upon Manley and Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy at the Scranton Convention. The whole thing was prearranged. Mr. Lewis, with malice aforethought, deliberately whipped up the passions of the crowd against our comrades, and then his machine supporters, by a prearranged signal proceeded to attack them. They were given no chance to say a word in their own behalf. The whole affair, a brutal exhibition of mob violence, might easily have ended in a tragedy, for which Lewis would have been wholly responsible. The significant thing in the incident is that Lewis must be driven to desperation by the great stirring of the rank and file that has taken place since the organization of the Progressive Miners' Committee. If he thinks that this incident eliminates justified discontent of the membership he will be sadly disillusioned. On the contrary, it will only influence the discontented all the more. Instead of blocking the Progressive Movement, Lewis' dastardly attack will only result in stimulating it."

Children Are Held as Peons in New Jersey

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

New Jersey is famed for many things. Every one knows New Jersey justice, swift and far reaching against striking and rebellious workers, careful and considerate when the "rights of property" or the welfare of "captains of industry" are at stake. More recently another characteristic has become known.

New Jersey can boast of a great number of the most productive sweatshops of the country. This does not mean that one could not find sweatshops galore in other states as well, but for some reason or other, New Jersey's hells just have come to the surface.

The State Labor Department, up to the present in utter oblivion regarding the existence of child labor, now feels obliged to personally conduct a campaign against this evil.

"It has been discovered that a number of sweatshops, particularly those in Northern New Jersey, are being operated in violation of the state law," reads a naive announcement of the Department of Labor.

Something that everybody knew for many years, has suddenly been "discovered." Campaign after campaign was conducted by the great labor organizations, especially those in the men's and women's garment trade. Strikes again have the Amalgamated Clothing Workers as well as the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union protested against the frightful conditions of child labor in New Jersey. But now, at last, these "discoveries" are made.

A few contractors have actually been tried and convicted for the violation of the labor laws. Some men were sentenced to 60 days in jail, but appealed, and there is no likelihood that they will ever serve. Three women exploiters were find $100 and $200. In all these cases it was proven that small children, some below school age, were employed in the manufacture of "sanitary" powder puffs, women's garments, children's clothing, dolls, toys and many other articles "guaranteed" to be made under the most sanitary conditions.

In all the cases which came to the attention of the authorities, it was found, that the work was done under most miserable conditions. Dingy rooms, not fit for any family to live in, were used as work shop and living quarters. Many of the children were ill, crippled and in some cases the victims of contagious diseases, while they were turning out dozen after dozen of powder puffs, dolls, etc. And the remuneration for the arduous labor of these little slaves? They earn as much as 25 cents a day or about $1.40 $2 a week.

About the worst sweatshops have been found in Hudson and Essex Counties. The violations of labor laws have been found so flagrant that Mayor Hague of Jersey City, as well as Mayor Breidenbach of Newark, found it necessary to confer with representatives of the State Department and to their respective Health Departments "to open war against the illegal home conditions. The Labor Department has sent out five inspectors to make a survey of sweatshop conditions in Essex County, and altogether twenty inspectors are distributed over the whole state. The survey is to last one week, and representatives of trade unions are invited to aid the state investigation.

But the sweatshop system is not the only manner of exploitation of child labor in New Jersey. It is not only the Labor Department which has made discoveries. Now comes the parole department admitting that in numerous cases boys, unfortunate enough to be "wards of the state," are taken out of the state institutions, such as orphan asylums, and turned over to farmers who are responsible to no one, except a parole inspector who may or may not inquire after the child every few years. Thru the arrest of a runaway farm boy in Hoboken, a virtual peonage system involving boys and girls in state institutions came to light.

Coal Report Is Challenge to All Labor

course, will be empowered to flood the mines with soldiers and conscripts the workers to dig coal.

In the last line of Harding ordered the governors of the coal mining states to hoist the flag over the tipples. Harding and Attorney General Daugherty of the Coal Association learned that bayonets could be used only to murder workers, not to dig coal. The "Face Workers" are aware of this fact and therefore propose a measure which affords the entering wedge to outright industrial slavery in the coal fields.

As to the course the President would pursue in fixing wages and prices we need but turn to the experience of the months of the last mine struggle. While the miners were fighting to prevent a wage cut, Harding was working overtime in showering praise upon the noble "conscience" of the operators who were charging $6 in excess of the maximum price per ton fixed by law.

Shut Eyes to Needs of Workers

The Commissioners purport to be anxious to stabilize the anthracite coal industry. The means suggested to achieve this purpose make this apparent to the most dull-witted. The anthracite industry is strongly monopolized. The owners are organized on a highly industrial basis. It is a close trade association of eight companies, controlled by some of the most powerful bankers in Wall Street. Yet, the Commission concerns itself with devising ways and means of protecting the interests of the operators in the event of the miners putting up a successful fight against their aggression. Tho the Report recognizes anthracite as a public utility, it goes out of its way to disclaim any intention whatsoever of disturb in the least the sanctity of the right of the owners to exploit the working masses thru the ownership of this necessity of life. On the contrary, the Commissioners here propose a plan to make more secure than ever the hold of the Operators on this vital necessity of life.

It is especially interesting to note that the Commission has found that in 1920 the production of anthracite was the largest per capita in 1900, tho the same man power used. When one compares this conclusion with the fact that from 1913 to 1920 the average power of anthracite wages rose only 7 per cent, all the balloon gossip about high wages in the anthracite industry is dispelled. In the words of the Report found, according to the Federal Trade Commission, that the margin per ton was "three times the pre-war margin." The Report goes on to say that: "It appears that earnings and conditions of labor offered by the anthracite industry are not attractive to young men, are not attracted labor in the same degrees as have the wages and conditions offered by other industries." The Report further does not offer any plan to make the working conditions and pay more attractive. Worse than that. This august body tries to drown the gullible in a sea of figures for washing away all notions that anyone might entertain as to profiteering by the Operators.

The Need for Nationalization

The report is a veritable eye-opener. It shows plainly that the only way out for the miners lies in the nationalization of the coal industry. And here the miners cross swords with the Commission which is headed by the millionaire engineer, John Hays Hammond, a friend of the Guggenheims, who are the dictators of West Virginia.

As long as capitalism prevails the most the workers can hope for is only partial nationalization of any industry. Even this partial nationalization will be a dead letter unless there is a powerful representation of workers and farmers in the Government. This partial nationalization of the coal or any industry can be realized only to the extent that the working and farming classes have political power.

When Harding appointed this Fact-Finding Commission he did not appoint a single representative of the workers on it. Only such representatives of the "public" as George Otis Smith, Chief of the U. S. Geological Survey and a frequent contributor to the "Coal Age," official organ of the National Coal Association; Judge Samuel Alschuler, of Chicago, who complacently stood by while the Packers defied his Arbitration Board and slaughtered the workers; and Edward T. Devine, a professional charity worker who turns out "social service" for the Rockefeller interests.

The whole history of this Commission is a warning and a challenge to the workers. It affords a superabundance of proof that the employing class has complete control of the government and uses it to protect its own interests. The workers cannot expect anything from this Government. No one can expect a pint jar to hold a quart. The organization and activities of this Commission mark another step in the direction of the increasing use of the ever-increasing centralized powers of Government against the working and farming masses.

Hit Socialists As Judases to United Front

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Picturing the Socialist Party as a Judas in the political labor movement, the Farmer-Labor Party, here, thru its official organ, the New Majority, replies to the refusal of the Hillquits, Bergers and Oneals to participate in the effort to build for a united Labor Party.

Jay G. Brown, the Farmer-Labor Party secretary, reports that many inquiries have come to his office asking why the Socialists declined the invitation to send delegates.

"Until June 21," he said, "the Farmer-Labor Party was without official information on the subject and could only refer enquirers to the dispatches contained in the press. It was on this date that the reply of the Socialist Party was received, under date of June 19, and several days after the major portion of the communication had been printed in the New York Call."

Secretary Brown further stated:

"The reply sets forth the belief that unless the active support of a majority of the great trade unions of the country can be enlisted, the effort to form a powerful political party would be disappointing. It assumed that this was lacking but did not feel disposed to accept an invitation (carrying with it no obligations) to send delegates to learn if its assumption was correct. The reply states, too, that the Socialist Party has decided to continue its affiliation with the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and appears to believe that the road to labor organizations into a movement for independent political action. The Socialist Party is somewhat confused in that some of the other bodies affiliated with the Conference for Progressive Political Action. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, for instance, does not state that it will be bound by the conclusions reached by the Farmer-Labor Party convention, but is willing to send delegates, learn what happens, and then be in a position to state its attitude intelligently.

"The action of the Socialist Party has been a disappointment to the Farmer-Labor Party. It felt the Socialist Party would be the last group to refuse. No obligation was exacted in advance, no expense was entailed, no pledge to abide by the findings was required.

"It is possible the big unions might be moved to declare for a labor party of those already committed to the idea, should they demonstrate their ability to unite and act together to some extent.

"To profess a desire for unity and then refuse to discuss means of achieving it is not a very consistent attitude. To withhold sending a communication for thirty days was discourteous; to publish the letter before mailing it was to capitalize the discourtesy.

"The Socialist Labor Party and the Socialist Party were the only political groups in the country to refuse the invitation. The former stated with candor and promptness that it did not feel the objects of the Farmer-Labor convention, if attained, would meet its idea of a labor party. The latter professes sympathy with the objects of the convention and then sets in motion an active propaganda to prevent its success.

"The Socialist Party letter says the time is not opportune to attempt energetic development of a labor party. In New York state the Socialist Party took the initiative something over a year ago in asking other groups to unite with it, which resulted in the formation of the American Labor Party. The New York branch of the Farmer-Labor Party has lacking in courage and a willingness to try experiments, accepted the invitation and joined in the effort. The American Labor Party in New York, at its second conference, February 24-25, 1923, where the Socialists were in a majority at a ratio of perhaps five to one, adopted a report saying: 'It is the conviction of your executive officials that the time was never more opportune for the building of a political organization, of labor in this country.'"

Party Stirs Old America, New England

By WILLIAM SIMONS

District Organizer, Workers Party

BOSTON, MASS.—Finnish, cafe, picnic, and dance hall, meeting halls, all over the U. S. A. and Canada, are now the scenes of millions of gallons of beer and dancing, wild exploding over the meteoric movement of the Finnish Workers' Party of this year. And the Declaration of Independence was read on July 4th, every word of it. Not like the California strike scene, where it was read and no one heard.

May more, an honorary job holder was fired, because he wanted to read an abridged version of that historic document, so dear to the hearts of the patriots, at the July 4th ceremonies. Patriotism—this burg oozes oodles of it. One move in any direction, and you are smeared with millions of it. And this is the environment, in which the New England District of the Workers Party must carry on its activities.

Open Air Speaking

WORCESTER.—Has conducted Sunday afternoon meetings on the City Hall steps from 4:45 to 5:45 P. M. since April 15, with local and district speakers. Bulk of speaking done by Comrades Abbott and Bloomfield of Worcester. Speakers listed: Reid, Corbin, Abbott, Bloomfield, Canter, Marks, Adler, Kasaner, Stavely, Simons.

BOSTON.—Open air meetings conducted twice a week; on the Boston Common every Sunday from 4 to 6 P. M.. Season opened on July 8th by the District Organizer. On Monday nights, at 8 P. M., at the corner of Woodrow and Blue Hill Aves., Dorchester. June 25, A Stavely of Providence and H. J. Canter, July 2, H. Adler and William Simons. The District Organizer will speak at this corner for several successive Mondays, with talks on "Amalgamation," "Labor Party," "Education," "American Democracy—a Capitalist Dictatorship."

NORWOOD.—Being refused a permit, the comrades will make an issue of the refusal.

A tour by the District Organizer is being arranged for open air speaking in points not covered by local speakers.

Welding the Party Together

Once a month, the District Organizer meets with the Federation Directors, Organizers, to take up the problems before the district. The first meeting a month ago served to acquaint the District Organizers with the other federations were doing for the development of the party. A copy of the minutes was sent to every branch for their information.

A similar result was achieved July 7th by a meeting of the C. C. C. secretaries. The responsibility of the secretary for the decline of his local was brought home by examples taken from this district. Sixteen points were considered; among them: industrial work, organization of new branches, the Labor Party, open air meetings, literature sales, Y. W. L., education.

The minutes of the Worcester C. C. C. were read, as a model for the activity of a local. The experiences of the secretaries were exchanged. The next meeting will take place in two months.

Finnish Annual Summer Festival

At the Finnish District Picnic held in Maynard, on June 30th and July 1st, more than 3,500 attended from all over the district. By train, by auto and by truck they came. A concert, a play, and several well rounded programs filled up two days. Athletic contests and calisthenics by groups from many cities showed the sport side of our movement.

Each program included a speaker to bring home some phase of the Communist movement. Most of the speakers were Finns, including Wm. Martilla and Aaro Hyrske, both of "Eteenpain," our Finnish daily in Worcester. At the Y. W. L. concert, H. Bloomfield spoke; and at the athletic grounds, the Party District Organizer.

About $3,000 were raised, to help carry on agitation among the Finnish population in this district, which contains a larger membership of Finnish Comrades than any other district.

The Young Workers came on from Boston by truck, fifty strong, and received a joyous proletarian welcome. Louis Marks, the Y. W. L. D. Org. being called on to point out the significance of the Y. W. L. to the movement as a whole; and he was not backward about pushing the Y. W. L. forward.

And yet, there are hundreds of party members who did not know of this picnic. An effort should be made to have Comrades attend the gatherings of each federation, and so break down the barriers of race and language.

600,000 Build the Federated Labor Party

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Six hundred and fifty delegates representing 600,000 organized workers created the Federated Farmer-Labor Party to fight the political battles of the industrial workers and farmers of the United States.

The convention after working out a plan of organization, a statement of principles, and electing a National Executive Committee on which are represented twenty-two national groups, adjourned until the latter part of December when another Convention will be held to nominate candidates for president and vice-president and adopt a platform for the 1924 campaign.

There were represented in the Chicago Convention political parties, trade unions, co-opertative organizations, workers fraternal and benefit organizations. More than 500 local trade unions and 25 central labor bodies, and one state federation of labor were represented. The national organizations of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Maintenance of Way Employes, Brick and Clay Workers' Union and Broom and Whisk Makers' Union either endorsed the Convention or sent observers to report back for later endorsement. Among the large Central Labor Bodies represented were Butte, Mont., Buffalo, N. Y.; Detroit, Mich., and Minneapolis, Minn.

The Ruthenberg Appeal

From the legal aspect the Michigan case is in the best possible shape. It is true that the Ruthenberg conviction came as a blow to those who hoped and expected an acquittal to set forever at rest the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism law. But under the circumstances the results of the Labor Defense Council work cannot be considered in any other light than a partial victory for labor.

Ruthenberg's case has now gone up on appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court. The conviction has definitely indicated that no more cases will be tried until after the legal questions presented by the Ruthenberg case have been decided. The trial Judge in granting leave to the defense to go up on appeal stated that the issues involved were fundamental and far-reaching. The Assistant Attorney General of Michigan, L. Smith, who took the lead in the prosecution and who was working hand in glove with the Department of Justice, has announced his resignation which means that Smith will no longer be connected with the prosecution.

Thus it appears that the State of Michigan has had a belly full of its performance in the task of doing the dirty work for the labor-hating heads of the Department of Justice. They recognize that the conviction in the Ruthenberg case in the face of an ever increasing public opinion in Berrien County in favor of the defendants was a freak victory which may never again be repeated in the cases of the remaining defendants.

Under such conditions the Ruthenberg appeal takes on the greatest importance. What the Judge stated was true. The issues involved touch upon the fundamentals of American basic law. Ruthenberg is the first person in all the history of jurisprudence who has been convicted for the crime of "Assembling with." Before this crime is established as a regular part of the American System of Labor Baiting it must be passed upon by the Michigan Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court. Every labor organization, every union man has a direct interest in the decision of this matter. The whole fabric of Labor Unionism which depends so largely on the freedom of assemblage for its very life, must out of self-protection support to the utmost the defense of this fundamental liberty.

To those who have made possible by their support the great fight of the Labor Defense Council it will not have to be urged. The great opportunity which the Labor Defense Council received when it took up the defense of the Michigan cases has not diminished. It is the task which remain to be decided are not the sensational kind but those which are decided in the dusky middle ages of Supreme Court chambers, the task of the Labor Defense Council supporters is none the less.

Finance the Labor Defense Council work for the appeal of the Ruthenberg case. That is a task that cannot be ignored by those who have so heartily supported the Michigan defense thus far. "The Worker" has co-operated in that task by sending to all of its subscribers Labor Defense Council contribution lists. We wholeheartedly urge our readers to use these lists to bring to the Labor Defense Council that financial support which will make it possible to carry on their great fight.

It is reported that Minnesota Republicans are urging President Harding to keep out of the campaign now on in this state. This action should be followed up by all labor inviting Harding to stay out of the country and remain in Alaska. We would send the whole capitalist system up north to keep him company. Progress will no doubt be made in that direction in the approaching Minnesota elections.

Austria—A Coolie Colony

It took Wall Street just 15 minutes to oversubscribe America's $25,000,000 share of the new League of Nations loan to Austria. J. P. Morgan is proud of his achievement and he has very good reasons to be. The swift and decisive success of this loan makes Austria a "Coolie Colony" of the League of Loot! And in the League of Imperialist Plunderers the United States has a voice and veto thru the clandestine participation of J. P. Morgan & Co., de facto representatives of American capital in every foreign financial enterprise.

For some time Austria has been in abject bondage to the Allies. Last October the League of Nations ordered Austria to get out of the wholesale business in paper crowns and limit itself to a retail distribution and manufacture of the worthless "Socialist" currency. Then Austria was made a League of Nations on condition that she would "abstain from all action, political, economic, or financial, which might impair her independence."

A lien was also placed on the gross income of the Tobacco Monopoly and Customs receipts. A Commissioner General was appointed to see that business interests should under no condition be forced to give way to the desires of the Austrian working masses to freedom. Now a second loan of $126,000,000 is being made to Austria to complete her servitude.

The victorious imperialists of Europe and America see in Austria a valuable base of operations against any revolutionary movement that might break out in Germany or in the Balkans. Then again, what they are trying out on Austria on a small scale they are planning to force on Germany on a much larger scale.

The Social-Democratic Party of Austria more than any other party is responsible for the tragic fate that has befallen the Austrian workers. It is the Social-Democrats who have handed over the country body and soul to the Shylocks of international finance. For many a year, the workers of Austria will be compelled to sweat and bleed in order to pay the exorbitant tribute that entered to their Allied bondsmen. Small wonder that it took our bankers less than 15 minutes to get in on the chance to rob the enslaved Austrian workers. Profits know no flags. Interest is international. J. P. Morgan & Co. and Downing Street know it. But the workers of the world don't yet understand it.

A PRIMER LESSON

Have mother and father a worried look? They have. Will the worried look come off? No. Not until the Coal Gas and other industries are run in the interest of the people. Not while they are run for "the service of the people" now. Oh, yes, in advertisements. But in reality, they are run for the profit of a few owners and stockholders.

The Mock-Trial at Wilmington

Now that we are approaching a national election and the air is thick with campaign talk, the Republican Administration is taking a few crooks as the goats. They are Republican office holders on the Government pay-roll at Wilmington, Delaware, the Republican Attorney General's staff is conducting the prosecution of the smaller fry responsible for the gigantic fraud perpetrated against the American people in the Chemical Foundation deal during the Great War. The Democratic Attorney General Palmer disposed of property to the Chemical Foundation Co. of Delaware, consisting of 4,800 patents, patent applications, etc., relating to dyes and chemicals for only $250,000. This sum was, at most only one-fiftieth of the actual value of the property and was not even equivalent to the total Patent Office fees.

Mr. Garvan, then chief investigator of the Alien Property Custodian, under orders of Franklin L. Polk, then Acting Secretary of State, was the leading person in organizing the firm to take over this property, Mr. Choate, Attorney for the new firm, was at the time in charge of, the Chemical Business Investigation activities of Palmer's Bureau of Investigation.

After March 4, 1919, Mr. Garvan, the President of the Chemical Foundation Company from its very inception, became the Alien Property Custodian in fact. After March 4th came a wholesale transfer of patents and trade marks to the Chemical Foundation Co. Thus, Mr. Garvan, as Alien Property Custodian, was bargaining with Mr. Garvan, the President of the Chemical Foundation Co. A very profitable game of politico-financial Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde stunts!

Mr. Palmer, whose heart bled for the law and order of profits, did not raise a finger against and closed both eyes to this deal. He was a partner to the game. The conspiracy to defraud the people of millions of dollars was conceived when he was Alien Property Custodian and was born when he became Attorney General.

No worker will take seriously this trial and others that might follow. No worker will take Harding seriously when, en route to Alaska, he fulminates against war grafters. Palmer will never be put in jail by Daugherty. A few second-raters at the game may get some slight punishment as accomplices in order to enable the Party in power to make political capital out of the proceedings.

Yet, despite the difference in political labels, the Republican Daugherty will do no more than scratch the outermost layers of the skin of his Democratic predecessor Palmer and his associates. As special investigator H. L. Scaife, whom Daugherty dismissed because he insisted on going thru with the war fraud cases, said: "So far as the Department of Justice is concerned, it no longer functions except in the capacity of first aid to crooks. . . . It is no longer a question of fidelity to Party. Both political Parties are corrupt, and both are controlled by the same interests."

Particularly in this fraud, nothing startling can happen, even if a verdict of guilty is reached. There are too many "important" people involved. Among the personnel associated with this transaction we find: Ralph Stone, President of the Detroit Trust Co.; Otto T. Barnard, President of the New York Trust Co.; B. Howell Griswold, Jr., of Brown Bros., Philadelphia bankers; and agents of the Labor-hating Du Pont de Nemours Company.

Politically, these mock-trials may be good investment for the Party in power. But no worker can and should expect a capitalist Government to resort to the practice of putting capitalists behind the bars, no matter what crimes these employers may be guilty of.

The Workers Party Convention

Having made known his unwillingness to be a candidate for the presidency, Wm. Z. Foster is steadily leading the forces of the members of his union, his candidature for district president under by a 10,000 majority. Reports to date indicate that the work of thus routing out the reactionary officials and electing progressives in their place; the Progressive Miners Committee gaining ground day by day for its rank and file program; having to face the radicals in the anthracite region and being compelled at their convention to endorse the same demands for increase in pay which he succeeded in defeating three days before. Lewis left his home for the convention of his union upon four comrades who were sitting in the convention hall watching the proceedings and had them assaulted and evicted.

The New York Call joins Lewis in his gangster tactics and becomes part of the Lewis' slugging machine. The story this sheet printed was yellower that that of the yellowest capitalist paper containing their report. Only after the story reported that Lewis attack a frame-up, others gave the facts, but it remained for the New York Call to join Lewis in the riot, shet every act of his, scurrilously attack the Trade Union Educational League and join the sluggers as against the four comrades who were attacked by insinuating that these comrades had lost the conviction of their principles in the mad onslaught.

Cappellini behaved in truest centrist style during it all. Having encouraged and accepted the assistance of progressives and radicals during his election campaign, having repeatedly declared himself in harmony with the progressive program, he began to dodge and hesitate when the papers announced that his election would be contested. He is intent upon winning the presidency of District 1. It was because of this that he sat very quiet during most of the proceedings and after the riot, placed himself with what appeared to him the controlling faction, the Lewis gang, at the convention. But the Lewis machine does not control in District 1. It suffered defeat there. And Cappellini will go back to the rank and file. And they will demand an accounting. The rank and file is progressive and this rank and file may yet straighten out Cappellini. The New York Call desires to make Cappellini and Lewis bed-fellows. We feel it won't succeed.

Here's Program Upon Which Federated Party Makes Its Appeal to Farmers and City Workers

The program setting forth the principles and policies upon which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party makes its appeal to the industrial workers and the working farmers of the United States is herewith published in full as follows:

Statement of Principles of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party

The government of the people for the people and by the people," which has in the past been the boast of American political life, no longer exists in this country. Today the government of the United States is a government of, for and by Wall Street and the financial and industrial system which it represents.

During the course of industrial development of the last half century in this country the industries, the mines and railroads, the factories and mills have come into the ownership and control of a small group of great capitalists who use these instruments of production and distribution to exploit and oppress the tens of millions of industrial workers and farmers who are dependent upon their use to earn for themselves and their families the necessities of life. These capitalist exploiters of the industrial workers and farmers have fastened their grip upon the government and made of it an instrument to maintain and uphold their special privileges and to aid them in levying ever greater toll upon the producers of wealth.

Since the end of war, out of which was to come greater opportunities of well-being and happiness for the people of this country—the use of the powers of government against the industrial workers and farmers and the aid of their exploiters has been more open and shameless than ever before.

In 1919, the federal government sent soldiers into the steel centers to help the great Steel Trust put down the strike of the workers struggling against the twelve hour day, for a living wage and the right to organize.

In the miners' strike of the same year the Wilson administration secured an injunction against the United Mine Workers of America denying it the right to use its own funds in the struggle of the miners against the coal barons. Since then the government has sought to have the United Mine Workers of America destroyed thru declaring it a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The government created the Railroad Labor Board as a weapon of the railroad owners against the railroad workers. This Railroad Labor Board forced the railroad shopmen to strike in 1922, thru reducing the wages below the standard of existence. When the railroads found themselves in a desperate condition during the strike the government rushed to their aid with the infamous Daugherty Injunction, which at one blow took from the industrial workers the right to freedom of speech, press, assemblage, the right to organize and to use their organized strength to better their conditions of life.

In the miners' strike of 1922 the administration used all its strength to help the coal barons destroy the organization of the miners and to establish the "open shop" in the coal industry. At the call of President Harding the governors of numerous states filled the mines with soldiers to help suppress the demand of the striking workers.

The courts have been equally different in serving the interests of the financial and industrial rulers who control the government. In every strike of any moment the industrial workers are face to face with injunctions through which the industrial masters seek to prevent them from using their organized strength to secure more of what they produce. In the Coronado decision the Supreme Court has given the employers a weapon with which to destroy every labor union in the land. The Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional all social legislation in the interest of labor. It has declared the child labor law unconstitutional. It has declared the minimum wage law unconstitutional. It throws the whole weight of the judicial power on the side of the financial and industrial bosses.

The powers of government are not only used to aid the financial and industrial system at the expense of the industrial workers and farmers. Thru tariff legislation, thru ship subsidies, thru looting of the government in settlement of war contracts, thru guaranteeing of railroad profits and settlement of railroad claims growing out of war-time government operation by the Esch-Cummins Act, hundreds of millions are turned into their coffers.

Statement of Principles

Legislation supposedly in the interest of the farmers is turned into means of further enrichment of the bankers. Farm credit bills are so drawn as to aid the great banking institutions and their smaller parasites and gives them new means of asking for themselves the product of the workers of the land. The government refused to take any action toward establishing government owned marketing facilities and helps the railroads to maintain high railroad freight rates.

The Federal Reserve Banking System has served the masters in permitting extravagant over-expansion of city industries so that the farm is robbed of its labor supply. This is repeatedly followed by drastic depressions and unemployment that reduces the city worker to servitude and poverty. Millions are forced into idleness every few years. This condition likewise spells ruin to the farmer, for in 1921 it reduced the purchasing power of the city worker by six billions in wages alone. More than five millions of workers were forced to walk the streets in search of jobs that were denied them.

In a depression farm prices drop to ruinous levels; still the farmers and consumers are forced to continue to pay peak prices. This is made possible because of the factory's superior control of production. Industry thru forces unemployment onto the city worker to reduce wages and at the same time it keeps its prices high by curtailing its output. The present banking system is largely responsible for the high prices the consumer now pays.

The power of the government is openly used by the financial lords of Wall Street to open up weaker countries for their investments and to protect these investments. Since the Spanish-American war, American Imperialism, "Dollar Diplomacy" has overthrown the government of Haiti and Santo Domingo, reduced Nicaragua to vassalage, and made Cuba a protectorate of the United States in the interest of the Sugar Trust. The Mexican Government is refused recognition and coerced in the interest of oil and banking capital. Soviet Russia is outlawed because it has abolished the exploitation of the workers and farmer by capitalists.

These are but a few of the outstanding facts which prove that Republican and Democratic administrations alike are the instrument of the financial and industrial masters who own the industries of the nation and use them to amass great fortunes for the few capitalists at the expense of happiness and well-being of the masses of industrial workers and farmers.

In the face of these conditions only one road lies open for the industrial workers and farmers to protect themselves against the exploitation and oppression of the financial and industrial lords who rule in this country —to organize a political party representing the interests of the industrial workers and farmers and enter into the political arena to wrest control of the government from the hands of the financial and industrial masters who now rule in this country.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party declares that to be its purpose. It calls upon all organizations of workers, whether in the industries or upon the land, to make common cause with it, to join it in the struggle to free the farmer and industrial worker from greedy exploitation of those who now rule in this country and to win for them the right to "life, liberty and happiness" which their exploiters now deny them.

Public Ownership

There can be no genuine Public Ownership of industry until the workers and farmers control the government. But in order to make more clear the conflict of interests between the employing class and the working and farming classes and thus aid the masses in their struggle against exploitation and oppression, we propose an immediate program of public ownership of all public utilities. It must at all times be remembered that only to the extent that here is a strong workers' and farmers' representative in the Government and only to the extent that the control of operation is in the hands of workers and farmers can even this partial nationalization be realized today. The F. F. L. P. therefore proposes the following program:

1) We stand for the nationalization of all public utilities and all social means of communication and transportation.

2) Industries must be run on the basis of the workers and farmers, steadily increasing their control of the management and operation thru their own economic organizations.

3) Industries must be operated in such a manner as to afford the working and farming masses the maximum security against destitution, unemployment, sickness and high prices.

Program for Social Legislation

1) That the Federal Government enact a Maximum 8-Hour work-day in industry, making any violation of the same by any employer a criminal offense punishable by imprisonment.

2) That the Federal Government enact a law that will make the Federal Reserve Bank system serve the farmers and workers.

Industry should be encouraged to discontinue its reckless "hiring" and "firing" practises by compensating the unemployed worker temporarily when he is thrown out of employment thru no fault of his own, and

3) That the Federal Government enact a Child Labor Law prohibiting the employment of children under eighteen years and making the violation of this law a crime punishable by imprisonment.

4) That the Federal Government enact a law providing for a minimum living wage for all workers—the wages to be fixed in co-operation with the representatives of the trade unions.

5) That the Federal Government enact a law providing for the compulsory education of all under eighteen. Special attention must be paid to the erection of new and adequate schools in the rural regions.

6) That the Federal Government enact a law providing for adequate compensation to the ex-soldiers—a soldier bonus—funds for same to be obtained thru the levying of inheritance, excess profits, surtaxes and taxes on unearned income.

7) That the Federal Government enact a Social Insurance Law providing for adequate sick, accident and death insurance for all city and rural workers. Funds for the same to be secured thru the taxation of incomes, excess profits, surtaxes, and inheritance taxes and taxes from unearned incomes.

8) That the Federal Government enact a National Maternity Insurance Law providing for full trade union wage compensation to all prospective mothers for a period covering one month prior and one month after child birth.

Farmer's Program

1) Land was created for all the people, and we demand a system of taxation that will eliminate landlordism and tenancy and will secure the land to the users of the land.

2) Public ownership of all means of transportation, communication, natural resources and public utilities, to be operated by and for the people.

3) The issue and control of all money and credit printed by the government for service instead of profit.

4) All war debts to be paid by a tax on excess profits.

5) A moratorium for all working farmers on their farm mortgage debts for a period of five years.

U. S. Senator Given Facts About Terror

B JAY LOVESTONE
(Special to "The Worker")

PHILADELPHIA.—All the facts in the outrageous persecution of the Workers Party and its membership in Pennsylvania, especially in the Pittsburgh district, have been placed before United States Senator George Wharton Pepper. The immediate results of the conference held here are:

FIRST: Senator Pepper agreed to take up the Pittsburgh situation with Acting Attorney General Seymour, at Washington.

SECOND: He will also confer with Governor Gifford Pinchot, at Harrisburgh, on the steel and coal mine [illegible] dominates in Western Pennsylvania.

THIRD: He agreed that a free [illegible] case should be made by [illegible] Pepper's office here. The case of the workers of Western Pennsylvania was presented to Senator Pepper by Robert W. Dunn, Acting Head of the Civil Liberties Union, and the writer, as an official representative of the Workers Party.

Mr. Dunn told the Senator that we came to lay before him the whole Pittsburgh situation and that I, as a spokesman of the Party concerned, should give him the facts of the case. Senator Pepper told us that he hoped we were fully aware of the fact that he could not effectively interest himself in too many propositions. He reminded us that last year he had turned down a request to sign a blanket amnesty resolution. Since then, he has made a detailed legal examination of all the evidence in the Chicago, Wichita, and Sacramento I. W. W. cases. The Senator expressed a tremendous, genuine interest in the cases.

Pittsburgh Outrages Described

Then the writer told, in brief, the wanton outrages committed against the Workers Party by agents of the Federal Department of Justice and the Assistant District Attorney Meyers. The arrest of George Kowalski, a worker who had been honorably discharged from the 302nd Infantry and had seen service on three fronts in the World War; the arrest of Mrs. Budnick, not a member of the Workers Party, and her consequent separation from her four-year old daughter for ten days; and the case of the worker, Jakubauskis, whose six-year old child was struck and killed by an automobile while his wife was out looking for bail, were cited as typical of the present condition in Pittsburgh.

The Senator asked why all this persecution was organized against the Workers Party and who was behind these attacks. I told him that the Department of Justice was engineering all these arrests. The big

New political questions have sprung up. We must now examine to what extent the decisions of the Fourth Congress were correct and in what manner they were carried out. In many countries the political situation has shared in favor of the capitalists. America is experiencing a boom; the situation in England and France has improved. In Central Europe the former disorganization prevails; Japan is on the eve of a crisis.

Cossack Brutality Marks the Brockton, Mass., Shoe Strike

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BROCKTON, Mass.—The strike of the Brockton shoe workers, which had gone along more or less peacefully for eight weeks, assumed a different aspect beginning Monday, July 9th. Hitherto, the strikers on the picket line in the main had been unmolested by the police. They had been allowed to hold large mass meetings on Sunday with a permit from the city authorities. Recently a permit was denied.

The lasters and vampers were still out practically en masse; the shoes turned out by the scabs were not fit for the market, cases being returned to the manufacturers from their customers. The number of cases shipped in June was only 40 per cent of the production last June, according to the figures of a Shoe and Leather trade journal; and a large part of this was

Election of Johnson in Minnesota Shows Sentiment for Real Farmer-Labor Unity

By JOSEPH MANLEY
National Secretary Federated Farmer-Labor Party

CHICAGO.—The overwhelming victory of Magnus Johnson on the Farmer-Labor ticket in Minnesota clearly indicates a tremendous sentiment amongst rank and file of farmers and workers for a real Labor Party. The Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota is not at present affiliated to any national organization, due to the fact that until the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party there was no national coordinating center in existence.

The victory in Minnesota will add strength to the great campaign which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is launching, and will help link up the various isolated Farmer-Labor Movements and thus create a real national party for the farmers and workers.

Steel Workers Raise Slogan of "The Eight-Hour Day" as Bosses Weaken Before Attack

"THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY!"

That is the slogan that must be heard, coming like thunder claps, wherever workers go down into the steel mills in these United States.

To arouse all steel workers in support of this slogan is the next step in the fight of "THE WORKER" against the barbarous 12-Hour Day of "Czar" Gary and his United States Steel Corporation.

Ever since Judge Elbert Henry Gary made his infamous plea for the 12-Hour Day, at the Hotel Commodore, New York, May 25th, "THE WORKER" has kept up its anti-Gary campaign. It published the facts. It showed how the 12-Hour Day was wrecking the men, women and children of the steel mills, mentally, physically, morally. It showed how the long day was destroying all social and family life in the steel cantons.

"THE WORKER" beat down all of "Czar" Gary's arguments, that the Steel Empire needed the 12-Hour Day because of the labor shortage, because it couldn't afford the 8-Hour Day, because the steel workers want the 12-Hour Day.

"THE WORKER" exposed the tyrannical entente of the Steel Trust with the capitalist government at Washington. This week we shatter the hypocritical pretenses of Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, that he is really desirous of organizing the steel workers.

It was not until this bombshell [illegible] among the workers in the steel mills. When "THE WORKER" reported, in its issue of June 30th, that the steel serfs, in various mills, were writing on the walls of their slave pens, in chalk, in the dead of night, "We want the 8-Hour Day!" then the politicians, even in the old parties, began to whisper protests against the long day, holy men in their pulpits began to sputter warnings against the seven-day week, experts began to proclaim that the 8-Hour Day was feasible,—even Gompers of the American Federation of Labor began to mouth, last of all, declaring an organization campaign would be started.

Fearful of the rising storm, the steel interests, thru the New York Evening Post, Saturday, July 14, let it be made known that the 12-Hour Day would be abandoned in six weeks.

But this was immediately qualified in the New York Times, Sunday, July 15, by "a prominent director of the American Iron and Steel Institute," who stated that a start to abolish the 12-Hour Day might be made in six weeks, but "how long it will take to finish it no one can tell at this time."

Against this duplicity of the bosses the steel workers everywhere must thunder their demand for "THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY!"

It is said that there will soon be a conference of all the mill foremen of the United States Steel Corporation from plants in which 12-Hour shifts are in force. This conference will be held in New York City, 71 Broadway, in the office of James A. Farrell, president of the Steel Trust. Concerning this proposed conference the New York Times says:

"At this conference the elimination of the longer workday will be discussed. Ways and means of installing labor saving machinery also will be discussed, in line with E. H. Gary's statement a short time ago that machinery would be used to displace men wherever possible."

If you, the workers in the steel mills, raise your voices high enough for "THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY," those mill foremen will have but one thing to report to Gary and Farrell. That report will be that a great crisis has arisen in the steel industry, a crisis that these slave drivers of the master class will sum up in the words, "It's the 8-Hour Day or Strike in the steel mills!"

If the voices of the workers in the steel mills are not heard, then the protests of the politicians will cease, the [illegible] will appear calm, the [illegible] of the pulpit-orators will die away, the experts will pigeonhole their reports, and the promises of Gary and Farrell will remain promises.

Worse than that! Gary will be able to turn his promises into good sales propaganda. In fact this is the interpretation that Wall Street has already given to "Czar" Gary's promises. Wall Street argues this way. Steel orders are falling off. Steel shipped during June was double the amount ordered during the same period. The result was that unfilled orders on the books of the steel trust fell off 595,000 tons during the month. Export trade was cut into by the low European prices. Railway buying fell to a low level and the demand for structural steel was but a little over half of the shop capacity.

Therefore, "Czar" Gary found the promise of an 8-Hour Day a good excuse for suggesting that there would result a rise in prices. This was a hint to the wise purchaser to place his orders while prices still held to the present levels. In this way the Steel Empire's Czar plays with the aspirations of the steel workers, making more profits for himself.

Only the unwavering demand for "THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY!" on the part of the steel workers themselves will bring "THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY." The fight must go on. "THE WORKER" will be sent into the steel districts by the tens of thousands, to help continue with this fight. The score of foreign language dailies, allied with "THE WORKER," will keep up the struggle.

"Czar" Gary's promises must become living realities. The 12-Hour Day must be abolished. "THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY!" must be established in the steel industry, as the preliminary of an even shorter workday.

Steel workers! Raise your voices for "THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY!"

Lewis Again with Bosses, Fights Labor

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, has again thrown his influence on the side of the mine owners and the "open shop" interests.

This is the only interpretation that can be put on his imperial edict, issued from his luxurious retreat at Atlantic City, N. J., revoking the charter of District 26, Nova Scotia, Canada, bituminous coal fields.

The Nova Scotia coal miners are out on strike to protect their own wages, and in support of the striking steel workers of the same district. They have waged a brilliant struggle as has already been pointed out in these columns. The Canadian government has sent troops into the district to wage bloody war against the men, women and children of labor. The district is also under the guns of a British battleship.

Under these circumstances, President Lewis expels the district, without trial, just as he expelled the Kansas district, when Alex Howat and the Kansas miners' officials were fighting the Allen Anti-Strike Law.

The Lewis threat of expulsion is one of long standing. In order to lay the basis for his present action, Lewis sent the wrecker, Van H. Bittner, into the district, followed by a special committee of investigation.

Lewis is bending all his energies to rid himself of the progressives in District 26. He appointed the defeated International Board member as an organizer in a district which is 100 per cent organized! He sent a commission to investigate the situation in the district and not having any charge to make against the leaders of the district he urged the convention to get rid of them. The miners of Nova Scotia will refuse to allow Lewis to order them what to think, they will elect whoever they please to the District offices, and will fight to the bitter end to prevent Lewis smashing the ranks of the District organization as he did in other districts.

The Lewis declaration of war on the progressives will sharpen the struggle in the United Mine Workers. To defeat the militants of District 26, Lewis will have to line up with the British Empire Steel Corporation and the Federal and Provincial governments against the miners getting an increase in wages. Any man who opposes the miners getting the 1921 rates in District 26 will meet with such an opposition as will stagger him. The Federal government kept Alexander Howat out of this Province in the interests of Lewis and the corporations.

The District Convention just finished struck a pitch towards which all workers must strive to reach. The miners of Nova Scotia are leading the way with greater battles on their hands against their exploiters, against the governments of exploiters, and to the shame and disgrace of the Lewis administration against the reactionary leadership of the United Mine Workers itself. And they shall win!

The Farrington-Lewis Mix-Up

By J. W. JOHNSTONE

The success of the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America, in lining up the brilliance within that organization, has been so great that the two leading figures in the United Mine Workers, Lewis and Farrington, who for years have been bitter enemies, have buried the hatchet, and have now on will stand united as against that growing young giant, The Militant Minority.

This uniting of forces by two of the absolute and reactionary officials that ever held office in the U. M. W. of A. was to be expected. The only difference that ever existed between Lewis and Farrington was the struggle

Are the Farmers and Workers the Victors in Minnesota?

By JOHN PEPPER

Magnus Johnson, the farmer-labor candidate for the Farmer-Labor Party, was elected in Minnesota with the help and support of the workers in the Republican and Democratic parties. The victory of Magnus Johnson in Minnesota is a blow of two organizations: the Non-Partisan League and the Workers' Party. The Non-Partisan League and the Workers' Party of Minnesota is a blow of two organizations which base themselves on the masses of the industrial workers and farmers.

Where do the masses of Minnesota belong to the industrial centers of the United States, so that the workers in that alliance play second fiddle to the farmers. The political victory in Minnesota does not depend on big cities and big factories, but on the tens of thousands living in isolated farms, small towns and villages. Furthermore, the masses in the only big centers, the twin cities St. Paul-Minneapolis, unlike Chicago or Pittsburg, are dominated by a lower middle class psychology, rather than by the proletarian psychology. The Democratic illusion, the absolute belief in the cure-all patent medicine of democracy is still unbroken in Minnesota. The class-conflict had not developed sharply up to recently in Minnesota.

The after-war period has brought about a great change. The gigantic economic crisis of 1920 means the turning point. The overwhelming power of the trusts, railroads and banks, against all classes into rebellion against the capitalists. The workers revolted at first against unemployment, then against the Daugherty injunction. The railroad workers are especially strong in Minnesota. The wheat-growing farmers were driven at first into despair and then into revolt by the growing prices of industrial products, the rising freight rates, by mortgage and tenantry, and by falling wheat prices. The small business men, who had for a long time suffered from the trusts, were driven into rebellion because the bankruptcy of the farmers meant the bankruptcy of their customers. And finally, even the small-town bankers and small manufacturers joined the camp of discontented elements because the pressure upon them of the great trusts and finance-capitalists.

The alliance of workers, farmers, small business men and bankers against the capitalists, against the trusts, against the banks, against the railroads, against the Wall Street Government, against the Republican Party and the Harding administration.

Is it a class alliance? Can it be considered as a class alliance? Can it be considered as a class alliance? Can it be considered as ions from stock. The president said he being paid out about twice as much as the average wage the strikers are receiving when they were on the job. "I started lots of potential graft," he said. "Something must be done. All the other of the manufacturers and the public must then vote to be against to smash the strike, by no- Saturday, July 7, City Solicitor Thompson issued his usual statement against the ground that the strike was unlawful. At the mass meeting held the next day, attended by thousands of strikers, the strikers declared their intention to go on the picket line, notwithstanding the ruling against picketing.

It was an inspiring and courageous act to defy the public officials who acted in the interests of the Shoe Manufacturers. The battle had begun again, with renewed determination on the part of the strikers. They crowded onto the picket line, in greater numbers than ever before during the long weeks of the industrial strife.

"Schreechlichkeit"

The manufacturers had hoped to intimidate the strikers. When picketing still continued, the arrests began. In the first day, 139 men and women were arrested, the total to date being one hundred and seventy-five.

When the strikers marched to the court house after a meeting, the mounted police rode roughly into the crowd of strikers. This drew a protest from one of the Brockton Councilmen, Mr. Hughes.

Two women crushed between an automobile and the horses, a blow in the head from the club of Mounted Officer Connolly which required four stitches to bring the wound together, and blows dealt other strikers were eloquent testimony to the "schreeklichkeit of the mounted finest." Not only did they pick up strikers, but others not connected with the strike were also arrested.

A visitor from Worcester is in a serious condition, suffering from concussion of the brain after three blows from a police club, two of them after he had already been knocked unconscious. He was walking along, a matter of a mile from any factory. Still believing in the power of petition, the Lithuanians presented the mayor with 400 signatures in protest against "law and order" brutality, in dispersing strikers in Montello. A committee of five elected at a protest meeting called by the Lithuanians made their emphatic protest to the mayor.

The Despised Foreigner

It is the despised foreigner who is displaying the best sticking power, who is in the thick of the fight. The glorious example of devotion and courage set by the foreign workers in the great Steel Strike is being followed by the foreigners, once more the Lithuanians. Their loyalty, their energy, their daring will long be remembered in Brockton. Let those who first went out, the English speaking elements, many of whom have slunk back, let them hang their heads in shame. The lowly foreigner can stand with his head high; he was true to his fellow worker. Rather than pay the $2.00 fee to the Bail Commissioner, several strikers remained in jail over night saying "Give that money to our brothers on the firing line."

Blind Justice

Those arrested were fined $10 and their appeals are to come up on August 8th at a special session of the District Court, the first in the history of the Court.

The strikers asked that their cases be tried in another court, because both Judges Thorndike and Willam S. Rowe were connected directly or indirectly with the shoe manufacturers.

The brother of Rowe is a member of the Shoe Manufacturers' Association and manager of the C. A. Eaton Shoe Co. Rowe decided that there was no ground for the change. The strikers are now circulating a petition for the removal from the bench of the manufacturers' representative, Judge William G. Rowe.

The Outcome

The mayor has called on the strikers to return to the factories. This they refused to do. The strike leaders have left to the strikers themselves to decide as to whether they should resume picketing. It had been decided to call off the pickets pending a conference to be arranged by the mayor. The conference proved a fizzle, and many strikers are of the opinion that the picketing should not have been stopped last week.

The determination of the manufacturers is to smash the strike by all available means. The strikers feel that they are engaged in a winning struggle. They contend that the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, with its no-strike clause, and compulsory arbitration before a State Board, does not respond to the needs of the shoe workers.

Even if the present strike should fail, and the men be forced back into the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union by the manufacturers, they will always fight for the rule of the organization from below, and not as it is at present, from above.

Miners and Railroaders Must Help Organize Steel Mills and Wipe Out the 12-Hour Day

By JAY LOVESTONE

In the face of the most powerful corporations in the world, workers by the millions are fighting for the right to organize and for the 8-hour day. Over 400,000 steel workers have proclaimed a general strike against the 12-hour day. Over 600,000 miners are fighting for the standing agreements which the coal operators have violated. Railroad workers are threatened by the Watson-Parker law and by the Railroad Labor Board. Textile workers are fighting for the right to live. Other workers are struggling for the right to work. Everywhere there is misery, unemployment, starvation. Everywhere there is struggle. Over and above all this there is bankruptcy. One need but examine the outstanding evils of the day to be convinced that here more than in any other American industry is there a pressing demand for organization. Yet the record of inactivity in unionizing the steel workers is about as black as any achieved by our reactionary labor leaders.

Plight of the Workers

Appearing before the Interchurch Commission, a Pittsburgh Professor of Economics described the organization of the Steel Industry as "feudal militarism." He said in part: "The general staff of the Carnegie Company is one of the most efficient in the world of business. The superintendents, department managers and foremen are splendidly loyal; efficient officers with high morale. Behind them are the non-commissioned officers, such gang leaders as rollers, blowers, melters and other top-skilled Americans, who are part bosses, part workmen. Altogether this administrative group, almost a third of the force, has a really military efficiency, bound to the company by stock participation, bonuses, loans, house-rentals and pensions." The rank and file of the army consists of the great mass of low-paid overworked unskilled foreign-born workers.

Thru this splendid organization the Steel Magnates have been able to pursue their "Catch 'em young, treat 'em rough, tell 'em nothing" labor policy. A friendly critic of Mr. Gary, quoted by the Interchurch investigators, has thus characterized this policy: "The trouble is that the Corporation is still in the stage of detectives and toilets." The workers dare not discuss their jobs even in normal times for fear of being discharged or transferred to a worse job.

The Strike Committee, in answer to President Wilson's request for a postponement of the strike, pictured this condition of the workers in the following:

"Men have been discharged in increasingly large numbers day by day. Threats and intimidation are resorted to for the purpose of putting the men in fear and preventing them from the exercise of their own free will. They are coerced into signing statements that they are not members nor will become members of any labor organization and threatened with eviction, black-list, denial of credit, and starvation."

Citing a typical instance of this condition the Interchurch Commission reported:

"Joseph Yart, 216 Woodville Ave., Johnstown, was employed by the Cambria Steel Company for forty years in the car works and was never discharged before. He became a member of the union on Feb. 3rd and was discharged on May 12th, by Superintendent Hill. . . . Mr. Yart protested that he had worked there for forty years, that he is now 54 years of age and can't work very well on the outside and the only reply he got was: 'You can't work here any more. You are an agitator and a disturber in the car department.'

"One of Mr. Yart's sons was in the army of occupation, and Mr. Yart now complains: 'My son went to fight for democracy and I am thrown out on the street without any means of livelihood.'"

Part and parcel of Gary's policy of "not dealing with labor unions" is the best financed and most wide-spread organization of professional strike-breaking and detective agencies in the world making profits out of clubbing and jailing workers.

Gompers and the 1919 Steel Strike

In the light of the above the failure of Gompers and his machine to give adequate support to the striking steel workers in 1919 is an irretrievable crime against the whole American working class.

Speaking of the Great Strike the Interchurch Commission said: "Causes of defeat, second in importance only to the fight waged by the Steel Corporation, lay in the organization and leadership, not so much of the strike itself, as of the American labor movement."

Gompers did not address a single meeting of steel workers during the strike. He did not attend a single meeting of the National Committee meeting in Pittsburgh. The case of Gompers attending meetings of the National Committee for organizing the steel workers was a case of the mountain really coming to Mahommet because Mahommet would not come to the mountain. The only meetings of the National Committee that Gompers attended were those held in Washington. The National Committee had to move its meetings to Gompers, to the city where he was, from Pittsburgh, in order to get Gompers' attention.

Just at this time, while things were coming to a showdown, the President of the American Federation of Labor saw it to take a pleasure trip to Mexico. The organization drive of the National Committee made it too hot for him in the United States at that time. Gompers spent a month on this trip to monkey around with the Conference of the still-born Pan-American Federation of Labor.

While the workers were straining every ounce of energy to organize for a fight against the 12-Hour Day, Sam Gompers took a flying trip to Europe and helped frame that damnable Versailles Treaty which has enslaved hundreds of thousands of workers and made millions the pawns of the imperialists. Six months were spent by the "Grand Old Man" of the American labor movement in the gay life of Paris. All this time the steel workers back home were looking forward to help from their leaders in the struggle against the unbearable conditions.

As a matter of fact Gompers did not find it safe enough to indorse the strike until 400,000 were out in the open battle against the Steel Trust. What is even worse, once the strike preparations were in full swing and the workers were all keyed up for a battle royal, Gompers publicly compromised the whole strike by coming out for Wilson's plan to postpone action until after his Industrial Peace Conference. At this time over 30,000 workers had already been discharged for union activities.

This the enemy confronting the steel workers was the strongest one ever faced by striking workers anywhere, and tho the Governmental forces at the disposal of the Steel Trust were unlimited, yet Gompers gave only a dozen organizers to the National Organization campaign and the strike. The inevitable defeat rendered the strikers was totally insufficient. Discussing this phase of the Great Steel Strike, William Z. Foster, the noted leader of the 1919 struggle pointed out that:

"Probably no big modern trade union organizing campaign and strike has been conducted on such sleader means.

"Often the National Committee had to beg for weeks to have a man sent to a district to organize, while members for which it had already enrolled. Hundreds of local unions suffered and many a one perished outright for want of attention. Whole districts had to be neglected with serious consequences when the strike came."

And while the National Committee was calling together a delegate conference in order to enthuse the workers and throw them into the struggle for a test of strength, the reactionary leader M. F. Tighe, a pal of Gompers and President of the Amalgamated Association, made an underhand attempt to split the forces of the workers. In the face of this call of the National Committee Mr. Tighe addressed a letter to Gary requesting a separate Conference. Fortunately for the steel workers Gary turned down Tighe's offer and they were saved from this vile treachery.

Threatens to Move an Inch

The recent report of the American Iron and Steel Institute proposing to continue the 12-Hour Day and the last exchange of vague meaningless promises between Gary and Harding on this subject for political purposes have raised a storm of public opinion against the Two-Shift system. Because of this avalanche of protest of church bodies, liberals, and members of even the most conservative of the population, Gompers was being forced to wake up. Gompers is now compelled to make hollow promises as to organizing the workers.

Gompers has announced that an organization campaign will very soon be launched amongst the steel workers. How little heart is in this attempt this is to be and how unwillingly Gompers is getting into the campaign is borne out by two facts. First of all, Gompers is again putting only a handful of organizers at the disposal of this campaign. Such tactics are suicidal. At best they are stupid. In this case they are criminal. Secondly, in laying the plans for this campaign, whatever of it will materialize, Gompers is excluding the best fighters of the old strike. Masking his treachery to the ifterests of the steel workers under the hypocritical guise of an attack on "radicals," Gompers is depriving the unionization drive of the best forces available.

These are exactly the tactics pursued by all the enemies of labor. These are the very words used by the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers in their attacks on Labor. A pint jar cannot hold a quart. With an insufficient number of organizers and the best organizers kept out of the campaign Gompers can do very little for the steel workers.

Our Conclusions

The only way the steel workers can hope to abolish the 12-Hour Day is thru building a powerful union able to settle the score with the United States Steel Corporation and its allies. All workers, particularly the miners and railroaders, must aid in this effort to unionize the steel mills.

It is an irreparable disgrace to the whole American Labor Movement that the 12-Hour Day is still in force in the steel industry. Labor stands helpless, its leaders asleep at the switch and refusing to do anything, while forces outside the Labor Movement, like the Federal Council of Churches, are agitating for the 8-Hour Day.

The steel workers in particular and the other organized workers in general must bring to bear the greatest pressure possible on the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor to get into a unionization campaign heart and soul. Thus only can the 12-Hour Day be ended. No half-way measures will do in a fight with the Steel Trust. The workers must organize for a fight to the finish in order to free themselves from their present slave conditions.

Farm-Labor Unity to be Told New York

A mass meeting to hear the report of the historic gathering held at Chicago, where the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was formed, is being arranged for Tuesday, July 24, 8 p. m., at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th Street, between 3d and 4th Aves.

C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary, Workers Party; William Z. Foster, secretary, Trade Union Educational League, and J. Every union man in New York City, who believes in independent working class political action, should attend this meeting.

Already the reactionary daily press, bewildered over the strength and power developed by the gathering at Chicago, are spreading their usual lying propaganda against the newly formed party of the industrial and farm workers.

United Party Heads Reply to Attacks

By JOSEPH MANLEY,
(National Secretary, Federated Farmer-Labor Party)

CHICAGO.—The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has opened up its headquarters at 800 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill. Requests for charters, applications for affiliation, endorsements of its program, letters of congratulation and interested inquiry are pouring in from all over the country.

The newspapers in their attacks on the Federated Farmer-Labor Party have behaved outrageously. Never in the history of the Labor movement has there been such a flood of vituperation, character assassination and misrepresentation coming from the kept press. The N. Y. Forward and Call, vying with the N. Y. Herald and other papers of a like caliber, for the prize, which will no doubt be awarded the New Age of Buffalo, a "Socialist" publication.

Under this barrage of misrepresentation the members of the National Committee are standing up in fine shape. Many of them have issued statements to the press on returning to their homes. It would be impossible to quote from all of them. However, let me quote two of our "dirt" farmer representatives.

W. H. Green, First Vice-Chairman, writing in the Omaha World-Herald, says: "Your editorial, 'Split among the New Party Advocates,' is written entirely from the outside of the situation.

"Mr. Fitzpatrick's indictment of Foster, Ruthenberg and Manley would have more standing in the court of public opinion were it not for the fact that Messrs. Fitzpatrick, Buck, Brown and others of the national committee had received written invitations to those gentlemen they now designate as "Reds," to attend the convention. Those same gentlemen (Fitzpatrick, Buck, Brown, etc.) agreed to a written stipulation about the personnel and representation at the convention and then had to resnege when some outside influence had rammed it back down their throats.

"I heard Mr. Fitzpatrick speak in the very highest terms of the personal lives of the men the kept press wishes to politically assassinate in the interest of the exploiters of human toil."

In a similar tone writes W. E. Zeuch who represented the Non-Partisan League of Wisconsin and who is a member of the National Committee, in a two column article in the Madison, Wis., Capital Times:

"The attempt of the Cook County (Chicago) delegation to disrupt the conference began in earnest after reading of the reports of the organization committee. Strange as it may seem, no fight was made on the Plan of Federation, the Declaration of Principles, or the Platform. They met with the approval of practically all the delegates.

"The attempt to disrupt the conference began when the Cook county delegation lost control of the conference to the dirt farmers and industrial workers. Being unable to find anything to criticize in the Plan of Federation, the Statement of Principles or the Platform, Fitzpatrick, and Buck of the Cook County delegation, aided by one or two isolated delegates from other delegations, attempted to stampede and destroy the unity of the conference by dragging the Red Herring of Communism across the trail that led to federation. The dirt farmers and industrial workers did not fall for such old stuff but continued the work of federation to a successful issue."

When the leaders lost control to the rank and file they hunted about for some excuse to justify their attempt to disrupt. They made their stand on the charge that the Workers Party advocated violence and was affiliated with the Third International. The position of Fitzpatrick was highly amusing when one realizes that they were instrumental in inviting the Workers Party to the conference."

These expressions of rank and file sentiment coming from farm representatives, will be fully equalled by city worker delegates. The response from them is already being felt in the shape of donations and affiliations of their organizations.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will immediately launch a nation-wide campaign, the peak of which will be reached next January at the monster UNITY CONVENTION to be held in Chicago. This coming convention will mark the greatest gathering of rank and file farmers and workers ever held.

Workers Party Speaker Arrested, Then Freed, at Dickson City, Pa.

(Special to "The Worker")

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—B. K. Gebert, Editor of the Polish Daily Stanley Dziengielewski, and Alex. Zarek, leaders of the Progressive Miners in the Scranton Region, were arrested at Dickson City Tuesday night upon charges of holding a meeting. Gebert came to Dickson City to speak under the direction of the Workers Party. When in the midst of his speech flaying the fake stock corporations who were taking money from Polish workers, a former stock salesman, Mike Popek, arose and insisted that the speaker had no right to talk about stock corporations.

Gebert continued his speech, proving that these fake corporations, most of them now bankrupt, had fleeced the Polish people out of ten million dollars. This was too much for Popek, a party of the fleecing, and he rushed for the police.

John Michalko, defeated by the militants as President of a miners' local, went along to help get the police. Upon returning, Gebert and Dziengielewski were arrested and Zarek was also apprehended for evicting the provocators from the hall. The whole meeting followed the arrested speakers and chairman of the meeting to the police station. There the informers swore that Gebert had advocated the overthrow of everything. A dozen Polish residents demanded to be sworn in to testify for the accused, and feeling was all in favor of Gebert.

The burgess set the bail at $300 for each, which half a dozen Polish miners immediately consented to furnish. The burgess, seeing that the sentiment was for the speaker, cancelled the charge against the arrested persons and turned them free.

Gebert is making an impression in the anthracite region. Papers are voicing the sentiment of the mine barons when they say he should be deported for daring to come here to talk against "God, Lewis and Harding."

the moment characterized by the Anglo-Russian Trade Pact. The new tendency has begun in England not because Russia has grown weaker. On the contrary, it is because it has been growing stronger, and other

The capitalists were deceived by the new economic policy. They thought it was the beginning of our capitulation. They thought that the communists would bring about their own ruin. But our situation improved; Russian trade appeared on the world market; we have never before enjoyed such undivided support of the workers as we do today. Therefore perhaps, a new chapter in the attitude of the capitalist States towards us is beginning.

Fascism Is Marching Onward

We are witnessing events in Bulgaria. The King is giving the putsch the form of legality. That may happen in any revolution which does not set the King aside. We must test Fascism on its economic side. We cannot place all phenomena under one hat. In Italy Fascism is undergoing a change.

The danger of war has increased; the situation may become critical at any moment.

In Hamburg the fusion of the second and the 2½ Internationals took place. Is it necessary to speak at length of these gentlemen here? Even from the reformist standpoint the new International has no objective: it contains only two parties of any significance: at all: the German Socialist Party, and the British Labor Party. Kautsky, at one time, was against the acceptance of the Labor Party into the Second International. Has this party become better since that period? No! But the Second International has become worse. Therefore the Labor Party is able to play first fiddle.

The Russian Mensheviks, who were formerly the left wing of the 2½ International, are now the right wing of the new International. Its statutes say: Ministers cannot be members of the Executive Committee.

In other words, it says to the minister: when you become a thief, you cannot be a member of our honorable society, but when you come out of prison, you may join us again. These gentlemen need no International. What they want is an international parade. Will it make any impression? A temporary one, perhaps, such as was made by the fusion of the German Social-Democratic with the Independent Socialist Party.

The German Social-Democratic Party was weakened by its union with the Independent Socialist Party; it became a thing without a soul. The union of the Second International with the 2½ International will accelerate the process of its decay.

Only One Real International

That has now been made obvious. We have not yet got the majority of the proletariat behind us, but such forces as we have we have consolidated for the purposes of international action.

Two great parties of our International, the German and the French, in a decisive and momentous hour, carried on a joint campaign seconded by Soviet Russia. They have practically demonstrated that they know how to work together when two bourgeoisies are at loggerheads. This was a step towards a great end, the creation of a truly United Communist World Party.

The bourgeoisie as a class is united. The German Lutterbeck, appeals for armed aid to the French General Degoutte.

The United Front

On the question of the united front we have overcome many difficulties during this period, especially in France where even the Syndicalists have learned to apply this weapon. The question may perhaps be put: Is the United Front a strategical manoeuvre, or do we really desire to work side by side with the social democratic proletariat? This method of putting the question is incorrect. Of course, we are in favor of approaching the social democratic and the non-party workers. We always were. But formerly we wished to achieve this end over the heads of the leaders. We have convinced ourselves that it would not work. We must again appeal to the leaders until the masses understand that our outlook is the correct one.

But I have not a spark of belief that Scheidemann and Renaudel will fight in common with us. But why perpetually repeat this? In order not to bring confusion into our own ranks. We must show the masses the whole road. If we had neglected to do this in France, the Syndicalists would never have marched with us.

The tactic of the United Front contains a danger for our party, as Trotsky has rightly pointed out, namely, the danger of demoralization and deterioration. Nevertheless, our tactic is a correct one. Many have called me an obstinate opponent of the tactic of the United Front. That is not true. Formerly I had doubts, but now I am convinced partisan of the tactic of the United Front.

Workers Must Fight Reactionary Officials and also the Bosses to Win Higher Wages

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

"Wages will be reduced as a result of every strike in which workers fight against reductions. Every strike which makes it impossible to reduce wages will be followed by a lockout. Every strike which makes it impossible to lengthen the working day will be followed by a lockout. Every strike which makes it impossible to worsen working conditions will be followed by a lockout. The workers will therefore be compelled to accept the conditions of the building trades, wages so far have been very slow in moving upward.

"Strikes are fought solely to improve working conditions, and we shall therefore use the Irish workers' strike in New York, the Shoe Workers' strike in Brockton, the strike of the United Cloth Hat and Cap makers, the strike of the Telephone Employes in New England, the strike of the Plumbers' Helpers in Greater New York, to combat the hard struggle of the employers to maintain their standard of living. It is noteworthy that in many of these fights, the workers have to fight on two fronts, against the employers and against the reactionary labor "leaders", jealous of their power.

This is the case with the Iron Workers, the Shoe Workers, the Telephone Employes, who have to combat a yellow dual "Union," the Plumbers' Helpers and, of course, the Miners and Steel Workers in Nova Scotia. Three Local Unions of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, the Inside Iron and Bronze Workers' Unions No. 273, 274 and 275 struck, to maintain the closed shop, union recognition, which was denied them by many bosses. They have been working under miserable conditions, because they lacked unity and were divided against themselves. At last unity was achieved. They formed a Joint Board, joined the District Council of Housesmiths, Bridgemen, Ornamental Iron Workers, Shop Men and Riggers, and in due time they asked for the strike sanction, which was granted.

The Inside Iron Workers went on strike, while the Outside Iron Workers' Union, and the same District Council, scabbing on a small craft union, trying to split the fight to organize. The International Union ordered the District Council to support the strike of the Inside Workers, the District Council solemnly resolved to comply, and yet the Outside Workers are still working for the same firms who deny recognition to the Inside Iron Workers. It is commonly known among

Children of Russia Ask You to Help

Much talk has been going on recently regarding the relief work for Russia.

Friends (well intentioned), backed by publicity in the capitalistic press that Russia is exporting wheat, have been lagging in their work. They have even gone as far as saying that this can take care of itself.

ENEMIES of Russia have been saying that moneys raised by the relief organization here have been used for communist propaganda in this country and when they found that this bugaboo did not frighten the friends of Russia, they began to state that this money was being used in Russia to feed the Red Army.

The following are only several samples of about twenty cables received by the Friends of Soviet Russia from all parts of the Workers' Republic, both thanking us and asking us to continue our help. They are the best answer we can make both to our enemies who are trying to discredit us and to our friends who are losing heart and are ready to stop their work.

"Kazan, July. 2, 1923.

"We express our deep gratitude for your help to the children of the Tartar Republic. Owing to this help the lives of many thousands of children who might have perished from famine were saved. The situation of the Tartar Republic after this hard year of famine and while its consequences are still sorely felt, demands from us hard and persistent work in the interests of the orphans. There arises a new complication in the shape of the diseases which appear in great quantities, threatening to destroy our new crops. Thanking you again in the name of thousands of children we request that your assistance should not be withdrawn till the complete reconstruction of our economic life.

To Make Our Membership Grow

By MORRAY J. GLIDE.

Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, in his article in "The Worker," June 23, has put his finger on the most urgent task that confronts our Party. We have made a tremendous growth in membership, but our growth is not keeping pace with the growth of our mass work. Hundreds of new workers have been drawn into the orbit of activities we developed both in the economic and the political struggles.

Our task now is not to help the working class in diverse ways, failing to make it in the most direct way that helps a Communist party, viz., by recruiting and assimilating the most conscious workers into the revolutionary vanguard of class struggle under the command of the party.

The question of membership is THE vital one of our party, and it is now trying to "realize" that henceforth it will occupy the forefront of our endeavor. Yet a more diagnosis of an existing condition will not do justice to the magnitude of the problem. Comrade Ruthenberg diagnosed the case correctly, no doubt. We have discovered the fact of our party too little, he says, and we have worked thru other organizations too much to impress it upon the class-conscious worker that his place is in the ranks of the Workers Party. This, however, is only emphasizing one side of the story. In order to have a clear light on the situation (clear lights are not always pleasing to the eye) we must be frank enough to admit that our party as such has never "made" new members in appreciable numbers, that all our membership, with insignificant exceptions, was an inheritance from the two factions that went into the formation of the party, that the apparent increase in membership in the first nine or ten months of our existence was mostly due to the incorporation of new language federations, and that the standstill of the other nine months is only an indication that nearly all organized groups capable of joining the Workers Party had been absorbed. In other words, the task of recruiting members is entirely new to our party, it has not been practiced heretofore, and it must be approached with an open mind.

What distinguishes the recruiting of individual members from all other party activities is that it cannot be done from above. The general office may be able to inaugurate and successfully conduct a campaign for amalgamation (tho local effort alone can transmute propaganda into tangible results), the "party" in general may do useful work in connection with the defense of persecuted comrades (tho the absolute value of such propaganda should not be overrated); the heads of our party may achieve admirable results in negotiating, mapping out and illuminating a policy of a united front (tho even here the final success depends on local response); yet when it comes to drawing new members into our party, the local organizations have to bear the brunt of the work, and upon the ingenuity, agility, initiative and aggressiveness of the local comrades depends the success of the undertaking. The party as a whole may state the necessity of increasing its numbers; the central bodies may attempt to fire the comrades with beautiful manifestoes, yet it was no accident if comrade Ruthenberg wound up his interesting article by an appeal to every local group and every individual member. In the long run, it is the local group (branch), and the individual member who will pull in new workers into our party. It is the heart to heart talk of every Workers Party member with his neighbors in the workshop, in the mine and in the mill that, backed by the general prestige of our party and by the magnetic influence of its battles, will swell our ranks.

This lays new stress upon our local groups and their individual members. The question is, Have we done enough to prepare them for this all-important work? Have we developed among them the consciousness of their responsibility and an eagerness to carry to the masses the banner of our party? Have we at all made them intelligent and enlightened participants in the building up of our party? If this question must be answered in the negative, it means no casting aspersions upon our party. We are horribly young, unforgivably young. We have just emerged from a submerged existence where vigorous growth was difficult. We have forged a union of heterogeneous elements which it took some time to break into team work. We have engaged in clearing for ourselves a place on the political arena and in making our voices heard,—an indispensable prerequisite to further growth. Yet we must have the candor to admit that we have failed to make the local groups and individual members organic parts of all of our work, and unless we rectify this error there is slight hope for the building-up of a solid membership foundation.

Our local branches were taking orders from the party without sifting it to reach its decisions. Our local comrades were confronted with party policies framed without their contribution. In many cases the local branches and individual comrades were not even aware of important problems pending before the leading bodies. The party has seldom inquired into the opinions of its rank and file. This statement should not be interpreted as advocating loose democracy. The writer knows the meaning of discipline in a communist party. We all hate the S. P. methods. We know that in many cases, especially in stormy times and in critical situations, the membership must take orders much in the same way as military units take orders from their commanders. But communist discipline, contrary to military discipline, must be based upon the conviction of the rank and file, upon the understanding by every member of the task before the whole, upon the consciousness that the commanders are only comrades engaged in the same battle and forming an element in the collective body. This consciousness of collective effort, not only in carrying out but also in forming the will of the party, has not been sufficiently developed among our members. It was not developed because there was practically no collective effort. If we fail to develop it the consequences may be fatal.

What is the life of a branch of the Workers Party? In an overwhelming majority of cases it is a chain of humdrum questions. A collection for the F. S. R. A collection for the Technical Aid. A collection for the Jewish Workers Relief (or a similar other organization). A collection for the Labor Defense. A collection for the party press. Tickets for the party picnic. Tickets for the excursion of the C. C. C. Tickets for a picnic of our branch. Dues. Special assessments. Sale of literature. Preparations for a party meeting. Preparations for a celebration. Local quarrels between members into our party. Reports to a city conference or other party gathering. This takes 75 per cent of branch sessions. This is the regular work of the branch. Occasionally the members hear a report of the party's work (press service is of no avail where live contact is required). Seldom do they take up a discussion of the tasks before the party. Almost never have they been permitted to vote upon one or the other policy of the Workers Party. It is assumed that the rank and filer understands under the word "party" the C. E. C. or some other body which to him appears shrouded in mystery and far beyond reach. The average member does not think that he is the party, that his opinion is forming the opinion of the party, that his error may be injurious to the party. He does not think so because he has not been made an organic element of the party.

If we wish to start a movement for attracting new members, we must start a movement for the elevation of our present members to the height of responsible makers of our party. This will put a new spirit into our branches. It will open new vistas before our members. It will make red blood thrab where pale routine work has dried up the sources of initiative and joy in work. A comrade who is a builder of his own party will not stay away from the branch meetings and will not need the rod of coercion to make him do his duty.

Organize in Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Buffalo Labor Party has been officially launched. The constitution adopted contains a clause to the effect that all labor organizations, including political parties of labor, shall be affiliated if they accept the declaration of principles and agree to support the Labor Party candidates.

The Buffalo Central Labor Council, the Railroad Brotherhoods and the Maintenance of Way Men are all affiliated with the Labor Party. There were about 300 delegates present at the organization meeting. Another Meeting will be held at which candidates for all contested offices will be nominated.

The delegates displayed great impatience with an effort to defeat the clause that anyone who supported old party candidates should be expelled from the Labor Party. Apologists for the "friends" of labor in the old parties, notably the democratic governor, "Al" Smith, of New York, received no support for their pleas.

Ballam Comes Marching Home

BOSTON, MASS.—Boston closed its fall meeting season with a lecture on "The Labor Party" by John J. Ballam, who had not appeared on the public platform in Boston for six years. He made a splendid analysis of the condition of the working class today, of the ideas of the American worker now and before the war.

Unity Meet Movies with "Fifth Year"

Motion pictures of the historic conference of workers and farmers at Chicago, that created the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, will be a feature of the first showing of "The Fifth Year," the new nine-reel motion picture film presenting actual conditions under which the workers of Soviet Russia are living at the present time.

These pictures will be shown for the first time at the Manhattan Casino, 155th St. and 8th Ave., Saturday, July 28.

The pictures of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party gathering, and prominent spokesmen of the workers and farmers participating in it, were taken by William F. Kruse, of the Friends of Soviet Russia. Kruse also edited the great mass of material out of which the best went into the making of "The Fifth Year."

This latest film from Soviet Russia gives an actual insight into the life of both the factory workers and peasants. A new life and new hope seems to have taken hold of this vast Workers' Republic. Instead of the gruesome famine scenes one witnessed in "Russia Through the Shadows," one marvels at the complete change. Thousands of athletes are seen at their games, yacht races, horse races, cycle races, all these are once more common occurrences participated in by thousands of workers, while other thousands find time to watch them. Then one sees the Red Army manoeuvers and on parade, all kinds of demonstrations. An outpouring of about one million workers to celebrate the First of May. The social revolutionary trial and the protests against the counter-revolutionaries also come in for their share. Then we come to the Fourth Congress, Claude McKay, famous Negro poet, formerly editor of "The Liberator," is seen addressing the Congress. Max Eastman is also seen as an interested onlookes at the Communist International.

Special Russian music by a well known Russian orchestra, to accompany the picture, has been arranged for. After the showing there will be a Picnic and a Dance with the orchestra, formerly of the Ambassador Hotel, to furnish the music. Tickets can be secured from the numerous stations, or from the Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 West 13th Street.

Attention! Progressive Miners!

By MARGUERITE COWL.
(Federated Press Correspondent to "The Worker.")

PITTSBURGH, [illegible] secretary of the Independent Miners' Relief Committee, [illegible] to return to [illegible] to [illegible] the arrest of the secretary. The [illegible] by deputies [illegible] by defending their constitutional [illegible] to meet this challenge by appearing [illegible] of the progressives in District No. 5 all stated.

Upon hearing of Tom's arrest a number of miners dropped their work, shoved out of school to reach other miners for raising the necessary bail. Riding from town to town, without stopping for food or sleep for several days these miners did not rest until they raised the necessary bail in CASH for the release of Tom.

The Lewis machine is always ready to blinker the rank and file in any work that is not to the liking of Lewis. When the miners started out to raise the money for the bail, Lewis' lackeys trailed after them with all kinds of threats. But the miners refused to be fooled for, after several days, tired and weary they plodded their way into the office and laid on the table the necessary bail in cash.

This is the spirit of the progressive miners thruout the entire United Mine Workers of America. This is the spirit of solidarity that will carry the miners thru to victory in all their fights.

The progressive miners' movement is a living body with a real soul. Their program when carried into life will not only be a systematic housecleaning affair of all traitorous officials in the United Mine Workers of America, but it will also serve to help get into the union all the miners who are at present unorganized. It will assist to make the United Mine Workers of America the beacon light of better conditions for the miners.

Because their movement voices the opinion of the rank and file in the United Mine Workers of America, because it stands for the removal of all those who do not conscientiously work for the interests of the miners, the miners know that the Progressive Miners' Committee will be attacked. One of the attacks manifests itself in the arrest of their secretary, Thomas Myerscough.

The miners believe in the proverb, "When you fight, the other fellow admits you are right." The miners do not believe in turning the second cheek when slapped on the first. They are going to fight and will win because they have the right foundation to build upon and because workers in other industries are with them.

The miners in Gray, Pa., are out on strike. Nevertheless, they were one of the first to rally to the defense of Tom Myerscough and Alexander Howat, for they already sent in their contribution to the Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of Western Pennsylvania.

No one but the workers themselves can save their fellow workers who remained true to the interests of the coal diggers and workers of other industries from going to prison.

Brother miners, thruout the country, this appeal is especially directed to you. Are you or are you not going to allow Thomas Myerscough and the nine other fellow workers who are facing a number of years in prison to rot behind prison bars! The arrests did not scare Alexander Howat and these ten workers because they have faith in you, the workers who they know will rally to their support. They are still holding high the banner of the workers and coal diggers.

The trials of these workers are coming up in the autumn. To save them from going to prison, money is needed and needed soon.

Brother miners, contribute your share to the defense of Thomas Myerscough, Alexander Howat and, the other nine workers who are unjustly indicted. Ask your fellow miners in your town to donate. For this purpose get subscription blanks furnished by the Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of Western Pennsylvania, 805 James Street, Pittsburgh, N. S., Pa. This organization has taken up the defense of Thomas Myerscough, Alexander Howat and the other nine workers arrested on April 27, in Pittsburgh, indicted and held for trial.

Big Meeting Hears Cannon in Coast City

(Special Wire to "The Worker.")

SEATTLE, Wash.—"Some people say that Russia has gone back to capitalism. That's pure nonsense. It's neither capitalism nor socialism; it's the New Economic Policy—the transitional period between capitalist economy and socialist economy."

In the foregoing fashion, James P. Cannon, national chairman of the Workers Party, summed up present-day economic conditions in Russia before a crowd that filled the main assembly hall of the Labor Temple in spite of a driving rainfall.

Cannon, who has just returned from a seven-months tour of Russia, started his lecture by picturing the familiar land of the Soviets fighting armed enemies on all sides, and then proceeded to discuss the Russia of today, compromising in a slight measure with small capitalists, but never losing her grip on the great basic industries.

"Before I went to Russia I heard a great deal about the impending collapse of the Soviet government," said Cannon. "I spent seven months inside of Russia and I looked very diligently for the signs of this famous collapse. The more I looked around, however, the more I came to the conclusion that the Soviet government under the leadership of the Communist Party is stronger than ever before in its history."

A smoke-screen of propaganda has hidden the truth about Russia from the American people.

Worried About the Farmers

Worry hangs heavy upon the bankers, food gamblers and old party politicians as a result of the growing discontent among the farmers, displayed in big part thru their linking up with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, at Chicago.

This worry permeated all of Harding's speeches on his flight to Alaska. It forced the Department of Agriculture to call economists and statisticians to the rescue. It hung like a black cloud over the sessions of the Chicago conference of republicans from seven mid-western states. It was reflected in the Kansas City meeting of the International Farm Congress of America.

Harding's soothing words evidently did not reconcile the farmers to the post-war deflation visited upon them. The experts at Washington tell the farmers, as we have often pointed out in these columns, that Soviet Russia is taking over what there is of the pauperized European market, while poorly paid American workers force low consumption at home. These same experts try to cheer the farmers by saying there will be a shortage of corn next year, to produce less wheat. But if all followed this advice then, as in the past, there would be a super-abundance of this cereal. So with the advice to turn to dairy products.

"The wheat belt is sick," says the board of governors of the Kansas City Farm Congress. "The very soil is tired, and the tillers are worn out by the hopeless effort to make more acres of wheat spell more dollars."

Despair spreads over the farm lands, even as it does thru the great industrial centers of the nation, because capitalism rules in Washington and Wall Street. It is because the workers and farmers in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, at Chicago, took a step in the right direction, in support of their own interests, that John T. Adams, chairman of the Republican National Committee, considers them "the common foe of republicans and democrats alike."

The Federated Party has taken its stand for united independent political action and has raised the slogan of a Workers' and Farmers' Government. The Federated Party fights cheap labor in Garyized industry, which means cheap food and bankrupt, landless farmers. The industries and the land to the workers and the farmers is the goal of the Federated Party. It is this growing struggle, drawing to it new masses, that has the capitalist plunderbund worried, as it sweeps forward to victory over all forms of exploitation.

The Line-up in Italy

Mussolini has won his "electoral reform" in Italy. His Fascisti "terror" frightened all the parliamentary deputies, with the exception of the Communists, Socialists and a few republicans, into supporting him. Even the Popularists of the Catholic Party, who bolted his cabinet, voted with him.

This Fascisti "reform" means that if Mussolini can muster a majority of Italian votes, he can take three-fifths of the places in next parliament. And the Fascisti assasins know that they can win the majority with gun and club, bomb and castor oil, dagger and torch.

In the present parliament there are 147 Communists and Socialists. This vote was cast solidly against the Mussolini "reform," with the Fascisti dictator yelling: "In Russia is there liberty of assembly, of Parliament?" answering himself with a blatant "No!"

There is liberty of assembly in Soviet Russia for the supporters of the workers' and peasants' regime. Czarists, bankers and landlords are not welcome.

World reaction hails Fascist Italy as an example of capitalist "liberty" to be followed everywhere. There thinking workers and peasants are outlawed and murdered.

When Elbert H. Gary, of the U. S. Steel Trust, and Julius Barnes, of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, travelled thru Italy recently, they gave Mussolini rule the approval of America's industrial overlords. We now have the picture of U. S. Ambassador Richard Washburn Child, at Rome, speaking for Washington, voicing sympathy for and support of Fascism.

Thus American capitalism, in Washington and in Wall Street, definitely lines itself on the side of one of the world's most brutal and bloody anti-labor tyrants. It is time that America's workers and farmers declared their solidarity just as fully for the emancipating rule of the Russian Soviet Republic. Let them learn the difference between the line-up of the open shop bosses in Fascisti Rome and the United Front of labor in Soviet Moscow.

Snowden Offers His Plan

The British parliament has been treated to Philip Snowden's individual expression of opinion on the inauguration of the Socialist era. The plan was defeated by a vote of 308 to 121.

It was to be expected that the bourgeois politicians would be opposed to any plan of socialization. But it was felt that the Labor Party at least could muster up so far that it could muster a 100 per cent vote of its own parliamentarians in support of a simple declaration for public ownership and democratic control of the instruments of production and distribution. It failed to do this, and the lessons to be drawn therefrom constitute the big value, if any can be attached to the offering of Snowden's plan.

The Labor Party has a majority in the House of Commons. Taking for granted that there were no absences, we find 23 Labor Party members voting with the King's politicians. It is claimed that they did this "in deference to the less progressive constituents who had elected them," which is not a new excuse for reactionary decisions.

The ailment that has captured the 23 Labor Party members is the disease that is eating at the heart of the whole British Labor Party. As it grows in strength, it seeks to become respectable, and acceptable to all voters. These labor careerists never realize that in holding to labor support they must throw overboard all expectations of a labor government. Inevitably and inexorably they must drift to the left of the whole mass of British workers in the exercise of their political power. The smoking out of these 23 reactionaries in Labor's midst will be a great urge toward increasing British labor support of Communist principles and tactics in the parliamentary struggle. Thus the workers profit again, even from their defeats.

Why Attack the Workers Party?

The Workers Party, as the organized expression of the American Communist movement, sees no day dawn without being confronted by some new attack. This is not so because the party is weak, as all our enemies so carefully state and restate. The party is attacked because it is strong and growing.

It is significant that even the reactionary, Gompers' element among this country's labor publications, this year, took an interest in the application of the British Communist Party for admission to the British Labor Party. They are using the so-called British example as an excuse for championing the Lewis-Gompers' campaign of attempted ostracism of Communists in the American labor movement.

We have but to repeat Gompers' own statement recently that European labor is drifting toward Communism. The demand for the admission of Communists to the British Labor Party is growing rapidly. It will soon win.

The nervous Gompers' reaction will not be glad to learn that the New South Wales, Australia, Labor Conference has voted for affiliation of the Communist Party with the Labor Party. The Communists in this great industrial section of the Australian continent will retain full liberty of separate organization and of propaganda. The New South Wales Labor Party has thus followed the example of the Queensland Labor Party.

We do not begrudge Gompers, or Lewis, or others of their kind, any comfort they may get out of attacking the Workers Party. We know that to the great masses of America's workers and farmers, every knock will be accepted as a boost. So let them keep on knocking. It is the attack of those in despair.

It is the great masses of working men and women who believe in the things the Workers Party is fighting for,—we say, "Join the Workers Party!"

Let "The Amalgamated" Come in

Every member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America should join in the effort to have their union affiliate itself with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, called into being as the united political expression of the workers and farmers of the nation.

This affiliation would be the most fitting reply to the kept press that spread the falsehood, during the Chicago Conference, that the delegates of the "Amalgamated" left the gathering on the first day. In its leading editorial, "The Advance," official organ of "The Amalgamated," issue of July 13, states when that:

"At its session at New York last month the General Executive Board of The Amalgamated received an invitation from the Farmer-Labor Party to attend a national convention called for July 3d at Chicago. The purpose of the convention was to form a national Labor Party. . . .

"The G. E. B. accepted the invitation and chose the Chicago Board members as delegates to the convention—Samuel Levin, Frank Rosenblum, A. D. Marimpietri, Sidney Hissman and Stephen Skala. Rosenblum and Levin were prevented from attending the convention by urgent organization work in New York. The G. E. B. was represented at the Chicago convention thru Marimpietri, Hissman and Skala. These delegates will submit to the G. E. B. a report on the work of the convention."

When the G. E. B. meets it should have before it, in addition to the delegates' report, the resolutions of large numbers of the Union's locals demanding affiliation with the Federated Party. This should be but the preliminary to placing "The Amalgamated" definitely on record for united independent political action at its next international convention. Workers in other industries are looking for guidance and inspiration to the members of this most forward-looking union in the needle trades. They must not look in vain. "The Amalgamated" must take its place in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Don't Miss The Two Funny Pages It Gets to Your Neighbor

Looking for Bolsheviks.

The Old Russian counter-revolutionists from Russia, remnants of the Kerensky and Wrangel armies, whose tastes arrived in San Francisco. The chamber of commerce is trying to find anti-bolshevik jobs for them all. At the same time, however, they are being combed by the Burns secret service agents, of the department of justice, for "Bolshevik agents," for even a single individual who might be tainted with working class sympathies. Los Angeles, Cal., has dubbed itself "The Scab City." The Chambers of Commerce, thru importation of Kolchak terrorists, are trying to make of the United States "A Russian Country." But the workers and farmers will have something to say about that.

Hot Weather Journalism.

The New York Times, July 14, ushered in the 1923 season for hot weather journalism by publishing a story headed, "Coke Worker Going to Toil in Airplane." This coke worker turns out to be a "high class employee with a good job," but The Times evidently expects its readers to believe that all coke workers use airplanes, and that, "Sedan Cars Take Coal Miners to Their Work." Evidently The Times wants us to believe that the Coal Baron, with their sedans, are a useful part of the mining industry. But there are few workers who will be misled by The Times' brand of hot weather journalism. So let the Times sweat thinking up more falsehoods.

The Attitude Toward Russia

Referring to the ratification of the Russo-Danish Trade Agreement by the Danish Parliament, the "Pravda" sees in it a significant sign because as was in Denmark that the reactionaries were making their plots and intrigues against the Russian Government. In view of the dependence of Danish capital upon English capital, the ratification acquires a special importance. There is a growing sentiment that all trade with Japan and even Italy and other countries to look at the rapprochement with Soviet Russia from a purely business point of view independent of any political consideration.

Altho president of the International Longshoremen's Union, the 140,000 members of which work along all the nation's waterfronts, Anthony Chlopek's has just left on his first trip across the Atlantic. While in Europe he will be called upon to take his stand on the United States Transport Workers recently established at Berlin. Here's hoping that Chlopek's first trip abroad will do him some good.

Lewis Has Been Labelled

In its report on the current civil liberty situation, the Civil Liberties Union lists under "Mob Violence" the beating of Joseph Manley and others from the Tri-District Convention of the anthracite miners of Pennsylvania, following an inflammatory speech by the union's reactionary president, John L. Lewis. No suit for criminal libel has been filed by Lewis in reply to this label of "Mobster" placed upon him.

Yes, We Have No Right to Strike

By JAY LOVESTONE

Again the Daugherty Injunction

If any doubting Thomas still wants to know who has the whole force of the great and glorious American Democracy, let him turn to the Federal Judge Wilkerson injunction handed down against the railway workers.

Exactly one year ago 400,000 railway shopmen struck against wage reductions. In the midst of the strike, on July 1st, Daugherty showed that the Government was possessed of sufficient power and brutality to be a force for employing class law and order by securing the notorious Wilkerson injunction ever issued in a labor struggle. Thru the Willard-Jewell agreement and the subsequent settlements most of the workers have gone back. Some are still on strike. With the unrestrained military, judicial, and financial aid of the Government the bosses were enabled to drive to cover the heroic shopmen fighting for their unions, their homes, and the most elementary rights of free men.

Thus, in so far as the strike itself is concerned at this moment, the last outburst of Daugherty and his handpicked, robed pal, Henchman Wilkerson of Chicago-fame, won't reach very far. The decree of permanence affixed to the infamous strikebreaking injunction of last year only tolls the knell of the most desperate open shop effort ever made by any capitalist government. For all practical intents and purposes there are not enough shopmen striking today to afford the bosses and their governmental agents the glee of heavy casualties in the ranks of the workers.

Strikebreaking Legalized

But the pith of the whole matter is this. The order of Judge Wilkerson gives the formal legal indorsement for all future strikebreaking activities by any sub-division of the Government. Stripped of all judicial camouflage, this Capitalist Ukase means that when the workers strike against the encroachments of Big Business, against intolerable working terms laid down for them by the greatest owners of public utilities and basic industries, all methods used by them as self-defense are illegal. In such strikes the payment of union benefits, the sending of letters of encouragement, the holding of mass meetings, picketing, or even telephoning in behalf of men fighting to save their wives and children from starvation, are all crimes against the Government.

Consequently, this decision is a formal notice served on the workers that from now on the United States Government itself will act as the plaintiff against them when they resist aggression by the bosses controlling industries which are of interstate character and whose commodities are exchanged in interstate commerce. Following the principle of this decree any state government may enact similar strikebreaking legislation and thus declare illegal even strikes strictly confined to state areas. All of which simply means that the Government has declared that the workers have a right to strike only when it gives them that right. In other words, since the Government we have today is a Government of, by, and for the employing class, the workers have the right to strike only when they are sure to be licked or when the stopping of work will not seriously flatten the pocketbooks of the exploiters. From the point of view of effective striking Wilkerson's order boldly and brazenly announces that the workers have no right to strike.

Mortal Blow Struck at Workers

It is interesting to note that this Open-Shop Law was not enacted by a legislative body. To follow this procedure might make the ugly brutality of our class Government too obvious to many workers and farmers. The employers have struck this mortal blow against the workers from behind. How firmly this order puts the owning class' heel on the neck of the working class is proved by Daugherty's statement. Our Strikebreaker General's explanation is especially important since it is the Department of Justice that will execute the law. Applauding this anti-labor decision, Daugherty proclaimed: "No strike involving interstate commerce can be conducted in this country without severe punishment to those who thus participate. The law in this regard is now forever settled by this decision."

Of course Daugherty is talking thru his hat when he says "forever settled." Nevertheless, when coupled with the almost simultaneous decision of the United States Court of Appeals denying striking shopmen the right of trial by jury, the blow thus struck is a terrific one. The United States Court of Appeals even went so far as to call the strike of the railway workers an "insurrection" against the Government. It also kicked the bottom out of the Magna Charta of Sam Gompers, the Clayton Act, by declaring its trial by jury section unconstitutional.

We can all talk ourselves blue in the face denouncing Wilkerson and Daugherty and it won't help the workingmen one bit. We can perhaps join Gompers in denying till Doomsday that Wilkerson means what he said in his permanent strike-breaking order. Neither method is worth a Continental to the working class.

There is only one effective way in which the workers and farmers can answer their employers and exploiters on the political field. The workers and farmers must organize themselves politically to take the law-making power out of the hands of their oppressors, the capitalist class. The working and farming masses must unite all their forces to take away the political power from the employing class so as to make impossible the use of the Government for strikebreaking purposes. The producing classes should organize themselves to build a Government which shall fight their battles against their enemies.

The Wilkerson Decision is merely another very painful reminder to the workers and farmers that they must all join in a united political party in order to save themselves from industrial slavery.

They Read "The Worker"

WASHINGTON.—The Chemical Warfare Service of the War Department wants the Federated Press Bulletin in its library. It asks to be placed on the "complimentary list."

In a note making the request the librarian writes: "The Liberator," "The Worker," "The Farmer," "The Nation' come regularly, complimentary, and are read with interest."

General Amos Fries, who is head of the service and one of the most ardent militarists in the war department, recently declared pacifists communists and radicals "dangerous to the country?" and it is that the general and his staff are seeking the light via the labor press?

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

It's difficult work describing people, as any policeman will tell you. But I just love these two American descriptions of William Z. Foster, the American labor leader, which both appeared in the New York Times on different days of his trial for criminal syndicalism:

"He is a hard looking man, of wiry muscular build and sharp, stern features, with a forbidding aspect."

"A quiet, well mannered man. He looked almost like a poet or a dreamer, with his soft blue eyes and his high forehead."

No wonder the jury disagreed!—London Daily Herald.

Here Are the Facts thru which Lewis and Farrington Expose Each Other as Enemies of Labor for control. Farrington at times posed as a progressive, as for example, his support of Alex Howat and the Herrin Miners. In this way he was able to deceive and gain the support of the honest and liberal-minded among the rank and file.

The old saying, "When crooks fall out honest men get their dues," may not always be true, but at least before the love pact was made between Lewis and Farrington, they left sufficient documentary evidence to prove, that they at least themselves knew how crooked they were. They have left this evidence in the hands of the rank and file, and it is up to them to pass judgment upon these two gentlemen, whose later strained relations brought out the fact that both of them according to their own statements, have been receiving bribes from coal operators for allowing them to run non-union mines.

That there are crooked Labor Leaders, no one will deny. But to prove their shady transactions is very difficult, and well nigh impossible. However, Lewis and Farrington occupy the unique position of supplying the proof of their own guilt.

John L. Lewis made the statement in the meeting of the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A., held Oct. 9th, 1922, that two substantial officers of District 12 (President Farrington and Vice-President Fishwick) had entered into an agreement with W. J. Lester of Herrin, Illinois, to allow operation of his strip mine during the strike; and that the proof of this deliberate sell-out of the Herrin Miners was in the hands of the Attorney General Brundage, who got the documentary evidence by raiding W. J. Lester's office. Lewis did not state how he managed to be taken into the confidence of the man who so bitterly prosecuted the miners of Herrin.

This charge is specific, and the evidence complete, according to Lewis. His duty was very clearly outlined in the U. M. W. of A. constitution, which lays down a rigid law of procedure in cases of this kind. Lewis as International President, should have preferred charges against Farrington and Fishwick, removed them from office, and placed men in charge of District 12, who would look after the interest of the miners, instead of the operators. However he did not do anything of the kind. Why? Farrington supplies the answer.

In a personal letter to John L. Lewis, dated Nov. 2, 1922, Farrington threatens to prefer charges against Lewis, for defaming his good name, unless Lewis immediately denies the statements that he made regarding the stripping of the Lester mine. The Lewis answer of Nov. 9th, 1922, did not contain that retraction, so Farrington proceeded to act.

Farrington Prefers Charges Against Lewis

In a letter dated Nov. 22nd, 1922, Farrington places four distinct charges of corruption and bribery against Lewis. He accuses Lewis of being paid by the President of the South-Western Coal Operators' Association, for the expulsion of Alex. Howat and his colleagues of the Kansas coal fields.

He further accuses Lewis of agreeing prior to the last strike, to a cut in wages, and that in order for Lewis to avoid the responsibility of the cut, the strike was to be called, and if possible to have the government intervene, or failing that, to let the strike continue until the Miners were starved into submission, so that the strikers would demand a settlement even on the basis of a wage cut.

The splendid response of the miners to the strike call belied this plan, and the treacherous betrayal of the Fayette and Somerset County, Pennsylvania, miners by Lewis, lends weight to the charges made by Farrington.

He further accuses Lewis of receiving $100,000 from the Kentucky mine owners for permitting them to operate their mines during the strike, and quotes Lewis as stating to the policy committee in a meeting held in Washington, D. C., "That work in the Kentucky mines would not be stopped as long as he was President of the Miners' Union."

Last but not least, he accuses Lewis of receiving $650,000 from the Harriman Bank of New York, for allowing three members of the executive board of the U. M. W. of A. to operate their mines in Pennsylvania upon a non-union basis.

These serious charges were not made by an irresponsible person, nor were they made in the heat of verbal discussion. Lewis, International President of the most powerful labor organization in America, accuses Farrington and Fishwick of being paid by W. J. Lester for allowing him to operate his strip mine during the strike. This charge was made to the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A.

Farrington meets this accusation, not as an innocent man would do, by availing himself of his constitutional right to be tried down by the constitution of the U. M. W. of A. He meets it as one would expect a guilty person to do by accusing Lewis of committing even greater crimes than those of which he himself is accused.

No man with any decency or self-respect would allow these charges to stand for a minute unchallenged, if they were not true. Instead of protecting their good name as Farrington puts it, both decide that they have spilled enough beans, and for mutual protection, instead of preferring charges against each other, they have come to the conclusion that it is best for them to join forces.

Lewis and Farrington Make Peace

Farrington in a letter to Lewis, dated May 21st, 1923, holds out the olive branch. He does not retract any of the charges made in his previous letter, but shows very clearly that the sole reason for him wanting to come to terms with Lewis is the growing strength of the Progressive International Committee of the U. M. W. of A. For him and Lewis to be divided at this time would be disastrous to both of them. So he asks for a conference with Lewis, to decide under what conditions he can enter the Lewis machine.

Lewis accepts Farrington's peace offer, and in a letter dated Washington, D. C., May 25th, 1923, where he was getting an earful about the progressive miners, from his friend W. J. Burns, he notifies Farrington that his offer is accepted, and that he would arrange a conference when he got back to Indianapolis. That conference has been held, and the issue is now clear; it is Lewis and Farrington versus Howat and the Progressive Miners.

Farrington supported Howat, not because he had any use for Howat or the principles that he stood for, but because he thought he might have Howat as a powerful ally against Lewis. Howat standing on the Progressive Miners' program, soon dispelled that idea, and so, turn and squirm as he might, there was only one place left for him to go, and that was into the Lewis camp. To get in there, he had to support Lewis and stab Howat in the back.

Farrington Lines Up With Lewis Against Howat

In a letter to Howat dated June 18th, 1923, Farrington officially carries out his agreement with Lewis, by serving notice upon Howat that from now on he, Farrington, will not give Howat any further assistance in his fight for re-instatement, and he puts forward the lame excuse that he takes his stand because Howat has refused to have anything with the Progressive Miners' Committee.

Of course, Farrington conveniently forgets that Howat has been lecturing the miners from his district for many months. The real truth is, that the dropping of Howat was one of the conditions that Farrington had to agree to, before Lewis would accept him as his aid.

Howat was expelled by Lewis without trial, his only crime being that he smashed the Kansas Industrial Court Law. This, in the eyes of Lewis and the coal operators, was an unforgivable sin.

Farrington, according to Lewis, is guilty of receiving money from W. J. Lester for allowing him to run his strip mine during the strike. Lewis according to Farrington is guilty of taking numerous bribes for allotting non-union-mines to operate in Kentucky and Pennsylvania, as well as attempting to sell out the miners during the last strike.

The judges of these cases are the rank and file. Their answer will be given at the next convention of the U. M. W. of A. That the answer will be the re-instatement of Howat, the endorsement of the Progressive Miners' Program as laid down in the Pittsburgh Conference, and the sending back into private life, the entire corrupt Lewis-Farrington Machine, depending solely upon the militant rank and file.

The progressive committee has got off to a flying start. District 1 has cleaned out the Lewis supporters by a majority of over 10,000. District 5 and 9 are making great headway, the Kansas miners stand solidly behind Howat, District 26 can always be depended upon. The progressive miners of District 12 have gained so much strength, that they forced Farrington to fire up with Lewis. In fact, from every District comes the most encouraging reports. Victory for the militant rank and file is ocertain at hand.

Labor Party Faces Gompers

Sam Gompers is face to face with the Labor Party idea." He cannot dodge it, or get away from it. The big struggle will come at the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, starting Oct. 1, at Portland, Ore. It was here that Gompers was planning to win an endorsement of his plan to expel the Seattle, Wash., Central Labor Council, one of the charges being that it believed in, and fought for the idea of independent political action. But the Minnesota State Federation of Labor has turned the tables. It is Gompers who is now on the defensive. It is Gompers who is compelled to fight for his very existence. The industrial workers of Minnesota, at their recent Duluth State Convention, went on record unanimously, demanding that the A. F. of L.: "modify its former policy and amend its constitution and by-laws, so as to remove if any there be, sections which may appear counterwise to this all-important step of organizing a distinct political party of the organized workers and farmers." The record of Minnesota's workers and farmers, chiefly the election of two United States senators against both the old parties, stands back of this demand. Gompers has no come-back. He has worked himself into a corner out of which there is no escape for him. The "Labor Party idea" is conquering in spite of the frantic opposition of the Gompers' reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor. The rank and file of organized labor is having its day—a new day for American labor.

Wm. Johnston Balks Labor Party Effort

By ALEXANDER BITTERMAN.
(Special to "The Worker.")

BOSTON, MASS.—William H. Johnston, President of the International Association of Machinists, and Chairman of the "Cleveland Conference," had his way. He succeeded in getting the Labor Conference of Massachusetts, held July 22 in Faneuil Hall, Boston, to reject a proposal for the immediate formation of a State Labor Party. Later on, at the close of the conference, it was decided to approve the national program of the "Cleveland Conference" and to continue with the policy of "educational work" and "publicity activities."

It must be said, however, that Johnston had a very hard job in swaying the conference to his point of view. A substantial part of the delegation came to the conference with the idea of making a complete break with the old parties, and to immediately form an independent political party of workers and farmers in the State of Massachusetts.

Delegate I. F. Conroy, Machinists' Union, Worcester; John Lucy, Long Shoremen's Union, Boston; D. R. Donovan, Central Labor Union, Worcester; John Singleton and Thomas Bratterton, Textile Unions, New Bedford, voiced this demand for the immediate formation of a Labor Party in no uncertain terms.

After the proposal for a Labor Party was voted down, one delegate after another rose to his feet to express disappointment and disgust with the new betrayal of the interests and desires of the workers of Massachusetts. Later on, when the conference was adjourned, this disappointment and disgust with Johnston's machinations found expression in the formation of a committee, called The Educational Committee for a Labor Party in the State of Massachusetts.

This committee was formed at an informal gathering held by the minority delegation which was in favor of the immediate formation of a Labor Party. The committee consists of the following: I. F. Conroy, Machinists' Union, Local 634; I. Kanner, Leather Workers' Union, Local 32; John Lucy, Longshoremen's Union, Boston; D. R. Donovan, Central Labor Union, Worcester; I. Cowan, Carpenters' Union, Local 157; John Anderson, Labor Party, Worcester; Wm. Zeligman, Hat Makers' Union, Local 7; Charles Schwartz, Jewelry Workers' Union, Boston; John Singleton, Loom Fixers' Union, New Bedford; Thomas Bratteron, Edmund Hearst and Charles Hawkins, all three representing the Federation of Textile Operatives of New Bedford, and John Francis Mullan, member of the Railroad Telegraphers, representing the Workers Party.

John Lucy was elected chairman of the committee, and John Mullan, secretary. The committee decided to remain with the conference and prepare for its next meeting in October. Meanwhile, a campaign will be started

N. Y. Labor Goes to Albany

Experience Already Shows that Forces of Cleveland Conference Will Fight Against Class Party of Workers and Farmers; Hope Rests with Rank and File.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

New York State labor meets at Albany, Sunday, July 29, to decide its program of political activity for the months ahead. It is assured that it will be a well attended gathering. It will be of nation-wide importance.

The "Socialist" controlled New York City American Labor Party, in May, told the workers of the state that there was no need for a state gathering.

But the democratic-republican owned Committee for Progressive Political Action, with which the "Socialists" are affiliated, thought differently. Thru the initiative of the railroad brotherhoods, the decision of the "Socialists" was set aside and the call sent forth for Sunday's meeting. This alone indicates a conflict of ambitions.

It is not difficult to prophecy what will happen in Albany, with the representatives of the railroad workers of Virginia, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Washington, where labor has been discussing its political struggle for power.

There is no doubt that the heads of the C. P. P. A., better known as the "Cleveland Conference," will do their best to prevent the workers and farmers of the nation's greatest commonwealth from stepping forward. That is what was unsuccessfully attempted in West Virginia. But Chairman William A. Johnston, himself, put it over in the Massachusetts gathering, at Boston, almost in the same hour that old party police clubs were beating in the heads of the shoe strikers of Brockton, the clothing strikers of Springfield, and the phone strikers of all Massachusetts.

If the railroad shopmen could be present in large numbers at Albany, the Johnston program might be overthrown by the delegates of his own and affiliated unions. But Harding's strike breaking program, including the Daugherty-Wilkerson injunction, well nigh crushed the shopmen's unions, with the result that poverty will keep their delegates at home. Their places will be in large part usurped by the delegates of the brotherhoods who remained at work during the strike.

Even among these, however, there will no doubt be found a goodly percentage who will not submit to the rule of Stone, Johnston and Keating, for even among the rank and file of the brotherhoods there are those who can see the real significance of the recent Minnesota election, even if their leaders are blind to it.

In a class by themselves will be the "Socialist" delegates, obeying the dictates of the "Socialist" politicians from New York City. Some time ago the "Socialists" went into hysterics fearing they might not be invited. But they received their invitation, and are being considered more kosher than ever since Sam Gompers' propaganda service issued from Washington, D. C., announced:

"The Socialist Party has made a complete about face from its attacks on the American Federation of Labor nonpartisan political policy. It now acknowledges that the trade unions are not interested in a national labor party."

For the past few weeks the "Socialists" have carried on an energetic

Mailed Fist Still Fights Shoe Strike

BROCKTON, MASS.—The police are still doing the bidding of the unholy alliance of the Shoe Manufacturers, the city authorities, and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. The mass arrests of the week before still do not satisfy them. When strikers walk along the streets, it becomes "mass action;" they must scatter.

The latest arrests were of Richard C. Clifford, former business agent of the Edgemekers, and Paul Gluckman, chairman of the striking stitchers. Swooping down on Gluckman was a veritable triumph, since he is lame. He had already turned back, at the command of the mounted policeman, but was, nevertheless, picked up. Four policemen did the trick. They rode up on the sidewalk, with revolvers in right hand and club in the other. A woman with a baby carriage dared to asked, "What are you doing?" She learned, "Get the hell out of here."

On Tuesday, several mounted police were lying in ambush, in an alley at the rear of the T. D. Barry factory, ready to charge on pickets. One is reminded of the Nova Scotia troops, who drove the striking miners back, and planned to confront them with troops with fixed bayonets; the failure of the second detachment to appear on time averting the calamity. Fortunately, no massacre occurred in connection with the Brockton surprise party.

The Civil Liberties Union representative, Horace Bancroft Davis, was roughly treated in the office of the marshal, when he protested against the violation by the police officers of the rights of the strikers.

The strikers are still holding their own. The lasters and vampers still tie up shoe production. Among those who are being imported as scabs, are some college students.

The meeting last Sunday, before a large crowd, in Remover Park picnic grounds, was addressed by Benjamin Gitlow, of the Workers Party, who scored the authorities for their solid support of the manufacturers.

Nova Scotia Miners Fight on Brilliantly

By TOM BELL
(Special to "The Worker")

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia.—As I start to write this a troop of cavalry gallops along past my window giving point to my ideas of the occupation of this town by the state forces for the suppression of those workers who dare to take action to oppose the use of armed forces against labor in industrial disputes. The provincial police patrol the streets.

At No. 2 Colliery barb wire entanglements have been erected, and sandbins posted. Seven hundred troops are stationed here to enable these to operate the coal mine. At Reserve Mines a detachment of cavalry was brought in to get three men into the boiler house to start the fires.

In Sydney troops and mounted police are used every morning to escort scabs to the steel plant. The capitalist press has stated that the soldiers are brought in for the "protection of property" and are not interested in which side wins the strike!

Under this slogan of the "protection of property" the state forces have been used to break the strike of the miners and steel workers. As soon as the corporation saw that the miners were not going to return to work and coal was needed for the Montreal market, troops were brought in to enable the corporation to get scabs to work on the coal bank.

As soon as the troops had driven away the pickets of the steel workers, scabs were taken into the steel plant. Every morning the troops and mounted police call at the houses of the scabs and escort them to work. In spite of all this neither the steel plant nor the mines are producing. Enough scabs have been secured to make a lot of smoke aided by the office staff which enables the Besco press of the Province to report that production has been resumed at the steel plant.

Arrests are being made daily in Sydney. Union men are being ar-

Coal Miners of Dist. One in Confusion

WILKES-BARRE, PA.—The District No. One convention of the United Mine Workers turned out a hodgepodge. The delegates time and again showed their sympathy with progressive measures, and yet, the convention was in the hands of the agents of the coal operators and the agents of Lewis. These agents have the art of brow-beating, manipulating, intimidating down so fine, that it will take more courage than was shown by the fifty-fifty progressives at the convention if they are ever to be beaten.

Gleason, a district board member and in charge of compensation cases, remained in Atlantic City a day later than either Cappellini or Brennan. Gleason has an unsavory reputation among the miners because of the number of compensation cases he does not win. Lewis filled both of Gleason's ears to overflowing with instructions and advice and shipped him to the convention, there to spill it, but not before the delegates. Gleason persuaded Alec Campbell that it would be to the best interests of the United Mine Workers (and incidentally to the best interests of the Lewis machine) that no fight between Cappellini and Brennan occur on the floor of the convention.

Senator Brookhart Explodes Malicious Lies About Russia

By JAY LOVESTONE

U. S. Senator Smith W. Brookhart has returned from Soviet Russia. The Iowa Senator is now an ardent advocate of immediate, unreserved recognition of Soviet Russia and is out to explode all the lies being spread about the Workers' and Peasants' Republic by Gompers, Hughes, Easely, Walling and their ilk.

Having reached Berlin on his tour of investigation of the co-operative movement in Europe the Senator hit upon the idea of going to Soviet Russia. Here a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune painted such a horrib's picture of Soviet Russia to Brookhart that he became very interested and arranged with the "Red" Ambassador in Berlin for an immediate entry.

Wants to See the Farmers

Brookhart was especially interested in seeing what the Russian farmer is doing. Entering Russia by way of Poland he found that the Soviet frontier ourposts did not at all look

Seek Farmer-Labor Unity in Minnesota

By O. H. WANGERIN

(Special to "The Worker")

DULUTH, MINN.—Plans are on foot for the building of a real "Farmer-Labor Party" in Minnesota, as a result of the gatherings here of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, and the Working People's Political League.

Great enthusiasm was aroused in the state federation meeting by the unanimous adoption, by a rising vote, of a resolution placing the federation on record for independent political action and instructing the delegate to the Portland, Ore., convention of the American Federation of Labor in October, to introduce a resolution urging the A. F. of L. to modify its political policy and amend its constitution so that it can support a national labor party.

Demand Syndicalist Law Repeal

It is also very significant that the convention also adopted, without a single dissenting vote, a resolution calling for the repeal of the state syndicalist law.

All the old officials were put back into office with little opposition, except for president, where I. G. Scott, of Minneapolis, ran against the incumbent, E. G. Hall, but was defeated by 155 votes against 65.

When Paul J. Smith, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, made a characteristic Gompers' anti-amalgamation attack, he was ably answered by Delegate Louis Vandenberg.

The political action resolutions adopted were as follows:

Show Need of Independent Action

Whereas, the members of organized labor in the State of Minnesota have demonstrated fully the possibility of independent working class political action and by our disunity and factionalism have impaired the heretofore second large political party, namely the Democratic Party, and

Whereas, this destruction of the Democratic Party now leaves only the Republican Party which is recognized by the Republican themselves to be the spokesman of the interests, and

Whereas, it would come with ill grace as members of organized labor to even suggest the possibility of our members re-affiliating with the Republican Party, and

Whereas, this condition is rapidly developing nationally as well as in the State of Minnesota, and

Whereas, the success of the organized labor movement in Minnesota in its endorsement and co-operation with the Farmer-Labor Party has been so highly successful in stimulating the solidarity of labor on the political field, therefore, be it

Resolved, that we hereby reaffirm our conviction of the necessity of a National Farmer-Labor Party and instruct our delegate to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor to introduce and use every effort possible for the adoption of the attached resolution.

Demand A. F. of L. Action

Whereas, the utter bankruptcy of the old political parties and the unsatisfactoriness of labor is clearly shown in the repeal of the Child Labor Law, the Women's Minimum Wage Law, the Coronado Decision, the passage of the Esch-Cummins Law, and the infamous Daugherty Injunction which broke the railroad shopmen's strike as well as in numerous other ways, all of which demonstrates conclusively that labor must have a political party of its own, and

Whereas, the organized labor movement of Minnesota thru its political efforts had successfully elected Dr. Henrik Shipstead and Magnus Johnson to the U. S. Senate, showing that the farmers and workers can be organized into a political party and elect its representatives to the State and the National government, and

Whereas, it is believed upon the American Federation of Labor to lead the great mass of American workers into a more effective and progressive means of defense both on the economic and political fields and

Whereas, by their contentance in the victories of Dr. Shipstead and Magnus Johnson to the U. S. Senate they have proven their capability of performing this function successfully, therefore

Resolved, that the Minnesota State Federation of Labor urges upon its delegate that the American Federation of Labor in its national convention assembled, modify its former policy and amend its constitution and by-laws so as to remove if any there be sections which may appear conducive to this all important step of organizing a distinct political party of the organized workers and farmers.

Militant Shopmen Absent

The convention generally was quite conservative, and seemingly willing to mark time on this important issue. This was due in large part to the fact that the backbone of the progressive movement in the federation, the railroad shop crafts, has been completely broken. The shop crafts were the driving force in the political movement in the state and for amalgamation. At former conventions there were from 50 to 75 delegates from the shop organizations. This year there were not more than half a dozen.

The city workers and farmers are facing a serious situation, politically, as a result of the election of two United States Senators, but without a centralized organization. The old Nonpartisan League is passing out of existence. The convention of the Working People's Political League (industrial workers) was not inspiring. The membership of the latter organization has dropped from 50,000, at the time it was organized in 1918, to less than 10,000 today. The political league convention was made up of delegates principally from the "Big Four" railroad organizations. The old leaders had absolutely no program to offer and nothing was done except electing officers for the ensuing year.

A resolution was put thru, however, to call another convention of all elements working up the Working People's Political League and the Farmer-Nonpartisan League, for some time this fall, to devise ways and means to form a "Farmer-Labor Party." The sense of the resolution was to send the call to all local unions and farmers' organizations, somewhat similar to the call for the July 3-5 Convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in Chicago.

The Slogan of Workers' and Farmers' Government

By JOHN PEPPER

The enlarged session of the Communist International which met in June in Moscow has issued a new slogan for the Communists of the world—the slogan of the workers' and farmers' government. The Communist International has by this means placed the old slogan of workers' government upon a broader social basis.

The new slogan of the Communist International is no new slogan for our Party in the United States.

Comrade Zinoviev declared at the session of the enlarged executive: "Our American Party, the Workers Party, has already of its own accord found the slogan of workers' and farmers' government." The Workers Party of America was the first party within the Communist International to apply the new slogan theoretically as well as practically.

The Theoretical Formulation

Theoretically, the problem was first brought up in my Labor Party pamphlet. There I said the following concerning the alliance of farmers and workers: "A Labor Party will grow provided it does not attempt to be a party for and over everybody, but rather a class party—of the working class. This should not mean that the Labor Party shall fail to include the working farmers, —that is, the tenant farmers and mortgage farmers. Such omission would be a mistake of the greatest magnitude, from the standpoint of the future of the working class. One of the most important conditions for the victory of a Labor Party is that it develop the cooperation of the farmers and workers, which has become traditional in America. America is a favorable exception in this respect. Of European countries such collaboration take place only in Soviet Russia. In the former third parties (Greenback Party, People's Party) the political leadership was in the hands of the farmers, the workers being merely an unconscious appendage. If a Labor Party is to be born and to grow, the relation must be reversed."

I then brought up the question, upon a broader basis, in my pamphlet "Underground Radicalism," in the section, "Can We Utilize the Conflicts Within Capitalist Society?" I wrote in this pamphlet: "There are Communists who believe that we lose our revolutionary dignity when we take advantage of the class-divisions within the bourgeoisie. They believe that the only way to wage the class-struggle, is to consider capitalistic society as one solid reactionary camp which always confronts the workers as a closed phalanx. But this is pure nonsense, and not revolutionary, Marxism: Marxists have always asserted that the various divisions and conflicts within capitalistic society, must be used to the best advantage of the working class.

"Ferdinand Lassalle, the famous German Socialist, said that the bourgeoisie is a single reactionary mass. But it was Karl Marx who protested and polemized against this unscientific and superficial assertion. It was Karl Marx who pointed out in 'Capital' that the utilization of the class struggle between industrial capital and big land owners in the Forties, procured the important social concession of the ten-hour day for the English workers.

"From Marx to Lenin, every real Marxist has practised the tactic of analyzing the various class-divisions within capitalistic society, and exploiting the class-conflicts within the ruling class, for the benefit of the working class. The tactics of Lenin during the entire Russian revolution, is a masterly application of this tactic. The whole Russian revolution from the internal political point of view, is but a proletarian utilization of the class-conflicts between the peasants on the one hand, and the big landowners and big capitalists on the other. Lenin's tactic was—alliance of workers with poor peasants, neutralization of the wealthy peasants, struggle against the big landowners and capitalists.

"The main difference between Bolsheviks and Mensheviks was exactly this question of the utilization of the conflicts among the various classes. The Mensheviks claimed: 'It is a middle-class revolution, and therefore the working class should ally itself with the capitalists against the feudal landowners.' The Bolsheviks said: 'This is a proletarian revolution, and therefore the right tactic is an alliance between workers and peasants against big capital and big land owners.'"

Then, on the basis of this theoretical deliberation, the Agrarian Program of our Party set forth openly the slogan of workers' and farmers' government.

The New Slogan Before the Farmers

In practical agitation, the slogan of workers' and farmers' government was first applied in the St. Joseph trial against Foster. The Communist as the representatives of the working class, faced a farmer jury in the St. Joseph trial. In summing up the trial, I wrote then as follows in "The Worker" of April 14: "From every political view point, the trial is a historical symbol. Foster, as the representative of the American militant workers, appears before the capitalist judges and a farmer jury will render the verdict on him. Here are arrayed before us the three most important classes of American society—the worker, the capitalist, and the farmer. The worker is the defendant; the capitalist is the prosecutor; and the farmer will give the verdict. A historical symbol truly reflecting the historical situation! The working masses march on as the active forces of the revolution. The capitalists oppress these masses even more fiercely thru its governmental powers of suppression. And the victory in this ever sharpening class conflict will go to that class which receives the support of the farmers." The Central Executive Committee of our Party took up this question and decided that the whole defense was to be based mainly upon the common interests of workers and exploited farmers. In the Foster trial, C. E. Ruthenberg, with masterly clearness and in a popular manner that was exemplary, first presented the slogan of farmers' and workers' government before the farmer jury, and thereby also to the public at large.

The July 3d Convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party then provided the Workers Party with a second and even greater opportunity to identify itself with the demands of the exploited farmers (even at the expense of Marxian clearness), whereby the slogan of workers' and farmers' government was turned, from the slogan of the Party, into the slogan of the great masses of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Revolt of American Farmers

Of course, the chief motive has been mainly the social and political development of the United States itself. We could not but realize that a portion of the labor aristocracy and most of the high officials of the trade unions are hopeless for the cause of the revolution. Having definitely allied themselves with the capitalists. At the same time we saw that the exploited tenant and mortgage farmers were revolting with ever growing bitterness, against the capitalist and the capitalist government. The situation today is such in the United States, that the capitalists and the old capitalist parties fear the revolt of the farmers more than the open workers of red Petrograd and the genius of Trotsky organized the Red Army, but that four-fifths of the masses of the Red Army consists of peasants, who defended their hereby acquired land against Czarism and counter-revolution. On the other hand, the Hungarian proletarian revolution of 1919 failed in four and a half months because its leaders had not understood how the secure the alliance of peasants with the workers. They carried out the 'theoretically correct' socialization of land, instead of giving the land to the peasants, as was Lenin's policy in Russia. Thereby, they made the social basis for the Hungarian revolution too narrow for it to be able to live and be victorious.

The history of revolutions teaches us that the revolutionary class must be able to bring together all discontented classes under its leadership. It must understand this under the penalty of death for the revolution; otherwise it drives the other classes into the arms of the counter revolution. The revolutionary peasant soldiers of Napoleon, Kossuth and Trotzky fought against the counter-revolution, while the Frankfurt assembly in 1848 and the Hungarian proletarian dictatorship of 1919 were overthrown by the counter-revolutionary peasant soldiers of Hapsburg and Horthy.

The Working Class Must Lead

The farmers, even when they are discontented and rebellious, could never play an independent political role, and could never rule independently. The history of the great German Peasants' Revolt of the sixteenth century shows this just as clearly as does the history of the peasant government of Stambulisky in Bulgaria in the twentieth century. Only centralized classes, that is only the capitalist class or the working class can seize or hold the centralized government for a long time.

The capitalist class has become counter revolutionary everywhere thruout the world. The only class which is revolutionary today, is the working class. Only the initiative of the working class can overthrow capitalism. The exploited farmers must realize that they can free themselves from capitalism only when they ally themselves with the workers. But on the other hand, the workers must realize that they can win only if they place themselves at the head of the farmers, and that they can retain power only if they know how to secure the alliance of the exploited farmers.

Build Farm-Labor Party in West Va

By H. E. KEAS

(Special to "The Worker")

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—All efforts to put the soft pedal on using independent political action of workers and farmers in this state went by the board. The great gathering of approximately 400 delegates of the organized farmers and industrial workers of the state, by an overwhelming decision, created the West Virginia Farmer-Labor Party. All organization campaign in every county, senatorial and congressional district will be started in preparation for next fall's campaign.

It was decided to hold another state convention not later than March 15, next year, when the question of national affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will come up for definite decision.

Delegate H. E. Keas, of the Workers Party, was not seated on the technicality that he was not a resident of the state. Members of the Workers Party were seated as delegates of labor unions and other workers' organizations.

The Committee for Progressive Political Action had its forces on the ground working against independent political action.

John M. Barr, former Nonpartisan League congressman, from North Dakota, at present a member of the national executive committee of the Progressive Political Action Committee (Cleveland Conference), while attacking both old parties, nevertheless, urged the capturing of the primaries of these old parties, and seeing that the "right men were nominated." He spoke against independent action as "impractical at this time."

Another "go-slow" speaker was Fred Hewitt, of Washington, D. C., editor of the "Machinists' Journal," official organ of the International Association of Machinists, headed by President William H. Johnston, who is also chairman of the Progressive Committee.

Reading from the Progressive Committee's Program and Principles, Hewitt stated that it was his opinion that the time was not ripe for a third party movement, and that the only hope for success the workers and farmers have is to participate in the primaries of both the old parties! Altho the delegates listened with attention, they had already indicated in many ways that they had come to the conference for a different purpose. Hewitt failed to hit home.

But the spirit of independent action swept the gathering here, in much the same manner that it showed itself in the Chicago gathering of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The badges of the Fayette County delegation read: "Fayette County Solid for Independent Political Action." The regular convention had as its creed: "Farmers and Workers Political Conference."

All of the rank and file were determined that this convention should go down in West Virginia history as the first concrete step in the building a powerful political party of workers and farmers.

The conference created a state executive committee of a president and secretary, and one member from each congressional district, and an advisory committee, consisting of two members from each of the 15 senatorial districts in the state which will act with the executive committee. It is makes a general committee of 38. C. J. Massau, member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Montgomery, Fayette County, was elected president of the new organization. Vance Palmer, president of the Clarksburg Central Labor Union, and member of the United Mine Workers, was elected secretary.

Russia in the World Market

The prospects of the export of Russian grain this year are favorable. In the opinion of the "Gazette of Trade and Industry," the competition of American grain, if any, will not be dangerous at all for the Russian exporters in view of the high qualities of Russian cereals and unlimited demand of grain on the Northern and southern ports to enlarge the elevators for storing the grain intended for abroad.

Whither Are They Drifting?

With the return of the fighting Senator Brookhart, the "Progressives" in the two old Parties are again on the warpath. That is, they are on the warpath as far as "Progressives" go. They are preparing to call another conference some time in the Fall to consider their "next steps."

Since the December Conference in Washington and the May Railway Executives' Conference, in Chicago, the insurgents have been doing lots of talking individually. They are beginning to itch for a chance to talk jointly. Besides, the recent report of the Coal Commission and the collapse of the wheat market have made it especially pressing to get together to talk things over.

Since the election of Magnus Johnson, in Minnesota, there has been a talk in tidal waves, about a "Third Party" being organized. But these men are more afraid of their victories than of their defeats. Tho they see in the victory in Minnesota a gain of tremendous significance, they are hesitating and do not know what to do or where to go next. One of the Best Minds of the Insurgent Conclave the other day wrote of the Johnson election in a fashion betraying a total helplessness and indecision as to the "effective lines to be pursued."

Except for a very blurred hint from Brookhart, not a word has been said by any of the Senatorial and Congressional mainstays of the new "progressivism" as to a "Third Party." They all seem to be afraid to get into the water of murder-politics. Brookhart's suggestion as to the nomination of Kenyon for President by the Republican Party is of course ludicrous. The Republicans must stand by Harding or repudiate everything their machine has stood for in the last three years. Yet, in the Kenyon proposal there is germ of probability. It is not unlikely that Harding will be forced into making some such bid for the discredited progressives as Kenyon in order to remove even the possibility of "Third-Party" talk on the part of the most stalwart of the insurgents.

The coming conference will not take any steps to form a "Third Party" of capitalist progressivism, unless presently unforeseen circumstances intervene. It will be just as organization conference of the forces of protest in the 68th Congress. Insofar as definite, positive steps towards a substantial realignment of American political forces in the 1924 campaign goes, this conference will not be an advance over the preceding ones. The very announcement and purpose of its initiators preclude all such possibilities.

The cohorts of capitalist progressivism are still weak and without strong leadership. They are still drifting. It is up to the workers and farmers to strike the heaviest blow against employing class reaction in the 1924 National Elections.

Hits "Sheer Nonsense" of Kept Press

LONDON.—"That the mass of the Russian people are living in a state of terror is sheer nonsense," says Lieut.-Commander Joseph Kenworthy, M. P., describing a month's stay in Russia in "Foreign Affairs." "So is the fable of a general persecution of religion.

"Moscow is the only capital in Europe in which there is no open and visible prostitution. I did not see any street walkers in either Petrograd or Moscow, whereas, as everyone knows, they throng certain main streets in London, Paris and Berlin. Nor did I witness drunkenness the whole time I was in the country.

"I visited a dozen theatres, cabarets, music-halls of all kinds, from the largest to the smallest, and never once saw anything vulgar or indecent. So far as I can judge, any child could be taken to any theatre in Moscow or Petrograd without fear of contamination. This cannot be said of either London, Paris or Berlin."

Reactionaries Win War on Mass. Party

ed among all the Labor Organizations of Massachusetts to swing them into line for a Labor Party and for the affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The resolution for a Labor Party which was brought into the conference from the Resolutions Committee as a minority report, and which William Johnston did his utmost to defeat, read as follows:

"Whereas: This conference was called in the interest of and upon the petition of the interests of labor by means of independent political action, and

"Whereas, The only effective way for securing this end is by the organization of a progressive political party of workers and farmers functioning independently of the two old parties, and

"Whereas, The recent victory of the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota which resulted in the election of Henrik Shipstead and Magnus Johnson to the United States Senate, is a striking example of what can be accomplished by the united action of the workers and farmers; and

"Whereas, It is resolved that this conference of labor and political organizations in the State of Massachusetts endorse the formation of a Labor Party and that it take such steps as may be necessary to form the Massachusetts State Organization of the Farmer-Labor Party."

There were about 70 delegates present at the conference, 52 representing Labor Unions, about 15 representing Socialist Party Branches, one or two from other political Organizations, and the rest were simply "prominent" individuals. One of them was Robert MacFarland, Editor of the Boston "American," a Hearst publication. This gentleman was later appointed by the managers of the conference, chairman of its resolutions committee. Nearly a third of the delegation was in favor of the minority report of the resolutions committee, and demanded the immediate formation of the Labor Party. It could be seen, however, that many more delegates were in favor of this minority report, but Johnston and his henchmen and silver-tongued repeatedly took the floor to assure the conference that he himself would be in favor of this minority report, if he felt that the "people" were ready for it. He assured the conference that some day we shall see in the United States a Labor Party on the style of the British Labor Party, but the time is not ripe. And it was by means of this diplomatic trickery and also with the help of additional assurances that the question of a Labor Party will be taken up at the next meeting of the conference some time in October, that Johnston and his friends succeeded in having the conference practically delay action on this proposition.

The delegates from the State Committee of the Workers Party were not admitted. The credentials committee that was appointed by the managers of the conference reported their credentials, and recommended not to seat them. The chairman of this committee, Robert Fechner, member of the General Executive Board of the International Association of Machinists, and right-hand man of Johnston, explained that since the Workers Party delegates were not admitted to the National Cleveland Conference, they could not be admitted here. The majority of the conference, made up of the Johnston machine, plus the S. P. delegation, approved the recommendation of credentials committee, refusing to seat the Workers Party delegates. The vote on this proposition was 52 in favor of the recommendation of the credentials committee, and 11 opposed to it, with quite a number of delegates abstaining from voting.

Detroit Labor Hears About Chicago

DETROIT, Mich.—George M. Tries, an ex-Socialist and ex-Federated Farmer-Labor Party Convention in Chicago, to the Detroit Federation of Labor, said:

"I believe that the new party has every chance of success. For the first time in the United States a group may join a party and still keep their separate political identity. The program and platform are reasonable. An organization campaign is starting and many of the groups in attendance at the conference signified their willingness to join. Six months from today the party will, I believe, be well on its way to success."

Tries was the delegate of the Detroit Federation to Chicago. He was placed on the National Executive Council of the Federated Party. The Detroit Central Labor body voted that the matter of affiliation with the Federated Party be referred to the board of directors with instructions to investigate the Chicago Convention, and report back to the Detroit Federation of Labor within two weeks, and that all delegates be notified to be present.

Washington Labor Marks Time

(Special to "The Worker")

BELLINGHAM, WASH.—With the Damocles sword of Sam Gompers and his reactionary rule in the American Federation of Labor, the Washington State Federation of Labor seemed possessed of a paralyzing fear at its convention here. Altho it declared for the release of all political prisoners, it defeated a resolution calling for amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions. A resolution supporting an independent political party of the workers, in the cities and on the land, was also killed.

The the convention sentiment seemed to favor recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic by the United States, a resolution recommending such action failed to pass when it was learned that it was not in line with the A. F. of L. policy as expressed at the Denver Convention. Gompers is no doubt pleased with these results won by his imperial dictatorship over the rank and file of labor.

SUPERIOR, Wis.—Affiliation by the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor with a labor party will not be effected at present. Resolutions favoring a Wisconsin Farmer-Labor party were turned down by the convention on recommendation of the executive board, which urged continuance of the existing policy of pre-election conferences with farmer groups.

Nova Scotia Miners Reply to Mr. Lewis

By JOHN A. McRURY
(Special to "The Worker" and the Federated Press)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia.—The "return to work" command of President John L. Lewis, U. M. W. A., to the striking Nova Scotia miners has been disregarded. The district executive board has sent the following reply to Lewis:

"District board considered your telegram and state that this strike has no connection whatever with collieries, corporation or wage demands. The only issue is to prevent use of armed force against workers in every industrial dispute in this province, and for release of our president and secretary.

"The membership unanimously pledged itself not to return to work until troops are removed and our officers released. For any district officers to advocate return to work would be quite useless in face of the determination of men to stay on strike. We have repeatedly guaranteed immediate resumption of work if troops are withdrawn and officers released.

"This district is supported by trade unions of Canada and is a political struggle of Canadian workers against an evil from which we have suffered for years. Our international union must understand that its jurisdiction does not give it authority to prohibit workers in Canada waging a political struggle against use of armed forces which are being used to smash our labor movement."

Armed with a warrant issued by Attorney General O'Hearn, the chief of police, accompanied by Colonel Eric McDonald, head of the provincial troops, arrested Dan Livingstone and J. B. McLachlan, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of District 26.

The first charge was only in the nature of a misdemeanor, with a maximum penalty of one lyear in prison. Then new charges were entered, viz.: "Seditious libel and conspiracy to publish seditious libel," with maximum penalty of 20 years' imprisonment.

The item used as evidence was a circular issued to the various local unions in the district, mentioning the various atrocities committed by the provincial police and troops on the striking steelworkers at Sydney. The circular reads in part as follows:

"On Sunday night last these provincial police in the most brutal manner rode down the people at Whitney Pier who were on the street, most of whom were coming from church. Neither age, sex nor physical disabilities were proof against these brutes. One old woman over 70 years of age was beaten into insensibility and may die. A boy 9 years old was trampled under the horses' feet and his jaw breast bone crushed in. One woman, beaten over the head with a police club, gave premature birth to a child. The child is dead and the woman's life despaired of. Men and women were beaten up inside their own homes."

This circular has aroused labor all over Canada. The government arrested the workers who had sworn out affidavits to the validity of the circular.

Wishing to deprive the miners of their leaders for as long a period as possible the trials are conducted in Halifax, 200 miles away. Col. G. S. Harrington, who has won previous victories for the miners, and J. A. Walker are conducting the defense.

Bail was opposed on the grounds that the charges were of a serious nature. However, appeal was made to the supreme court of Nova Scotia, and after a writ of habeas corpus was applied bail was granted at $4,000 each.

When McLachlan arrived from jail in Sydney, he was carried bodily from the train amid cheers from thousands of workers. (Premier Armstrong of Nova Scotia was on the same train and was not even noticed by the workers.) Proceeding to Glace Bay, McLachlan was met by a parade of 5,000 miners. A mass meeting was held in the open, speakers urging solidarity.

On the hill above the meeting a detachment of cavalry trained machine guns on the 5,000 workers.

Phone Girls in Grim Fight Against the Bell Combine

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, Mass.—Plucky telephone operators are putting up a strong fight against the New England Telephone Co., part of the American Bell System, the nation-wide monopoly. Always the staunch defender of the "company union," the company is attempting to crush the strike and thus remove every vestige of trade unionism among its employees. The company is already installing automatic phones, and it is wise to eliminate any possible opposition from the unions. The workers might ask for a sum to tide them over until they prepared themselves for another trade. This must be prevented.

Several thousand girls have been out for four weeks, for a seven-hour day instead of eight hours at a nerve-racking switchboard, and for an increase of $5.00 a week.

At present, a student starts at $11.00 a week, and if after a year she is accepted as an operator, she attains the maximum of $22.00 in 5½ years. Only 26 per cent of the operators are getting this glorious maximum. The demand is for a $5.00 increase all along the line, bringing the maximum to $27.00.

Noteworthy is the fact that the demand is for a flat increase for all girls, and that no special group is favored. The demands were submitted to the Company two and a half years ago, and the company was satisfied to leave things as they were.

Scope of the Strike

All of New England was affected by the strike. Worcester, Springfield, Lawrence, Brockton and many other points outside of Boston were hard hit. Service was practically at a standstill.

In Boston, the service was also impaired, but many remained at work because of differences between their local union, old Local 1-A, whose charter had been revoked a short while before, and the strike leader, Miss Julia S. O'Connor, head of the Telephone Department of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who had revoked the charter.

Practically all of the exchanges were picketed by the girls. Strike meetings were held in Tremont Temple, and one on the Boston Common, with speakers of the local labor movement, and of other international unions. On the Common, characteristic placards were displayed: "The Service is Good—and Rotten"; "Miss Jones (the daughter of the President of the company) works for $32"; "We will work for $27"; "The Press Stands Behind Us—With an Axe."

Support from the Unions

A sympathetic strike on the part of the male operators was impossible, for the vast majority of the organized belong to the "International Brotherhood of Telephone Operators," an independent organization. Some, out of a spirit of solidarity with the striking women, have gone back to Local 142 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The strike leader, Miss O'Connor, stated that this local was small, and that because of the other union, it would be suicide to call them out on a sympathetic strike. They are assisting as individual members in getting funds.

The various Central Labor Unions have voted to support the strikers morally and financially, the Boston C. L. U. pledging itself to raise $50,000. However, there is many a slip between the cup and the lip. The amount received by the strikers to-date from Boston unions does not amount to more than $3,000. Local 34, Cooks and Waiters' Union, gave $500 of $1,000 promised; Local 103 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers gave $1,000.

Attitude of the Phone Company

From the start, the Company has refused to treat with the strikers. Scabs were secured from all possible points, and were whisked to and fro in taxicabs. Police protection was asked for; husky policemen were stationed as a protection against the young women striking; for the right to a decent wage and decent conditions. Fighting? It doesn't look very much like a fight to see young women walk up and down the street, while armed police are protecting the scabs. But this is the way in which trade unions carry on their fights to-day.

Pitiless publicity was resorted to in the newspapers; special letters were sent to subscribers, pointing out the impossibility of granting the strikers' demands; the joys of the telephone work, the case, the splendid salary, medical service available, etc., ad nauseam.

The wages of the girls were "war peak wages," urged the company. But the salary of the President was increased after that, from $15,000 to $26,000 a year. And the dividends were dealt out regularly, 8 per cent yearly.

When the strikers urged arbitration, the company still maintained that there was nothing to arbitrate.

The Union Proposals

The attitude of the Company is causing some of the Central Labor Union bodies to contemplate action. There is talk in the Boston C. L. U. to ask the State Legislature for an investigation of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. In the Brockton C. L. U. they talk of nationalization of the telephones as the best kind of remedy.

As for strike action to back up the girls with the best kind of support, it is in evidence only in a few places. In Springfield, the C. L. U. threatens to call a general strike, if police reserves are again placed on duty at the telephone exchanges, or if the sidewalks are roped off to prevent picketing. In the Boston C. L. U. a motion to place before the local unions the question of the advisability of a general strike was ruled out of order, and a question as to whether the C. L. U. could express its agreement with such a proposal was choked off.

The Girls Are Learning

They have learned that the press as a whole is expressing the point of view of the company; their speakers are particularly bitter against the prostituted press. They have learned that the police are being used to frighten them, and they also know that the judges are against them, for in Lawrence, a judge ruled that it was not necessary for a taxicab driver from out-of town to have a local licence, if he was transporting scabs to and from work, since he was doing "private" work for the company; that their only source of support is the trade unions, and other workingclass organizations. The contributions sent them from the branches of the Workers Party will make them realize the real nature of the Party.

The Fight Continues

At the Conference called by the Mayors of several cities, the strikers agreed to go back without insisting on the wage and hour demands, provided all the strikers were returned to their places. This offer was refused by the company, out of regard "for the loyal workers" meaning the scabs who took the jobs of the striking operators. The fight is once more on, for the original demands.

Engdahl Speaks to Coal Miners

Coal miners of the Scranton-Wilkesbarre anthracite district in eastern Pennsylvania heard J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," outline the policies of the Workers Party in the immediate struggles of the workers, at the party picnic held last Saturday at Valley View Park, midway between the two cities.

Engdahl outlined the part played by the Workers Party delegates, at Chicago, in organizing the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, explained the program of the Trade Union Educational League, in the mining as well as in other industries, and called on the miners to enlist in the militant struggle of the nation's workers. Engdahl also told the Pennsylvania miners of the fight of the Nova Scotia coal miners, who have incurred the enmity of President John L. Lewis, of the miner's union, because of their solidarity with the steel workers.

Leon Prusieka, editor of the Lithuanian daily, Laisve, also spoke. Some of the delegates to the District One Convention at Wilkesbarre came to the picnic before returning to their homes.

Girard, Ohio, Meeting

The English Branch of Girard, Ohio, is arranging a mass meeting at Avon Park, Girard, Sunday, August 19th, at which Max Lerner, Fred Merrick and John Marshall will be the speakers.

Nova Scotia Miners Fight the Cossacks

rested under the pretext that they gathered with some others and made "tumultuous noise" and in the opinion of the informer were contemplating a riot! Victims of the charges of the Provincial Police, on July 1st, who make out affidavits stating their injuries, are arrested as soon as it is known that they have made the deposition. Two men, Tom O'Day and William Oliver, were arrested in this way. Both of them are over sixty years of age and both of them carry wounds received from the batons of the police.

"The protection of property" means the smashing of the strike here. The protection of the profits of Besco is the object of the troops and police sent here. The Minister of Labor has wired Alexander S. MacIntyre, Vice President of the Miners' Union, that he has no doubt but that order and discipline prevails in the ranks of the miners. Merkle, a Canadian Press writer whose conscience bothers him, after a tour of the mines states that the property is in no danger whatever. The Mayor of Glace Bay has wired the Federal Government that the civil authorities are opposed to the presence of the troops and that the municipality will refuse payment for the expenses incurred by the troops. The reply to him was that troops have to be sent to Nova Scotia after enough troops had been brought here to destroy the entire labor movement!

That the "protection of property" slogan is merely a phrase to cover up an attempt to smash the strike is proven by the Minister of Labor when he stated that troops were asked for before the strike took place. He also said that the requests of the corporation were given one hundred per cent consideration while the requests of the workers were ignored.

In Sydney the troops and police were sent at the request of the Chief of Police, his assistant, and Noble the chief of the corporation police. In Glace Bay Judge Finlayson did the job. Rather than wait for these men to remove the troops the miners have decided that unless they are withdrawn not an ounce of coal will be dug on this Island. On this point the workers are determined. To the workers of Canada this means much. The workers of this country have seen their strikes smashed by the use of armed force since 1905. And they know that the workers here are battling for them judging from the tone of telegrams that we have received from the labor union and political parties. Despite the craft divisions in the labor unions and the timidity of the leaders the workers are trying to show their solidarity with the workers of Nova Scotia.

The miners of District 13 have stood up splendidly in this battle. Every local has demanded a sympathetic strike and in Drumheller they did not wait for the officials to make up their minds to call the strike but threw down their tools. This movement of protest and action is showing itself despite the craft divisions and the leaders who are so brave that they would convene a nice harmless conference that would end in finely phrased resolutions and in nothing else or demand of the government that an investigation be held into condition in Nova Scotia.

The workers here are determined not to give in despite the odds against them, and they hope that the workers of the rest of the country will come to their aid, not only by resolution but by striking along with them.

No Russians in "The Ruhr"

MOSCOW.—Karl Radek in the "Pravda" denies the rumors spread by German telegraphic agencies to the effect that several Russian communists took the leading part in the strikes in the Ruhr district and that some of them were arrested. It is an absolute lie since there was not one Russian communist in the Ruhr. The false information was spread by English agents with an object to incite the German bourgeoisie against Soviet Russia. A portion of the bourgeoisie desiring to get certain advantages out of the conflict gladly believed these rumors. Radek expresses his surprise that the German Government which knows perfectly well that it is false still does not deny the rumors.

A Capitalist Trinity

Mr. Gompers scores again. The New York Times endorses his pact with Secretary of State Hughes against the recognition of Soviet Russia. Three in one, that's Gompers, Hughes and The Times. They are three peas in the capitalist pea pod. You can't tell one from the other.

Wall Street Declares Repeal of Esch-Cummins Act Valueless

Prosperity Only That Much Because Railroad Rate Structure Can Continue to Throttle Workers and Farmers

By CLARISSA S. WARD

"IT IS ALMOST INCONCEIVABLE THAT RAILROAD OWNERS WOULD BE HELD DOWN TO A PERCENTAGE LOWER THAN THAT SET UP BY THE COMMISSION UNDER THE ESCH-CUMMINS ACT."

Wall Street soberly points that the Esch-Cummins Act, which is the law of the land, is of little value to the railroad owners. Under the Esch-Cummins Act, the Interstate Commerce Commission has the power to raise freight rates in order that railroad corporations may earn a "fair return" on the value of their property. The Commission has been in favor of granting increases in rates, but the railroad executives were not satisfied with the rates allowed them because they did not net a fair return on their investment. Appeals were taken before the courts. The mocking laughter of the capitalist system echoes thru the rest of the editorial. Wall Street can well afford to be amused by the antics of those Progressives who would reform the capitalist system. It pokes gentle ridicule at their stupidity stating, "IN VIEW OF THE SUPREME COURT'S DECISION IN THE SOUTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE CASE IT IS ALMOST INCONCEIVABLE THAT RAILROAD OWNERS WOULD BE HELD DOWN TO A PERCENTAGE LOWER THAN THAT SET UP BY THE COMMISSION UNDER THE ESCH-CUMMINS ACT."

The Supreme Court now plays at reforming the railroads. It has come to a conclusion not with the Capitalists owning the government, lock, stock and barrel, but with THE SUPREME COURT. Wall Street can well say, "Go to it, I'm a case of heads I win and tails you lose."

The value of the ownership of the Supreme Court has been brought out recently by another official organ of the employers. In the last issue of "American Industries" published by the National Association of Manufacturers appears an article devoted to proving that the Supreme Court was placed above Congress for the specific purpose of defeating the will of Congress should it pass any legislation challenging the divine rights and privileges of the exploiting class.

The consistently anti-labor decisions of the Supreme Court are too well known to need restatement. The past year has seen the Child Labor Law and the Minimum wage law declared unconstitutional—unconstitutional because they interfere with the right of the capitalists to grind the lives of the lives of starving men, women and children.

The power of the Supreme Court, which is not elected but appointed for life—to nullify the laws enacted by Congress, is beginning to meet with opposition from many quarters. The National Association of Manufacturers, seeing its stronghold under attack, has come out with a frank statement to all employers telling why Congress should not have the power to repeal laws over the Supreme Court veto. Briefly the capitalist position, stated in their own words is:

"The protection afforded to our citizens in their lives, liberties and property against the passions and arbitrary will of Congress, would be destroyed."

That is the answer to the reformists, who, in opportunism and hypocrisy and sham of democracy, hide from the workers and farmers the actual capitalist dictatorship, which exists today in these United States and which will continue to exist until the workers and farmers take the power into their own hands.

THE WORKERS PARTY, 799 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY

Pity the Poor Politicians! They Are Trying to Tell Farmer He's Prosperous

By HAL WARE

Have you ever tried to curry-comb a wild cat? Or used a hornet's nest for a pillow? Well, those little stunts are nothing compared to the job that the Republican politicians are trying to perform on the American Farmer. They are trying to tell John Farmer that he is PROSPEROUS!

The little facts of an eight billion mortgage debt, of foreclosures, increasing tenancy, child labor, slowly diminishing power of all farm products capped by the fall in wheat below the dollar in Chicago or below 80 cents on the farms; these little matters seem to be wasted on their attention.

At least the following headline appeared in the New York TIMES, July 12:

REPUBLICANS FEAR RISING RADICAL TIDE

Conference of Western Leaders Seeks Way To Convince Farmer He Is Prosperous

If you have read the rest of that account you found nothing to substantiate the Prosperous Bunk. Merely plans to "spread the Prosperity talk." This conference followed Harding's hollow and futile "Plank" spoken in Kansas. It boils down to just "talk." In Kansas Harding talked only of credit legislation as the great accomplishment of his administration. Capper talked glowingly some time before of the Grain Futures and Trading Act, and the Fordney Agricultural Tariff Act as great accomplishments of the Farm Bloc. And what is the answer? Wheat selling at almost 60 cents at the farm, and every farmer I believe who buys selling 60 percent higher than it was before the War that made this world "safe for democracy." (But let's stick to the Republican Bunk in this.) This rising cost of city products doesn't bother the Politician. That's easily explained—high wages—is the set formula used; "strikes," any move on the part of the city worker to maintain a decent standard of living, is put forward as the cause. It is the "rising tide of radicalism" that bothers Mr. Politician. What is this? Do they mean the Communist? Do they mean organized Labor? Not a bit of it! They mean nothing more nor less than the Farmers' Revolt that put the Nonpartisan League across; the recent elections that ousted good and solid Republicans and put Shipstead and Frazier and Brookhart in the Senate, and now, in Minnesota, has populated the Republican Governor and elected Magnus Johnson to the vacancy caused by the death of Knute Nelson.

Unlike European conditions where the farmer is truly the pussy-pull-back in the social scheme of things and city labor takes the politician over the coals here in the good old U. S. A., you find John Farmer the most "radical" from a politician's point of view. You see news items such as this:—"If it is clear weather today the farmers will stay in the harvest field and the conservative city elements will elect Preus to the Senate in Minnesota."

And then just to fill out the picture you find Sammy Gompers, the leader of the greatest Labor Organization in America, berating a farmer, Senator Ladd of North Dakota, for going to Soviet Russia. And Senator Brookhart who has just returned thinks Russia should be recognized, while this same Sammy thinks it must not.

But the bankruptcy of the labor leadership thus exposed is equalled by the recent conference called together by Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture. This conference was made up of professors, bankers, packers, statisticians and of course the Farm Bureau Federation and leaders. After stating the obvious facts of European conditions of increased production and decreased buying power, they put up the same old "remedy" Cut the wheat acreage. Do they really think this will feed the farm family, pay the back interest, taxes, mortgages and store bills? No! For they come along later with this cynical observation:

During the last five years certain forces have combined so to increase the supply that the price level of farm products has been kept below that of prices for other commodities. This situation has generated offsetting forces tending eventually to restore the former equilibrium, thus improving the position of the farmer. Among such forces is the Migration of Agricultural Population to the City. There recently has been a distinct acceleration of this movement.

This movement, will in the long run, add to the urban demand for food products and will eventually lessen the supply of farm produce, thus tending to establish a more normal relationship between agricultural and other prices."

Just sum that up!! It means in plain American: (1) Because of good and guaranteed prices the farmer produced too much. (2) That this glut causing bankruptcy prices drove the farmers from the land; (3) that when a sufficient number of farmers are dispossessed and become cheap labor in the cities thus increasing the mouths to be fed and reducing the hands producing the food, why then prices for food will come back to that good old "NORMALCY." Do you know what it is? The normal relationship they speak of before the War was still below costs of production.

Is it any wonder that farmers REVOLT? With people starving, land idle, and the best the present administration or the old can offer as a hope is that enough farmers will lose their land so that those that survive who hog what is left can make a living? Is it any wonder that at the recent Farmer-Labor convention the best men of President Harding broke with the rank and file of the Farm organizations? Or that the farmers there should have repudiated the nomination of President Harding about his precious Credit legislation, and the bunkum of the Farm Bloc about its Tariff and Trading bills, and all the other futile Farmers' Friends with their harmless "Eat a Bita Bread" and the last straw of Wallace's committee which calmly tells them it must get worse to get better if not for them then for whoever, is on the land when it does. Is it any wonder that the farmers went right to the bottom of their difficulty? That they demand 1st THE LAND and a MORATORIUM for five years while they get it. And then demanded a new deal on Credit and Government ownership of Railroads and Public Utilities. They want land on a basis of use and occupancy. Yes this is indeed a "rising tide," Mr. Politician. But not of "radicalism," it is just plain common sense and you will find that John Farmer, no matter whether in America or Europe, has always had plenty of it. You will find that your election hypnotism has lost its punch. That the last elections were not mere flashes in the political pan; but were indeed but the beginnings of a true coalition of farmers and the rank and file of the Labor movement.

You will have to follow the lead of your Minnesota politicians and retreat to the mis-led and the mis-leaders like Sammy of the A. F. of L. in the cities. No, Mr. Politician, stop kidding yourself. No matter how much dust you may kick up, be it Tariff or Trading or Credit bills or your laws of "Supply and Demand," the Farmer is not radical—BUT he is rational. He has waked to one important truth. Labor and Farmer must fight together and you are on the other side of the trench.

Helping "John D."

The Laimp, the magazine published by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, states that there is now to the credit of employes who are participants in the Stock acquisition plan in excess of $14,500,000. Won't the oil workers lend poor John D. some more?

An Apology of Terrorists at Pittsburgh

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURG, PA.—While the agents of the Department of Justice and Assistant District Attorney Meyer were raiding the offices of the Wbrkers Party in Pittsburg last April they did not forget other workers in their campaign of terrorization.

A troupe of these agents swooped down upon the headquarters of the National Croatian Society and "searched the place for seditious literature." The Recording Secretary of the organization was arrested and ordered to turn over all papers, books, records and documents, pertaining to the society.

These agents of the coal and steel interests had been "tipped off" that the Croatian Society was a "Red" organization. The order went out to clean it up. The raid followed.

Put One Over on Prosecutor

But there was some humor in the situation. Someone put it over on Assistant District Attorney Meyer. He got the wrong "tip" this time. The National Croatian Society has nothing to do with the "Reds" of even the pinkest variety.

When the staff of sleuths went over the records of the organization they learned of this, very much to their dismay. So bad wrong were the Secret Trust authorities on the dope that had been sold them by some private detective agency and labor-wrecking crew that Assistant Attorney Meyer was compelled to write the Croatians a letter of apology for the raid. Mr. Meyer confessed that his detectives did not have the slightest basis for the raid.

Novel Excuse Invented

Ordinarily when the gangmen of the big capitalists attack the workers' organizations they do so under the pretense of these bodies receiving money from Moscow or some other mysterious "foreign" source to finance their terrible, subversive movements.

But this time the tables were turned. The excuse for breaking in to the headquarters of the workers' organizations was found in the dead. In this case the "officers of the law", had the gall to order the raid on the barebrained excuse that the Croatian Society was financing Moscow! This confession in bankruptcy was openly made by Assistant District Attorney Meyer in his letter of apology dated June 16th to Mr. Anthony Lucas of the National Croatians. He wrote:

"A short time prior to the arrest of your secretary, this office was informed that the Board of your society had very recently appropriated a sum said to be upwards of $10,000 and that this money had been with other money had been forwarded to the Communist leaders in Russia for the spreading of Bolshevik and Communistic ideas."

Admit They Wronged Workers

The letter goes on to say: "A careful examination of the records of your society and definite and exact statements made by the Executive Board of your society have convinced us that the information that we received was entirely false."

Of course Assistant District Attorney Meyer expressed his hopes that this letter of apology would be accepted by the Croatians as an act sufficient by itself to "right any wrong or injury that might have been done," to their officers and members.

This unwarranted raid on the National Croatian Society shows clearly what the workers of the Steel and Coal Barony of Pittsburgh are up against. The attack on the Workers Party and the Progressive Miners' Committee is only part of the general offensive tactics against all the labor organizations in the district.

U. S. Senator Explodes Lies About Russia

as bloody as pictured in our press. At the border he was met by the head of the American Relief Administration, a representative of the Jewish Relief and "Commissar somebody or other representing the Soviet Government."

"Being a farmer myself, I did not need an interpreter to tell me what the farmers of Russia were doing. I saw 2,000 miles of farm land, planted as well as in England, France and Germany, and more than in the United States. I reminded myself of the story of the Berlin correspondent who told me that the peasants would not plant. What is more, I saw these 2,000 miles of planted land from a stage (the window of a moving train) which gives the lie to all the tales of Soviet staging for effect."

Here the Senator took occasion to poke it hard into old Sam Gompers' ribs. Talking of his interpreters who were given him by the A. R. A., Brookhart said: "One of them was a woman whose husband was a Czarist general who fell in battle against the Bolsheviki. The second's husband was still in a Red prison. The third was a baker who, in the Czar's time, employed 3,500 people. Now his factory is in the hands of the State. It was with such interpreters that I undertook to see things as they were in Russia.

Conditions Greatly Improved

"I saw Minsk, Moscow, Kieff. I saw a great number of peasants' houses under construction. All of them were superior to the old homes. The new buildings showed more advancement than was made in a thousand years under czarism. At first the peasants had welcomed the counter-revolutionary generals with bread and salt. But they had the landlords along with them. These landlords turned us out of our homes. The Soviets gave us our homes and educated us. Yudenitch, Denikin, and Kolchak murdered us, took away our grain and seed and were responsible for the famine. This is what the Russian farmers told me."

Senator Brookhart went on to say that the peasants told him that they could not understand how such a good country like the United States could get along without Soviets. They were especially bitter against the counter-revolutionists and punctured every lie he had heard about the Bolsheviki attacking religion.

Describes Agricultural College

The Senator especially looked into agricultural conditions. "I visited the agricultural college near Petrograd in charge of Prof. Williams, an American, who had been there for 40 years. When the revolution came, most of the teachers in the school stood by the Soviet Government. There were 5,000 students here, altho the school is equipped for only 2,500. In the library there were to be found some of the latest scientific agricultural bulletins published in America, Germany and England. The regular course is three years, but a student fails to be given a chance to complete his course if he sits still. There are over such colleges with from two to three thousand students in each.

"Now let me contrast this picture for you with what I saw in some other countries. In Constantinople there is an agricultural college, with 45 pupils; in Bucharest with 40; in Warsaw it is yet to be organized.

Sees Real Development

"Here we see the real development of the real Russian common people. I went to see the grounds were the great Agricultural Exposition is to be held in Moscow in August. There are set aside for it 155 acres of ground better than even in Iowa. It has 14 acres of foreign exhibitors. At wonderful contrast is to be seen in the exhibits of the old and new houses. The latter are remarkably clean. While the peasants wait around for the Exposition they are given short courses in agriculture by the Soviet teachers especially sent there for this purpose.

Production Increased

The Iowa Senator nailed the canards and lies spread by Gompers and his lickspittles about Russian industry. Speaking of his typical observations, Brookhart said: "I saw four State Textile Factories. In one plant I found production better than before the Revolution. The goods turned out in these factories are as good as I saw anywhere. These mills made 3,000,000 gold rubles in net profits after meeting depreciation, etc. The four factories are getting 98 per cent production on a 44-hour week basis as compared with the 60-hour working week before the Revolution.

Powerful Co-operative Movement

Brookhart had occasion to see the co-operative movement at work in England, France, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Poland and Soviet Russia. He was enthusiastic about the great progress and high degree of development reached by the Soviet co-operatives. The Senator met the manager of the Central Co-operative and was tremendously impressed with the efficiency of the management and operation.

"Thirty per cent of all the business in Russia is now being conducted by the Co-operatives. Measured in gold rubles their produce is worth six times that before the war. They expect to organize all the State industries within a few years with the approval of the Soviet Government. The Soviet Government has extensively helped the Co-operatives which are now flourishing to such an extent that they have over seven million active members."

Brookhart also said that he had talked matters over with Chicherin, Litvitzky, and the Commissar of Agriculture. They told him that Russia is planning a thoro reorganization of industry along Co-operative lines.

For Russian Recognition

In closing, the Senator contrasted the orderly and steady improvement of conditions in Soviet Russia with those in some other European countries. Brookhart is striving for American recognition of Soviet Russia in the interests of our own farming masses as well as in the interests of the Russian farmers.

Salutsky Expelled from the Workers Party

The following letter has been sent to J. B. Salutzky by the Executive Secretary of the Party upon direction of the Central Executive Committee:

New York City, July 16, 1923.

J. B. Salutsky,
31 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

DEAR COMRADE:

On May 19th, I wrote you as follows:

"I am instructed by the Central Executive Committee to inform you of the following decision regarding the charges pending against you:

1. The C. E. C. declares that Comrade Salutsky's actions at the Cleveland Conference were anti-Communist, and that he deserves expulsion from the Party for this conduct.

2. Since, however, Comrade Salutsky has indicated his desire to remain a member of the WORKERS PARTY, and a supporter of the Communist International, the C. E. C. proposes to give him an opportunity to prove by his future action as a member his worthiness to remain in an organization which is fraternally affiliated with the Communist International.

3. The C. E. C. therefore, proposes that Comrade Salutsky shall make a public statement to be printed in the Party press which shall incorporate the following pledges:

a) That Comrade Salutsky pledges himself in all his public speeches, writings, and activities, to give loyal and undivided support to all the policies of the Party;

b) Since the statutes of the C. I. do not permit a Party member being an editor or co-worker of a political organ independent of, and not under the control of the Party without the consent of the C. E. C., Comrade Salutsky must immediately turn over to the Party the American Labor Monthly, and agree to abide by whatever decision the C. E. C. may make as to its disposal.

c) That Comrade Salutsky must send the statement above idicated to the Executive Committee for publication in the Party press within five days and before a new number of the American Labor Monthly appears.

Should Comrade Salutsky refuse to make the pledges above set forth, he shall be at once expelled from the Party."

Since the above letter was written, the C. E. C. of the Party has considered the various modifications of the decision in regard to your connection with the American Labor Monthly, and has submitted to you the alternative proposal either that the American Labor Monthly be continued with the Liberator, or that you sever your connection with that publication.

On June 25th, in reply to your inquiry as to the policy which would guide the combined publication should the American Labor Monthly and the Liberator be consolidated, the C. E. C. stated:

"1. That the publication be edited in complete harmony with the principles of the Communist International.

"2. That on questions of policy on which the Workers Party has adopted a position, the publication must be edited in complete harmony with the position adopted by the Party.

"3. That on questions on which the Party had not adopted a policy or which it was proposed to take up, free discussion be permitted until such time as there was an official Party decision."

Since that time the C. E. C. has received no further word from you in regard to the compliance with the decision laid down in the letter of May 19th, and that of June 25th. It feels that under the circumstances it can take no other action than to immediately put into effect the decision stated in the letter of May 19th, that in case of non-compliance with its decision you be forthwith expelled from the Party, and I am notifying the proper Party units of this decision. Fraternally yours,

(Signed) C. E. Ruthenberg,
Executive Secretary.

Big Struggle of Dist. One Coal Miners

each succeeding day. One day they would announce that Brennan intended to make a hot fight against seating Cappellini as president; the next day they would announce that it had been decided to have a harmonious convention. Then reports undoubtedly pictured the battle going on between the Lewis-Brennan forces and the Cappellini forces behind the scenes. The climax was reached when on the fourth day of the convention, Brennan and Cappellini shook hands upon the stage of the convention hall. Immediately Anthony Pan, a staunch Cappellini supporter, demanded to know what it was all about.

"It looks as if we are on a train, being railroaded to God knows what station. How does it come that the papers are let in on all this back alley stuff and we, the delegates, who should be informed, know nothing. What is this agreement that has been reached?"

Others spoke similarly. Brennan attempted to mollify the delegates, but the storm was uproar. Cappellini had to say that if they did not trust him he was ready to resign. The result of the debate was that many delegates left Wilkes-Barre convinced that some kind of trade had been made. Others claim that Cappellini would never agree to trading the assurance of his election for favors equally valuable to Brennan.

On Thursday the writer found the visitors gallery roped off against him. He asked the sergeant-at-arms what this meant, and was informed that he would not be allowed into the convention hall again because he was a "communist" and had been ousted at Scranton. Upon the afternoon of Wednesday the first ray of intelligence filtered into the convention when Stanley Dziengielewski, a miner from the Scranton region, talked to the delegates about the need of independent political action by the workers thru a Labor Party.

Kennedy had just finished a long speech, ridiculing those who were attempting to teach the members of the miners' union their business (referring to the progressive movements) and had then reported upon the wonderful work done by the Labor Bank that Harriman & Kennedy ended by giving the delegates the astounding information that after the wonderful labor lobby had nearly won much needed legislation for the workers' compensation act, the operators and manufacturers association peeked in and in fifteen minutes, by opening barrels of whisky and barrels of money, defeated the amendments.

This gave Delegate Dziengielewski his opening. After this delegate ended his speech, Kennedy was forced to arise and admit that a Labor Party must be organized in this country, the same as in England. Dziengielewski had scored with the delegates.

The convention livened up again on Friday, when Dziengielewski called Delegate Evans, who co-operated with Lewis in the Scranton riot, to order. Evans was lauding Lewis' mob tactics. Immediately spies from both the camps of Lewis and the operators nearly stepped on each other in a mad rush to have Dziengielewski thrown out of the convention. He was charged with having been seen eating with the writer, with being a progressive, yes—they even knew he had been arrested the night before because he had acted as chairman at a meeting near Scranton at which a representative of a Detroit Polish paper spoke.

Cappellini could have taken the convention out of the hands of the company delegates and the reactionaries. He could have given it inspiring and intelligent leadership. We fear that he threw away much credence in Lewis' pretention that if the wage advances for the miners are to be won at Atlantic City, then the District No. One miners will have to behave and the mine owners will have to be given assurance that District No. One and its leadership is safe and sane. The progressives know different. Only constant vigilance and militancy will force the operators to deliver.

The spirit of Womracism between the progressives and reactionaries is not yet drawn. There were dozens of delegates ran swayed from one side to the other, like the top of a tree in a wind. The combination of Lewis and company operatives in conventions and locals, the drive Lewis and the companies are making against the progressives, will soon create two hostile camps in every local, who will then fight for supremacy. To this contest the progressives will win because only the progressives are true to rank and file interests.

We know let's see what Lewis and the mine owners will do to the miners at Atlantic City. Here the new wage negotiations for the anthracite mines will be concluded within the month. You guess who will lose.

"The Life of the Party"

Beginning with the next issue The Liberator will present a most attractive mockery of the current political year that, like the magazine "Liberator" makes you want to read it.

In this issue Art Young's survival of the fittest serial contains a caricature of John Wingate Weeks, Harding's Secretary of War. Art Young in this serial of cartoons of prominent figures in American political life gives us side-splitting closeups of men who make the laws of the nation.

The recently formed Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been the victim of many confusing interpretations. From the staged attacks of the clements lined up in the New York Call: "Forward combination, to the Cleveland rantings of the conservative labor leaders, what took place in the July 3rd conference has been thoroly misrepresented and consequently extensively misunderstood. In view of this fact the editorials in the August "Liberator" on this subject, in conjunction with the very enlightening analytical article by John Pepper, "The Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party" are indeed interesting and should not be missed by anyone wishing to be right up to the minute on this very important question.

Harding's antics in the role of President of the United States is amusingly reviewed in an article by C. E. Ruthenberg. This article shows up his shallow pretenses and buffoonery and is illustrated with cartoons by Maurice Becker. "On Joining the World Court" by Scott Nearing gives us a fresh interpretation of Harding's tricks in trade for putting it over on the gullible American "public."

And the literary and artistic expression of the magazine is by no means overshadowed by the political articles. "An Early Liberal Minister" by Lewis Browne is a clever dialogue in dialogue on our present day life. "The Bet" by John Noble, is a story of negro persecution in America. Followers of Floyd Dell's serial "The Outline of Marriage" will be interested to know that in this issue Dell brings the subject up-to-date.

Admirers of Claude McKay's poems will like his recent poem written in Moscow giving his impression of Moscow's May Day demonstration. The cartoons in this issue include drawings by William Gropper, Hugo Gellert and Robert Minor.

Those of us who cannot get too much information about Russia, will appreciate "Intellectual Life in Russia" by the French writer, Victor Serge, which was translated from the French article in "Clarte."

Fox Can't Force the Movie Camera to Tell Lies About Red Russia

By JOHN DALE

William Fox, one of our mightiest magnates of the movies, is putting "Red Russia" in crimson lights over the entrances to his cinema palaces these days. For he is featuring a new, startling picture, "Red Russia Revealed."

The pictures aren't half bad. Even the trick camera has a hard time putting over anti-Soviet propaganda. The Red Army is shown, on foot and on horseback. Trotsky is shown, making speeches, riding a destroyer over the waves—it doesn't say on what water—, hurrying from one end of the country to the other. But the captions lend themselves to the attack on Soviet Rule. Words can be twisted easier than pictures. Thus the "Red Army" is declared to be the instrument of the "Soviet Autocracy," which is pictured as a threat to "civilization," and all the other nonsense that was accepted by the ignorant three and four years ago, but which finds fertile soil to grow in now.

The titles announce a "savage and fierce foe of the counter-revolutionaries" in Mrs. Lenine, and then shows the quiet, mild-mannered wife of the Soviet premier, slight of build and retiring in demeanor. She is on the deck of what looks like an excursion steamer. She is looking out over the water thru a pair of binoculars. But the next moment a huge piece of artillery action 45 flashed before the audience, that is, no doubt, supposed to feel that Mrs. Lenine is some terrible, Amazonian militarist.

This effort of Mr. William Fox, thru his erstwhile subordinates, to make the pictures lie, is too cheap to get by. The attempt is so transparent that it defeats itself. It should only serve to whet the appetites of the "movie" goers to attend the showing of "The Fifth Year" film of the Friends of Soviet Russia, that will have its first showing at the Manhattan Casino, 155th St. and Eighth Ave., Saturday, July 28th. It will later be shown in all the sections of the country.

Taylor Wins Free Trip to Red Russia

Extension of the Tractor Drive is announced being prohibited by the Hoover Office, the first drive has been closed and John T. Taylor, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, was the successful candidate who wins the trip to Russia.

Thirty other prizes have been awarded to date. Detroit workers are jubilant over their victory and are now entering the second contest, which will continue until Oct. 1.

Terms for the second contest are precisely the same as for the first. Detailed information can be obtained from the office of the Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 W. 13th St., New York City.

Some of the leading contestants in the Second Tractor Drive are: S. Klimovick of Bayonne, N. J.; L. L. Goldman, of Philadelphia; Simon Feldman, of Bridgeport, Conn., who was in the first contest, and A. Strlz, an auto mechanic of Detroit, whom the Detroit bunch declare they will exert all their efforts to put over.

But what Detroit did in the first contest, others can do in this contest. It is up to others to get their local unions and workingmen's fraternal benefit societies back of their own contestants.

STEALING SOAP AS A PROFESSION

By HARRISON GEORGE

Morris Ostrofsky of New York is the latest person to be arrested by the Bolsheviks. He was arrested after two of his children were found dead by the Bolsheviks, his parents charging that they died from eating soap. Here is the way his parents explained their children's death:

"Ostrofsky, who was employed in a soap factory, stole a few cakes of soap every week for several months and brought them home to his family. Two weeks ago his children died from eating the soap."

Mr. Ostrofsky, who was convicted and whose appeal against conviction for "stealing property" was dismissed, blew with contempt in Bolshevism, now being tried, the prosecution says, very excited about the "stealing" seizure of property, "sacred private property," for the common good, "which is directed against just such petty thieves, morality, the rights of small artisans and small business men." But we see in the case of Mr. Gest's parents how little law and property is held sacred by petty bourgeois when the law is the law of the workers and the property the wealth of all in common.

To live "for years" by larceny of an article so vitally needed as soap in a typhus and disease ridden land, rather than go to work, not only shows the lawlessness of the capitalist mind but indicates that the much touted Russian "chaos" was slack in its duty. No wonder that the Michigan prosecutor denounced Rutenberg who has, "for years," been not an individual profession, but in a confiscation of the soap factory and every other factory for the support of the workers and their dependents.

Another Whiff of Imperial Democracy

A dreary and sordid drama is now being enacted in the Philippines. All of capitalist America's prating about the self-determination of nationalities is once more given the lie.

General Leonard Wood, one of our rich-militarists, now the Governor-General of the Philippines, has re-instated a secret service agent, Ray Conley, who was formally "cleared" of serious bribery charges, to the dissatisfaction of the native population. This has brought about the resignation of the members of the Cabinet and the Council of State, all Filipinos.

With the acceptance of these resignations all the insular administrative affairs are now in the hands of the Governor General and his appointed henchmen. Even the empty, formal pretense of self-government hitherto embraced by our Government in Washington has thus been chucked overboard.

Of course Washington will stand behind its Governor-General Wood since he was picked for the job, in the language of one of the progressive Senators, because our imperialists considered him "the right man for the work."

In the Philippines and in liberal circles this incident has created a great hullabalioo about the right of self-government so much advertised by the employing class agents during the Great World Slaughter. President Quezon of the Philippines Senate has openly told the American dictator that "there is a growing feeling among our people that the views of the Filipino officials in this Government and the Secretaries of Departments included, have very little, if any, weight."

But our own military administrator is not saying a word. General Wood is too experienced a capitalist hawk to be worried about the flight of a few powerless Filipino officials. He knows what the meaningless promises of Harding to the Philippines Independence Commission in 1922 meant. He is not at all disturbed over the protests of the Mayor of Manila at his usurpation of powers. Woods knows his business, knows what he was sent for, and knows how to do it. According to the imperialist apologists of the iron-heel administration in the Philippines every thing is just fine and right in this "little" controversy. Wood had full right to act in the way he did because when Congress gave the Filipinos certain rights it was doubtful whether they were competent to exercise these powers. Hence the military General was fully justified in his steps.

What is what in the whole game in the Philippines, as in every other exploited country or territory of the United States and the other imperialist powers, is given away by General Wood himself. Addressing "the American Chamber of Commerce in Manila in June he let the cat out of the bag in this fashion: "The Filipinos are rapidly approaching a stable Government as I define a stable Government, namely, a Government under which foreign capital invests at ordinary rates of interest."

Here we have it. The real objective of America's civilizing efforts are brought to light. Behind all the Christian campaigns of capitalist democracies and monarchies alike there is the chase for profits. America is a rapidly growing imperial empire despite its noisy pretenses to the contrary. The behavior of our marines in Haiti, the conduct of our customs collectors in the Caribbean Republics, the violation of the most elementary principals of self-government in the Philipines—these are the fruits of our Imperial Democracy.

The Terror

By W. F. DUNNE

Out of the dark comes a cry for bread,
And the masters wrap closer the sheets.
The night responds with a hymn of dread.
The masses starve in the streets.

The tumult grows and the wolf-pack, loosed,
Tears thru the hungry throng.
But it gathers again, a rope is noosed
And the greens turn into song.

Singing, singing and surging, the sound like a giant's sob.
The ranks are closed and the march begins.
The mass is an army and not a mob.
Masters, what of your many?

Soldiering Is Given Black Eye by Labor

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN

Militarism does not seem to be very popular among the trade unions of Greater New York, as it appeared a few weeks ago when Major Ross of the Citizens' Training Camps, officer of the Coast Artillery of the U. S. Army, was accorded an enthusiastic reception and fitted out with credentials which would open to him the meetings of all A. F. of L. unions within the Metropolis. The Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and Vicinity, which had voted these credentials to the Major with only a few dissenting votes, at its last meeting at Beethoven Hall, has recalled these credentials with even a greater majority.

The credentials were issued after the officer had outlined the supposed aims of the Training Camp, namely the physical training, or as one militarist delegate put it at the last meeting: "you go in as a bum, and you come out as a man."

Several progressive delegates protested that the prepacation of a new war was the real meaning of these camps. Since the credentials were issued however, a storm of protests was showered upon the Executive Council. Letter after letter arrived opposing the attempt of delivering the unions to the military machine.

The Teachers' Union took the lead in the fight. They and the Women's Trade Union League were the first to sense the great danger, and several Painters' Unions, among them Local Unions Nos. 51, 261 and 499, as well as the New York District Council of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers; many unions of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, especially No. 38, 48 and 89; the Neckwear Makers', Umbrella Makers and many other unions had taken the matter up in their meetings and demanded the immediate recall of the credentials.

Reluctantly the Executive Committee, that had given the delegate of the U. S. Army preference over the delegate of the Mooney Defense Committee, when both asked for the privilege of the floor and credentials to visit the unions, denying even the least courtesy to the man working for the release of Tom Mooney, reluctantly the comittee had to ask the delegates for action on the protests.

Again the representatives of the Teachers' Union were leading the attack, supported by a man who had seen service in similar institutions of physical training. Charles Lucas of the Cigar Packers' Union has seen service "on the battlefield" in Buffalo, when he as a member of the 71st Regiment of the New York National Guard, was ordered out to quell the strike of the Railroad Workers 31 years ago. He also remembered with the "effective patriotism" of the troops during the Homestead Steel Strike.

It was the consensus of opinion that the danger of being used against "rebellious" workers in times of strikes was far greater than the probability of "defending the country against invasion." which was one of the strongest arguments of the friends of militarism.

Preparation for "Riot Duty"

With permanent injunctions being handed out against the right to strike, with the striking shopmen denied the right of trial by jury, one notes with interest the following item in the New York Herald:

"Riot Squad to learn the use of Tear Gas. Five hundred picked men from the Police Department will receive, free of charge, a two weeks course of training . . . in suppressing riots.

"Thompson sub-machine guns—wicked weapons—half pistols and half automatic rifles—will be supplied to the chosen 500, as well as other weapons . . . tactical plans will be made in advance to handle a riot in any section of the metropolis."

With the shopmen's strike called an insurrection against the government what is going to be the definition of a riot. Against whom are these machines going to be aimed, and this tear gas to be used?

Boost the Federation But Recruit Members for the Workers Party

By MOISAYE J. OLGIN

And now comes the question of the Proletarian Party, the Workers Party, the Communist Party, the F. L. P. or whatever it may be called. Some comrades are in favor of the new party, others are opposed to it, and there are those who are not for nor against, but are willing to see what will come out of it. Before the question can be answered, however, it is necessary to clear up the confusion which has arisen in connection with political intelligence. Only then will it be possible to arrive at a clear vision as to the respective nature of the two parties.

A simple sound trite, yet it must be understood and impressed upon the minds of our party members that "the Federated Farmer-Labor Party" is not the Workers Party."

Moreover, it is not intended to be the Workers Party. It is an independent political organization of workers and farmers where the Communists are to join with both on the National Executive Committee and on the Executive Council.

It is supposed that at the convention of July 3-5 in Chicago the leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor withdrew from participation in the founding of the new party and our comrades were compelled, against their intention and contrary to their wishes, to take a leading part. They have not, however, assumed responsibility for the new organization. They are not aspiring to do so. The new organization will have to take care of itself, no matter how friendly our relation to it and how willing we may be to help it in its initial steps. When grown to full stature it will stand on its own and to move of its own accord, the new body may try paths that will not be to our liking. We shall have no other means of checking it than persuasion. We are by no means certain it will comply with our ideas. We are not sure it will do so to-morrow. We have not the remotest notion as to the composition of its coming convention. A time may arrive when our minority would have to wage a bitter fight for the principles of class-struggle within the new party. The comrades who are so much worried over the identification of the F. F. L. P with the W. P. are, evidently, under an indelible impression of the bourgeois and "socialist" press which heralded that "the communists captured themselves at Chicago." The fact is, we have captured nobody. We have only become partners to a new proletarian venture. We are glad we are on the inside, because it is the task of the communists to be with the working class wherever it makes a step towards the consolidation of its forces for a struggle against the capitalist system. We are glad the rank and file representatives in Chicago manifested more understanding and less idiocy concerning the communists than the Lovestone and the conservative union leaders at Cleveland. We are pleased with the possibility of advocating our doctrine and our tactics in public on party ground. Yet, once more, we are not the new party.

Neither can the two parties be identified in their practical day to day tactics. The F. F. L. P. is not a Communist party. It is not even a mild Socialist party. It may turn out to be more vigorous and militant than any of the weak-kneed Socialist parties that we know at present. We trust it will be so because it is from within the ranks of the working masses. For that matter, it may even assume leadership of the American working people in time of a national upheaval when conditions have ripened for a revolutionary struggle. This is all, however, the "music of the future," as the Germans are wont to say. For the present the program of the new party (which program was, as stated at the Chicago conference, "too much even for radical Wisconsin") goes no further than nationalization of public utilities and means of communication and transportation. True, there is a preamble to the public ownership clause which says that "there can be no genuine public ownership of industry until the workers and farmers control the government" and that "only to the extent that there is a strong workers' and farmers' representation in the Government and only to the extent that the control of operation is in the hands of the workers and farmers can even partial nationalization be realized today." True, the program contains a clause which goes farther than the hackneyed nationalization of public utilities planks of the Socialist parties, namely the demand that "industries must be run on the basis of the workers and farmers steadily increasing their control of the management and operation thru their own economic organizations," and it contains also the splendid declaration that "land was created for all the people" and legislation must "secure the land to the users of the land." All this may have a remote resemblance to some of the planks of a Communist program. It is certainly better than any of the programs hitherto adopted by the multifarious Labor Party or Farmer Labor Party organizations. But it is not a communist program. It is not a revolutionary program. It is the maximum which for the present can unite the masses of labor and the poor farmers. It may be changed for something more outspoken as the impetus of the class-struggle will increase and the bulk of the membership will gain in weight. It may, on the other hand, turn into an opportunistic instrument in the measure that backward masses will swamp the new organization following their conservative leaders. As it has been adopted at Chicago, the program of the F. F. L. P. is a laborite program, differing from the Communist program as much as the aione ax of an archaic cave man differs from a high-power rifle of the present. There is certainly not a trace of social revolution, proletarian dictatorship or Soviet regime in the program of the new party.

All this goes to show that this is not to be expected for the capitalist press and for its Socialist accompanists to decry the F. F. L. P as "Bolshevist" and Communist camouflage (the American Defense Society discerned even in the election of Magnus Johnson a Communist plot directed from Moscow) the new party is not to be a second Number Two and the die-hards of both former "underground" and "overground" will do well to forget all their suspicions in connection with the recent past of the Workers Party. The F. F. L. P. is a new chapter. We all have to adapt ourselves to its existence. We have to outline a way of action. Adaptation to changing conditions is the most trying business for a single-minded comrade. Yet unless we do it we are apt to make a muddle of our achievement at Chicago.

The way of action seems to be dictated by the situation. We are, first of all and above everything else, a Communist party. Our main effort is to increase the volume and weight of our own party. We direct our activities towards educating the masses in the spirit of our party. We are out for new recruits for our organization. At the same time, however, we are an integral part of the F. F. L. P. We wish to help it grow thru the affiliation of new organizations. We realize that the growth of that party would mean a unification of the forces of the laboring masses and would mark an epoch in the history of the oppressed in their movement for liberation. The party is not what we would wish it to be, yet it is something very substantial. We, therefore say to all organizations that give us a hearing, "Join the Federated Farmer-Labor Party."

There is no contradiction in such a course of action, no softening of voices, no hiding of faces. We are there to remain in our true colors. We are the Workers Party. We explain the aim of the Workers Party. We outline the difference between ourselves and the Federated Party. We say to the workers: "As individuals it is your duty to join the Workers Party; at the same time it is the duty of your organization to join the Federated Party. By entering the Workers Party each workingman finds the medium through which his personal powers may be utilized to the best advantage of his class; by joining the Federated Party each workers' organization lines up in the great class-army. An individual rank and file member will hardly be of marked value in a huge organization as the F. F. L. P. intends to be; an individual organization, on the other hand, cannot, even if it wishes to, become a member of the Workers Party. Therefore, join individually the Workers Party, and join collectively the Federated Party."

The line of division is most natural and the task ahead may not prove difficult, provided the new situation is taken in its right perspective. That the propaganda for the F. F. L. P. opens enormous vistas for the solidification of the W. P. is self-evident. Isolation is a thing of the past, and new prestige can only stimulate the recruiting of new members.

Farmer-Labor Party's Relation to the Workers Party

By A. BILZERIAN

The Farmer-Labor Party, organized at the Chicago Conference, is not a party of the workers. It is not a party of the working class. It is not a party of the working class. It is not a party of the working class

The Hughes-Gompers' Compact

Sam Gompers has deserted his bed-fellow "Bill" Burns, in pursuit of American Communists, long enough to crawl into a compact with Charles Edward Hughes, Secretary of State to His Royal Highness, Warren Gamaliel Harding. The Hughes-Gompers compact is for unending war against any attempt to recognize Soviet Russia, in spite of the demands of Brookhart, Borah, La Follette et al.

Hughes has favorably answered the questions addressed by Gompers to Senators Ladd and King. Perhaps Gompers feels that Hughes' support saves him from exposure as the ridiculous capitalist puppet that Brookhart shows him to be, in answering these same questions.

The bewhiskered word juggler at the head of the department of state at Washington, in his answer to Gompers reveals himself as a rank comedian. This Gompers-Hughes slap-stick team, we are sure, couldn't climb higher than space-filling vaudeville in a third rate burlesque show.

Says Hughes:

"Respect by the Moscow regime for the liberties of other peoples will most likely be accompanied by appropriate respect for the essential rights and liberties of the Russian peoples themselves."

There are no Russian armies on foreign soil. No Russian battleships are covering the cities of foreign nations with their guns. Hughes and Gompers know this. These two smirking hypocrites also know that United States imperialism has never troubled itself about the liberties of other peoples. Where American armies were not sent, as in Siberia and Northern European Russia, American dollars did go to aid Wrangel, Yudenitch, Denikine, and other counter-revolutionaries to help them rob the ninety-nine and nine-tenths of the Russian people of the liberties they had won thru their revolution. It is also the lack of respect for the liberties of other peoples that U. S. imperialism has learned, thru its murderous rule, in the Philippines, in Cuba and Porto Rico, in Mexico, in the Central American and South American nations, and elsewhere, that has made it possible for these same imperialists to conduct relentless and bloody war against the workers at home, in the steel mills, the coal mines, on the railroads, in all industry.

American capitalism is so bereft of all decency that it will take more than all the falsehoods that Gompers and Hughes can invent to hide its nakedness. Yet this is the compensation, that these pets of the plundering interests make themselves appear extremely ludicrous in trying to accomplish this impossible job.

The City Workers in Minnesota

Reports of the recent Minnesota elections give the impression that the election of Magnus Johnson to the United States senate was the direct result of a farmers' revolt. Little attention was given to the unrest among the industrial workers of this great state. In fact it is quite forgotten.

The election figures from the cities, however, are quite interesting. In the state's metropolis, Minneapolis, the world's primary wheat market, an unsurpassed flour-milling center, and the home of many big industries, the grain gamblers have been fairly successful in controlling the vote in the past. Yet in the ballot for the Farmer-Labor candidate, Johnson, the usual republican majority in this city, of 25,000, was reduced to a bare 300.

Up on the iron range, in the northern part of the state, under the industrial tyranny of the U. S. Steel Corporation, interesting things happened. Proctor, a steel trust town, was typical of the rest. It gave Johnson 605 votes, compared to 81 for Preus. Other iron mining centers, like Hibbing, Virginia and Chisholm, that are heard from every time the iron miners launch a struggle to organize in this fairy land of plenty, all gave Johnson a two to one vote over Preus. Lake County (Duluth), where Gary has located one of his largest steel mills, gave Johnson a 5,000 majority, as did Ramsey County (St. Paul), where the state capitol is located.

We clearly see Minnesota as both an agricultural and industrial state when we learn that in 1920 this state produced $508,020,233 worth of farm crops, but its factories turned out products valued at $1,218,129,735. The state's mining, lumbering and shipping business is at least as important as its farming. This state produces 61 per cent of the nation's iron ore, 34,593,000 tons. Altho the devastation of the nation's forests has been shifted to the Pacific Coast, nevertheless, 1,000,000,000 feet of timber were cut in Minnesota in 1920. Minnesota leads the world with its milling industry, the annual output being $381,240,000. Altho Minnesota has always been sneered at and credited with a large percentage of "ignorant foreigners," yet it boasts one of the best school systems in the nation, and has one of the lowest percentages of illiteracy, less than 2 per cent, compared with 6 per cent for the entire United States.

The record of the industrial workers in Minnesota, in the recent election, is, therefore, one that they can be proud of. They fought side by side with the farmers so that victory came to the Farmer-Labor forces in 60 out of 80 counties, and the final count will show that the workers' ticket got 200,000 votes, compared to 200,000 cast for both the republican and democratic candidates.

This election saw the wiping out of the democratic party in Minnesota. The democratic machine, driven by "Dick" O'Connor, of St. Paul, is now running tandem with the republican outfit. It is encouraging under these circumstances, that the industrial workers show indications of taking the next step. Their recent state convention, at Duluth, decided to issue a call for a joint gathering of all farmer and labor forces in the state, similar in make-up to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party meeting at Chicago. This gathering cannot be held too soon. The workers in the city and on the land in Minnesota, are definitely on the road to real class political action. Their big need now is to solidify all sentiment within their state in a class political party, that will cut off from all relations with the Wall Street parties forever.

The Wise Judges at The Hague

It's a wise court that knows its own power. The United States courts do not always display such wisdom. Witness Judge Wilkerson, for instance, made permanent his anti-railroad workers' injunction, and almost the next day the workers and farmers in Minnesota crushed the power of the republican party in that state.

But the Permanent Court of International Arbitration, at the Hague, a child of the Capitalist League of Nations, is more discreet. It has just declared itself incapable of settling the dispute over Karelia between Soviet Russia and Finland. It says that the Workers' and Peasants' Government is not a party to "The League," that it will not submit itself to the jurisdiction of the court, so the judges confess "there is nothing doing."

It is admitted by this decision that the Hague Court has recognized that the present Soviet Government is the only Russian Government. Again, as Shylock says, in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," "A wise and upright court."

But this Hague Tribunal is wise in this fashion only because it knows the strength of Soviet Rule in Russia. If it felt that Soviet Rule was on the eve of collapsing its decisions would be very different.

Let the workers and farmers of the United States ponder this situation. Let them learn the value of industrial and political power built up separate and apart from the organizations of their exploiters. The Hague Court bends its knee before the Soviet Republic. Let the united farmer-labor power of this country force American capitalism to its knees in complete surrender.

The Cry for Bread in 1923

Breslau, Germany, sees 100,000 men, women and children fighting for food on the ninth anniversary of the beginning of the world war. Cafes, hotels, stores are looted by the hungry multitudes.

While the Socialist masses join the Communist workers in an effort to protect the working class against the falling mark and the increasing cost of living, the "Socialist" officials unite with the police to "restore order." In Breslau a dozen were killed, 100 wounded and 1,200 hungry thrown into prison.

The jingo "Socialists," who betrayed the German workers, and helped carry forward the kaiser's war plans in 1914, are still on the side of reaction in 1923. The war, the Russian revolution, the Versailles peaces have taught them nothing.

It was the cry for bread that helped doom the rule of the Romanoffs. After nearly six years of travail the Russian Revolution has satisfied the cry for bread of the workers and peasants under Soviet Rule. The big and inspiring thing on this ninth anniversary of the world war is that in one nation, truly, the swords have been beaten into ploughshares, and the land is yielding to the full.

It is charged that Communists are organizing the bread demonstrations in Western Europe. This is the usual falsehood. The hunger of 1923, in Germany and elsewhere, was planned when czars, kings, kaisers and premiers rushed to war in August, 1914. If the workers of Western Europe would cease to starve, let them sweep aside the capitalist order that is crushing them, and open wide the gates for co-operation with their comrades of the Russian Soviet Republic of Workers and Peasants. That is their only hope.

Another Red Scare?

There is no condemnation too strong for the renewed cheap attempt of Munsey's "New York Herald," issue of Sunday, July 22, to launch another "red scare." To be sure, this malicious anti-labor propaganda will be seized upon by Mr. Gompers and his friends in an effort to confuse and mislead the organized workers. That can be its only purpose.

The latest effort of "The Herald" declares that Moscow is sending a host of emissaries to the United States to start a "red drive." It is charged that Hoover's American Relief Administration, thru its employes in Soviet Russia, is giving aid to these Communist immigrants. It also claimed that Moscow is subsidizing the Russky Golos, a Russian daily, in New York City.

To be sure, the American Relief Administration officials, in New York City, lost no time in denying that its employes were giving aid to the Communists. "How ridiculous," they exclaimed. The editors of Russky Golos also pleaded innocence. The Communists in control of the paper, subsidizing the Russky Golos, when they have a Russian Communist Daily of their own, "The Novy Mir." There is certainly no need of sending Communist agents here, from Moscow, or any other European center. The 12-Hour Day, 80-cent wheat, Daugherty injunctions, Harding's speeches and the clubs of the Cossacks, now being used against the shoe and phone strikers in the New England states, are greater instruments for awakening the workers to the real nature of the social order oppressing them.

William H. Lamar must also have his wheeze. This is the Lamar who, as press-censor during the war, stole mailing privileges from labor publications, driving many of them out of existence. Lamar taught the country that "a free press" is a myth. He is still afraid of the spread of radicalism, including on his list of undesirables, "the Communist type, among which are prolific writers and speakers, and every man of them willing to become a martyr to his cause." Lamar still urges the straight jacket for the thinking of the American people in order to protect them against "red propaganda."

The workers will not be misled by the lies of "The Herald," or by Lamar's hysterics. If the Daugherty-Burns outfit feels that this is good propaganda for insuring the success of another "red raid," they are greatly mistaken. Any new attack on the political or industrial organizations of militant labor will get the reception it deserves—the united opposition of all the thinking men and women of the working class.

There and There

Soon the session of state and country fairs will be in full swing over the nation. Countless numbers of people from the cities will crowd into the high rates to see the various small game artist, are getting ready to fleece the rural worker who comes to town, it will be a question of how much the city people can take away from the farmer.

How different conditions are in Soviet Russia, now called Soviet Russia. There is going to be an agricultural exhibit in Moscow, starting August 15, that is attracting exhibitors from every corner of the world. The government is not trying to make profits out of the affair. It is using it to educate the farmers. Twenty thousand peasants will be brought daily from every section of the far-flung Soviet Republic. These peasants will be shown the exhibit by interested agricultural students from the many Soviet Agricultural Colleges. Those peasants will go home again full of confidence in the Soviet Republic and able to build for a better Russian agriculture. And the Russian peasant will struggle on against present difficulties with an eager intensity because he knows there are no grain gamblers and bankers to rob him.

It is the American farmer that goes home from his city and county fair, bitterly hating all the city folks, feeling that they were created for the sole purpose of plundering him. Still President Harding talks of a United Nation. There is only one nation on the face of the globe where there is any unity among its peoples, and that land is Soviet Russia, whether among those who dwell in log huts in the Archangel country, or those who inhabit Arab tents on Bokhara's plains.

Looks Like Fake Medicine

The New York Times professes to have made the startling discovery that the farmers of Kansas are disgusted with the "Farm Bloc" in the U. S. senate, of republicans and Democrats. But the Times is quick to assure its readers that "There is no boiling unrest; nothing that resembles remotely Communism or bolshevism." but just the same the farmers feel that what the farm bloc of Capper and LaFollette has been handing them is fake medicine. The farmers will look to unite thru the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, when they get good and tired of the decoys of the Wall Street parties.

What Will He Say Now?

The Minnesota Federation of Labor has instructed its delegate to the Portland, Ore., convention of the A. F. of L. to press the subject of independent political action. For taking this stand, Gompers threatens to withdraw the charter of the Seattle Central Council. Yet the farmers and workers of Minnesota have elected two United States Senators on their independent action, for which it is not expected that Gompers will outlaw them. It will be interesting to hear further from the A. F. of L. head on this question.

Splitting and United Front

By MAX BEDACHT

Long before a worker has reached a class-conscious clearness of aim, he is already instinctively dominated by the idea that the workers must hold together. Of the aims of a working-class movement he has, in many instances, a very vague conception, which only too often lets itself be put off by an empty, old, and insignificant phrase.

The roads leading to the goal are unknown to him and in this regard he trusts blindly to those leaders who can make palatable to him the phrase which expresses his misunderstood aim. Lastly, the masses are still striving to avoid serious conflicts in their advance forward, and to enter into the paradise of future society, by the golden means of the line of least resistance.

It must be clear to everyone that masses with such a psychology consider contradictions in the ideas of their leaders to be a much lesser evil than the splitting of their organization, than the destruction of their unity. And it is no less clear that splits which really serve the purpose of purification cause even greater confusion in such confused minds. Thus it is conceivable today, four years after the split of the S. P., the revolutionary portion of the American working-class has not yet overcome this split. Thus is it that in the Socialist Party there are to this day workers who on closer scrutiny, are found to have nothing to do with the principles, or better still, the lack of principles of this organization, but who in their confused feelings believe that they must preserve unity, that they must be loyal to their old "hereditary" organization which wicked people have split. Then again, many thousands of former members of the old S. P. remain outside of all organizations, because they do not want to promote the split thru their support of one side or the other. "First unite," so they say, "then I will also co-operate."

Just as this confusion is based in the first place on deficiency in clarity of aim, so also has this deficiency led to utterly false conceptions concerning the tactic of the united front which is propagated by the Communists, and is practised by them wherever possible. "What," say the friends and opponents of the Communists mistakenly, "yesterday you split and today you want to unite again. Yesterday you tore up what you want to paste up today." These people declare with seemingly compelling logic, "Either you were criminal when you tore up, or you are dishonest hypocrites in pretending to want to mend again.

Outside, in dealings with the workers and rebels, these confusions and contradictions obtrude themselves as real problems which hamper the work of organization and which must be solved by means of clearer understanding. These lines attempt to make a contribution to such a solution.

Wholesale Prices Decline While Retail Prices Increase

The Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor has issued an interesting statement of the price movement during the month of June. There was a decrease of 2 per cent. in the wholesale prices of all commodities and a decrease in the wholesale prices of food amounting to 1½ per cent while for the same month there was an increase in the retail prices of foods of 1 per cent.

Sam Gompers' Attack on Soviet Russia Gets Swift Reply from U. S. Senator Brookhart

Sam Gompers has received a reply to his recent attack on Soviet Russia, no doubt quicker than expected. Gompers latest anti-Soviet broadside was made in a letter to Senators Ladd and King, now on their way to visit the Workers' and Peasants' Republic. Gompers made his letter, in the form of questions, public, when the two Senators were on the high seas. But a few days later U. S. Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, arrived home an enthusiastic advocate of U. S. recognition of Soviet Rule.

Altho "The Worker" replied in last weeks' issue to Gompers' attack we are publishing Brookhart's statement in full, as containing a point of view that will no doubt be urged in the sessions of the next congress. It is to be expected that Brookhart would trade, or give his own interpretation to certain questions. Thus in the answer to Question No. 3. There is no Communist who will deny that the leading officials of the Soviet Government, the Russian Communist Party and the Communist International are the same persons. As a co-operative enthusiast, Brookhart is quite interesting in his answer to Question No. 5. Yet we are sure that in Brookhart's declarations, Mr. Gompers will find much that is difficult to answer, even with the assistance of U. S. Secretary of State Hughes. Gompers' questions and Brookhart's replies are as follows:

No. 1. Is there a free press in Russia, are opposition papers allowed to exist, and is there a censorship of the official press and of foreign correspondents?

"The Russian press is practically free," said Senator Brookhart. "The opposition to the government is negligible. No one wants to start an opposition paper. It would receive no support. Peasants and laboring people are all united for the present government. No decent foreign correspondent is censored. So long as he does not attempt untruthful propaganda there is no censorship."

No. 2. Are workmen permitted to organize and to what extent may they criticize the government and working conditions?

"The workingmen are organized and there are very few 'scabs' such as Mr. Gompers encounters here. When he gets mad a workingman may cuss the government there just as he does here. But it is a workingman's government and the laboring classes are 99 9-10 per cent in favor of the existing government, and they are all in the unions."

No. 3. Is it true that the leading officials of the Soviet Government and Communist Party and the Third International are the same persons?

"I did not even hear the Third International mentioned over there. It is not an active institution at all and you seldom if ever hear anything said about it."

No. 4. To what extent is the government supporting the Third International or permitting its propaganda hostile to other governments?

"The Soviets put out propaganda only against governments and peoples that put out propaganda against them. They attempt only to meet propaganda with propaganda, which is quite natural and human. Incidentally the Soviets, all the way thru from Trotsky and Lenine to peasants, are friendly toward the United States and its institutions. Colonel Haskell and the American Relief Commission deserve a great deal of credit for this."

No. 5. If it is true, as claimed individually and unofficially, that the Russian Government no longer is a strictly Communist organization but is now almost a model of such republics as the United States, why does not the Soviet Government actually change its character to conform to such declaration?

Economic Policy Changed

"They have changed their economic policy and officially published the fact that there has been a change from the Communist to the co-operative principle, along the principle of the Rochdale co-operative system in the English mills. That principle is well understood. It is one man, one vote. Capital does not vote its power; excess profits are distributed back among the producers thereof. This co-operative form of government is being gradually put into effect and has been officially declared. I have a copy, in Russian, of the declaration.

"However, I do not like the election system, which saves too much of our own old-fashioned Republican standpat caucuses. They hold town meetings and select Bill Jonesky to go as a delegate to the Soviet district convention. At that convention Bill Smithsky may be selected as delegate to the state convention and at the state convention they name a delegate to go to the national convention at Moscow, and when he gets there he votes to elect Lenin as premier and so on. It's the old standpat caucus arrangement which we have had here, and I'm against that. There is one other unfair thing—they do not allow the Czar's debts at any time the United States and other countries will acknowledge Soviet claims against them for assisting counter revolutions in Russia. These counter revolutions, they say, cost enormous losses in property and lives and were encouraged by foreign nations, including our own. Because of this they claim that we owe them just as much as Germany owes France. I was informed by a shipping man who knew, that we sent guns, ammunition and supplies to the counter revolutionists and so did other nations. They refer to the Wrangle, Denikine and Kolchak armies and if there is one thing the Soviets hate it is the memory of such assistance to these counter revolutions.

Soviets' Promises

No. 7. Gompers' seventh question related to the broken promises of the Soviets and alleged strained relations existing today between Russia and several nations that had restored official relations, such as Turkey, Finland, Czecho-Slovakia, Latvia and Poland.

"Russia has no strained relations with Turkey and none with Czecho-Slovakia," said Senator Brookhart. "About Finland and Latvia I do not know. In Finland there is bitter feeling against Russia and this is reciprocated in Russia. However, I asked Polish bankers and business men if they wanted the old czarist system back and they said they preferred the present government in Russia.

Russia's trouble with Great Britain was over the 12-mile international line at sea, and in this Russia was right. I would like to see our three-mile limit extended to 24 miles and then we'd stop rum smuggling. We have the power to do it, too, by simply giving notice. Newspaper reports about Russia not keeping her agreements are mostly propaganda.

Treatment of Travelers

I. 8. Is it the intention of American visitors in Russia to be a Soviet's guest? Even if part of expenses are paid by themselves, are they to travel rooming and six meals. There are no guest trains. I traveled on a common train, along with peasants and other folks. The trains were clean and in good order; the roadbeds are good in the main and are being repaired after the war damage. Ninety per cent of Russian railroads are in operation and the trains are on time to the minute. They are building their own locomotives for the first time.

Severe Crisis in Germany

Delay Pardon for Victim of Steel Strike

(By FEDERATED PRESS)

PITTSBURGH. — Pardon for Jacob Dolla, steel strike organizer who was framed up by the steel trust and sentenced as an innocent man to the western penitentiary of Pennsylvania, is again delayed.

When the bitterness of the 1919 struggle died down somewhat it was generally recognized that Dolla had not been responsible for the explosion that blew away part of a strike-breaker's porch, but that the dynamiting had been engineered by the steel company in order to put Dolla out of the way. Dolla was a skilled steel worker with great influence in the foreign groups. He had thrown in his lot with the skilled and semi-skilled strikers.

The state board of pardons considered his case this summer, but decided to hold it under advisement. One of the board is hostile to Dolla because Dolla is a symbol of organized labor to him.

Dolla's three years in jail have been hard on his health. He is confined 23 hours a day to a cell with a cement floor that is always damp. He is being treated for rheumatism by the prison doctor, but medicine without plenty of exercise and sunlight is not having any effect.

It is believed that letters and telegrams to Gov. Gifford Pinchot, Harrisburg, Pa. will aid in hastening action on Dolla's pardon.

Socialist Party Efforts to Profit by Trailing Reactionary Labor Ends in Big Debacle at Albany

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Specially Written for "The Worker")

ALBANY, NEW YORK.—The Socialist Party has gone astraying in no man's land between the opposing political forces of militant radicalism and standpat labor reaction. It has lost its way. It is getting hit from both left and right.

In fact there has been enacted here what might aptly be called, in homely language, "The Tragedy of the Stray Cat." Even the feline sagacity of Morris Hillquit, the political wizard of the Socialist Party, could not prevent this narrative from being a tragedy. And there is much farce comedy in this Hillquit straying and getting lost in the mazes of that form of bipartisan politics that parades as non-partisanism.

Hillquit has been leading his kitten-Socialist following uphill and down dale since the Communists were driven from the Socialist Party in the hysterical days of 1919. For four years he carefully protected his diminishing litter from the ravaging onslaughts of the "Moscow-inspired Communists." An asylum was in sight at last—last Sunday—at the Catholic Union Hall here, in the protecting arms of the railroad brotherhoods, bone and muscle of the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

But Sunday, July 29, swept on thru rain and sunshine, into blackest midnight. Thruout the hours of this Sabbath the sly Hillquit, spitting excited oratory, purring soft phrases and sought to effect the marriage of the Socialist Party to the political ambitions of the Railroad Brotherhood chieftains. But as the hands of time turned into Blue Monday, July 30, the final chapter of this story, "The Tragedy of the Stray Cat" was played as Hillquit and his political relations were sent scurrying out into the cruel world. The Railroad Brotherhoods had refused to take them in.

What Can "Socialists" Do Now?

There will be an epilogue, of course. Where will the Socialists go now? That is an interesting question. It will find many answers in the days to come. Hillquit is a good salesman. He will not call for an immediate receivership. He will not yet declare the Socialist Party completely bankrupt. Not even if he were persuaded that that was the full meaning of the first New York gathering for organizing the state forces of the railroaders' Conference for Progressive Political Action. The white flag of complete surrender will come after further waving of the yellow flag of compromise.

What happened here in Albany, this past Sunday, was but the logical outcome of the white terror invoked against the Communist elements in the Socialist Party four years ago. It was in this same Albany that the "Socialist" assemblymen had been placed on trial, and been ousted in spite of Louis Waldman's declaration that he liked the American form of government better than Russian Soviet Rule. To be sure Waldman was here, Sunday, albeit he had doffed his political knickers and brushed up a pleasant week-end to join his fellow-lawyer, Hillquit, in his struggle for his kind of working class political action.

It Is a Sordid Story

The respectability drift of the "Socialists" since 1919 may be summarized as follows: 1920, Communist International definitely repudiated New York convention; 1921, Communists labelled agents of department of justice at Detroit Convention, 1922, Socialists accepted invitation to Conference for Progressive Political Action, at Chicago, in February, and voting with reactionaries to keep Workers Party delegates from "Cleveland Conference," in December, 1923, barring Communists from New York City American Labor Party gathering, launching concerted attack thru press against Communists in America and Soviet Rule in Russia, culminating in anti-Soviet tirade of Abraham Cahan before New York National Socialist Convention in May. And last Sunday, this self-satisfied and pompous feline, that we shall label "Hillquit Socialism" responsible for it all, came back to get the desired reward, controlling participation in the New York Conference for Progressive Political Action. The developments may not have been as gruesome as those depicted in Edgar Allan Poe's masterpiece, "The Black Cat," but this American genius in short-story writing never penned anything more sordid than this attempted selling, by Hillquit, of the Socialist Party, to the $25,000 per year, old party leadership of the Railroad Brotherhoods, the most reactionary element in the American labor movement.

In this bargaining, the big crisis did not develop over the organization of a State Labor Party. Trade Union delegates, with Communist sympathies, in the conference, who raised that question were nearly lynched, with the "Socialists" acting the role of chief mobsters. The breaking point came over the delicate question of whether the Socialist Party was to prostitute itself to the Republican and Democratic, Wall Street Parties, this fall, at the assembly elections, or whether the final act was not to be consummated until some time next May. The reactionaries railroads leaders demanded immediate surrender. Hillquit, with cunning plotting giving way to motherly solicitude, refused to allow the wedding to go on under these conditions. Thus the politicians of the Railroad Brotherhoods must carry on their relations with the old party politicians alone. At least that is the way the situation stands now.

Case of Midnight Modesty

The program at Albany, therefore, went thru as we prophesied in last week's issue of "The Worker," with the exception that we did not foresee

The Washington farmers are organized to use the initiative law making power to put this thru, the legislature being under control of Stone & Webster, the utility trust of the Pacific northwest.

Michigan Convention September 18

DETROIT.—"The annual convention of the Michigan State Federation of Labor at Detroit, September 18, will be a record breaker for attendance," declares the executive board. "We are now hitting our stride. Labor has quite successfully entered the political arena, interest is being manifested in the cooperative movement in more quarters than heretofore. Therefore, more interest is shown in legislative work in the practical way of studying laws and numbers are interesting themselves in the detail work of law making. This tends to produce an interest that makes for substantial gains in the convention."

CLARKSBURG, W. Va.—Organizers from middle western farmer unions will be invited into this state by the newly elected West Virginia Farmer-Labor party. The unorganized farmer will be brought into the field of independent political action initiated by the convention call of the state federation of labor. Masses of German Workers Desert "Socialists" and Join Communists' "United Front"

By LUDWIG LORE
Editor "Volkszeitung," N. Y. German Communist Daily

Germany is in the midst of a severe crisis. When the market value of the mark sinks from 444,000 to 1,100,000 per dollar in one week, we get something like a mental picture of the chaos that reigns in industrial Germany today. Prices keep up with the most breath-taking jumps the Mark may take.

But wages lag far behind, thanks, in no negligeable degree, to the earnest efforts of the Social-Democracy and the "Socialist" labor union bureaucracy to remove every unpleasantness from the path of German capital. Hunger, starvation, disease and desparation follow. Bread riots are the natural consequence.

So unspeakable is the misery in Germany's industrial centers today, that the most callous onlooker appreciates that violence must and will be the inevitable outcome. Misery has reached the point when life loses its value and open rebellion seems preferable to fatalistic resignation.

No one knows this better than the capitalist press. And sensing the storm in the air, it is already preparing public opinion to meet it and in consequences with righteous holiness and virtuous disapproval by making the Communists of Germany—and of course, of Soviet Russia—responsible for the "German Revolution" that, in their eyes, is as good as an accomplished fact.

At the end of last week every capitalist—and every "Socialist"—newspaper in America and in Europe feature on its first page the news that the Communist Party of Germany was preparing for a revolutionary outbreak on Sunday afternoon, August 5. Every correspondent worth drawing saw rivers of blood, a holocaust of murder and rape, and a Soviet government in Germany on Monday morning.

As a matter of fact even the not too apparent intelligence of these news writers and correspondents ought have perceived—and probably were not entirely unaware of the fact—that the Communist Party of Germany was trying everything in its power to prevent an outbreak at this time.

It called open air demonstrations, it is true, to protest against the fascist plot to overthrow the government with a view to violent uprisings. The fact that it turned these demonstrations into indoor meetings when it saw that the German Nationalists and Socialists were placing the stamp of open rebellion upon them, shows how far from revolt was its actual purpose.

The Communists in Germany are preparing for the overthrow of the German government of reactionaries and weaklings. But they are intelligent enough to know that he who permits the enemy to choose time and place for an encounter puts himself in a hopeless disadvantage. Certainly the present moment offers the revolutionary working class anything but a favorable position. Germany has neither raw materials nor products, neither money nor credit. For the French and the Belgians, a proletarian uprising would be the signal for still more extensive occupation. Revolution would mean a hunger-blockade and the revolutionary leaders would be held responsible for the hunger and starvation that the united capitalists and "socialist" coalitionists have brought down upon the nation. The events in Germany are not, as they were in Russia at the time of the Russian Revolution, poor, downtrodden, miserable slaves. They are, and have been for years, the profiteers of the present chaotic conditions, and will fight like tigers for their restoration.

Furthermore it is an open secret that Poland, vassal of French imperialism, created for the sole purpose of cutting off Russia from German assistance, and serving today, with equal efficiency, to prevent the Russian Government from coming to the aid of a revolutionary Germany, stands armed to the teeth, ready to plunge into the Baltic border states and to march upon Danzig as soon as France gives the signal.

And above all it should not be forgotten that a revolution, should it break out in Germany today, would bear not the international character of the Russian uprising, but, would be tainted with a nationalism fostered by Entente brutalities.

The force of its onslaught would be directed against the enemies without rather than against the capitalists at home. Too long the latter has been playing the role of fellow-sufferer. To large a part of the working class has forgotten that he is the enemy.

The Social-Democracy, with its miserable policy of civil peace with the German bourgeoisie, created a situation that makes a revolution at this time a dangerous undertaking. It has nurtured a spirit of nationalism that has befuddled all class issues. By its policy of concession after concession to France and Belgium it has reduced Germany to a nation of beggars, has broken its morale and its self respect. And so long as the Social-Democracy maintains its influence over a large portion of the German working class, a revolutionary uprising in Germany would mean new betrayals and new compromises with capitalism and would end inevitably in a debacle that would leave the proletariat, for years to come, to take up the fight for its liberation.

The Social-Democracy is rapidly losing ground. The left elements of the Independent Social-Democracy that joined the S. D. P. less than a year ago, in hopes of galvanizing it into revolutionary action, have never been completely assimilated. They are the ferment of an active opposition that is threatening to split this mighty bulwark of proletarian counter-revolution asunder.

Wherever the "United Front" propaganda of the Communist forces became effective, and Socialist and Communist workingmen went into the fight for better conditions shoulder to shoulder, a new understanding of Communism and Communist motives resulted.

The superstitions and traditions,

Fight this Attack on Militant Labor

Next week "THE WORKER" will publish an important declaration on the organized attack of the old bureaucratic trade union machine against the rank and file in the Jewish unions. This anti-militant campaign that has the support of the The Daily Forward, is but part of the effort to wipe out all sections of the Trade Union Educational League. All militants, therefore, should secure bundles of this issue of "THE WORKER" and distribute them wherever possible.

The fight against this effort at suppressing the will of the rank and file will be launched at a great Mass Meeting called for the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., Friday Night, August 17th.

Party C. E. C. Decides to Launch Daily and Move the Headquarters to Chicago

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary Workers Party

The meeting of the full Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party for the month of July took up many important problems of the party. Chief among these was the question of the affiliation of the Party with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, campaign to increase the membership of the Workers Party, the starting of a daily paper and the removal of the party headquarters to Chicago.

The Chicago Conference

The Central Executive Committee formally approved the work of the party committee in charge of the party policy at the Chicago Conference held, the affiliation of the party with the Federated Farmer-

Ask Kentucky Miners' Head Explain Bribe

(Special to "The Worker.")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The Progressive Miners' Committee here has received a super-heated letter from Samuel Pascoe, President, District 30, United Mine Workers, with headquarters at Ashland, Ky., in which the Kentucky official exceeds himself in attacking the militant miners.

President John L. Lewis is lauded as "one of the greatest industrial leaders the world ever had."

The reply sent to Pascoe by Thomas Myerscough, chairman of the Progressive Committee, was short and to the point. It was as follows:

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 30, 1923.
Samuel Pascoe, President, Dist. 30, United Mine Workers of America, P. O. Box 368, Ashland, Ky.

Dear Sir: Your cowardly letter received. It is always typical of "union scabs" that they use the language you use at a safe distance. There is only one question we want to ask you. Will you please explain how your idol and Farrington can join hands after Farrington accused Lewis of getting $100,000 to allow you to work while the miners in the United States were on strike? A reply to this is expected.

Signed Thomas Myerscough.

The accusation by Frank Farrington president of the Illinois Mine Workers, and former enemy of President Lewis, who comes from the same state, is said to be contained in a letter dated Nov. 22, 1922, in which Farrington is said to have placed four distinct charges of corruption and bribery against Lewis.

Farrington accuses Lewis of receiving $100,000 from the Kentucky mine owners for permitting them to operate their mines during the strike, and quotes Lewis as stating to the policy committee in a meeting held in Washington, D. C., "That work" in the Kentucky mines would not be stopped as long as he was president of the Miners' Union."

Chairman Myerscough asks Pascoe to explain this view of "one of the greatest industrial leaders the world ever had," held by Farrington before he deserted Alexander Howat, and returned to the Lewis camp among the reactionary officials of the U. M. W. of A.

Hillquit's Tammany Hall Is Beaten by the Real Tammany Hall

By JOHN PEPPER

"The Albany Conference was a complete failure"—is the summary made, not by a Communist, but by Morris Hillquit. And we can add to it: The entire policy of the Socialist Party has shown itself in Albany a complete failure.

What was the Conference in Albany? Simply a continuation of the NATIONAL Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, on a STATE SCALE. The Cleveland Conference declared for participation in the primaries of the capitalist parties on a NATIONAL scale, but permitted the organization of labor parties on a STATE BASIS. The Albany Conference was a political convention of the labor movement of New York State, New York State has ten million population, and one and a quarter million organized workers. It ranks first in population and is the richest industrial state of the Union. The Socialist Party has its center of gravity in New York. New York is the only place where the Socialist Party has any influence in the trade unions.

The tactics of the Socialist Party within the "Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action" ought to have succeeded in New York State, if anywhere. AND FOR THAT VERY REASON, THE DEBACLE OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY IN ALBANY IS NOT MERELY AN ORDINARY DEFEAT, BUT A DECISIVE COLLAPSE OF ITS ENTIRE POLICY.

Race for the Grace of Reactionary Leaders

What has been the entire policy of the Socialist Party during the last year? AN ALLIANCE WITH THE CONSERVATIVE AND REACTIONARY LABOR LEADERS AGAINST THE RANK AND FILE AND AGAINST THE REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT OF THE LABOR MOVEMENT. The Socialist Party did not once dare to attack Gompers in the last year. It fought against amalgamation, betrayed the Labor Party idea in Cleveland, slandered Soviet Russia, and barred the Communists from every labor conference whenever possible. All this has been done by the Socialist Party in order to win grace and favor with the reactionary labor leaders.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY HAS BUILT ITS ENTIRE TACTIC UPON THE LABOR LEADERS. It has prostituted itself for Gompers, Johnston, Stone and Keating. It went to Albany as a prostitute. It put on its finest opportunist clothes, applied a thick coating of Gompers-rouge on its face, and perfumed itself with the strongest anti-Bolshevik patchouli. But all in vain. The reactionary leaders of the railroad brotherhoods were so much afraid of the labor party idea that they would not tolerate in their midst even the Socialist Party. The Socialist Party is weeping now, and is wailing that altho it sought a compromise at any price, and altho it offered everything it had, even its honor, it was thrown out of the Albany Conference nevertheless. We can't help it but we have no compassion for the Socialist Party. Its tears and its wailing are but the tears and the wailing of a prostitute who has been thrown out without pay, by roughnecks, after a wild night. The Socialist Party demanded payment, but the railroad leaders declared that it was merely love, and kicked her out.

Tammany Hall vs. Tammany Hall

The petty Tammany Hall of Hillquit dominates the Socialist Party completely, just as the real Tammany Hall dominates New York's Democratic Party. Hillquit went to Albany with the whole apparatus of the petty Tammany Hall; but to his great surprise he found there—the real Tammany Hall of New York, in the persons of ex-Mayor John Hylan, gibbons and William F. Fitzsimmons, the Democratic attorney of numerous trade unions. Hillquit was surprised, but at first wanted to fraternize even with the Tammany Hall politicians; and the love between the real Tammany Hall and Hillquit's petty Tammany Hall was for a whole day really strong and stirring. But we all know that love can easily turn into hatred. Hillquit recounts in the New York Call: "The break came late Sunday night, after a day of seemingly cordial exchange of sentiment among the various co-operators. It was as definite as it was unexpected and inconsistent." And the New York Call reporter writes that the attacks of the real Tammany Hall against Hillquit "came dangerously near personal insults on the part of several Democratic Party leaders who secured the floor." Hillquit attempted all the cunning of an average lawyer, but Fitzsimmons, the Democratic attorney, understands the old game better than Hillquit. It was a spectacle for the Gods, as these two lawyers fought against each other. Hillquit declared that Tammany Hall is, "The most malodorous and corrupt political organization in America." Fitzsimmons declared that Hillquit's petty Tammany Hall, the Socialist Party, "Has no good faith and is not honest." Hillquit declared that Fitzsimmons hasn't the right to speak in the name of the workers and that he represents the interests of the Democratic Party. Fitzsimmons declared that Hillquit hasn't the right to speak in the name of the workers, and that he represents the interests of the Socialist Party. We believe that both lawyers were entirely right. OF COURSE IN THE END, THE REAL TAMMANY HALL REMAINED VICTORIOUS, AND HILLQUIT'S PETTY TAMMANY HALL WAS SIMPLY KICKED OUT. The scores of Socialist Party delegates rode proudly to Albany on a special ship. We are curious to know what special vehicle they used in their quick exit from the Albany Conference.

From Cleveland to Albany

What are the causes of the debacle of the entire Socialist Party tactic? We can say that for us, this debacle of the Socialist Party tactic did not come as unexpectedly as for the Socialist leaders. We predicted long before that it will happen this way. We wish to analyze now the chief reasons for the defeat.

First, the Socialist Party has allied itself with the reactionary labor leaders and has lost all faith in the rank and file. It hoped that the American development would ape the British development. It hoped that the conservative LABOR LEADERS of America would create a Labor Party in America, just as the conservative leaders of the British labor movement created the British Labor Party. The Socialist Party has once more shown that it does not understand the American labor movement, that it is an outsider. Gompers and Johnston are definitely allied with the capitalists or middle class politicians, and will never be leaders of the Labor Party movement. At Cleveland the Socialist Party went so far in the service of the reactionary labor leaders as to vote for participation in the primaries of the old capitalist parties, on condition that it would be allowed to vote for its own candidates. It wished to repeat the same game in Albany. In Cleveland it was tolerated, and in Albany it was thrown out. Why? What is the difference between the two situations?

The difference is that in Cleveland the Socialist Party was still necessary for Johnston, Stone and Keating. The Socialist Party supplied them with ideology against the immediate creation of a Labor Party, and in throwing out the Communists, The Socialist Party was a tool in the hands of the reactionary labor leaders for deceiving the militant rank and file. But since Cleveland, there has taken place the July 3rd Convention in Chicago, and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has been formed. Which means that the Socialist Party could not prevent the militant left wing of the worker and farmer movement from abandoning the Cleveland fake for progressive political action. As a result, the Socialist Party lost its value in the estimation of the reactionary labor leaders. In Albany the "S. P." was no longer necessary. It was simply thrown out. It is truly a rare irony of fate that the reactionary leadership now brings up literally the same accusations against the Socialist Party which the Socialist Party made against the Communists—that the Socialist Party wanted to CAPTURE the Conventions, and that the Socialist Party PACKED the Convention with delegates, and that they do not want to go with the Socialist Party because if they do, people will say they are Bolsheviks.

The Socialist Party will now parade as the hero of the Labor Party idea. It will say that it was thrown out because it fought for independent political action of the working class. It will tear open its shirt and show the wounds on its chest. But that's a fake. The Socialist Party has not defended for one minute the idea of the Labor Party—neither in Cleveland nor in Albany. If it has wounds, they are on its chest, but on its buttock, from the kick of the reactionary labor leaders.

Capitalist Deed and Socialist Phrase

The Socialist Party has been preaching for months that the situation is not ripe for a Labor Party—that the workers do not understand as yet the necessity for a Labor Party. NOR DID THEY IN ALBANY BRING IN A RESOLUTION FOR THE CREATION OF A LABOR PARTY; and still less did they fight for the resolution of Campbell, the delegate of the Buffalo Trades and Labor Council, which was for the creation of a Labor Party. THEIR ONLY PROPOSAL WAS TO POSTPONE ALL ACTION UNTIL 1924. The reactionary railroad leaders and Tammany Hall politicians had easy sailing. They had something POSITIVE and IMMEDIATE to offer to the workers. They offered immediate participation in the elections of next fall, thru the means of the old capitalist parties. Of course it is a false and treacherous policy against the interests of the working class. But it is an IMMEDIATE action. And dissatisfied workers demand IMMEDIATE action. THE ONLY tactic which would have made it possible to fight against the Tammany Hall politicians and the railroad leaders would have been to urge the IMMEDIATE CREATION OF A LABOR PARTY. As against immediate action in alliance with capitalists, immediate independent action for the working class. THE ONLY POSSIBLE TACTIC COULD HAVE BEEN ACTION AGAINST ACTION. But against action in the interests of the capitalists, the Socialist Party had only the tactic of hesitation and passiveness. Hillquit declared at the Convention: "Any definite policy would force a rupture." Hillquit declared: Tammany Hall had easy sailing. Fitzsimmons declared against the tactic of postponement of the Socialist Party. "It's allright to have pipe dreams about what we can do away in the future in 1924, but we have got to do something NOW." The reporter of the New York Call writes: "MANY railwaymen declared they wanted SOMETHING NOW, they couldn't wait a year. Next year SEVERAL said was so far off that to plan for it was a dream."

The Socialist Party could not win over the RANK AND FILE representatives of the railway unions, because it had nothing to offer them. Against the definite CAPITALIST policy of the railway leaders they did not have just as definite a LABOR policy, but only Hillquit's phrase, "No definite policy." Against the CAPITALIST "HERE AND NOW" they did not have the REVOLUTIONARY "HERE AND NOW," but only a "lovely dream" for the future.

The greatest lesson at Albany is that against the real Tammany Hall the petty S. P.-Tammany Hall is powerless and useless. ALBANY HAS DEFINITELY SHOWN THAT THE LABOR PARTY OF THE AMERICAN WORKING CLASS CAN BE CREATED ONLY THRU THE STRUGGLE AGAINST THE CAPITALIST PARTIES, AND THRU THE STRUGGLE AGAINST THE REACTIONARY LABOR LEADERS. It has shown that everyone who does not fight against Gompers and Johnston, simply delivers the working class to Harding and "Al" Smith.

Socialists Get the Boot at Albany after Aiding Mob Attack on Labor Party Effort

the midnight display of modesty that checked, for a time, all "Socialist" tendencies of the last four years.

The "Socialists," re-inforced by the Lefkowitz-De Hunt Farmer-Laborites, all carefully camouflaged under the standards of the American Labor Party (New York City), came to Albany, in droves, by boat, by railroad, by limousine. It was a conquering host bent on capturing and enslaving. The State Executive Committee of the New York Socialist Party met in Secretary Merrill's office on Saturday, and organized a "Steering Committee." Early Sunday morning, and all Sunday morning, the faithful caucused in the Labor Lyceum, on South Pearl Street.

"We must go along!" was the slogan. The brotherhood chiefs do not want a "Labor Party". "All right, then we'll forget about the Labor Party," was the developing sentiment. "This is the opportunity of our lives to get in touch with the American working class. We must take advantage of it, etc., etc."

The Conference itself was held at the Catholic Union Hall, that tops a hill. It is an old crumbling building that once performed as a militia armory.

They Go Up the Hill

Hillquit's shock troops went up the hill early in the afternoon. But the railroaders had gotten there earlier and taken possession of the auditorium. They held it with all the secrecy due the lodge spirit of "The Brotherhoods." The Hillquitians were forced to content themselves, for the time being, with what space they could find on the sidewalks outside. The rain ceased and the sun came, by way of encouragement, as the Socialists questioned each other, "Haven't we been loyal? Haven't we fought the Communists? Haven't we gone along? Haven't we been good?" and then with a final outburst, "This is an outrage!"

Morris Hillquit and Jerome T. De-Hunt came and marched up the steps and into the hall, paling a little with dignified anger. But they came right out again. De Hunt is a high official of the railway clerks. But he had come as delegate of the Farmer-Labor Party (N. Y.) with the result that he was not admitted to the secret meeting of "The Brotherhoods."

"They are considering some of their own union business first," said De Hunt, by way of alibi. "We'll get started after awhile. You know these meetings never start on time."

But at that very moment William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, and Chairman of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, was pleading strenuously with "The Brotherhood" delegates. He was stating that the original call for this gathering had not included the Socialists. But this had finally been amended and everyone representing an organization affiliated with the "Cleveland Conference" had been sent an invitation. And here they were.

While Johnston was talking in the big drill hall of this ancient armory, the "Socialist" scouts had found a smaller hall in the same building, just the thing for a caucus. So at other "Socialist" caucus was called. All delegates were carefully scrutinized before being allowed to pass into this second secret gathering. This left the Workers Party (Communist) delegates on the steps of the building, with trade union sympathizers with the communist viewpoint, and the visitors.

The Clashing Viewpoints

While the railroaders were discussing Johnston's plea; Hillquit was telling the "Socialists" that they must be admitted. "All or none," Edward F. Cassidy, Socialist, a printer, differed with this. He thought that the Socialist affiliations in the trade unions should meet with the railroaders, if trade unionists alone were asked into conference. It was at this juncture that "Socialist" stock almost out-tumbled the German mark when word came from "The Brotherhood" gathering that only trade union delegates would be admitted. Hillquit held to his viewpoint, while some supported Cassidy. The debate broke the Sabbath stillness of the neighborhood. The door-lock was finally broken when the railroaders, from their hall, sent the encouraging word to the Socialists that they could all be admitted.

It was here rumored that some sort of a deal had been made between the "Socialist" and the railroaders. The "Socialist" hold this impromptu caucus had profusely charged the Communists with being the cause of all the indignities heaped upon them. It was said the railroaders had viewed the hosts of invading Socialists and become frightened. They did not want to get "captured," not even "converted."

S. John Block, president of the New York Call, Socialist daily, professed to be shocked when asked if some agreement had been entered into. Yet the later developments were significant.

Handpicking the "Conference"

The "outside sentinels" and the "inside sentinels" of "The Brotherhoods" stationed at the narrow entrance to the big drill hall, were immediately re-inforced by the Socialist "Pretorian Guard," and it was worth one's life even to try to get by without the proper credentials.

Every delegate from the "Socialist" caucus was again given the "once over" by Marie McDonald, secretary of the American Labor Party, and her "Socialist" assistants. Those who were rejected for passes in to the secret, underground meeting

The writer and Benjamin Gitlow, "Doug" the printer, Jewish Communist Daily, were "O. K'd" as press representatives by the sentinels of "The Brotherhood." But it was thumbs down and no mercy from the Socialist guards.

"We can't vouch for you," declared Mrs. MacDonald, as Mark Khinoy, the Communist baiter of the Jewish Daily Forward, kept up the cry, "They're Communists."

Delegates were turned down from organizations affiliated with the American Labor Party merely because they were known to harbor radical sentiments.

It was in this rarified, excited atmosphere, purged of all, crimson taint, that the Brotherhood-Socialist gathering got under way with a flood of oratory that swept all the way from "elect your friends in the old parties" to "follow the example of the British Labor Party," and "We'll have a Ramsay Mac Donald in this country in ten years." Among the performers were Arthur Holder, secretary of the "Cleveland Conference," Hillquit, Jacob Panken, Delaney, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Thomas F. Ryan, of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors; David B. Robertson, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; Arthur J. Lovell, Vice-president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineemen; H. E. Blaney, for Grand Chief Stone, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; William E. Fitzsimmons, attorney for some of "The Brotherhoods"; John Fitzgibbons, Socialist Vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; J. A. Fox of the Pennsylvania Railroad Brotherhood's Legislative Committee; John M. O'Hanlon, of the New York State Federation of Labor; Charles J. McGowan, with Thomas E. Ryan, of Albany, as Chairman.

Socialists Pack Conference

When the orators on the platform had exhausted themselves, announcements were made of selections for the committees on program and resolutions, on permanent organization and finance, on which the Socialists were given good representation. Hillquit had claimed that he spoke for 200,000 Socialist votes in the state. He got this figure by adding 100,000 Socialist votes in the state to the membership of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Furriers' Union, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers, and other organizations affiliated with the "American Labor Party."

The first real stir in the gathering came when the report of the credentials committee. On the basis of their claim of 100,000, the Socialists got by with 69 straight delegates, to which were added delegates from "Socialist" sympathizing organization, bringing this total up to 92. The "Socialists" also had a whip hand with a majority of 76 local union delegates. Against these the railroaders mustered only 85 delegates, the strongest delegation coming from the trainmen, with 14. It will thus be seen that Hillquit had the control of the gathering, so far as votes were concerned. The "Socialists" stood convicted of all the manufactured crimes they had charged against the Workers Party in the Chicago "Labor Conference."

The credentials committee reported the Workers Party delegates rejected. The basis for the rejection, it was claimed, was on the ground that the Workers Party was not affiliated with the "Cleveland Conference."

When delegates asked if the New York Central Trades and Labor Council was affiliated with the "Cleveland Conference," Mrs. MacDonald, for the committee, claimed they were, indirectly.

The delegates from the Buffalo Brotherhood of Carriers' Union made a motion to reject the report of the committee, but Chairman Ryan put the question on the committee report to reject the Workers Party delegation and it was carried but with considerable opposition.

During the evening session Hillquit began forgetting his speech of the afternoon, that the Socialists had come to the conference with no expectations, with no ambitions, "Except to be of service," that any Labor Party must originate out of the "cheerful agreement" of all parties concerned.

On the basis of his fictitious figures, Hillquit went far in making claims for "Socialist" representation on the Committee on Permanent Organization. Attorney Fitzsimmons, for the railroaders, raised the cry that the "Socialists" were trying to capture and control them.

Then the final showdown came on the question of participating in this fall's assembly election. Evidently the Socialists thought if they could get by the fall elections, they might be able to get a Socialist-controlled "American State Labor Party" out of a conference in the spring. But the railroaders were for going ahead immediately with the "Cleveland conference" dual policy. "Send Gompers' 'reward your friends and punish your enemies,'" in the old parish, program. Chairman Ryan declared it was evident the "Socialists" would only vote for their own candidates, and that they should never have come into the conference.

Morris Hillquit, the ambitious "Puss-in-Boots" of American Socialism, had been caught by "The Brotherhoods" prying in the cellar for his hungry litter of political kittens off the railroaders' back porch. Here was an old party kitchen doorstep that could not be named into a "Socialist" political pie-counter. It was a midnight foray that failed, and the "Socialists" missed the 11 o'clock "Night Boat" for New York City into the bargain.

The dilemma that now confronts the "Socialists" is this: They have rejected all radical elements, and now they had been cut off by the conservative elements in the American Labor Movement. Hillquit and Berger once spoke for a considerable American Socialist movement. Now Berger speaks for Milwaukee, Hillquit for New York City alone, minus this Albany fiasco. Here are two "Internationalist Socialists" with but a small local following.

Socialists in Massachusetts, under the leadership of George R. Roewer, Jr., at the state labor conference two weeks ago, accepted the Cleveland "leader-ship." Berger has traded with La Follette. The most prominent "Socialists" in Oklahoma went along with the Reconstruction League that elected Governor Walton, who has now turned traitor to both the farmers and city workers. There are few "Socialists" elsewhere on the horizon.

Truly, there was meaning to the "Socialist" scurrying in the night between last Sunday and Monday, here in Albany, New York.

The Albany "Conversion"

By JAMES P. CANNON

The split at the Albany "Conference for Progressive Political Action" came as a result of the demand of the railroad leaders that the Socialists support candidates of the capitalist parties in the elections for the State Assembly this year, refusing to accept the Socialist offer to wait until next year to decide this policy for the 1924 elections.

The conference, advancing the cause of labor in politics, the "conference," in the words of Hillquit, "is a failure." From the standpoint of Socialist Party strategy it was both a failure and a farce—a sight for tears and laughter. The policy of of the damned and rejected. Finally all except the Communists and their sympathizers were admitted. The Communists would not agree to keep still about the labor party.

The Socialist Party did not split with the supporters of the capitalist political parties on any question of principle. They did not break on the issue of independent political action versus nonpartisan political action. The Socialists did not even raise the question of a labor party concretely; and when it was brought up by a trade union delegate they opposed it. The split occured simply over a question of a labor party concretely. The railroad leaders demanded the immediate surrender of the Socialist Party from the policy of supporting the "best man" of the capitalist parties. The Socialist Party was not quite ready and asked for a little more time to make their decision.

The Socialists started out to lead the "Conference for Progressive Political Action" toward a labor party. It has been working according to the theory that a labor party will be organized in America by the black reactionaries who are now hostile to the very idea. In order to gain their good will it severed relations with those rank and file elements who really and sincerely want a labor party. Following that policy it refused to participate in the rank and file labor party convention at Chicago.

It remained with the "Conference for Progressive Political Action" in order to lead it toward a labor party. What there is left of the Socialist Party, outside of Milwaukee, is virtually all in New York. A part of it reported that a soldier had asked to be discharged, gave as his reason that membership in the National Guards was forbidden by his organization. He is a member of the United Association of Plumbers, Steam-fitters and Helpers. The constitution of this union reads mildly enough that "no member of the United Association shall enlist in any militia except in defense of the country". A regular Gompers' clause. But evidently the White Guard officers are not satisfied. They intend to use this case to investigate all labor unions. Stevens said, if the investigation proves that any union by its provisions tends to prevent members from joining the National Guards, he would turn the case over to the Attorney General for prosecution under a provision of the penal code which provides that any one dissuading a man from enlistment in the National Guard, or who obstructs or persuades him to resign membership in the Guard, may be punished by a fine of $500, imprisonment for six months or both. This may be regarded not only as a warning to enlistments from members in the unions, but to open the doors of the union to National Guardsmen. Note: Later news quoted the Secretary of War to the effect that there was no legal grounds for moving against the unions, and it was found that the "objectionable clause" was removed in 1919 by the union.

WHITE GUARDS IN UNIONS

Adjt. Gen. Jesse E. Stevens has started an investigation of reported activities of labor unions to prevent their members from joining the National Guard. Colonel Thomas F. Foley, Commander of the 104th Infantry, Mass. National Guard, reported that a soldier had asked to be discharged, gave as his reason that membership in the National Guards was forbidden by his organization. He is a member of the United Association of Plumbers, Steam-fitters and Helpers. The constitution of this union reads mildly enough that "no member of the United Association shall enlist in any militia except in defense of the country". A regular Gompers' clause. But evidently the White Guard officers are not satisfied. They intend to use this case to investigate all labor unions. Stevens said, if the investigation proves that any union by its provisions tends to prevent members from joining the National Guards, he would turn the case over to the Attorney General for prosecution under a provision of the penal code which provides that any one dissuading a man from enlistment in the National Guard, or who obstructs or persuades him to resign membership in the Guard, may be punished by a fine of $500, imprisonment for six months or both. This may be regarded not only as a warning to enlistments from members in the unions, but to open the doors of the union to National Guardsmen. Note: Later news quoted the Secretary of War to the effect that there was no legal grounds for moving against the unions, and it was found that the "objectionable clause" was removed in 1919 by the union.

the trade union delegates who wanted to speak for it.

The "Conference for Progressive Political Action," as the affair in Albany shows, is going backward towards the political policy of Gompers; and the Socialist Party is going the same way. Their action make this up plain that few can be deceived about it. Gompers, himself, is so sure of it, that he has not hesitated to broadcast thru the A. F. of L. News service a statement that "The Socialist Party has made a complete about-face from its attacks on the A. F. of L. nonpartisan political policy."

The farce at Albany revealed more clearly than ever the hopeless position of the Socialist Party. It cannot stand alone because its organization is shattered and reduced practically to two cities. It has no militant rank and file membership and is incapable of developing any kind of a campaign on a national scale. It it goes ahead with the "Conference for Progressive Political Action" it will have to refrain from putting up its own candidates and support the capitalist parties. The bosses at Albany made it clear that they will not stand for any delay; they would not wait until next year for the complete surrender of the Socialist Party as an independent political party.

The Socialist Party is meeting the fate of all who try to serve two masters. No party can serve the interests of the working class of America and, at the same time, make friendly alliance with the labor bureaucracy which represents the labor movement the viewpoint and ingerests of the capitalist class. The Socialist Party tried to play the double role. What it had when it was clearly to be seen at Albany.

Party Moves Forward for New Victories

Labor Party. It instructed the Executive Secretary to draft a statement to the membership covering the party "Labor Party Policy" and the policy which governed the action of the party delegates at the Chicago Conference, and to send this to all party branches with instructions that it be made a special order of business at the next branch meeting. (This statement has been mailed to all party branches and can also be secured from the National Headquarters in leaflet form.

The Membership Drive

The committee discussed at length the needs of the party at the present time and decided that the time was ripe for an organization drive to increase the membership of the party.

The party policy at the Chicago Conference had interested many workers in the organization, and these workers were ready to join a real fighting organization of labor.

This campaign will be begun in the month of September. Every party branch should make preparations for this campaign and exert all its strength to bring new members into the party.

The Party Headquarters

The question of the location of the party headquarters has been considered by the committee at a number of meetings. Many district organizations have expressed themselves in favor of moving the headquarters to Chicago, which is more centrally located and from which speakers can be sent more easily to other sections of the country, and mail and literature distributed more quickly.

At the caucus of the delegates to the Chicago convention this question was raised and many delegates expressed themselves in favor of moving to Chicago. After a thoro review of the situation the Central Executive Committee voted that the party headquarters be removed to Chicago by Sept. 1.

The Daily Paper

A sub-committee of the C. E. C. had been instructed to survey the field to decide the possibility of launching a daily paper. This committee submitted a report recommending that the daily be established. The basis of the committee recommendation was:

1. That a daily paper is urgently needed to unify the party in its campaign. Thru a daily paper the membership can be united more closely and kept in contact with the policies of the C. E. C. The new developments in the party situation require a greater unity and solidarity than heretofore, which can only be achieved thru a daily paper thru which the C. E. C. can reach the membership from day to day.

2. Conditions are more favorable for the establishment of a daily than at any time in the past, particularly from the standpoint of drafts on the party resources for other funds, such as funds for relief, defense, etc.

The committee recommended that the campaign be launched immediately and take the following forms:

1. Incorporation of a stock company under party control and the selling of shares of stock at $5.00. Every member of the party to be asked to purchase at least one share of stock.

2. The holding of picnics during the month of August for the daily paper fund.

3. The holding of a series of mass meetings during the month of September the proceeds to go to the daily paper fund.

4. The holding of balls and entertainments during the months of October for the benefit of the daily paper fund.

5. A subscription campaign during the month of October.

6. Proceeds of the November 7th celebrations to go to the daily paper fund.

Every party unit is to create a Daily Worker Committee which is to be charged with responsibility for carrying out the program above.

Complete instructions in regard to the campaign will be sent direct to the party branches.

The actions taken at this meeting of the Central Executive Committee mark a new stage of the party developments. Our party has tested its strength in the actual struggles of the workers and at the Chicago Conference showed itself worthy of leadership in the struggle. The task now before the party is to increase its own organizational strength. This task the Central Executive Committee has undertaken. Thru the membership drive, thru moving the headquarters to Chicago from which the party can be more easily mobilized, thru establishing a daily paper, the party will strengthen itself.

This strengthening of the party is preparation for new struggles. It will prepare the way for our party to become even a greater factor in the life of the American workers. We are going forward to greater victories.

Militant Nova Scotia Coal Miners Go Back to Work to Stop Lewis Smashing Union

By TOM BELL

(Special to "The Worker")

GLACE BAY, NOVA SCOTIA.—What the government of Canada, with its troops and provincial police, the steel and coal corporations with their treasuries, and the kept press lies, could not accomplish has been achieved, for them by John L. Lewis, International President of the United Mine Workers of America. Lewis by revoking the District No. 26 Charter and deposing the District officers has forced the miners to give up the struggle against the use of armed force in industrial disputes rather than risk the disruption of their union by the commission that Lewis has sent into the District.

The miners of Cape Breton on strike since July 3rd, have seen troops and police brought against them, have seen the mines surrounded by barb wire, withstood the lies of the capitalist press, and witnessed their leaders—Jim McLachlan and Dan Livingstone—arrested, but they did not waver in their determination to carry on the struggle to rid the Labor Movement from the menace of armed force used on the side of the corporations in industrial disputes. It was left for Lewis to deliver the blow that forced them to return to the mines.

There is rejoicing in the capitalist camp over this strikebreaking action of Lewis. The capitalist press is full of praise for Lewis. For some time past they have been predicting that Lewis would take this step. Now that he has fulfilled the expectations of the yellow press they chant his praises, and in their editorials keep on repeating the phrase, "We told you so!"

Lewis revoked the District charter and deposed the officials under the phrase "the sanctity of contracts." When the strike started the British Empire Steel Corporation demanded of the District officers that the miners be ordered to return to work or an appeal would be made to Lewis to have him carry out the terms of the contract. The District officers replied that the strike had nothing to do with the contract since it was not a wage struggle and there was no stoppage of work clause in the contract. The corporation made the appeal to Lewis with the result that on July 17th he deposed the officers, revoked the District charter, and appointed as provisional president a man who was removed from office in the District by the votes of the miners at the last District election. Lewis then ordered the Locals to return to work immediately under threat of revoking the Local charter. He has sent thirteen "organizers" into the District to aid the illiterate provisional president to smash the miners and leave them sufficiently crushed for the corporation to handle.

All the forces that the government and the corporation were able to bring against the miners have been used. The creatures who were unable to get into office by the votes of the miners and desiring to be given office by the Lewis commission worked to break the spirit of the miners. The result was that many weaklings voted to return to work. The Lewis gang in the District was continually threatening to revoke the charters of the Local unions if they did not return to work. This created confusion in the ranks of the miners, but it would not have resulted in the breaking of the strike had not Lewis thru his lawyer secured an injunction against the District officers restraining them from acting in any capacity as officers of District 26, and also restraining them from using the District funds.

With this situation to face the miners decided to return to work rather than have Lewis revoke their Local charters.

The local unions appointed committees to meet the mine management and informed them that the miners were returning to work if there would be no discrimination on the part of the corporation against the men who had taken an active part in the strike. The management refused to deal with the committees of the miners and would make no guarantee that there would be no discrimination. Wholesale discrimination of active union men is now going on. The management is refusing work to active men. The members of the Local executives are blacklisted. All men active in the strike are refused work. Lewis drives the miners back to work and the corporation blacklists the militant workers in an attempt to drive them from the District.

The blacklisted miners are not whining. They have fought the corporation and Lewis. They made the organization of the union possible. They have been blacklisted before but still they continued fighting. These men are urging the rest of the workers to return to work so that Lewis will not be able to withdraw the Local charters and organize new locals. They desire the solidarity of the miners so that they can fight in the future. The provisional executive of Lewis has stated that it will fight against the blacklist. This remains to be seen. Their past records have shown them only too willing to do as the corporation wished them to do.

Because the miners are returning to work does not mean that they have accepted the "provisional government" set up by Lewis. Not at all. The miners are returning to work to protect their union from the attacks of the Lewis gang. They threw up the fight against the troops and provisional police so that they could better conduct the struggle against the Lewis machine. They are determined that the autonomy of the District shall be restored and that they shall elect their own officers.

Lewis may have won the admiration of the corporation, the capitalist press, and the Armstrong government by stabbing the miners of Nova Scotia in the back. But the miners will never forget the traitorous action of Lewis that forced them back to the mines in face of the troops and police being used against the labor movement. Lewis has done this before for the benefit of the capitalists. In Kansas and in Alberta (District 18) he sent in his "organizers" and broke the miners for the benefit of the operators. His latest exhibition of his anxietv to smash the miners he is supposed to lead will rouse the rank and file of the United Mine Workers and they will smash Lewis in the interests of themselves and the working class.

American Methods Are Getting Big Results in Siberian Coal Fields

KEMEROVO, SIBERIA.—The effect of American management and methods have already been evidenced in the Kemerovo coal mines, since February, when Americans took over the entire control.

The average production of coal for the months of October, November, and December of 1922 and January of 1923 under the dual management was 6,950 tons, or 49.9 per cent of the government program. During the four months of February, March, April and May the Americans averaged 10,057 tons, or 78.82 per cent of the government program.

This great increase was brought about with a reduction of 21.07 per cent in the working forces, and was not due to the introduction of machinery or new equipment. To realize the government program of 120,000 tons this year, the colony will have to mine 2,590 tons per month until October, which will be quite possible.

The introduction of fans, pumps, coal cutting machines, a new powerful hoist, mine locomotive, etc., will make it possible to produce 500,000 tons next year, providing some necessary technical forces are enlisted this year in the United States. Most of these machines are on their way.

'Progressive Miner" Appears

PITTSBURGH.—The Progressive Miner "a bulletin of events of interest to every sincere member of the United Mine Workers of America," has made its first appearance here with Vol. I, No. 1 dated July 14. It is a four-page paper of tabloid size printed in English, Slovenian, Croatian, Polish, Hungarian and Italian. The editors, William A. Guiler, Thomas Myerscough and Thomas Kay are the executives of the Progressive Miners International Committee. The first issue strongly condemns dualism and secessionism and demands unconditional allegiance to the union. The reason given by the committee for publishing The Progressive Miner is that "the columns of the official organ of the United Mine Workers of America are censored to such an extent that the editor, Ellis Searles, who is not a miner, even refused to publish the official report of the naturalization committee which has been appointed by Lewis."

The paper is to be published twice a month at 35 Miller street, Pittsburgh, at $1 a year.

Coin Riches for U. S. Steel Trust

NEW YORK.—The Steel Corporation has a very profitable railroad up Minnesota way. Last year it earned profits at the rate of $147.65 on each share of capital stock.

The road is the Duluth, Missabe and Northern. Its dividend record is 100% in 1912, 85% in 1913, 75% in 1914, 10% in 1915, 75% in 1915-16, 100% in 1916, 50% in 1917, 70% in 1919 and 75% in 1920 and 1921.

The 1922 net income amounting to $6,072,300 on $4,112,500 capital stock was more than double that of 1921. It is enough to provide a 6% return on a road worth $100,000,000. This is just one way in which the steel corporation inflates the cost of steel.

Fascisti in Italy Fight Rome Strike

Italian industry is seriously disturbed as a result of a big building trades strike in Rome which the Fascist government is making strenuous efforts to break, cable dispatches by Italian papers here reveal.

Thirty thousand bricklayers and other building trades employees are on strike, with the Government officially and the Fascisti unofficially determined to drive them back to work. Three hundred arrests were made in one day, and it is obvious from the tone of dispatches that more are to be expected.

"Il Progresso Italo-America," a New York daily which is friendly to the Fascisti, carries two separate items, both of which contain important statements. The first, after recounting the fact that a big strike is under way, says:

"The Fascisti have declared that they want to stop the strike at any cost and that they are ready to bring scabs to Rome."

The other item, dealing with the government's attitude, recounts the arrest of 300 who "refused to work."

This building trades strike is but one of a series in many industries and in all parts of the country. They are an expression of industrial unrest which the Fascisti government seeks to hide from the rest of the world, and of the dissatisfaction with Mussolini's open efforts to drive the Communist and progressive elements generally out of the labor movement, substituting—as has been done in some places—open-shop Fascisti unions.

The critical situation is indicated by the fact that following an interview with the Fascisti dictator, officials of the General Federation of Labor called a special meeting of their executive committee.

"In the interview Mussolini told the representatives of organized labor that they were wished the workers all sorts of good luck—but!! They must respect the 'right to work' and the 'sanctity of contract.' In other words, he has made a declaration of benevolent principles worthy of an American open-shop advocate.

Calls U. S. Despotism in Philippines Worse than Rule of Spaniards

By JAY LOVESTONE

(Special to "The Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A cable has just been received by the Philippine Press Bureau that Ferandez, who recently resigned as mayor in protest against Leonard Wood's high handed rule, is now running for the senate to fill the vacancy of Pedro Guevera who is leaving on August 15th to take his newly elected position as resident Commissioner to the United States.

Ferandez as the candidate of the Collectivist and the Nationalist Parties is opposed by Judge Juan Sumulong of the Democratic Party. The principal issue involved in the election is the break of the Filipino leaders with General Wood. The Democrats join the other parties in denouncing the despotism of Wood, yet they criticize the coalitionists for unnecessarily submitting the case to the people in this election and contend it is a matter that should be brought home to the American people instead.

In his keynote speech before a monster audience in Manila, Senate President Quezon said: "The Governor General has repeatedly passed over the heads of departments and repeatedly submitted bills to the Philippine Legislature without consulting them. Even Colonel Johnston, one of the army officers on Governor Wood's military staff, prepares bills. I have told the Governor that his private advisers are superfluous and have no legal status in our government and have no authority in the eyes of the legislature.

Manuel Rexas, speaker, Philippine House of Representatives, said:

"He has sought to establish a Colonial Despotism worse than that which has cursed our country for the last ten generations. As to the development of our vast natural resources the government has sought to denationalize our national economic organizations accepting advice from those American interests that want to come here to exploit our resources on a large scale."

The Filipinos are looking on this election as a test of strength and feel sure that General Wood will be given another decisive rebuke.

F. S. R. Issues Statement

The Friends of Soviet Russia has issued a statement on the removal of its national headquarters from New York City to Chicago, about Sept. 1. It points out that this will give it a more central location for tourist speakers, the circulation of its publications and movies, and also a more favorable industrial center for carrying on its relief work among the unions.

Czarina of America's Steel Mills Silent on Tyranny Under Brutalizing 12-Hour Day

By NANCY MARKOFF

Mrs. Emma Townsend Gary, wife of "Twelve-Hour" Elbert Henry Gary, czar of the American Steel Empire, does not care to discuss conditions in the nation's steel centers with "THE WORKER."

This Czarina of Steel claims to have no interests in the steel industry apart from those of the "Czar of Steel" himself. This is all the information that I could get. It came to me scribbled on a note that I sent to Mrs. Gary, asking her for an interview. What she wrote sounded like the echo of some press statement issued from the offices of the United States Steel Corporation, at 71 Broadway. Her own words, reproduced in another column, are as follows:

"As you perhaps know, my husband is personally opposed to the twelve-hour day. He is doing everything possible to get rid of it and hopes to be successful in the near future. I share his views.—Mrs. Gary."

This was all the Czarina had to say about the avalanche of attacks levelled at the 12-Hour Day in the Steel Industry, the charges of trickery and deceit and hypocricy against the Steel Czar, her husband, these put forward recently.

In reply to the facts showing real conditions in the steel districts, broken homes, high death rates, especially among the children; old men and young men killed and maimed in the mills; fathers and sons who only come home to sleep and fortify themselves for the next 12-Hour Shift, the Czarina has nothing to say, except to ape the smug phrases of the Czar.

It was with the intention of learning what the wife of the head of the great United States Steel Corporation thought about the 12-Hour Day, that I tried to seek her out at the Gary Palace, Fifth Ave. and 67th St. There is also a country place, "Ivy Hall," at Jericho, Long Island. But even on these hot summer days Mrs. Gary was "at home" in the city. This Gary Palace is a huge gray stone building, powerful and hard in its stone-cold exterior. The cold splendor of the building has a foreboding aspect.

An immaculately attired young man, fitted out in correct English attire for butlers, let me in. After stating my message I sat down and waited. Looking about all I saw was marble. Wide marble staircase, marble walls, marble ceiling, marble floors. I felt conscious of a manifestation of wealth and power in the form of white marble. How will the Czarina of Steel, luxuriously lulling in the magnificence of cold marble respond to the call of her slaves?

The butler crossing the floor in the columns of white marble shook me out of my reverie.

"No, say I can see no one today."

Loud, inaudible whispers send their echoes thru the halls, and then the same harsh voice, "Order the car for me."

The butler brought the message to me and uttered his apologies. I learned the Czarina was in a better mood after her breakfast at ten in the morning. So the persistence of telephone calls and letters brought the message already quoted.

At the height of the war on the 12-Hour Day, the New York Times published a picture of the "Czarina of Steel," resplendent in all her jewels, crown of diamonds, necklace of pearls, and all the rest.

I have heard that the Volstead Law holds no terrors for this "Czarina of Steel," that she is known among many of her friends as "Champagne Charlotte." She is the second wife of the "Czar of Steel."

No doubt she has never seen a steel mill. She will probably never see steel workers, their wives and their children, unless they come from Pittsburg and Bethlehem, from Youngstown and Lackawanna, even as the peasants came to the Czarina's Palace, in Moscow of tyrannical days ,that are gone, to picket the Gary Fifth Avenue Palace, or the Steel Trust's offices downtown on Broadway, demanding an end of the crucifying 12-Hour Day in the Steel Mills of America.

New York City.

My dear Mrs. Gary: As you perhaps know my husband is personally opposed to the twelve hour day. He is doing every thing possible to get rid of it and hopes to be successful in the near future. I share his views. Mrs Gary

Our publication is conducting a discussion on the twelve hour day in the steel mills and we are inviting the wives of the steel workers to give us their opinions on the most desirable working day in the steel mills for their husbands. Of course you understand that the happiness of thousands of human beings in America is the only consideration in this discussion. And therefore I have not the slightest doubt that you as the wife of the president of the U. S. Steel Corporation will wish to express your opinion on what you consider constitutes the fairest working conditions for men in the steel mills.

Can you see me on Saturday morning for a short interview? I can be reached by telephone at Stuyvesant 9642. Thanking you most sincerely,

Very truly yours,
Nancy Markoff

Minneapolis Labor Backs Seattle Fight

MINNEAPOLIS.—By almost unanimous vote the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, at their last meeting, went on record as endorsing the stand taken by the Seattle Central Labor Council in the controversy between that body and the American Federation of Labor executive board.

Seattle maintains the right of labor councils to take action in favor of independent political action and other related matters if they saw fit, as well as to discuss foreign affairs in which labor may be interested.

Shoe Workers Forced to Call Off the Strike at Brockton, Mass.

By WILLIAM SIMONS

(By Wire to "The Worker")

BROCKTON, MASS.—The strike of the shoe workers was called off here, July 31, by an overwhelming vote taken at a mass meeting. Financial support from the outside, from independent unions, was not forthcoming, and American Federation of Labor support was blocked by A. F. of L. officialdom.

Whatever breaks there were in the ranks were due to the work of priests. Immediate plans call for the continuation of the Brockton District Shoe Workers' Union. The strike has developed much sentiment in favor of the Trade Union Educational League's program.

Organized Labor in Pittsburgh Strengthens Its Support of Coal-Steel Tyranny Victims

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Special Writer for "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—That Organized Labor of Pittsburgh is not at all disturbed by the action of Judge Swing in upholding the conviction of Lloyd Hamilton, charged with violating the Landis-Sedition Act was clearly demonstrated last Sunday.

Workers Quick to Answer

Assistant District Attorney Meyer welcomed this decision as assuring a conviction of the workers arrested in his infamous "Red Raid" of April 28th. But organized Labor of Pittsburgh lost no time in answering the Court and the prematurely elated agent of the Steel and Coal interests.

Last Sunday the Pittsburgh Labor Defense and Free Speech Council held its Second Conference. It was a most successful gathering. There were 61 delegates present representing various working class organizations. The discussions were spirited and all delegates showed a live interest in the steps to be taken in behalf of Constitutional liberties for the persecuted workers who happen to be members of the Workers Party, or any other political or economic organization of labor.

Among the labor unions represented at the Conference were the Tobacco Workers' Union, the Waiters' Union, the Machinists' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Journeymen Tailors' Union and the United Mine Workers. There were also present delegates from the Socialist Party, the Miners' Relief Committee, the Workers Party and various fraternal, benevolent and educational organizations of Labor.

One of the most active delegates at the Conference was Brother A. A. McNamara, organizer for District 6, International Association of Machinists, and member of the Social Service Bureau of Pittsburgh.

Plan Intensive Campaign

The Conference got right down to brass tacks and organized itself for a vigorous defense campaign.

McNamara offered to give numerous connections and to aid in lining up the Federated Shop Crafts in behalf of the attacked workers. Within the Defense Council there was organized a special group of American Federation of Labor representatives to interest all A. F. of L. unions. It was also decided to hold as many street meetings as possible. Such meetings will be held every Sunday in September. Brother McNamara was charged with the task of getting permits for these meetings.

A resolution on the steel workers was adopted. A plan for getting out pledges for loans to aid in financing the defense was accepted. The Social Service Bureau of Pittsburgh efforts will be made to secure the co-operation of the local liberal forces. All local labor unions will be visited and the case of the persecuted workingmen will be presented to the trade unionists of Pittsburgh.

The affairs of this vigorous Defense Council are administered by a strong central committee consisting of: Chairman, Gent (A. F. of L. union); Vice-Chairman, Dr. Van Essen (Socialist Party); Second Vice-Chairman, Horvat (Workers Party); Secretary, Sarah Z. Libach (S. P.); Financial Secretary, Margaret Cowl (W. P.); Treasurer; Jane Tait (S. P.). The remaining members are Fred H. Merrick, F. Randa, Dr. M. Rasnick, and A. McNamara.

Co-operating with this Central Committee there will be an advisory Committee among whom G. Schaffer, a local liberal attorney, Dr. Van Essen of the Socialist Party, and the noted Reverend Dr. Kazinski, who was very active in behalf of the workers in the Great Steel Strike of 1919.

The battle now being waged against the Steel and Coal Trust tyranny by the workers of Pittsburgh is of tremendous importance to the workers of the whole country. The issue of the safety of the most elementary Constitutional rights for workers holding certain political beliefs and principles is of national significance. All workers should rally to the energetic campaign organized by the Pittsburgh Labor Defence and Free Speech Council.

Things As They Are

By JAMES P. CANNON

The American labor movement scored a decisive victory when the long campaign for amnesty finally forced President's bluff by waiting out the prisoners of the I. W. W. prisoners at Leavenworth. It is true the commutation had a string to it and contained a threat calculated to intimidate them from further activity in the class struggle. But we rejoiced to see the majority of them call the President's bluff by waiting out of the prison to take their places again on the firing line. Ralph Chaplin and those who came out with him did the right thing and the militant labor movement is a great gainer because of their action.

We are but little concerned with the abstract questions which may be involved about "admission of guilt," "matters of conscience," etc. Let the philosophers, pacifists and libertarians worry about them. As practical fighters for the cause of labor we asked the single question: "Will our fellow-workers again take their places beside us in the fight?" When we saw them doing it without hesitation we applauded their action and acclaimed it a victory.

We regret that some of the men at Leavenworth could not see their way clear to leave the prison and tear up the commutation papers with their infamous conditions, as they came thru the door. That, in our opinion, would have been the practical thing to do; but we offer no criticism of their decision. They have the right to maintain their stand for unconditional release, and every rebel on the outside is obligated to continue the fight in their behalf.

But when some of the men at Leavenworth undertake to condemn the men who accepted the commutation and excommunicate them from the movement, they make a serious mistake. We not only disagree with them on practical grounds, but we are also bound to sharply dispute their right to pass judgment on the others. The men in prison are not the only ones concerned in this important question, and neither are the members of the I. W. W. This question is of vital interest to every class conscious rebel in America, no matter what organization he belongs to.

And we say without a moment's hesitation that the overwhelming majority of them will gladly and promptly welcome all those who have come back from Leavenworth to join us in the fight against the prison which is capitalism.

The strike of the I. W. W. lumbershoremen at Hoboken, N. J. developed some incidents which illustrate the far-flung battle line against the rank and file of labor. The mob which attacked the hall of the I. W. W. was made up of thugs employed by crooked labor leaders, led by a company foreman and protected by the police. The latter are those who compained to the city authorities were cynically informed that "workers couldn't be fused on Saturday."

The bosses have many agents and allies in the class struggle. When the miners of Nova Scotia struck against the use of troops in the strike of steel workers, the bosses were able to counter with an attack on philosophers, pacifists and labor instrumentality of Lewis, the president of the miners' union. "Labor leaders" are a formidable section of the fighting forces of the bosses, no less than soldiers.

The struggle of the rank and file of labor against the capitalist exploiters is at the same time a fight against their agents in the labor movement. The recognition of this fact is a central feature of communist activity. The true party of the working class has not a single friend in the camp of the enemy. Because the party of communism fights always and everywhere against all the enemies of labor it is hated and feared by them more than anything else on earth. The masses of workers do not understand the lines against them and this is what confuses and hamstrings them. Because the communists are the bearers of a clear conception of the nature of the struggle the exploiters try by all means to isolate and destroy us in order that we may be prevented from bringing it to the workers.

But events such as took place at Hoboken and Nova Scotia, multiplied a thousand times and a thousand times, will make the situation evers clearer to the rank and file workers and bring them closer to us. Out of it will come in time an all-powerful alliance of the laboring masses with the communists, the alliance which conquered in Russia and which is destined to conquer thruout the world.

United Front Is Winning in Germany

the slanders and false accusations that the Socialist press have built up before the eyes of its readers in connection the true face of the revolutionary proletariat, faded away. True understanding and real comradeship grew up instead. In important industrial centers and even in entire provinces the "United Front" is an actual fact, in spite of the dictates of the Central Executive Committee of the United Social-Democratic Party. In Saxony, where a left-Socialist government is in power, this co-operation has borne wonderful fruit. In the parliament right-Social-Democrats are launching bitter attacks against their party-comrades of the Left. The official U. S. D. P. speakers call cabinet ministers "bolshevists"; the left-Social-Democrats reply that there is only one difference between certain Social-Democrats and the bourgeois Democrats —the latter are less reactionary. The parliamentary group of the U. S. D. P. is growing apace.

This is a process that will require time for its completion. To disturb it now by consciously and deliberately calling the working class out upon the streets would be more than suicidal. No one knows this better than the German and the Russian Communist leaders. No one knows better than they that an ill-advised uprising may loose a storm of reaction that may wipe not only the Communist movement of Germany off the map for years to come, but may precipitate a new world-war that will engulf Soviet Russia.

Revolutions are not made. They arise out of intolerable conditions created by a ruthless ruling class. It is not impossible that in Germany, in spite of the honest endeavors of Communists to prevent it, a Revolution may break out, because the suffering of the nation has reached a breaking point. Should this be the cause, the Communists of Germany and their comrades the world over will step into their rightful places as the advance guard of the militant proletariat, to direct this mighty flod of revolt into the channels of class conscious working class political action, that it may sweep down with irresistible power all the forces of reaction, capitalism and weak kneed counter-revolution in its path

Urge Irish Support F. F. L. P.

CHICAGO.—The Irish People, official organ of The Irish-American Labor League of Chicago, in its July issue endorses the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and urges its readers to give the new alliance their hearty support. It says:

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party, organized in Chicago on July 5th last, is the most hopeful sign that has appeared on the political horizon in this country within living memory. At last there is an opportunity offered to every worker, no matter what his shading of opinion, to cast his ballot for a candidate who represents his interests of the producing classes. We believe that the readers of The Irish People will welcome this development and whole-heartedly rally to the banner of the farmer-labor political alliance against the capitalist class for possession of their rightful inheritance, that is the right to the product of their toil and the control of their own destiny.

The purpose of the The Irish People is to bring the message of social emancipation to the Irish masses in this country who are still inbued with nationalistic ideas and under the influence of the church. It is published at 1615 Addison Street, Chicago, Ill. Suscription is $1.00 a year. Price per copy is ten cents.

Protest West Va. Terror

The Workers Party, Lithuanian Section, Branch 1, Brooklyn, N. Y., at the regular meeting held on July 18th, 1923, unanimously adopted the following resolution of protest against the outrageous treatment of the Logan County, W. Va., organized miners at the hands of the employers of labor:

1. We are deeply aroused by the wholesale arrest and incarceration of our fellow miners of terrorism to which the organized miners of Logan County, W. Va., are being subjected by the steel, mining and lumber trusts.

2. We emphatically protest against the brutal and fiendish murder of Sid Hatfield, the said miners by their masters' agents; thugs, gunmen, packed up judges, and kept witnesses.

3. We condemn the system of industrial feudalism which is being introduced in Logan County by the coal barons and their lackeys, a system unparalleled even by the most brutal slavery in the darkest period of the middle ages.

4. We demand that William Blizzard, C. E. "Dot" Keeney, Harold W. Houston, and all other organizers and leaders of the "armed miners' march" of Logan County miners in 1921 be immediately released.

5. We finally, and last but not least, protest authority and terrorism of the Logan County officials, brutally harrassed, terrorized, oppressed, and persecuted toilers.

A copy of this resolution of protest has been sent Governor Morgan and Attorney General E. T. England of West Virginia.

Huswoud Out to Organize Negro Labor

(By FEDERATED PRESS)

CHICAGO.—Three weeks of organization among the Negro workers of Chicago are ending with the departure for Pittsburg of O. E. Huswoud, organizer African Blood Brotherhood, the radical Negro organization.

Both new immigrants from the southern states and long settled Negro residents of Chicago were urged to join trade unions and resist the efforts of open-shop employers to make the Negro a weapon in breaking down standards of living.

The African Blood Brotherhood was organized in New York in 1919. It now has many branches in many states as well as in British Guiana and Trinidad. Organization in Cuba is next on the program. Co-operation is sought between colored and white workers on the basis of their identity of interests as workers. Education of the negro along the line of his class interests as a worker is promoted and union organization urged. Class consciousness as a worker leads race consciousness in the brotherhood's methods.

Mob law and peonage in the south is opposed, together with industrial capitalist exploitation of the Negro in the north.

The brotherhood maintains the Crusader press service, sent to over 100 Negro papers twice weekly; sends organizers into the industrial centers, operates forums and classes, watches for open-shop abuse of the Negro and exposes the conditions in the south that force the Negro to flee to the north for safety and a livelihood.

Williamsburg Branch Active

An indication of the developing enthusiasm in the Workers Party since the "Labor Party Conference," at Chicago, was seen at the last meeting of the Williamsburg (New York) Branch of the party, 715 Broadway, Brooklyn.

Following an address by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," on the struggles in which the party is now engaged, and in response to appeals by several of the comrades in the branch, seven new members joined the party, while other sympathizers present signified their intention of doing so in the very near future. This was only the beginning of a membership drive that will be continued until the organization has been appreciably strengthened for the big tasks ahead of it.

IT'S ALL O.K.

Editor, The Worker:—Placing an order for renewal. I am sure is enough evidence that I am with your paper to read and circulate. But in passing, I wish to offer my sincere thanks and pleasure in being able to get such a good, sound, red-blooded, he-man paper. There is absolutely nothing in "The Worker" that I can criticize. It's all O.K.

"The Worker" signifies to me the keystone of all radical papers, backbone, brain and brawn—unbending, unyielding, the Spartan, challenger and defender, the beacon, guide, and hope. J. H. J., Los Angeles, Cal.

[illegible] Soviet Russia [illegible] Russia. I have succeeded in transmitting every piece of information I have considered to have an interest for the public outside. Other correspondents may have done the same. We have been treated freely and have denounced abuses and have lent out much matter that has been opposed to the soviet point of view. But the government recognized that it is better to endure such criticism than to attempt to suppress it. And as the soviets can't prevent the transmitting of only such dispatches as foreign newspapers would not accept, I am firmly convinced, however, that any other government under such conditions of civil war in Russia would also maintain the censorship."

As Soviet Russia gets stronger and the stress of civil war is removed, a greater amount of real liberty is permitted than in the "hypocritic "democracies" of other lands. There will be little or no censorship left. Maybe by the time another communist goes on trial in Michigan, for the prosecutor to bring up the awful "bolshevik censorship" while the very laws of "criminal syndicalism" the prosecutor is trying under violate the right of free expression far more than any censor in Russia.

A Bourgeois Handmaiden

By JEANNETTE D. PEARL

Commemorating the first equal rights convention, held in 1848, in Seneca Falls, N. Y., the National Woman's Party met in convention July 21—22, on the same historic ground.

Three hundred women delegates at the N. W. P. convention unanimously adopted the form of the proposed "equal rights" amendment to the Federal Constitution. This in part reads as follows: "Resolved, that in order to bring the complete equal rights ideal to the victory that was won for the suffrage we unite to support the following program: The securing of an amendment to the United States Constitution, stating that men and women shall have equal rights thru the U. S. and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

Miss Alice Paul, Vice-President of the N. W. P., introducing the resolution and arguing in its favor, stated that tieing up this proposed amendment with the 1848 Woman's Movement makes it easier to secure support for the cause with traditions behind it, and which has grown respectable with age. Historic prestige causes many sincere working women, eager to aid in a progressive cause, to lend support because of that hallowed prestige to projects launched and sponsored by reactionary organizations for very reactionary purposes.

At the conclusion of the N. W. P. convention, the delegates went from Seneca Falls to the resting place of Susan B. Anthony, at Rochester. There the delegates were entertained at luncheon by the Rochester Chambers of Commerce (a liber "loving" organization), while the Mayor of Rochester headed the procession to the grave. Would such a reception be tendered a working women's convention seeking to realize some of the rights of life—such as an increase in pay and a six-hour day?

The class character of the so-called "equal rights" campaign must not be lost sight of by workers. This movement is sponsored in the interests of the masters—to the detriment of the producing class. The proposed equal rights amendment, while favoring middle class and professional women, strikes at working women, and thru them working men. A blanket amendment for equal rights makes an enticing appeal to working people who succumb to the word equality, while the slogan—"equality before the law" helps create respect for that law, that is recognition and acceptance of existing law. Any wonder that with little effort the National Woman's Party recently succeeded in raising a $300,000.00 campaign fund for their equal rights propaganda? It would be interesting to know to what extent contributors to this fund are employers of female labor, who are materially interested in the extension of the female work-day and female night-work. One of the tenets of this equal rights bill is that the restriction of the hours for female labor is a curtailment of the working women's independence, in that the working woman is discriminated against in the pursuit of a job, and is deprived of free competition with male workers for that job! Employers give preference to male workers on whose labor time there are no limitations. Protective legislation for women must be revoked in order to preserve working women's independence.

The Woman's Movement from its inception has been a middle class movement. The pioneers of that movement were aggressive women, determined to create a wider field of endeavor for middle class women. Women of those times were shut out from all but a few ill-paid occupations. History does not record a fight for the improvement of those ill-paid occupations by the Woman's Movement.

The purpose here is not to underestimate the contributions of the early Woman's Movement but rather to give that movement its true historic prospective.

The Woman's Declaration of Independence, adopted in 1848, while making a moral and spiritual appeal, none the less, is very materially concerned with property relations and higher positions for women, materially of middle-class. The early Woman's Movement may well be compared historically with the movement of the political rights of the rising bourgeoisie. With this difference, that in the woman's movement its class character is rather concealed. The movement, publically avows its non-political affiliations yet in reality, it is part and parcel of the dominant political parties, aided and supported by the ruling class.

Any support given the woman's movement by workers today, not only strengthens the organized forces of the master class, but it means the proportional weakening in the ranks of organized labor. The "equality rights" proposed amendment, propped up with phrases of independence and garnished with historic prestige, in its unembellished form is but a covert attempt to nullify existing protective legislation for women, and for the prevention of future protective legislation. Working women of the U. S. are practically unorganized. This lack of organization on the part of working women, makes them a readier means for exploitation and a further means in the beating down of the wages of male workers.

And so this convention, launching its campaign "in order to give recognition in the fundamental law of the country to the principles of equal rights of men and women, and thereby furthering the coming of true justice and democracy," declares not the clear thinking workers who are thru with the voicing of promised phrases about bourgeois justice and democracy.

Get $90,783 for Defense in Michigan

(By THE FEDERATED PRESS)

CHICAGO.—The Labor Defense Council, organized for the defense of labor prisoners in the Michigan red raid of August 21, 1922, publishes its financial statement for the period since its organization on Jan. 20, 1923, almost nine months.

The total receipts were $90,783.78. The administrative expenses were $28,905. The amount available for the defense of the 70 victims of which $61,868.04 was spent, principally for attorney's fees and expenses, and other legal expenses. There was a balance June 30, 1923, of $3,917.21.

The next legal battle opens in September when the conviction of C. R. Ruthenberg will be reviewed by the Michigan supreme court. A jury in Berrien county found him guilty of assembling with an alleged illegal organization, the Communist Party, since dissolved. The organization was held illegal under the Michigan criminal syndicalism law, for the repeal of which organized labor in the state has fought in vain for three years.

If the supreme court orders a new trial it is possible that further prosecution will be dropped and the 70 or more defendants awaiting trial will be freed from jeopardy. If the conviction is upheld William Z. Foster, first to be tried and freed by disagreement of the jury, may be retried in addition to the prosecution of the rest.

The Labor Defense Council has the endorsement of numerous union and central bodies.

Letters to the Editor

Make More Communists

Editor, The Worker.—With all due respect for the opinions of Comrades Ruthenberg and Olgin, I feel that both these Comrades are in error regarding the membership problem in the Workers Party. The real reason the Party membership is small is because Communists are few in America. The biggest problem of all now before the Workers Party is "How best to make Communists?" The Party membership will be in proportion to the solution of this question.

Personally I am convinced that the only way to make Communists wholesale is by the systematic distribution of literature. Give me 50 men (or women) in a city of 5,000 homes who are Communists enough to each contribute one dollar per month into a fund to provide free literature and will pledge themselves each month to distribute one literature free from house to house before 8 o'clock every Sunday morning and I will guarantee you will have no membership problem in that locality.

But to be effective literature must be distributed Sunday forenoons, the earlier the better. Otherwise it rarely ever reaches the man of the house, or if it does he hasn't time to bother with it.

Now that the election machinery of the Party will be transferred to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, I would like to see the Workers Party converted into a big machine just for making Communists. To this end, I would re-organize the whole Party into a propaganda society for the publication and distribution of free Communist literature. All members would pay $12 per year and be required to distribute 100 pieces of literature per week. I am thoroly convinced that this is the only kind of an Communist Party America needs at the present time.

Yours for the kind of Action that Counts.—Ray A. Youngblood, Secretary, South Bend, Ind., English Branch, Workers Party.

Don't Throw This Paper Away! Pass It on to Your Neighbor

Jay Lovestone's "Government—Strikebreaker"

Reviewed by MORRIS J. OLGIN

[illegible] It is certainly a timely book. [illegible] the struggle of the American labor movement [illegible] the struggle of the workers [illegible] the state in their new struggle for freedom.

[illegible] Too long have the officials in the service of the capitalist class [illegible] class. [illegible] The object of this essay is to present to the American workers the story of their recent heroic battle against employing class domination in such a manner as to aid them in their new struggles for freedom."

The story which unfolds on the pages of this book makes a profound impression. Were we to read a similar account of workers' struggles in a foreign land, we would be moved to exclaim, "What a sweep! what a vastness! What a colorful life!" Since, however, we have gone ourselves thru the vicissitudes of these struggles day by day and since the significant and historically consequential events intermingled in our experience with the trivialities of daily life, we have lost perspective. It is to Lovestone's credit to have reproduced the social drama of the last years in all its hugeness and raw strength. The three strikes of the year 1922, that of the textile workers, the miners, and the railroad shop workers, occupy most of his attention and fill nearly two thirds of the book. In treating each strike, the author not only reviewed the situation of the workers, their demands, their behavior before and during the strike, the role of their unions and the calamitous consequences of the latters' shortcomings, but also subjected to a careful scrutiny all the multifarious forces of organized society which unite to help the employers in the dire stress: the local police, the hired gunmen, the secret informants, the militia, the courts, the mayors and governors, the military commanders, the higher judiciary, the governmental commissions, the Department of Justice, the Cabinet meeting, the U. S. Supreme Court, the President of the United States, not to speak of the employers and employers' associations, of the press and the so-called representatives of the people in the various legislatures. The clashes are so striking, the impetus is full of such mad determination that only the blind or the maniac can fail to realize that this is a fight of two worlds, a monstrous battle between two sets of historic forces—the workingmen with a few petty-bourgeois sympathizers who are of no great consequence on one side, the state in all its ramifications and the economic forces of capitalist society on the other. The struggle is brutal, obscene, unscrupulous, stripped of embellishments, bloody and rude as is the fist-fight of two savages in a primeval wilderness either you kill me or I kill you—or suck.

Lovestone reproduces the struggle not with the temper of a staid historian who calmly relates, "So it was," but he brings us into the very cauldron of events, he makes us live once more all the stages of the great conflicts. At the same time he never loses a thing of his own name, but he puts before us the crude facts in all their palpitating freshness, in all their unpolished boldness, in the same order as they emerged on the historic scene. He seeks for documentation. He substantiates every detail by eye-witness statements. Those witnesses, in the broader sense of the word, are seldom, almost never, called from among the strikers who may be inclined to exaggeration in defending their cause. Lovestone takes the testimony of other elements who were honest enough or interested enough to tell the truth. He uses in enormous quantities commissions' reports, proceedings of governmental bodies, publications of various institutions, research work of economists, confidential editions of employers' associations, texts of official pronunciamentoes, reports of officers, court briefs, speeches of senators, congressmen and secretaries, official statistical data, texts of laws and regulations, orders of military commanders, and such press comment as characterizes the attitude of the press towards the workers. As you pass from one document to another, from one quotation to a series of others, from one text to more interesting and sometimes quite piquant texts, you feel the throbbing of life, you are aware of being on the front line of an enormous battle field.

It is hard to resist the temptation of quoting some of the documents so generously piled up in Lovestone's book. Can one pass in silence over such a speech as that of Mr. Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, delivered on April 12, 1923, before the New Orleans Association of Commerce? "I have got 25,000 men working for me in a little foundry back east," said Mr. Vauclain, "I'd like to see any union labor leader start something among them. When the great railroad strike was starting, a bunch of labor leaders came around to the plant: In twenty minutes I had every damn one of them in jail. I was told I had no right to put them in jail. 'But they are in jail, aren't they? Now go on and get them out.' You've got to act quick when you are facing a crisis" (p. 383). One is tempted to quote dozens of such frank declarations of our real rulers to be found in Lovestone's book. One is tempted to quote the figures of the mine-magnates' "earnings" in comparison with the findings of such a body as the New York Municipal Investigating Committee, which after looking into the situation of the miners came to the conclusion that "no Egyptian Pharaoh, rearing for his glory a towering monument, ever drove more harder than these miners were driven. No Czar was ever more autocratic than these predatory interests of big business." One would be quite justified to quote a cluster of most illuminating instances which characterize our courts and among which the classic remark of Judge Baker, sitting in Federal Court at Indianapolis, to the effect that "if the jails of Indiana are not large enough to hold the men who violate these injunctions then we shall build stockades," is truly classic. Material of this kind offers itself on nearly every page of Lovestone's book. But the every-bit of it is fascinating and profoundly characteristic, mere quotation of some of the evidence will not have done the book. It is the accumulation of facts and documents, it is the cruel, convincing power which rests in the volume of material which creates the overpowering effect.

The book ought to be read. It is written in a fluent, vivid, at times almost too vivid, energetic style. It is read with unflagging interest and never tires, because it seldom theorizes and quickly passes from one phase of the story to another, revealing each time a new side of American social structure.

This many-sidedness is at times driven almost too far. One cannot escape the impression that the author was eager to put into his work everything he could get hold of in connection with one or the other problem. In his propagandist's zeal he rushes for ever more material, ever more witnesses, ever more documentary evidence. The overemphasis put on documentary evidence was not always beneficial for the work. It also prevented the author from sufficiently speaking in his own name. The legitimate desire on the part of the reader to meet the author not only as collector of material but also as a thinker, has not been fully satisfied. Comparatively little of not even that that once the confidence of the reader has been established thru a serious documentary treatment of the subject, he would be glad to be talked to by the author himself, quite aside from the material presented. An impression follows one thruout the whole book: As if the author quite afraid during the growth of his formidable array of material, speaking to an imaginary skeptic, "How do you like it? Not convinced yet? Here's some more, here's a new delicious morsel, a stunning document, a most instructive statement, a declaration, a decision, here's some more, and some more!" No room was left for a deeper analysis, for a theoretical basis of the great tragedy presented in the book.

It is also Lovestone's predilection for many-sidedness that induced him to approach a subject which, if adequately treated, would occupy a large portion of the book, and which it was better to leave alone if it could not be given full attention. We refer to the chapter—"American Democracy —a Capitalist Dictatorship." The chapter occupies 22 pages. It is self-evident that no analysis of the so-called American Democracy could be given in such limited space. The main question, "How is it" possible that, universal suffrage notwithstanding, the American political life is the swamp that it is?" has not even been touched upon.

The first concluding chapter "Meaning of the Struggle and Outlook" should have been broader in scope. The international outlook is missing both as regards the connection of American capitalism with the world market and as regards the connection of the American working class with the workers of the world. We know that the author wished to be American, wholly American, as he declared in the preface, yet he should not have omitted this phase of the problems.

All these shortcomings, however, are of no great import. The book as a whole may serve for the worker as an excellent weapon and this is the main thing. It is a realistic book. It is an American book. It is a book astir with the problems of today. And it is a communist book in the best sense of the word. There have been no such books in the working class literature of this country. Lovestone ought to be commended for writing and the Workers Party for publishing "The Government—Strikebreaker." No English reading worker should fail to acquire the book and study it thoroughly.

By Ex-Senator R. F. PETTIGREW

The book of which Lenin said: "It is the greatest book on American political life."

Senator Pettigrew has spent 50 years in public life. He knows Washington and American political life from A to Z.

The United States has already passed from the Republic to the Empire.

We have a Government of the thieves, for the thieves, by the thieves.

Capital is stolen labor, and its only function is to steal more labor.

Lenin, himself the author of a treatise on "Imperialism," appreciates "Imperial Washington" and knows its value as an authoritative work on American political life. Certainly American workers ought to know what are the tendencies of the government of the U. S. A. This book will prove an eyeopener to every reader.

"Russia Can Build Itself Up"

Sentiment demanding United States' recognition of Soviet Russia is growing. Recognition and opening of trade relations will be urged strenuously during the approaching session of congress by a host of congressmen.

This does not mean that the old party politicians are more kindly disposed toward the Workers' and Peasants' Government. It is rather another admission that Soviet Rule in Russia is here to stay, and more, to use the words of Colonel William N. Haskell, of the American Relief Administration, "Russia can build itself up." It is confessed that the job of trying to knock out this Soviet giant has been a futile one.

Haskell will be back in the United States in a few days. He will tell of Russia's great need of farm implements of all kinds. He will recite the needs of Russian industry. He will show that Russia can be made a great market for American goods. And that means profits, and money talks, and the dollar-loving United States of America warms even toward Russian Soviet Rule. Haskell's clinching argument, of course, is that Russia has a bumper crop this year, the surplus of which can be transformed into credits. Russia can pay.

Of course, the old party statesmen who go to Russia, like to talk much of the disappearance of Communist aims and Bolshevist taint from Soviet Rule. All of which is utter nonsense. Soviet Russia is more firmly rooted today than ever before in her struggle for the world social revolution.

There is a timid Congressman, Carroll L. Beedy, of Maine, who eyes jealously the British trade agreement with Russia. That is as far as his New England caution will permit him to urge the United States to go at this time.

"Never-say-die" Sam Gompers, still head of the American Federation of Labor, joins with his anti-labor pal, Alvin L. Owsley, National Commander of the blood-lusting American Legion, in an anvil chorus against all forms of recognition. But the racket they raise grows ever weaker. "Russia can build itself," but American profiteers are getting more and more eager, to help in the rebuilding for the money there may be in it.

"The Robots" in Real Life

One of Chicago's biggest laundry profiteers must have seen the Kapek play, "Rossum's Universal Robots," depicting an era of capitalist development in which workers are made to order without useless human qualities. In an effort to approximate this "open shop" Utopia as nearly as possible, the Chicago laundry proprietor inserted an advertisement in the kept press for "deaf and dumb women" as employes in his establishment. This boss made it plain that he was not conducting a charitable institution, but that he wanted "workers." He had learned thru experience, he claimed, that deaf and dumb women work twice as hard as women workers who talk. You see they can't even talk their own motion language, because that would result in hands getting caught in mangels or irons.

Other laundry owners will no doubt be moved by this idea. They may go even further and hunt for workers who need no sleep, who can go without eating, in fact, who can work the Gary 24-hour shift without complaint.

But there is always another side to this story. The Kapek "Robots" learned the secret of organization. They dethroned their bosses. They took over all power.

In spite of their handicap, the deaf and dumb women laundry workers will become aware of their value to the laundry bosses. They will organize and demand those rights they feel ought to be theirs. And in the hour of their triumph they will be "deaf and dumb" to the wails of their exploiters, against increased wages, a shorter workday and better conditions, in fact, they won't be able to hear a single protest of their bosses in the final struggle, when the exploiters are deprived forever of all power to rob and plunder.

Hearst in Mexico

It is to be expected that William Randolph Hearst will soon launch another propaganda campaign thru his yellow press, calling for United States intervention in Mexico. The rallying cry will be, "War on the Mexicans to save American civilization."

For these are gloomy days for "Willie" Hearst. The Mexican government threatens to seize 333,000 acres of his million-acre ranch south of the border, a gift handed him by the old tyrannical Porfirio Diaz regime. The Mexican workers and peasants feel this land belongs to them and they are evidently bent on taking it.

Hearst's ownership of this land has dictated the policies of his newspapers towards Mexico for the past decade, just as the ownership of oil wells has determined the policies of American oil interests. Mr. Hearst has been all the way to Mexico City to plead for his "sacred property rights." He must have made big promises. He thought he could buy the Mexicans with a campaign in his papers for United States recognition of the Mexican Republic. But there are those Mexicans who feel they are better off without United States recognition.

In our estimation the Mexicans are making only one mistake. Instead of taking the 333,000 acres, they ought to seize the whole million. That would show they were headed in the right direction.

The Rank and File of Labor

The Socialists themselves prepared the trap in which they were caught at the Albany gathering of the New York Conference for Progressive Political Action. This becomes clearer than ever as the Socialist leaders seek to alibi themselves out of the pitfall into which they fell so readily.

Morris Hillquit offers the startling explanation that, "The rank and file of the labor movement and its leadership are all of one piece." He wishes us to believe that in dealing with "The Brotherhood" officials at Albany, he was also dealing with the rank and file of the railroad workers.

In this Hillquit, however, is even more charitable toward the masses of the workers than many of his fellow-Socialists at Albany, who contended that the union officials are more radical and progressive than the union membership.

Both of these positions, of course, are based on arrant nonsense. We cite the one instance of the "Socialist"-controlled needle trades unions in New York City. If the officials are so progressive, or if they are part and parcel of the "rank and file," why is it that these "Socialist" officials are trying to outlaw an organization like the Trade Union Educational League, that is a rank and file expression of opposition to mouldy ideas championed by these same "Socialist" trade union officials?

Take "The Brotherhoods" with whom the "Socialists" met at Albany. There was a tremendous rank-and-file demand for the fullest co-operation in the strike of the railroad shopmen last year. This sentiment was fought and betrayed by the officials. The classic example was that of Grable of the Maintenance of Way-men, who was later discarded as so much garbage, by the trackmen at their Detroit convention. American labor is very familiar with the repeated treasons of the officialdom of the United Mine Workers' Union, in Kansas, the Pittsburgh district, in Fayette and Somerset Counties, Pennsylvania, in the Alberta and Nova Scotia coal fields, in Canada, to cite only a few of recent occurrences.

It is inconceivable that Hillquit is so naive as to believe his own words. His alibi has more holes in it than a sieve. All workers can see thru it. Hillquit has been chasing trade union officials ever since he first got into the Conference for Progressive Political Action. He and his party have lived in the rank and file to the Communists, both in the economic and the political struggle.

Hillquit has shown himself an adept at uttering pious words voicing his pious hopes about reactionary trade union officials. But his pious explanations, now that the Albany affair is over, will deceive no one. The city workers and farmers are demanding action on "The Labor Party Idea" and they are realizing more and more that they will only get it thru the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the expression of rank-and-file delegates recently gathered at Chicago.

Lewis Gets Kicked

The anthracite wage negotiations at Atlantic City have collapsed temporarily. The mine barons have refused to recognize the Miners' Union in the anthracite field, and they have announced their opposition to the "check off" system of collecting dues.

We do not know what President John L. Lewis expected from the coal profiteers at the New Jersey seaside resort. But no doubt his hopes were buoyed high, following the numerous attacks on the progressives within the Miners' Union. He had mobbed the Communist elements at the Scranton, Pa., Tri-District Anthracite Conference, and the Nova Scotia, Canada, District had been expelled, by orders issued by Lewis from his ocean view retreat. Surely the mine barons should have been grateful. But they were not.

Labor does not win concessions from the bosses by trying to be "good." The workers have only their own organized power to back up their demands. Attempts on the part of compromising labor officials to fawn on the exploiters only result in their getting kicked the harder. The coal barons will never be contented until they have smashed the miners' union. The coal miners should never rest until they have goten rid of the mine owners.

We are sure that if the anthracite miners' delegates at Scranton, Pa., in June, had repudiated Lewis in his attack on the "United Front" of the International Progressive Miners' Committee, the coal barons at Atlantic City would not be so hasty in turning down the demands for union recognition and the check-off. They would have realized that they had an aggressive militant miners' movement to fight and would have easily surrendered on these issues that have long ago been settled in other coal mining fields.

It is not too late for the coal miners of the anthracite fields to repair the damage that has been done. They must unite their forces for an aggressive fight, not only against the mine owners but against some of their own reactionary officials, who have shown themselves more eager to conduct so-called "red raids," within the union, against thinking radicals, than they are to carry on the struggle against the bosses.

Lewis has shown himself willing to build but one kind of united front, the united front with the bosses and their kept press against the thinking members of his own organization. There must be but one "UNITED FRONT" of the coal miners,—the "UNITED FRONT" of all the members of the union against the bosses and all their hirelings. If Lewis will not establish that "UNITED FRONT" against the mine owners at Atlantic City, and the indications are that he will not, then the mine workers must put some one in his place who will. That fact became very apparent when the mine owners began kicking Lewis about the sands of the seashore over the issues of union recognition and the "check-off."

John M. He will be just about as successful as his gang was in railroading the union miners of Illinois to the gallows at Herrin.

They Can't Agree

These chaps Brookhart, Frazier, Magnus Johnson and Shipstead can't even agree with LaFollette on the simple question of calling a special session of Congress. Then how are they going to get together on more vital issues affecting the farmers and city workers. They can't, because they don't know themselves where they are going. Only a real class Farmer-Labor Party, with a definite program, can map the road to be exploited in the city and on the land, must follow. This is the program of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Bakhmetieff Back Again

Boris A. Bakhmetieff, former Kerensky ambassador to the United States, and recognized by Washington long as a Soviet Rule came into power, has been under cover for some time. But he is now back in the limelight, in the newspapers. Boris hasn't changed any. He is still peddling the same old stuff about the end of the Soviets. And the bourgeois intellectuals attending the Round Table Conferences of the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., are listening to him with the greatest attention. There is an old saying, "Where there is life, there is hope," and as long as the U. S. A. will keep Bakhmetieff from starving to death without working, no doubt he will be handing out pleasant hope to the supporters of American capitalism.

THE ONE EXCEPTION.

What is a Revolutionary Party?

By MAX BEDACHT

The whole problem can be summed up in the two terms: splitting and united front. The following presents itself in the minds of many workers in the form of a one-sided thesis: If one wishes to have a single united front of the workers, one must not split; but a split has been made, and it is therefore hypocrisy to speak of a united front.

A revolution is no simple matter. The road to it, and thru it, is difficult and winding. It goes up and down; it goes this way and that way; it goes forward and backward.

And in following this road, the ordinary and seemingly healthy human understanding sees itself at times before a curve which seems to it just as illogical as it is, in reality, logical.

In the first place, the revolution is not an occurrence which begins with the immediate struggle for power by the revolutionary class, and ends with the capturing of power by the same class. Strictly speaking, the proletarian revolution began with the rise of the proletariat as a class, and will end with the disappearance of all classes. The proletarian revolution in its essence as a class struggle is nothing else than the daily struggles for existence of the working class and its single groups. The arms have become different; the forms of struggle have changed; but the revolutionary struggle for power is simply an unavoidable, higher degree of development of the daily struggle of the workers for existence. The workers' struggle for existence, which arises from the pressure of the necessities of life and is carried on unconsciously, develops gradually to the conscious struggle of the entire working-class. But even in the highest stage of this struggle, in the revolution itself, purposeful class-consciousness is not the motive of action with every single one taking part in the struggle. In none of its phases does the struggle of the working-class arise from comprehension; but on the contrary, comprehension arises from the struggles. The first vital movement of the working-class was the resistance and struggle of single workers, who reacted unconsciously to the pressure of unbearable forms of exploitation. In this struggle, the necessity for organization dawned upon the workers. In the struggle, the workers learned the application of the various fighting weapons, the abandonment of old weapons, and the employment of new ones. With the concentration of industrial machinery of production, bitter experience taught the laboring masses the inadequateness of group organization, this giving birth to the movement for industrial organization, the movement for amalgamation. The more capitalist forms of production and distribution of goods conflict with the vital interests and necessities of society, the greater will be the masses of workers drawn into the whirlpool of the struggle without their will, and regardless of their action. With the growth of the power of the working-class, the capitalist class will be constrained to have its government with its machinery of power intervene more and more openly and undisguisedly on its side of the struggle, altho they have attempted until now, and even now attempt, to maintain the fiction of the non-partisanship of the state. The working-class thus learns once more from the lessons of its struggles, the true role of the capitalist state; and the result of that is the striving after independent political action of the working-class. And in the political class-struggle, which results, the weapons and aims change accordingly as the bitter lessons which the masses accumulate in the struggle itself demonstrate the necessity for such changes. Thus the class-struggle runs thru all the stages, from the struggle for existence of single workers, to the struggle of the entire working-class for power. But even the most pressing necessity does not produce among the masses the struggle itself, but at best, the will to struggle, the readiness to struggle. In order to convert such a will, and such readiness into action, the initiative of a conscious leadership is necessary. The working-class is a Colossus with giant fists and with tremendous power. But this Colossus needs a head. The revolutionary portion of the working-class, by virtue of its higher understanding which can pierce every problem of the class struggle with the spectrum of Marxist analysis, represents the head. Upon it falls the task of giving expression to the unconscious longing of the masses, of turning the will of the masses for the struggle into action thru revolutionary initiative and realistic slogans, and of giving aim and direction to the struggles of the masses. Without the intelligent guidance of a head, all the revolutionary determination will at best explode in sporadic and disconnected rebellions, which will be stifled in the blood of the workers without difficulty by the capitalist enemies.

But Marxist understanding and revolutionary energy are not enough for the "head" of the working-class. A head, separated from the body, is useless even if it has absorbed the monopoly on the knowledge of all the centuries. The head, the leader of the working-class, is not a single prominent person or even a coterie of such spiritual giants, but it must be an organization, a party. This organization must permeate the Colossus, of the working-class like the nervous system. Thru the channels of this system the comprehension and will of the head must be transmitted to the body of the Colossus so that the legs march, and the fists strike whenever and wherever the head considers it necessary. Should the proletarian revolution wait until the revolutionary party of the proletariat comprises the entire working-class, or even only the largest part of it,it would indeed never, come. But certain it is, that it cannot come before the revolutionary party of the proletariat has penetrated and permeated the entire body of the working-class, before the "head" of the Colossus has ramified the nerve-cords of its organization in every corner of the organism of the working-class.

The Farmer Gets Only 37c. of Every Dollar City Worker Pays for Farm Products' The City Worker Gets Only 30c. out of Every Dollar Farmer Pays for Factory Goods

By CLARISSA S. WARE

In discussing the causes and results of the net migration of 1,200,000 from the farms to the cities during 1922, The Peoples Legislative Service," the fact finding organization of the Progressive Bloc in Congress, states:

"What are the roots of this trouble? They lie in the monstrous system of distribution which we have allowed to grow up in America, where the farmer gets only 37 cents of every dollar that the city worker pays for farm products, while the city worker gets only 30 cents out of every dollar that the farmer pays for factory goods.

"Thus the farmer and the city worker have one common enemy. That enemy is the monopolistic group which owns, controls and operates this monstrous system of DISTRIBUTION . . .

"This system must be destroyed and a new system of co-operative distribution for service and not for profits, must be built in its place."

However, the issue of solving the question,—of uprooting the roots—is not squarely met. A system of co-operative distribution which is more production, and the ownership of the means of production, will not even touch the roots. Furthermore we see today the Government functioning thru its laws, courts, police and military forces to protect the right of the capitalists to take 70 per cent, and even more, of the product of the labor of the men, women and children, workers in the fields and factories. The establishing of an effective system of co-operative distribution under such a government is more than difficult, it is impossible.

Only a system of collective ownership of the means of production and distribution, established by a government of the producers—the workers and farmers of America—can destroy the roots thru which the capitalists are sucking the life blood of the producers.

International Youth Day Will Be Celebrated Thruout World on Sunday, September 2nd

International Youth Day, Sept. 2, will be celebrated by the class conscious young workers of this country, as well as of the entire world, at the call of the Young Communist International. In the United States the demonstrations and meetings are being organized and directed by the Young Workers League of America.

During the recent World War, when workers of one country were killing and crippling their fellow workers in other countries; when so-called socialists were exhorting their followers in the working class to come to the aid of their respective Fatherlands which in every case were seeking to gain financial, industrial or colonial advantage, for their native capitalists; when only a meagre band of uncompromising revolutionaries maintained a real working class attitude toward the slaughter—the representatives of the revolutionary Youth, the International Union of Socialist Youth, later the Young Communist International, met at Berge in 1915 and issued the flaming challenge: "War against War!"

Thus, at its inception, International Youth Day had for its slogan a call for the end of the great, immediate problem of the workers. Ever since, International Youth Day has been celebrated, not as a holiday, but as a day for demonstration against the most pressing phase of capitalist reaction, either an attack on Soviet Russia or on the conditions of the workers; the Open Shop Campaign, or an impending war.

September second of this year marks the ninth anniversary of the celebration all over the world, and the second in the United States. The Young Workers League now seeks to draw the masses of the young workers in the United States into a movement against the wild reaction here, the danger of a new world holocaust in which workers' blood will once more be shed. The Mussolini-inspired Fascisti in America have already started their vicious campaign of assassinations and terrorism. The Knightgowned Knights of the Ku Klux Klan continue with more energy their cowardly attacks upon negroes and white men alike. The half-witted "General" Dawes is organizing his bombastic Minute Men for the purpose of "enforcing" and "protecting" the Constitution. The Boy Scouts are still drawing the sons of thousands of workers, with the view to inculcate a blind obedience to their leaders who are in turn the future tools of the master class. Numerous other reactionary excrescences are breaking out in this country. Together they form the basis for a White Guard, a nucleus for a Mussolini coup, which will inaugurate an unheard of reign of terror against the working class of this country.

The dangers of a new war grow continually greater. The struggle in the Ruhr is becoming sharper and clearer as the agreement for an international trust to exploit the mines and mills approaches. In the near East, in Mexico, in Rumania, and in various other countries, the capitalists of America, England and France are struggling madly for oil. Everywhere armaments are being increased. England and France are in ceaseless face to compete in the building of an air force. In the inevitably approaching war for oil or coal or iron or colonies, the capitalists of America, England and France will not stand aside. As in the last war, so will it be in the next. Pious phrases will be spoken by the hirelings of the masters. Again it will be a "War to end all wars," or to make the world safe for "Democracy."

The first to be drawn into the whirlpool of war are the young workers between the ages of 18 and 30. They are the first sacrifices on the altar of Profit. They are the first victims of the imperialists' insatiable thirst for gold and power. Torn away from their homes and families they go to meet an untimely death, or to come back as mental and physical wrecks.

Against Reaction and War, the Young Workers League, together with the young communists everywhere, issues the calls: Down with Reaction!

Unite against Capitalism and Militarism!

Meetings should be called in every center in the United States. Where there is no branch of the League, the Workers Party local should take the initiative in arranging a meeting for both young and adult workers.

The Young Workers League calls upon the class conscious workers, irrespective of age, to demonstrate on September second, to register their antagonism to capitalism and its offsprings, War, Exploitation and Misery.

Down with Reaction!!
Away with Imperialist War!!!
Long Live Communism!!!

A Strike-Breaker President

Our Answer: A COMMUNIST DAILY

F.F.L.P. Seeks United Front of All Labor

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The Federated Farmer-Labor Party, thru its national secretary here, has sent a proposal to the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, urging joint action for the 1924 campaign.

It is proposed that there shall be a joint "negotiation committee of five and five, in order to discuss ways and means for a nation-wide organization campaign among the workers and farmers, so that, at the presidential elections of 1924, a mighty Federated Farmer-Labor Party of the masses, of the factories and farms, can undertake the fight against our deadly enemy—against capitalism and the capitalist government."

The sending of this letter was authorized by the National Executive Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and is signed by the national secretary, Joseph Manley. It is as follows:

Chicago, Ill., July 31, 1923.

William H. Johnston, Chairman,
Conference for Progressive Action,
Machinist Building,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir and Brother: Representatives of six hundred thousand farmers and workers organized the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Our Party is new and has not as yet the majority of farmers and workers behind it, but it represents large masses of exploited farmers and workers, and it represents, moreover, the great idea of independent political action of the laboring masses. In the name of 600,000 exploited farmers and workers and in the name of the great idea of the Farmer-Labor Party we appeal to the Conference for Progressive Political Action to unite its action with our action.

We believe that the time has come for the exploited farmers and workers, regardless of difference in political opinion, to unite against the common enemy, against the capitalists and the capitalist government, instead of splitting their forces.

The time is not only ripe for the organization of a political party of farmers and workers, independent of the old capitalist parties, but the

Trotzky Declares Time Is Ripe for Workers to Issue Slogan "The United States of Europe"

Editor's Note:—In order to get a correct understanding of conditions in Europe to-day, it is imperative that America's workers become acquainted with the facts set forth by Leon Trotzky in the accompanying article. During the illness of Lenin, we find Trotzky the most prominent interpreter of the struggles of the Soviet Republic, and of the Communist International. His reasons for supporting the immediate issuance of the slogan, "The United States of Europe," in conjunction with the slogan, "A Government of Workers and Farmers," are as clear and concise as his arguments in behalf of the determined attitude he takes on all big problems. He writes:

By LEON TROTZKY

I think that in conjunction with the slogan "A Government of Workers and Peasants," the time is appropriate for issuing the slogan "The United States of Europe." Only by uniting these two slogans shall we get a definite, systematic and progressive response to the most urgent problems of European development. The last imperialist war was essentially a European war. The accidental participation of America and Japan did not alter its character. Having secured what she required, America withdrew her hand from the flames and returned home.

To the toiling masses of Europe it is becoming ever clearer that the only way to decide is incapable of solving the basic problems of European restoration. The slogan "A Workers' and Peasants' Government" is designed to meet the attempts of the workers to find an issue by their own efforts.

It will now become necessary to indicate this issue more concretely, namely, to assert that only in the closest economic co-operation of the

WITHOUT IT, YOU CANNOT FIGHT!

Great Daily Newspapers Are the Artillery of the Modern Labor Struggle. We Must Have a Great National Daily for the American Working Class.

FOR AN ENGLISH DAILY!

To All Members of the Workers Party and Sympathizers:

Comrades:—The Workers Party calls upon you to undertake the founding of a great national daily newspaper in the English language.

The time for this step is not only opportune. It is a time which makes a great daily newspaper of the working class an absolute necessity. Great historical changes are occurring in the United States. Struggles unequalled in this country lie in the immediate future. Dangers never before faced by the American workers, are coming upon the Labor Movement. THE TIME HAS ARRIVED WHEN CAPITALISM NO LONGER TOLERATES EVEN A SEMBLANCE OF A FREE LABOR MOVEMENT, BUT ADVANCES TO DESTROY IT. Reaction has been intrenching itself during the past two years on a nationally unified scale to this purpose. The Administration of President Harding, up to the moment of its close, expressed for the first time politically a nation-wide, conscious plan for an industrial order in which the element of labor organization is to be eliminated by force. The accidental close of President Harding's term elevated to the head of government a puppet whose sole claim to public attention heretofore has been in connection with strikebreaking. Reactionaries in the presidency have been a commonplace; never before has the country had a President who was a strikebreaker by profession.

There is every reason to expect in the immediate future more intense and widespread labor struggles than ever before. These struggles will inevitably concern themselves very largely with WINNING THE MINDS AND THE LOYALTY of the toiling masses for one side or the other. He who has a monopoly of the news can go a long way toward controlling the opinions as well as the understanding of the working masses.

It is inconceivable that the militant workers of this country should enter this period without having at their command at least ONE GREAT DAILY NEWSPAPER to act as their informant, guide and means of co-ordinating plans of action.

Every day the workers are having poured into their ears by the capitalist press ingenious, confusing and destructive lies, which paralyze their understanding and blast their hopes and ideals. Uncounted millions of printed pages of the kept press, loaded with propaganda against the cause of Labor, are thrust daily into the hands of the workers at a trivial price, the real expense of printing being borne by wealthy advertisers; while the honest and fearless section of the working class press reaches less than one worker in a hundred and that, usually, but once a week. Even the one formerly Socialist metropolitan daily, The New York Call, has sold itself out, has betrayed the Labor Party idea, and is now competing with the lowest capitalist gutter sheets in the profession of "anti-bolshevism."

Excellent publications of the militant working class exist. Weeklies, monthlies, and also daily papers—in FOREIGN LANGUAGES—exist and serve the workers. But none of these suffice to the present situation. Only a great national newspaper reaching the workers EVERY DAY can enlighten and co-ordinate their efforts for the struggles that lie before us.

THE PRESENT TIME CANNOT BE MISSED. THE YEAR 1924 IS A TURNING POINT BEYOND WHICH WE CANNOT PROCEED WITHOUT A GREAT NATIONAL DAILY ORGAN.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party calls upon all members of the Party, and upon all sympathetic workers, immediately to mobilize their utmost strength and TO BEGIN A DRIVE TO RAISE $100,000 WITH WHICH TO FOUND THE GREAT DAILY NEWSPAPER.

As the 7th day of November is the Anniversary of the establishment of the First Workers' and Peasants' Government of the world. It has been decided that the 7TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1923, WILL BE THE DAY FOR STARTING THE COMMUNIST DAILY, which will have for its purpose to work for the founding of the Workers' and Farmers' Government of America.

All units of the Workers Party are instructed to take up the following as their most urgent order of business:

1. To obtain from organizations and individuals generous donations to the $100,000 fund.
2. To sell to organizations and individuals preferred stock in the owning corporation of the daily newspaper.
3. Every unit of the Workers Party must form a COMMITTEE "for the Daily."

Every city organization must form a "City Campaign Committee for The Daily." Every City Committee shall chose a campaign manager.

The most important Communist duty in the present situation is to form a great English Daily for the Party.

The English Daily will be the most courageous advocate of the CAUSE OF THE WORKERS.

WITHOUT AN ENGLISH DAILY, THE PARTY CANNOT GROW.

The English Daily will be the most powerful UNIFYING FORCE for the Foreign Language Federations of the Party.

The English Daily will give a new impetus to the AMALGAMATION Movement.

The English Daily will be the spiritual center of the Labor Party Movement.

The English Daily will carry the slogan of the WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT to the broadest masses of workers and exploited farmers.

The English Daily will be the greatest propagandist of the Communist idea in this country.

Comrades! Workers! Sympathizers! Help to create a great national English Daily for the working class.

Three Urgent Tasks of Every Party Member

1. Every Party unit shall form immediately a campaign committee for "The Daily."

Shoe Workers Planning for New Struggle

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BROCKTON, Mass.—After eleven weeks of struggle against tremendous odds, the shoe strikers had to acknowledge defeat, return to work (those who could find jobs), and become involuntary members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

When the strike was declared off, those who during the strike had left to seek employment in other cities began to come back. There are jobs for most of them, perhaps for all. But the daring fighters during the scrap—they are the ones who will be discriminated against.

All who ceased work around May 15th, must pay $4.25 reinstatement fee. For the vast majority, the fine will be $10 for striking. For the more active, the fines will be prohibitive, which is the business-like way to get rid of them. Some of the more active ones have already secured work in other shoe centers.

Lessons of the Strike

No funds. And no well rounded idea of what they were up against. This is what licked the strikers. The

The political machinery of the Republican Party made Calvin Coolidge vice-president and death has elevated him to the presidency of the United States.

The presidency of Calvin Coolidge denotes a sharpening of the class struggle. Harding was mediocrity covered with a smile. Coolidge is mediocrity armed with a fist.

Who is Calvin Coolidge?

His best friends, the greatest capitalist newspapers, which wish to recommend him to the people of the United States, can single out only one real fact in his life.

He is the man who broke the strike of policemen in Boston. Characteristically, the capitalist press, both Republican and Democratic, are very well satisfied with him—for the very reason, of course, that the only heroic gesture of his life is his strikebreaking in Massachusetts.

His best friends say that he has always been a very retiring man during his entire political career—but HE broke the strike in 1919.

Calvin Coolidge has always been silent. His friends write that it is the silence of wisdom. We believe that he is silent simply because he has nothing to say. But his friends, Democrats and Republicans alike, say that he is not a man of words, but a man of deeds.

He is the man who suppressed the freedom of organization. HE broke the strike in Boston with force; he introduced the offensive of capital in 1919.

Calvin Coolidge was an unknown man in the United States before 1919. He has never had a new idea, never even an old one. He has never written a readable article. He has never organized a movement, except a local party machine. He has never supported or put thru a reform. But his friends praise him—he destroyed a trade union and he broke a strike. For this reason he became a vice-president of the United States. Napoleon Bonaparte had his Eighteenth Brumaire when he dispersed the people of Paris with grape-shot. The people of France were thankful to him and made the unknown general First Consul and emperor. Calvin Coolidge had the opportunity of his lifetime with the police strike of Boston. He brought armed force against the strikers and the thankful people of the United States elevated him, the unknown Governor, to the vice-presidency. Calvin Coolidge as governor of Massachusetts accomplished nothing new or significant. As vice-president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge has accomplished nothing new or significant. But his friends say, and recommend him thereby to the workers of the United States, that he accomplished an historical act in destroying a trade union and in breaking a strike by force.

The working class of America should at last recognize the truth! We have a president today whose only qualification for office is that he is a professional strikebreaker. Jay Lovestone, in his book, has baptized the Harding administration with warm and bitter sarcasm as the "GOVERNMENT—STRIKE-BREAKER." He has shown in his book that the government of the United States—administration as well as Congress and the courts, compose a single, solid machine to oppress the working class. But at the head of this strikebreaking machine stood Harding—a man with a smile. An enemy of the workers, but conciliating. A man of the capitalists, but at the same time a man of Sunday School phrases about equality and love. NOW AT LAST THE GOVERNMENT-STRIKE-BREAKER GETS ITS FITTING HEAD—A STRIKEBREAKING PRESIDENT.

Calvin Coolidge is too insignificant as a person to be able to decide the policy of parties and classes in this country. Even geniuses can influence only the tempo of events, and Calvin Coolidge is at best, mediocrity personified. And yet, his elevation to the presidency does mean a sharpening of the political situation.

The Republican Party has for a long time no longer been a solidified party; Harding's, diplomacy could hold together the conservatives and so-called progressives and could even influence the so-called radicals within the Republican Party. Coolidge does not only lack the smile, but he has not even the authority and prestige of Harding. He is an outspoken president of the reactionaries.

Coolidge as president means an administration against the exploited farmers.

Coolidge as president means armed interference of the state power against every strike of the railroad workers or coal miners.

Coolidge as president means the oppression of every worker or farmer organization which is "red."

Coolidge as president means the advocacy of joining the World Court of the League of Nations of the international bankers.

The labor movement and the movement of the exploited farmers is in great danger. THE WORKERS AND FARMERS MUST DEFEND THEMSELVES AGAINST COOLIDGE. They must do the same that Minnesota did. The bankrupt farmers of Minnesota ridiculed Coolidge last September and did not allow him to finish his speech when he tried to convince the farmers that they were prosperous. And in 1923, the workers and farmers of Minnesota voted for the Farmer-Labor Party, kicking out the political friend of Coolidge, Governor Preus.

The presidency of Coolidge is a danger for the workers and farmers; but the misleaders of the working class wish to hide that from the working class. GOMPERS even assures Mr. Coolidge of the support of the labor movement. The New York City Convention of the SOCIALIST PARTY passes a resolution which proffers condolence for the death of Harding, and at the same time the Committee of Eleven leaders eliminates the second part of the resolution, which was directed against Coolidge. Gompers is a DEMOCRAT; but he promises his support for the REPUBLICAN Coolidge.

Hillquit, Gerber, Feigenbaum and the others are SOCIALISTS; but they deceive their own Party Convention and kill with silence the resolution which attacks the REPUBLICAN Coolidge.

It is the duty of COMMUNISTS to enlighten the workers everywhere as regards the significance of the presidency of Coolidge, and the new dangers with which the strike-breaker president menaces the labor movement.

New bitter struggles are impending. The working class must provide itself with new weapons. We must strengthen the trade unions thru amalgamation. We must strengthen the organized working class thru organizing the unorganized. We must make it clear to the exploited farmers that their only remedy is that the land shall belong to those who use it. We must lead the working class and exploited farmers into the political struggle thru a mighty Federated Farmer-Labor Party. We can do all that only if the Communist Party, the Workers Party, finds the way to the oppressed workers and farmers. The most important instrument for enlightening the masses and leading them into the defensive struggle is a daily paper. THE UNITED STATES HAS ACQUIRED A STRIKE-BREAKING PRESIDENT. OUR ANSWER SHALL BE A COMMUNIST DAILY.

Gompers' Press Agents Get Anti-Progressive Dope From the Bosses' Radical Baiters

New evidence has come to light by the Civil Liberties Union, showing that the press agents of the American Federation of Labor get reactionary copies within the labor movement from anti-labor sources.

The specific charge is made that Chester M. Wright, director of the Bureau of Information and Publicity Service, used the notorious New York Lusk Radical-Baiting-Committee Report for information in his recent attack on "The Union" and its officers. The charge is made by Prof. Harry F. Ward, chairman of "The Union," in a letter to Wright, who was formerly editor of "The New York Call."

It has long been known that the bread-and-butter agents in the labor movement hired by Gompers to black-jack opposition, draw their salaries from the per capita paid by the affiliated unions, depending for their annuities on the dues of the rank and file. But the open attacks on Soviet Russia are directly inspired by the Civil Federation of trade union wreckers.

Professor Ward's letter to the head of the A. F. of L. publicity bureau is the latest development in a sharp exchange of notes between the directors of that bureau and the Civil Liberties Union which followed the statement made in the A. F. of L. Information and Publicity Service for April that the Union is "pro-Soviet in character."

Wright has persistently dodged the Civil Liberties Union's challenge that he "cite a single statement or publication which might properly be called pro-Soviet." In his reply to the Union's challenge he has sidestepped the issue by calling names, declaring that Prof. Ward's point of view is "pro-Bolshevik, pro-I.W.W. and pro-general-destructiveness in character."

Scoring such charges as baseless and "unintelligible," Prof. Ward states in his letter to Wright:

"If you had informed your constituents that the basis of your attack was the infamous Lusk Committee Report, its value and worth as a basis for judgment by organized labor would have been appreciated. In New York State at least, labor unions know the meaning of the activities of the man whom you quote as your source of authority concerning the American Civil Liberties Union and its officers."

Referring to Archibald Stevenson, the author of the Lusk Committee Report, Prof. Ward declares:

"The most vicious falsehood asserted by this man in the report is a quotation from the report of an alleged investigator, circulated anonymously by Mr. Ralph Easley, Secretary of the National Civic Federation, among some of the most powerful enemies of organized labor in this country, and that this appears in the report as a quotation from the Civic Federation Review. But the secretary of that organization, thus faced with the responsibility of the matter, replies that the statement was never printed in his paper."

Pointing out that "this preceding makes manifest some sort of collusion in the production and use of false reports between the compiler of the Lusk Committee Report and the secretary of the National Civic Federation," Prof. Ward brings Wright's attention to the fact that Mr. Gompers is an officer of the Civic Federation.

"You argue that the Civil Liberties Union 'represents' all local organizations which have been affiliated with it solely for the protection of free speech. Let us see how this argument works in your own case. Mr. Gompers is an officer, both of the American Federation of Labor and the National Civic Federation. Now it so happens that at the critical moment in the late steel strike when some friends of mine were endeavoring to persuade Judge Gary to grant the fundamental demands of organized labor in the situation, they discovered that the Secretary of the National Civic Federation was furnishing Mr. Gary with reports concerning me and others, misrepresenting our positions and attitudes for the purpose of prejudicing him just as you have misrepresented them to organized labor. Your argument applied to this situation would mean that Mr. Gompers was 'represented' by this action of the Secretary of the National Civic Federation and thus was opposing the interests of organized labor."

Prof. Ward not only charges that Wright was "trying to make a case rather than getting at the truth," but questions the accuracy and validity of the A. F. of L.'s Information and Publicity Service under its present directorship. Commenting further on Wright's use of the Lusk Report in his attack on the Civil Liberties Union, the chairman of the Union goes on to state:

"I must inform you that as soon as this report was issued I wrote to the chairman of the Lusk Committee pointing out to him that of the nine references to me, two of which were merely formal statements of my professional title, seven were inaccurate, several of them containing absolute misstatements of facts including an alleged quotation from me which is not to be found in the journal quoted. Some of its falsehoods you have repeated in your letter. I must point out to you that those who repeat these statements stand in the same position of legal responsibility now occupied by the compiler of that report in the event of any damage resulting to me therefrom."

This Negro Migration

The solution of the problem for the Negroes is not migration. The open shoppers and scab herders of the mines and steel mills are no more their welcomers than the field gang bosses and landlords of the South. The industrialists of the North are taking advantage of racial division to use one group of workers against another. The unions must open their ranks to the Negroes, furthermore, they must go out and organize the Negroes whether they be in the North or South; or they, and not the Negroes, will be responsible for the use of Negro labor as strike breakers and scabs. Where the Negroes have been organized they have proven an staunch union members. Organized labor can ill afford racial discriminations. United it will stand and go forward—divided it will go down to defeat.

An Educator Writes—

"The Government—Strikebreaker" is a smashing blow at American capitalism. You have assembled a vast array of facts in a masterly manner, and, as you truly say in your preface, you have put your conclusions at the mercy of the facts.

"We have long needed a virile literature in the American labor movement based on the realities of the class struggle in this country. Foster's History of the Steel Strike and "The Government—Strikebreaker" make a splendid beginning for this library. I shall use both of these books as texts in the course I am giving on The History of the American Labor Movement at The Seattle Labor College."

time demands with ever louder voice the formation of such an organization. They send only point to two or three new facts:

The first fact: the exploited farmers are bankrupt. They receive less for their products than these cost them to produce. The export possibilities for farm products to Europe have been wiped out. At the same time, the trust magnates keep up artificially the prices of all industrial products, because they have a monopoly on the instruments of production, on transportation and marketing. The prices of wheat have fallen below a dollar, but the price of bread for the consuming workers remains at the same level.

The second fact: the trade union movement is being menaced by a constantly growing danger. The government with all its force is supporting the open-shop movement secretly as well as openly. The infamous Daugherty injunction which was a slap in the face, not only of the railroad unions, but of the whole labor movement, has been made permanent by the willfulness of the courts. The right to strike no longer exists in the United States.

The third fact: the tremendous defeat of the Republican Party and the complete elimination of the Democratic Party in the Minnesota elections, show clearly to all who are not blind politically, that the machinery of the old capitalist parties is tottering. The old prejudice that a third party cannot win, has met in Minnesota with just as crushing a defeat, as have the party of Harding and the party of Wilson.

These three facts: the financial bankruptcy of the farmers, the robbing of the workers of the right to strike, and the victory of a third party, show clearly the necessity and possibility for the organization of a powerful Federated Farmer-Labor Party which would embrace all the workers and farmers. The hour of action has struck. We believe the situation has best been characterized by a dirt-farmer at the July 3rd Convention of our Party. The time is ripe, the time is over-ripe, the time is rotten-ripe."

The organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party at the Chicago Convention means the first great step in this direction. We have brought together for independent political action not less than 200,000 militant farmers and workers. For that reason we call upon the Conference for Progressive Political Action to unite with us in our efforts, for the creation of a Farmer-Labor Party which will embrace the whole working-class and the exploited farmer masses. The Conference for Progressive Political Action, in its first convention of February, 1922, made the decision that the time is ripe for independent political action, but not as yet ripe enough for creating an independent political organization. But the second convention of December 11, 1922, at Cleveland, instead of going one step forward, went one step backward. It did not organize the independent political party of farmers and workers, but decided to take part in the primaries of the old capitalist parties. It accepted a program which is a copy of the program of LaFollette and of the Committee of Forty-eight, that is, a program of small business men and well-to-do farmers, and not a program of exploited farmers and industrial workers.

The two million workers and one million farmers whose organizations are affiliated with your Conference, are dissatisfied with this eternal postponement and hesitation. They are just as much dissatisfied with eternal splits in the laboring masses. We are therefore convinced that we are expressing, not only the wishes of the masses behind the Conference for Progressive Political Action when we propose joint action for both big organizations. We propose that the National Executive Committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, as well as the National Executive Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party shall designate a negotiation committee of five and five, in order to discuss ways and means for a nation-wide organization campaign among the workers and farmers, so that, at the presidential elections of 1924, a mighty Federated Farmer-Labor Party of the masses of the factories and farms can undertake the fight against our deadly enemy—against capitalism and the capitalist government.

With best wishes, I am,

Yours fraternally,

Signed: Joseph Manley, Secretary,
Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Harding's Death Precipitates Decisive Political Struggles

reactionary ticket with an open declaration of war against all forces of Progressivism and near-Progressivism. Should, however, some dark horse appear on the political horizon and win a compromise nomination for the Presidency, then some wishywashy Progressive phrase-monger like Kenyon will be given the Vice-Presidential nomination in order to rally the LaFollette forces to the Republican banner.

What Are the Progressives Going to Do?

The strategy of the Progressives has been to pursue a policy of watchful waiting. La Follette's strategy has been to let the Reactionaries take the first step. But the election of Magnus Johnson has served as a steel rod to the followers of La Follette. Harding's death will undoubtedly embolden the insurgents and make them increase their demands on the Republican Party manyfold.

What the Democrats Are Up To

The Democrats do not see that they have gained any political advantage by the exit of Harding from the coming campaign. Many of them believed that Harding was easy picking. They felt that the Republican Party could not get a weaker opponent for them and yet that the Republican Party had to put him in the field. The strategy of the Democratic machine has been to put forward some fake Progressive Democrat as Presidential nominee, get a middle of the road program, and point out to the country how unfit to run the Government both the Republican Party and Progressive Republicans are. The last point they would prove by the confusion and donothing record of the Sixty-Eighth Congress which would be unable to get sufficient agreement to pass any important legislation at a time when there was great popular pressure for remedial measures.

With Harding out of the way the Democrats do not feel themselves confronted with as easy a task as before. Should an outright reactionary be nominated by the Republicans the likelihood of the Progressives following the Democratic Party are much more slim than before Harding's death. And if a Kenyon-compromise is reached by the Republicans the Democrats will surely be up against it in smacking the reactionary label all over the Republican Party. Their middle of the road platform will thus be as effective as it would have been had Harding remained to face their attacks. The Republican crimes of the past will not be so available for political target practice in the present.

Conclusion

The death of Harding has only precipitated the moments of decision in the great battles that are to be fought in the coming political struggles culminating in the 1924 campaign. The reactionaries as well as the progressives are now more than ever bent on going all the way down the line and fighting it out.

Finally, in the ascent of Coolidge to the Presidency there is a certain amount of historical justice. Coolidge is an open enemy of Labor. He has not hidden his hatred of the working masses even behind a political smile. He got where he is today on the basis of a strikebreaking record in Massachusetts. The Harding Administration has been the blackest in years as far as the Labor Movement is concerned. It is historically symbolic of the impending class conflicts that a strikebreaking Administration like Harding's should close with so notorious and open a strikebreaker as Coolidge at the helm of the Government.

The day was not entirely PLEASANT—
It was for its last disgusting.
They were as stupid animals,
As respectable bourgeoisie anywhere,
And I had grown used
To LIVING people.

And yet they had it seemed
A certain life,
Which was mostly kicking
At the Government.
They said: "Is is true
We have COMFORT,
But it cost me $70
To hire an automobile
For a single Sunday's pleasure,
And those children's homes
Get them for NOTHING;
We never know what TAXES
Will hit us,
Or how long our comfort
Will continue;
Everything
Is terribly UNCERTAIN."

And I thought: "Uncertainty,
The terror of the workers
In every land,
Is the terror of the Nepmen here."

And they said: "When these folks
Make LAWS
To limit our rights and power
It's no use paying a lawyer
To EVADE them,
For their judges go not
By the letter of the law
But by the law's intention;
They punish you as much
For sneaking ROUND it,
As for any other way
Of breaking it."

But a woman said sadly:
"The WORST
Is the way our CHILDREN leave us;
My daughter has joined
The COMMUNISTS;
It took her two years' probation;
They made it very hard
Suspecting her
Because she was the daughter
Of a BOURGEOIS,
But she stuck to it
And left us,
And has no use at all
For our whole way of living."

Said a man: "The best of them go.
My youngest son has joined them;
He will accept from me nothing.
He's right; I'm a useless old fellow,
Enslaved by food and comfort,
I shall die grumbling over taxes,
And the prisons these Bolsheviks charge me;
But it's something to know
That my children
Will be BUILDING
This great new country."

Facts Reveal Fascisti in U. S. Retreat

The [illegible] of a chapter in the history of reaction in the organization of fascista groups in the Italian colonies in America. The deep interest the Fascisti standard is being measured with discreet camouflage.

First, the Italian Ambassador to the United States, Prince Caetani, who took himself to Rome and addressed the grand council of the black shirt machine to abandon the project of making Fascisi out of the workmen in America. This has a sharply significance when one remembers that the Ambassador has aided the Fascista movement in America, and has been very close to Judge Gary, one of the chief "boosters" of American Fascism.

Second, the grand council has voted that its followers on the other side of the ocean rearrange their "ideals" so as to eliminate "political" friction; in other words, to limit themselves to patriotic activities.

Third, Premier Mussolini, in an interview given to David Lawrence, of the New York Evening World, enlarged on this attitude to explain this patriotism as activities against the "reds."

It is clear from all this that the Fascisti are finding it harder to capture the Italians in America than they had expected. The dyed-in-the-wool dagger and bomb brand, they find, is not acceptable. Public opinion must be reckoned with. The forces of progressive thought among the immigrants here are too strong to be intimidated.

While there was not a word admitting the power of labor protest in this country, those who watch the situation know only too well that the hasty camouflaging and rather undignified retreat is due essentially, perhaps entirely, to the efforts of the organized labor movement here. The work of the Anti-Fascist Alliance in exposing the past deeds and future plans of the black shirts, the fervor of those who rallied round the opposition explain the views of Prince Caetani and the recasting of the Fascisti program for America.

The danger now, obviously, is that the Fascisti may be taken at their word, and the defenses against their inroads let down. Ingenuous persons may really believe that the black shirts, altho there are many strong in Italy and Spain and Central Europe, will limit themselves to flag-waving and picnics in America.

The truth is that the money which is being invested by the backers of Fascism in America must produce results in the same way as it did in Italy—by weakening, and if possible destroying the American labor movement. Whatever the grand council may set down on paper, the Fascisti admit in their official organ, published in Boston, that they intend to substitute Fascista unions for existing organizations. And even when public opinion obliges them to retract from announced grave aims in print the aims themselves remain.

The spirit of Fascism must be driven from among us, not merely the phrases!

Reactionary Bureaucracy Wars on Trade Union Educational Leagues of Needle Workers

The old bureaucratic trade union machine has started a war against the rank and file of the Jewish unions. Together with the "Forward" they have decided to make a concerted attack upon the militants in order to entrench their reactionary bureaucratic machine.

They have entered upon a life and death struggle to destroy and wipe out of existence all the sections of the Trade Union Educational League. This is a challenge thrown in the face of these militant groups that have sprung into being in the interests of the Jewish Union Movement.

This is a fight against the groups that are the real expression of the rank and file of organized labor.

This fact was definitely established at a general conference of the Trade Union Educational League that recently took place in New York.

The conference considered the latest developments in the Jewish Trade Union movement and was confronted with the following situation:

The Present General Situation in the Unions

The situation generally, and especially in the needle trades is a very favorable one. In the ladies' garment industry a complete chaos prevails. Most of the work in the so-called unionized centres is to-day being executed in sweat shops. In the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has lost control even in those shops with which it has closed agreements. The workers work under the most unbearable conditions.

The organization is face to face with a series of pressing problems which call for immediate solution, and if no solution is forthcoming the union will find itself upon a surging volcano that will soon erupt and destroy it.

In the men's clothing industry the situation is no better. Tens of thousands of union members are walking the streets without work while the work of manufacturers who have agreements with the union is being made in scab contracting shops. Among the workers a keen competition prevails greatly to accentuate daily in the unionized shops. The introduction of a minimum wage scale is being hindered by the bosses with the assistance of the reactionary union politicians. The same is true in reference to the introduction of many improvements necessary for the betterment of conditions in the industry.

Practically the same situation confronts the workers in the other industries. The officialdom of the Furriers' Union continually thru the pages of the Forward make a lot of noise about the "great advantages" that they are gaining for the workers in the shops. But the furriers who know the truth know well enough that the noise of their officials is this respect is nothing but humbug. The fact is that the working conditions of the furriers is much worse than in the other industries.

The truth of the matter is [illegible] the entire needle trade [illegible] spite of the much heralded [illegible] very large number of [illegible] ers are unemployed [illegible] are those who work [illegible] conditions and receive [illegible] enough to live upon [illegible] the organized many [illegible] usually getting ridiculous wages. The problems [illegible] unions are of a very se

The Machine Fights the Workers Interests

In such a crisis the leaders [illegible] the unions surely should have made every possible effort to come in close contact with the active groups of the rank and file. At the present time it is urgently necessary to unite all the forces in an effort to remedy the chaotic situation in which the organizations find themselves.

Our unions, however, are still being led and ruled by the reactionary union bureaucracy. This union bureaucracy is unfitted to meet the present situation. Instead of getting in closer touch with the rank and file of their organizations these union bureaucrats have started a bitter war against the groups representing the rank and file. Instead of waging a campaign to wipe out the present intolerable conditions that confront the workers they have determined to wage a relentless war against the increased power of the Trade Union Educational League.

In the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union the bureaucratic machine is endeavoring to remove all the active league workers from the responsible offices in the union. Without any justifiable or constitutional motives the general officers have conducted a vile campaign against the Cloak Makers' Joint Board of Philadelphia. Thru all kinds of methods they have attempted to remove the joint board, for the only reason that it was composed of league members. The executive board of Dressmakers local 22 was put under charges because the majority of its members are connected with the league. In Chicago the Vice President of the International, Perlstein, has rejected nominated candidates for office for the sole reason that they were with the league. According to Perlstein's statement he only carried out the order of the president and the general executive board of the International. The President himself has in his official statements declared that they, that is the International machine, will under no circumstances permit that any part of the organization should be under the leadership of left officers.

In the Amalgamated also, steps have been taken against the Trade Union Educational League. The General Executive Board has officially made clear its desire in this respect to a committee of the League, presented to the committee a demand that the league be immediately disbanded.

Every one is well acquainted with the campaign that is being conducted against the League in the Furriers Union. There reigns a fascist band that suppresses the will of the rank and file with an iron hand. This fascist band has brazenly denied the right of any union member who is a league member sympathetic to the league to run for office.

In the Fancy Leather Goods Workers' Union, League members have been prevented from having nominations and being elected, thru slugging and other terroristic methods used in the recent elections that were held.

These conditions are the result of a systematic well planned campaign on the part of the union bureaucracy. This union bureaucracy have been driven to extreme measures on account of the pressure exerted upon them by the yellow Forward. They have determined to ruthlessly wipe out the militant groups of the rank and file.

Reasons Why They Fight Leagues

The formal excuse given for their attacks upon the leagues is that the League is a dual union. The truth, however, is that the bureaucratic leaders themselves know that this is a deliberate lie, because the leagues do not consist of dues paying members. The leagues are composed of those groups in the unions that have progressive opinions. The leagues have a clear and consistent program on all trade union questions. The program of the league expresses the militant class spirit of the rank and file. This is the main reason why

The old reactionary bureaucratic machine is against the league.

One of the main points in the league program is the organization of the unorganized. The greatest calamity for the unions in the needle trades is the fact that at present the majority of the workers in the industry are unorganized. This is the reason why the greatest amount of work is being done in various scab shops. As a result of this condition tens of thousands of workers and their families are on the verge of starvation.

The league maintains that the leadership over the union should be assumed by the rank and file. Just as long as this will not be accomplished the tens of thousands of unorganized workers will remain unorganized. The present bureaucratic union leaders will never carry out the organization of the unorganized. They are isolated from the rank and file and have nothing but contempt for the broad masses. They look upon the union as a business enterprise the purpose of which is to serve their personal interests and that of their union machine and not the interests of the organization's membership. The league maintains that in the unions the shop delegate system should be introduced. This will lead to the participation of the broad membership of the union in the activities of the organization. This will give an opportunity to the rank and file to take over the leadership.

The league definitely stands and works for amalgamation. The league maintains that all the unions in the needle trades should be united into one industrial organization. Only then will the workers thru their united power be able to counteract the power of the manufacturers. The same policy of Amalgamation the league strives to institute in all the other labor organizations.

The league further maintains that the workers of all the unions should thru their organizations be united in a big political party. For this reason the league is for the organization of a powerful labor party, a party that should fight for the interests of the workers on the political field.

The league maintains that the

Swedish and Swiss Crafts Amalgamate

(By the Federated Press.)

ZURICH, Switzerland. — The clothing workers of Switzerland have amalgamated with the leather workers and formed the "Bekleidungs- und Lederarbeiter - Verband" of Switzerland. Thus practically the whole clothing industry of the country is brought under one hat.

The new union includes tailors, seamstresses, cloth hat and cap makers, on the one hand, and shoemakers, furriers, glove makers, saddlers and tanners, on the other. The leather workers have brought 5,342 members into the union, the clothing workers 2,847 members.

In the opinion of E. Musil, national president, the amalgamation has meant concentration of power and a large saving of expense. The separate offices have been abandoned, one organ, the "Bekleidungs- und Lederarbeiter," has been established, above all, an effective strike fund is being built up.

Swedish Unions Amalgamate

STOCKHOLM. — The Swedish Federation of Labor now embraces 33 unions, with 3,999 locals and 300,221 members, of whom 274,520 are men and 27,501 women.

There has been a general trend toward amalgamation and concentration along industrial lines. Thus the hat makers and furriers amalgamated during 1922; likewise the bakers and confectioners, with the butchers, formed the Food Workers' Industrial Union.

U. S. Military Dictator Wood Thinks All's Quiet in Manilla

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

"All is quiet in Manilla" [illegible] cables Military Dictator Wood to the United States War Department. [illegible] "Quiet and peace prevail in the Philippines" [illegible] a report of the tyrannical rule of General Wood, [illegible] land, [illegible] in the interests of Manuel Roxas and the Filipino [illegible] Filipinos, who says:

"The (Wood) has sought to establish a government [illegible] that which has turned our country for the last ten generations."

It is significant that the New York Times, in reporting the speech by General Wood, left out the declaration [illegible] made, carefully omitted these words. The Times doesn't want the workers and farmers of the United States to know that the Filipinos find U. S. imperialism to be worse than Spain's bloody tyranny; that the American Wood is a greater oppressor than the Spaniard, Weyler. Therefore the Times omits the words: "...Thus the brutality of the growing American World Empire outstrips the savagery inflicted upon colonials by the British in India and Egypt, the French in Morocco, the Belgians in the Congo."

"Dictator" Wood

It is now nearly a quarter of a century that the various capitalist old party politicians, both Democrat and Republican, U. S. have pledged self-determination to the Filipinos, declaring that they will be allowed to govern themselves as soon as they show themselves "fit for self-government."

This fiction is now completely exposed as "Governor" Woods seeks to tighten his militaristic grip on behalf of American imperialism upon the colonial slaves of the United States in the Philippines. Again in the language of Roxas:

"He (Wood) has sought to establish a government, not of popular expression, but of suppression of the popular will.

"In matters pertaining to the Philippine National Bank, General Wood has done that which no head of any business organization would do; he has taken the side of the man most interested in killing our government banking institutions. That is William T. Nolting, president and general manager of a rival, competing bank.

"As to the development of our vast natural resources, the Governor has sought to destabilize our national economic organization, accepting advices from those American interests that want to come here to 'exploit our sources on a large scale.'"

The American record in the Philippines is only approached by the terror under the Stars and Stripes over the natives of Cuba, Porto Rico, Hayti and other islands.

It was even before the seizure of the Philippine Islands by Admiral George Dewey that President William McKinley, in a message to Congress (April 11, 1898) took the usual hypocritical, high-flown standard on the subject of forcible annexation, in the following words: "I speak not of forcible annexation, for that cannot be thought of. That, by our code of morals, would be criminal aggression."

When Admiral Dewey sailed his ships into Manila Bay, the Filipinos under Aguinaldo were already in possession of all the rest of the Island of Luzon. In the language of ex-U. S. Senator Pettigrew, "After (Aguinaldo) set up a government, a government suitable to those people, a government which protected life and property thruout the entire area of that country."

Aguinaldo also took from the Spanish oppressors, and the Southern Islands, the Island of Panay, of Cebu and Negroes, and organized governments there. American imperialism reaped the fruits of this Filipino revolution against Spain, when it sent Dewey into Manila Bay and crushed the Spanish remnants there, "without the loss of a single man."

The United States, thirefore, is in the Philippines as a conqueror, not as the liberator of the Filipinos from Spain. Again, in the words that Pettigrew uses in his "Imperial Washington," "We are there as armed banditti that would enter your premises in daytime, and we have no more right to be there than the bandit has the right to enter and despoil your home."

Yet it is the right that imperialism takes in order to find new fields of exploitation. The colonial coolies of Washington, D. C., in the Philippines find themselves in the same chains as the slaves of the imperialism that lives in London, Paris, Rome or Tokio. Their chains will not break and fall away until all imperialism has been conquered by Workers' Governments everywhere. A Workers' Government in the United States will bring the liberation of the oppressed, not only in the Philippines, but in all other lands where the Stars and Stripes have been raised as camouflage to aid the great international trusts in their plots to pillage the subject peoples of the earth.

"All is quiet in Manilla," cables the Military Dictator Wood, but the will to be free smoulders everywhere. Soon it will burst into flames, even among the people "liberated" by American imperialism.

Things As They Are

WORDS VERSUS DEEDS

The development of the Communist movement in America from theory to action is producing many fruitful results. Our Labor Party campaign, for example, although only in its infancy, has already created a profound impression thruout the labor movement. A few months of organized struggle on this point has caused more alarm to the labor bureaucrats than twenty years of vague "sentiment" for independents action. And the internal effects of this activity are also very great. Our party itself was never in such a healthy condition. The destructive factional disturbances which characterized our theoretical youth are not much in evidence during these busy days. And we are also learning, thru these external actions of the party, who are the communists of words and who are the communists of deed. We are beginning to understand very clearly what Marx meant when he said, 'One step of actual movement is worth a dozen programs."

In the early days of the movement, when it was all talk and theory, the biggest talkers and theoretical quibblers were considered the best communists. But many of them who shone so brilliantly in abstract controversy fail most miserably in concrete action. Communism to them was only a cloak. It hid them very well for a while, but action pulls it aside and shows them as they really are.

Take the case of Dennis Batt. He was not able to get along with us because he said we were not revolutionary enough. For fear that we should lead him into reformism and compromise he parted company with us long ago. That was the Batt of theory. In actual practice he is showing a decidedly opportunistic face.

Since breaking with us Batt has become editor of the official organ of the Detroit Federation of Labor; and the uncompromising Marxist has shown a remarkable ability to conform and adapt himself to the requirements of this official position. When the Detroit Federation in last the Detroit Federation in the last election made the fundamental error of adopting a nonpartisan political policy, Batt made no real fight against it. He who broke with us over the turn of a phrase did not break with the leaders of the Detroit Federation on a question of principle. He edited the paper which every week advocated the election of candidates of the capitalist parties."

Last week, however, he came to open conflict with John T. Taylor, president, and Frank Martel, organizer, of the Detroit Federation. These progressive unionists were on the road advocating the affiliation of the Detroit Federation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and Batt, the revolutionist, was opposing them bitterly. On the side of Taylor and Martel were the class-conscious delegates, the radicals and Communists. On the side of Batt were the delegates who are still confused on the issue of independent political action and the reactionaries who are flatly opposed to it. In concrete action Batt made an alliance with the reactionary anti-Labor party elements against the progressive trade unionists and the Communists. He played the game of the enemies of the Labor Party. He who "went along" with Taylor and Martel when they were against the Labor Party broke with them when they were for it. He turned to the right when they turned to the left.

Yes, action is good for the movement.

It clears the air that once was thick with sterile debate. It establishes the criterion of deeds instead of words and, indeed, plain that the phrase-Communists are separated from us not so much by theoretical considerations as by practical ones. They do not want to fight for the things we fight for against the powerful enemies on the other side of the line.

Nova Scotia Labor Fights Coal Barons

By JOHN ROBUR

(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and The Worker.)

OTTAWA, Canada.—Nova Scotia general strikes as much of the steel and steel workers in Nova Scotia attention here is directed to the situation [illegible] to the coal and steel [illegible] Dominion. There is a tense feeling in well-informed circles that there will be a three months' suspension of the British Empire Steel Corporation and all its ramifications.

There have been a number of inquiries into conditions in the closely connected district of coal and steel in the maritime provinces, but so far the controlling operations themselves have never had the searchlight turned steadily upon them. The coal industry in Nova Scotia is more than a century old, but the germs of the present unhealthy situation began to develop in the nineties, when the Dominion Coal Co. and the Dominion Steel Co. were established. Another big company, Nova Scotia Steel and Coal, was later thrown into the field, and there has been more than two decades in which "watered stock" forms probably at least half of the capital outstanding.

The unsound condition of "Besco," as the corporation is known in Cape Breton, has long been one of the chief causes of industrial turmoil in the whole industry. The workers know that the bosses are reaping huge profits out of stock jobbing if not out of coal and steel operations, and have no confidence in the men for whom they are working. If the industry were put on a sound financial basis, the workers would have some assurance of fairness and that would go a long way to secure peace.

The present head of Besco, Roy M. Wolvin, is neither a steel nor coal operator. He has made his money by promoting. Recently he figured with his brother, Lee Wolvin, in an attempt to control shipping on the great lakes which shocked parliament into adopting drastic legislation.

These circumstances have done much to educate public opinion. There is a feeling that if there is another investigation of the steel-coal industry, it should not stop with wages but should make a thoro probe of the Besco corporation.

Babson Counts on Craft Unionism to Cripple Organization Drive Among Steel Workers

By CLARISSA S. WARE

In a recent bulletin to employers subscribing to his service, Roger Babson, adviser to "Big Business," writes as follows:

"Unionizing Steel:—We do not expect much of the campaign, on account of the large number of competing unions, which have never made it long together long enough to get anywhere, and on account of the large numbers of Negroes which have been imported into the steel industry. The trade unions make all kinds of professions about organizing Negroes. They have never actually done much of it."

The employers are counting on craft divisions and racial friction to defeat the campaign to organize the steel workers. What more striking proof would the workers ask than this.

Craft unionism defeated the great steel strike of 1919. Craft unionism divides the workers and permits the employers to use one group against another. Craft unionism breeds jealousies and divisions within the ranks of organized Labor. Craft unionism is a crime against the workers. And the capitalists are today counting on craft unionism to defeat the campaign to organize the steel workers.

It is not sufficient for unions to endorse amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions. The rank and file of the craft unions must demand results, must call for action, amalgamation must be made a fact.

An industrial union of all steel workers, red, white, black, yellow, skilled and unskilled, native and foreign-born, could bring even the steel octopus to terms. Divisions of craft, color or creed are weapons in the hands of the employers, Babson's statement proves beyond a doubt, that they realize the value of these divisions and will foster them to the utmost.

The solidarity of labor demands the amalgamation of craft unions into powerful industrial unions of all workers in the industry.

BLOOD AND STEEL!

The Story of the Struggle of the Workers Against Czar Gary's Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry.

By JAY LOVESTONE

The Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry has aroused the interest of not only the workers involved. A murmur of public disapproval is heard thruout the country against this relic of serfdom. Public men, churchmen and social organizations are giving expression to the utmost antipathy to it. The American Federation of Labor has entered upon another attempt to organize the steel workers; while the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are actively engaged in organizing the workers for a victorious fight against the inhuman twelve-hour day.

"BLOOD AND STEEL" tells the whole story of this inhuman plot against the workers. Read it, get others to read it. Order a number of copies and sell to all workers in all industries. The steel workers must have your support in their fight—which is also your fight.

Nova Scotia Labor Fights Coal Barons

By JOHN S. ROBUR,

OTTAWA, Can.—With the gradual closing down of the Nova Scotia coal mines, directed on the situation likely to arise in the steel-coal industry, Canada is at strong farmer-labor influence that there should be a thoro investigation of the British Empire Steel Corporation and all its ramifications.

Babson Counts on Craft Unionism to Cripple Organization Drive Among Steel Workers

By CLARISSA S. WARE

In a recent bulletin to employers subscribing to his service, Roger Babson, adviser to "Big Business," writes as follows:

a. "Unionizing Steel—We do not expect much of the campaign, on account of the large number of competing unions, which have never made out to hang together long enough to get anywhere, and on account of the large numbers of Negroes which have been imported into the steel industry. The trade unions make all kinds of professions about organizing Negroes. They have never actually done much of it."

The employers are counting on craft divisions and racial friction to defeat the campaign to organize the steel workers. What more striking proof would the workers ask than this.

Craft unionism defeated the great steel strike of 1919. Craft unionism divides the workers and permits the employers to use race prejudice against another. Craft unionism breeds jealousies and divisions within the ranks of organized Labor. Craft unionism is a crime against the workers. And the capitalists are today counting on craft unionism to defeat the campaign to organize the steel workers.

It is not sufficient for unions to endorse amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions. The rank and file of the craft unions must demand results, must call for action, amalgamation must be made a fact.

An industrial union of all steel workers, red, white, black, yellow, skilled and unskilled, native and foreign-born, could bring even the steel octopus to terms. Divisions of craft, color or creed are weapons in the hands of the employers, Babson's statement proves beyond a doubt, that they realize the value of these divisions and will foster them to the utmost.

The solidarity of labor demands the amalgamation of craft unions into powerful industrial unions of all workers in the industry.

Unusual Outing by Defense Council for August 25; Bathing, Dancing, Hiking, Games

After searching for many months for a suitable place for a summer outing, which will furnish real enjoyment for all, the Labor Defense Council has at last found an ideal spot. Tucked away among the beautiful hills of Westchester county lies Sherwood Park. The Labor Defense Council has secured the use of 24 acres of the finest picnic ground within the vicinity of New York City.

There are large grassy spaces for games and outdoor sports as well as shady nooks for quiet rest and comfort. Special automobiles will meet passengers at the 241st Street station of the White Plains Division of the Interborough Subway (5 Cents fare) and will speed them in comfort to the Park, from 10.30 A. M. to 12 Noon, returning at 8 p. m.

Tickets which are one dollar for adults and fifty cents for children, include all privileges without any extra charge.

The combination of bathing facilities and charming country is not only an unusual feature of the outing, but it is exceedingly welcome after the customary roasting at the seashore. The beach has also a fine place for wading for the little folks.

Tickets also include dancing, bowling, outdoor games and many other unusual features which will be made public later.

Tickets are now on sale at the office of the Labor Defense Council, Room 434, 80 East 11th St. Mail orders will be filled promptly. Since the outing will be insured, all money for tickets will be cheerfully refunded in case of rain.

BLOOD AND STEEL!

The Story of the Struggle of the Workers Against Czar Gary's Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry.

By JAY LOVESTONE

The Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry has aroused the interest of not only the workers involved, but the murmur of public disapproval is heard thruout the country against this relic of serfdom. Public men, churchmen and social organizations are giving expression to the intense indignation of the people. The American Federation of Labor has entered upon another attempt to organize the steel workers; while the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are actively engaged in organizing the workers for a victorious fight against the inhuman twelve-hour day.

"BLOOD AND STEEL!" tells the whole story of this inhuman system. It is a book that should be read by every worker. It should be in the hands of every member of the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. It should be in the hands of every member of every union in all industries. The steel workers must have your support in their fight—which is also your fight.

Picketing Banned by Court in Spite of Supreme Court Decision

for F.F.L.P. Affiliations

CHICAGO.—With the actual formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party for immediate action by the state, there has naturally taken place a definite shaping through the District. In addition to the actual steps already completed, the next months will witness a whirlwind campaign for affiliations of labor organizations to the Party. Several local unions have already affiliated, many more have the reports and are calling special meetings to take action.

The recent decisions made by the General Executive Committee to strengthen the Party, in that it is better fitted for this work, thru an intensive membership campaign, is being particularly responded to by our District. Complete plans for a successful campaign will be worked out and forwarded to our branches.

The Chicago City Central which is always active, is again sending speakers to all branch meetings in the city to take up these points and prepare for a unified campaign. Our members there have attended the industrial group meetings called by the T. U. E. L.'s great numbers and the last monthly T. U. E. L. meeting showed an attendance of about 1,000. Thus the two great issues of the united front of labor, Amalgamation and Independent Political Action of the workers have become logically unified.

A general membership meeting will be called in Chicago in the earlier part of September, date to be announced later.

Our Milwaukee local had a well attended membership meeting at the last visit of the District Organizer.

General membership meetings have also been held with the District Organizer present by Local Lake County, Ind., and South Bend, Ind. In the latter place a few new members were enrolled in the English branch and our Comrades in general thruout this territory, formerly practically impregnable, are getting more of a foothold for the revolutionary working class message. A live discussion has been started everywhere on the need of building a mass political party of the workers. -But it is also reported that the Ku Klux Klan are secretly gaining many adherents among those workers who are not yet aware of the fact that they will simply be used as tools by this heinous organization against their own class.

Arrangements have been made for an organization tour by the District Organizer to Peoria, Ill., and Moline, Ill., to attempt to establish definite connections and organize the many sympathetic workers in these localities.

Boock Enthusiastic About West

CHICAGO.—"Live labor and farmer groups from the Atlantic to the Pacific are working toward unity of labor on the political field," reads a statement by National Secretary Joseph Manley, Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

"William Bouck of the Western Progressive Farmers, and chairman of our party, reports that the Pacific Northwest is enthusiastically greeting the idea of the united federated party. The Los Angeles Labor party has indorsed the action of its delegates.

"It is evident that a party based on federation of the constituent groups for united action in the political campaigns is exactly suited to the American issues. The January convention in Chicago of the Federated Farmer-Labor party will show the power of the federated unity idea."

Mexicans Legalize May First

MEXICO CITY.—The first of May will be declared a national holiday in Mexico if the bill presented in the National Chamber of Deputies at the instigation of certain unions is passed.

Inasmuch as this year the first of May was to all appearances a national holiday, the general strike in all industrial centers being nearly complete, all government offices being closed and a memorial explaining the significance of international labor day written by Joe Vasconcelos, minister of public education, being read to all school children, it would appear that the new bill proposes merely the legalization of an observance already enforced by labor.

Workers Unite to Fight Against Deportations

Free Speech Conference, gave an address which was followed by a collection among those present. The police attempted to break up the meeting, but the workers were determined to put up a fight for their right of free speech. The sum of $208.00 was taken from a crowd, standing in a drenching rain, and all sorts of pledges of future help were given. There is no question but that the groups of enthusiastic workers will go back to the mining camps and other places in the district and arouse their fellow workers to a realization of the serious condition of the movement, and also to build up an organization at this time.

Ruthenberg Inspires Audience

C. E. Ruthenberg, with his usual fire of eloquence, stirred the closely packed audience. He gave a careful and brief review of the events which led up to the situation which is resulting in the crystallizing of radical sentiment in a great United Front in Western Pennsylvania. When he prophesied, that in spite of all persecutions and intimidations on the part of brutal Capitalist class, the ideals and principles for which the workers are striving, will ultimately triumph in the establishment of a workers' government, the audience broke into cheers and vigorous applause. Such enthusiasm under similar conditions have hardly ever been witnessed here before. The prospect is very rosy now for a successful drive on the part of the Defense Committee in gathering money and helping a vigorous prosecution of the work before them.

Protest Picnic on Labor Day

After arriving at the grounds, the Executive Committee decided that it was very important to hold a great Mass Protest Picnic against the conduct of the authorities in interfering with the picnic on August 5th, and their attempt to prohibit it. It was agreed that Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 3d, offered the best opportunity for this purpose and eliminated the excuse which the authorities made for interfering with the picnic on Sunday. Labor Day being a weekly holiday, there can be no excuse whatsoever. On that occasion there will be refreshments, food of all kinds, candy, music and speakers in all languages. It is planned to make a great drive for the defense on this occasion from now on until Sept. 3d. All interested workers in the Pittsburgh district will carry this date in their minds. It is hoped that 5,000 workers can be gathered there on that occasion. Every organization that is interested can do their part in keeping this day open for that purpose.

Test Meetings of Sept. 9th

Following the Mass Protest Picnic on Labor Day there will be on Sunday, Sept. 9th, two great Mass Protest Meetings on Free Speech to be held in Pittsburgh and McKeesport. The afternoon meeting will be held in Pittsburgh, at which members of the Workers Party will speak, including defendants in this particular case, to finally test the question as to whether or not any group of workers have a right to speak and express their opinion. In the evening a test meeting will be held in McKeesport, the home of the notorious Mayor Lyle, who in that office has acted as czar for nine years, and is a tool of the National Tube Co. He boasts that no Communist will ever be allowed to hold meetings in McKeesport. On this occasion the real test will be made. All preparations are in order and a monster demonstration will take place. Jay Lovestone, of the Workers Party, Robert W. Dunn, of the American Civil Liberties Union, of New York, and local defendants who are also members of the Workers Party will address these meetings. Every worker in Western Pennsylvania should take an interest in these cases.

Are the blue laws really being enforced regardless of class interests in the State of Pennsylvania? Facts do not warrant this opinion when West View Park and Kennywood Park, operated by the Pittsburgh Railway Company, are allowed to operate full blast on Sunday, sell merchandise in open violation of the "Blue Laws."

Hundreds of picnics are held all over the County, and golf is permitted to be played on the public golf links of Schenley Park, in spite of the fact that President Harding's body was being brought across the continent.

But when a picnic is arranged to raise funds for the defense of workers unjustifiably arrested on a charge of "sedition," some dark forces are set loose to spread the rumor that that particular picnic will be stopped by police authorities as violation of the "Holy Sabbath" and the "Blue Laws."

It makes you think and act!

Red-Baiting Judge in Kansas City Is Caught Red-Handed in Revolting Crime; Faces Trial

(Special to "The Worker")

KANSAS CITY, MO.—One of the stock-in-trade arguments employed by the employers against the workers' struggle for better industrial movements is that they are in favor of using force and violence.

The more ardent, an advocate one is of vigorously defending working class interests, the more likely is he, to be painted as guilty of bloodshed, murder, and the most heinous crimes conceivable, by the agents of the employing class.

The fact of the matter is that this tactic employed by the capitalists and their lackeys is simply but one of the much camouflage used to hide their own dastardly acts of the most gruesome crimes of force, violence and bloodshed against the workers. Every strike, every political campaign of the workingmen, every struggle of Organized Labor for better conditions brings out the truth of this contention.

But very often, even the individual capitalist advocates of merciless suppression of the fighting representatives of the workers expose themselves as being guilty of indescribably revolting outrages against even the most elementary conceptions of "peace and order" and human life.

The Case in Kansas City

The other day there occurred here such a case of a most flagrant nature. It will be recalled that on April 11, a meeting held in behalf of the cause of constitutional liberties for workingmen was raided by the police authorities. Four workers of those arrested were fined $200 each.

The Judge who denied the workers the right to speak and gather funds for the defense of the workingmen arrested in St. Joseph, Michigan, was Judge Edward J. Fleming of the Kansas South Side Court. This robed tyrant then thundered at and poured Hell's damnation against the Communists.

He said that there was no place for such terrible crimes in his own Kansas City. He posed as a great lover of peace and life and swore volleys that he was imposing this severe penalty on the Communists simply because he was desirous of protecting the population from force and violence and bloodshed.

Fleming Caught Red-Handed

Of course Judge Fleming spared no energy in crowning himself as a great apostle of "law and order" and peace and humanity. He sought to hide behind these phrases in order to create the impression of the militant workers in Kansas City and break up the Workers Party in particular. It turns out to be that the really guilty one of spilling blood and committing heinous crimes is the Judge himself.

Here is the story in a nutshell: A motor car owned and driven by Judge Fleming and carrying several women was returning from a chicken dinner resort early in the morning of July 1st. It plunged over a fifteen-foot embankment. Miss Dungan, one of the women in the company of the Judge, was pinned beneath the car and died there.

At the Coroner's inquest several witnesses swore that Judge Fleming and members of his party were drunk and were negligent in helping Miss Dungan from beneath the car. This Judge who was so vigorous in his denunciation of the Communist workers because they were supposed to be in favor of force and violence did not pay any attention to the suffering woman. According to the testimony submitted he left her under the car and fled with the license tags. In this case the Judge lost all his love for human life. The woman was dead.

Demand Fleming's Resignation

Judge Fleming has been indicted charged with leaving the scene of the accident in which Miss Dungan was killed. In Kansas, leaving the scene of an accident constitutes what is known as a graded felony, punishable upon conviction by fine or imprisonment. Because of the horrible features attending this crime of violence and bloodshed for which the "Red"-baiting Judge has been indicted, over a score of church organizations and many other public bodies have joined in a common protest demanding the removal of Fleming from the bench. All of these organizations are demanding "that all the stain upon the escutcheon of the city" be removed.

What the final fate of this agent of the powerful employing interests of Kansas City will be is not known yet. But what has already occurred is instructive to every worker. This incident shows plainly the fraud of all the employing class agents' tears in behalf of peace and the sanctity of human life.

Communist Speak at Well Attended Meeting in Canton, O.

Mass Meeting Arranged by Workers' Party Local Is Addressed by Comrades Johnson, Wagenknecht and Engdahl.

Canton, O., Aug. 6.—(By Mail.)—A mass meeting was held here last night under the auspices of the Workers' Party of this city. The meeting was addressed by Comrades Charles Johnson, Workers' Party candidate for governor of Ohio, and Comrades Wagenknecht and Engdahl. They spoke on the topics rendered by Chairman Zinoff in part as follows:

By ALEX TRACHTENBERG.

He was pleased to hear the reverence made by Zinoviev to the splendid strides made by the American Party in the past year. If the American Party has improved it is due to the action adopted at the last International Congress.

He will conclude the meeting in and about the Goeblic Iron Range from where he will proceed to the copper region of Michigan and the Mesaba Iron Range and Soo, Michigan region.

The trip of Comrade Salsman is meeting with unprecedented success. New branches are being organized and it is expected that the trip will bring hundreds of new members into the League. The Finnish Federation of the Party, and the local Comrades are giving the organizer splendid help, both organizatorily, financially, and morally.

For further information concerning the tour, address the Secretary of the League at the above address.

EDUCATION IN RUSSIA

By Anise

"What is the present situation in education?" I asked of Lunacharsky, commissar of education. It requires a special permit to see him as he lives in the Kremlin.

He answered: "It is impossible for a central government to do all the financing of education, though during the past years, when we had no financial system, we tried to handle everything from the center. Under the new arrangement, 75 percent of the cost of schools is put upon the local authorities, except for the technical and upper schools, which the central government still pays for.

"But we have taught 13 million adults to read and write during the past two and a half years. Under the czar only 20 percent of the army could read and write. By the time of the Polish war, we had brought it up to 65 percent. Now every soldier, except the newcomers, can read and write."

By ISRAEL AMTER

He believed that in America, the slogan of the Workers' and Farmers' Government was necessary, but in common with the British comrades he was of the opinion that there should be so framed that the poor and working farmer would be got to understand, that there was a cleavage between him and the exploiting farmer. To secure such a cleavage would be a victory for us. There was no danger that the peasant farmer would be a danger to the proletarian dictatorship.

By CHARLES JOHNSON

(Canada)

Canada is predominantly an agricultural country with a large population of poor and small tenant farmers. These farmers are in such a hopeless state that many are selling their farms entirely. In the Western States there are 150,000 Ukrainian and Russian emigrant farmers. Last year they sent a delegation to the District Party Convention of Manitoba demanding that the Party should come to their assistance.

The farmers' organization was controlled by the rich grain growers and the delegation asked the Convention to assist them in forming a party for the poorer farmers. The Convention referred the matter to the Dominion Convention. When the latter considered the matter, the party felt itself too inexperienced and uninformed to formulate a policy.

It accepted the principle of Workers' and Farmers' Government issued by the International, but this slogan still faced the party with the question, whether the poor peasant should be taken into the party, or whether they should be organized into a separate farmers' league. The Party accordingly set up a Commission to study the question.

Get the Truth

Editor, "The Worker":—I saw your paper in the school library Wednesday afternoon and read every page. It sure was good to read about the convention in your paper after the way the big capitalist papers reported it. The dope on the steel industry came right to the scratch. I am very glad that "THE WORKER" is so actively fighting for the realization of the ideal and purpose of the movement. I would like to take advantage of your 15 weeks subscription to "THE WORKER" and I am enclosing a U. S. Money Order for Fifty Cents for same. I am working my way thru school, and am going home to Madison, Wis. When I shall return to Valparaiso, I shall be in a position to take a year's subscription to your paper. I am glad that the workers and farmers won out at the convention thanks to your efforts. Here's hoping for a equally successful year of activity.

Prosperity Shoe Strikers Plan Greater Struggle for Future

strike was a spontaneous uprising of the one craft, and that another, in all but one, had gone out. To unmask the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. This was the sole objective as the strike went on. The wage increase was lost sight of, that which makes a struggle a trade union fight. And the strikers did not wait until their charters were revoked. They seceded, their first move was to secede, as a protest against the despicable decisions of the State Board of Arbitration.

And in doing so, they deprived themselves of the possibility of getting financial support from many American Federation of Labor locals. Their hope was then to get the support of the independent unions—promises were made, and kept only in part. The faith of the strikers in the other independent organizations has been weakened. There does not exist today in the independent unions enough enthusiasm to take up the cause of such a group as the battling Brockton workers. It was a rude disappointment to the strikers.

What of the Future?

As independent organization is being maintained in Brockton. Some of the members are urging that the new organization be changed, in the hope that this can prevent its being crushed by the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. Some hope that by strengthening the new union, and getting together funds, they may be able to prepare for the "day."

These seem content to keep the new organization a local organization in Brockton. They have no vision of the mightier movement, linking the militant Brockton workers with the militants through the shoe and leather industry, and in the other industries of the country. The new union, by itself and for itself—is their slogan. However, a true union sentiment is being developed for getting closer to the militants all over, for drawing up a program of action that is forward looking. The amalgamation issue will be raised shortly by the members of the Brockton Trade Union Educational League.

A Labor Party

Because of the treachery of Mayor Manning, a former shoe worker, the acts of his henchman, the City Solicitor, and of the judges, there has developed a strong sentiment for electing one of the strikers to office.

The rank and file are not altogether clear on this idea, and care will have to be taken, lest the sentiment for independent political action degenerate into supporting a striker on a capitalist ticket. It is significant that in a Brockton paper today there is a campaign speech of Mayor Manning with the strike-breaking Coolidge.

The strike case appeals have been held over to the regular session of the superior court in October. It is believed that this will be held as a whip to prevent independent political action on the part of the strikers.

What the Workers Need

Inexperienced, the strikers have gone thru a formidable battle. They have received bitter disappointments. They have learned something about who their enemies are. There is a splendid opportunity to educate them along the lines of amalgamation and an independent labor party. This task will fall on the Brockton Trade Union Educational League.

The Days Gone By

SAN FRANCISCO.—Time brings strange revenges. While President Harding lay ill in a hotel here, a band of recently-arrived czarist refugees secured jobs cleaning his special train in the railroad siding.

Among the car-washers were several former generals in one or another of the various anti-Bolshevik armies. Doubtless they thought as they wielded the scrubbing brush of the days when they had private trains of their own.

Meeting in Boston

BOSTON, MASS.—Boston City Central Committee announces its mass meeting, to be held Thursday, August 10, 1922, 8 P. M., at Paine Memorial Hall, 9 Appleton Street, Boston, Mass. Comrade C. E. Scientists are Encouraged

A Central House of the Scientists has been opened in Moscow to become the center of mutual contact and of the spreading of scientific knowledge.

It is under the central committee for the better life of scientists, and is open to all scientists registered with that committee.

The committee also has a house for rest near Moscow, and sanitariums in the Crimea and the Caucasus for its members.

It is now much easier to receive foreign scientific literature, and even to make trips abroad. In fact, several scientists have been sent on such trips.

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

Lewis and the Progressives

The following editorial by T. G. Lawton, editor, of the Knox County, Indiana, Labor News, is very pertinent at this moment. It shows what the rank and file think of President John L. Lewis and his reactionary policy. Here it is:

By T. G. LAWTON, Editor, Knox County (Ind.) Labor News

I have seen by the daily press that the National Executive Board of the United Mine Workers has gone on record to expel all members who participated in the Pittsburgh convention to unite all of the progressives in the ranks.

It looks like the fellows who claim that the radicals in the ranks of the union are trying to destroy the union are themselves the ones who are trying and making good at destroying the organization.

If the radicals, in my opinion, wanted to destroy the organization, they would fall in line with the crowd that believes in rule or ruin, for it seems to me that no one could do a better job in tearing down the principles of the union than the present bunch of international officials are doing.

The International officials should have learned long ago that they cannot get the support of the rank and file of the organization when they refuse to give anyone a fair and impartial trial for any offense that one is charged with. When the organization refuses to do that much for the most humble one in the union, then the union is not fit to live in. We should not ask the public courts to give us a fair trial if we refuse our own members a fair trial.

It looks to one up a tree that the officials who have practiced the theory that might makes right, and have seen the results of their handiwork should be the last to complain when the same theory is worked on them. There are quite a few of the rank and file who would be staunch supporters of the policies of John L. Lewis if he had played a different hand in the trouble in Kansas. When he fellows out there were down with the courts on their backs, then Mr. Lewis asserted his power. Then he possibly thought he had knocked out Howat and Dorsey, and others who were just as loyal as they, and expelled them all from the union.

Now, after two years of failure in his attempt to rid the union of members that did not agree with his policies, Lewis and his board are going to expel all of the rank and file that do not agree with him. If he succeeds in his attempt, in my opinion there will not be enough left in the union to pay the salaries of the officials. We hope the officials will not pull any more boners and will try to let some others than themselves think without being in danger of being thrown out of the union.

Most of the so-called radicals are the ones who were thru all the hardships in the early struggles to build the organization, and I would like to know how anyone can think they want to destroy that which cost them so much to establish. Today they are the ones that are not trying to destroy, but are trying to keep the other fellows from destroying the union.

If we are to be thrown out for thinking the way things are going is not right, then the union will disband by the work of the radicals, but by the hand of the conservative officials.

Splitting

By MAX BEDACHT

Rigid centralization, an absolute discipline, present themselves as indispensible conditions for the functioning of a party as the head and nervous system of a class.

A party which, like the Socialist Party, pretends to combat war but at the same time carries on propaganda for war with Mexico thru Berger, a member of its executive committee, and its organ the "Milwaukee Leader," as was the case in 1916, such a party can never be the head of the working class.

How can a party represent the head of the proletariat when its most prominent member, Hillquit, one day defends the "Labor Party" in a debate with Keating, but this party proposes and decides to maintain the alliance with this enemy of the "Labor Party"? How can a party be the head of the working class when at its Convention, Abe Cahan, with impunity dragged in the mire the Russian revolution and its leaders, while the same Convention elected Debs as chairman of the Party—Debs who has never hesitated to recure great and only too welcome applause at public meetings, by means of Platonic declarations of love for the Russian revolution?

A revolutionary party which lays claim to leadership of the working class, should not be double-faced. It must not be one thing and appear another, must not be a conglomeration of resolute action and not of systematic hypocrisy. A revolutionary working class party can and should have only one fundamental principle. If it has two, it has none, except that of systematic betrayal. Either the Party is the party of Jewish and Christian small shop-keepers, the most useless and reactionary of all classes as they are represented by Abe Cahan, or it is the party of the reactionary trade union bureaucracy who, with the growing dissatisfaction of their members, perceive in the Hillquitian mantles a welcome cap of invisibility for their betrayal. But it cannot serve even these two masters. And to its honor and also shame let it be said, it does not do so. Its love belongs to one master only, to capitalism.

Unity of the revolutionary elements of the proletariat within such a party is organized disunion, organized helplessness. One is a fool who expects positive work from such a party. Whatever of positive Cahan does, is negated by Debs. Whatever of positive Debs accomplishes in his propaganda for the amalgamation is negated by Lee, Oneal and the "Call." Every nail which a member of this party hammers with good will and little skill into the coffin of capitalism, is pulled out again by another member, spitting poison, and gall against the enemies of capitalism.

It is treason for revolutionists who see clearly, to remain in such a party. Their insight, their revolutionary will are of no use to the working class, because the party which, as a nervous system, should transmit this insight and this will, does not function for them. They who are supposed to represent the head of the Colossus, have no connection with the body. They share the fate of the proletarian revolutionists in Germany. On account of the lack of an independent resolute organization, they are swallowed up by the revolution, or, at best, they are disregarded by the proletariat arisen in revolt against capitalism. The illusion of unity of the Social Democratic Party of Germany, 100 long maintained, bears the blame for the present disruption of the German working class. The great, but this movement brought harm to its supporters. The Party wished to force its leaders into the very ranks of a revolutionary working class. But what these leaders wanted was their mental freedom to betray the working class, not to surrender it by any price, and to throw the party out of their organization. We do not wish in any way to cover up our blame in the people, but merely to establish a historical fact. The writer of these lines will never forget that at the behest of the Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, he, a regularly elected delegate to the S. P. Convention of September 3, 1919, was forbidden to enter the Convention hall by the same detective-sergeant McDonnough who, in February 1920, at the behest of the prosecuting attorney of Chicago, escorted him as a prisoner from San Francisco to Chicago.

The formation of a revolutionary party which could be the head and the leader of the working class, had become a revolutionary duty to those who had learned from the history of the European working class. Therefore the split.

Paradoxical as it may sound, just as the unity within the S. P. represents organized discord, so was the split the necessary condition for the unity of the working class. Politically, there can hardly ever be a question of organizational unity among the working class. But the prerequisite for a victorious revolution is unity in action. This can never be organized and led by a party such as the S. P. which is internally disintegrated, which is led from the most diverse motives, and by the most diverse kinds of leaders, in varying directions, even if it had the will for it. This can be achieved by an organization whose individual units help, with revolutionary discipline, to create an harmonious whole, which provides head and nervous system to the Colossus of the working class. That is what the Party of the Bolsheviki was in Russia. The "Workers Party" in the United States is striving more and more, and always in a more complete measure, to become that in the United States.

Fight Buksa Conviction in Court Sept. 6

(Special to "The Worker")

BELLAIRE, OHIO.—The case of John Buksa, member of the United Mine Workers of Yorkville, O., who was recently convicted in the Ohio County Criminal Court in Wheeling for the distribution of "seditious literature," will come up for consideration in the West Virginia Circuit Court of Appeals, Sept. 6th.

The importance of this case to West Virginia labor in particular and labor over the country in general, should not be underestimated. The steel, coal and lumber barons of West Virginia, thru their servile tools in the United States Department of Justice, in opening their attack upon the forces of organized labor in the state of West Virginia, have seized upon John Buksa, a member of the Workers Party, as the Trustee of the miners' temple at Bellaire, O., as their first object of attack.

John Buksa's case is the first to be tried under the West Virginia "Red flag" law. Should we be unable to produce a reversal of his conviction, this will establish a vicious precedent in the state of West Virginia which the heartless employing class of that state will not hesitate to make use of in all future campaigns against organized labor.

While the defense has so far been able to cover their running expenses, it is now necessary that we increase our campaign for financial support so that this case can be fought successfully thru the State Court of Appeals, the State Supreme Court and even to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

Coal Board Favors Outlawing Strikes

By H. M. WICKS

The United States Coal Commission in a supplemental report, made public recently, urges governmental measures to prevent strikes in the coal fields of the nation. A careful perusal of its report exposes it as a typical "open shop" document. Under the established formula of the Harding administration, nothing but scab shop conditions could be expected to emanate from any agency of the government. The report of the Commission, if adopted and made compulsory by law, would be a standing menace to the coal miners, just as the infamous Daugherty injunction is a standing menace to the railroad workers.

Organized labor, according to the Commission, is now the impediment to peace in the mining industry; it "has passed its days of struggling for existence and has reached the stage of constructive opportunity in which it must justify itself by a new kind of service." The report then proceeds to show that this new kind of service consists in abandoning all semblance of unionism and becoming a servile tool of the government.

Instead of standing on its own feet and relying upon its power of numbers, as against the insatiable jackals who own the coal mines and their governmental lackeys, the union, according to this report, shall take no action to remedy oppressive conditions without first giving the employers ninety days notice of such contemplated action. Upon the questions at issue the parties—the miners and operators—shall then confer and if at the end of sixty days they have failed to reach an agreement they shall record the fact of their inability to do so to the President of the United States. Then the President is to appoint a commission which shall in due time make a report.

Meanwhile the coal operators will work their mines full blast, lay in a supply of coal for the heavy industries they serve and then force the miners out on strike as they did in 1922. Then the scab-herder President, Mr. Coolidge, or some other labor-hater, will call in his commission and sign a report, drafted by the publicity agents of the coal operators, denouncing the mine workers for their total disregard of the "public welfare." Prices of coal will soar sky high, the slack of the mines will be sold at high prices and eventually the coal supply will dwindle. Then, just before it is exhausted, the government will declare war upon the miners and proceed with its courts, its army, its police and other instruments of oppression to smash the organization of the miners.

It is clear to everyone who is capable of observing the conflicting forces on the field of the class struggle in America that the government is every day becoming more relentless toward labor unions. If labor yields to these hypocritical pleas its organizations will be smashed as far as effective action in the interest of the working class is concerned. If labor refuses to yield and hurls defiance at the aggregation of scab-herders at Washington it has a chance even by the exercise of the strike weapon.

The supplemental report of the Coal Commission is a challenge to the leadership of the United Mine Workers of America. If this leadership refuses to stand erect and thunder defiance at the nincompoop commission and the guerrilla Down-East bourgeois bigot who rattles around in the Presidential chair, the rank and file, as a matter of self-preservation, must repudiate their leadership, denounce governmental compromise and resort to the only weapon that has ever gained them one advantage—the strike!

Hungarian Subotniks Here Successful

In 1919 and 1920 when the Russian Soviet Republic was being attacked on all sides by the whole Imperialist world, in the years full of sufferings and hunger for the Russian people, the main question confronting the Russian Proletariat was how to supply the Red Army with food and ammunition, and how to take care of the wounded soldiers.

The railroads were run down, the hospitals were poorly equipped, and there was no food and drugs. In this desperate situation, the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Communist Party appealed to the party membership for self-sacrificing work to aid the heroic front of the Red Armies.

The party membership was told that the only way to save the revolution was to work, to put the railroads, the shops and the hospitals in shape. The party membership was called upon to sacrifice the Saturday afternoons, to do extra labor on these days.

The members of the Russian Communist party did not hesitate to heed the appeal. From this time on all Saturday afternoons of the party members were given to the party, that is, to the Russian Revolution.

On Saturday afternoons they worked in the railroad shops, in the hospitals, and the Red Army was supplied with food and ammunition, and the wounded were taken care of. The movement spread all over Russia. In the whole country the work was carried on by the Communist world where there was shortage of labor.

It was this example that led the Hungarian Section of the Workers Party to organize Subotniks in the city of New York. On Saturday afternoons, the party members met at an appointed place where they distributed books and circulars, and, thus supplied, made a house to house canvas in the Hungarian quarter of the city. After the work of a few hours, the members came back and every one reported great success. Urged on by this success it was decided to make these subotniks permanent and to distribute on Saturday afternoons not only Hungarian but English literature and party papers also. Since then the subotniks have been held every Saturday afternoon and a good educational and propaganda work is carried on.

It was decided by the Central Executive Committee of the Hungarian Section to organize these subotniks in every city where the section has a branch. The first test given to the branches is to increase the number of the party members by 100% during the next month. Our appeal was received with great enthusiasm and subotniks are held all over the country.

The all important thing is a strict discipline by which every party member is compelled to take part in this work.

Organized Charity is the result of Organized Robbery.

Organizing the Negroes

The African Blood Brotherhood is carrying on an intensive educational and organizational campaign among the Negro workers in the nation's great industrial centers. This is an important effort. It should be given every support, not only by the Negro workers themselves, but by both political and economic organizations of the white workers. All labor, both black and white, must unite on the broad basis of common class interests.

Figures issued from Tuskegee, Ala., showing a decrease in lynchings, are apt to be misleading. It is not forth that in the first six months of 1923, there were 15 lynchings in the United States, compared to 30 for the same period last year, and 36 in 1921. It cannot be said that race prejudice is dying out in the South. Rather it seems to be held in abeyance as "The South" beholds the growing exodus of Negro workers to the northern states. The value of the Negro worker is going up.

The white bankers of Georgia bewail the migration, since last New Year, of 80,000 Negro workers to "The North," leaving in their wake 46,674 vacant farm houses, 55,524 idle plows, entailing a money loss exceeding $27,000,000. The profiteers of Georgia face a labor shortage of 70,843 persons, and compare the resulting devastation to "Sherman's March to Sea" during the Civil War.

James S. Peters, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, says that "The South" needs the Negro because, "He will work for less, live on less and in cheaper quarters than any people save the Oriental coolie."

Yet that is the same reason that urges Gary and Schwab, in the steel industry; Armour and Swift, in the packing industry, and other great industrial overlords, to encourage Negro migration to "The North." The solution of this problem, from the standpoint of labor, is to organize the Negro worker, politically and industrially, side by side with his white brother, so that one will not outbid the other in the capitalist labor market. And it is because the African Blood Brotherhood realizes the problem, and knows the solution, that it can be a great factor in building the much needed "United Front" of the black and white races to combat the forces of the bosses.

City Workers and Farmers

Parasites who feed and grow fat off the American farmer are hunting reasons to explain the unrest among the workers of the land. It remained for C. E. Bradford, of Chicago, President of the American Farm Bureau Federation, to assure farmers at an Albany, N. Y., Conference, that they can't be coupled with city labor, to claim that, "The farmer is really a capitalist—he employs labor. He will never become an important political factor."

In fact, this Mr. Bradfute assures the farmer that he is being led astray by the city wage worker, who is merely trying to advance his own selfish purposes. We would conclude from Mr. Bradfute's exhortation that he spends most of his time among the grain gamblers on the Chicago board of trade, and that he couldn't tell a wheat field from a potato patch if it was really put up to him to decide.

How the apologists for the present order do straddle and wobble. When the worker goes on strike against his boss, he is told about the "identity of interests" of capital and labor. But when the worker gets together with the farmer, the latter is told there can be no "identity of interest" between him and the city laborer, because he is a "capitalist." This is a shell game that will fail to attract any "suckers" from among the exploited.

The greatest political upheavals, like the rise of the Populist movement in the last century, have had their beginnings among the land workers. While Gompers was talking "nonpartisan" political action, the farmers of the northwest were acting it, as in their various state Nonpartisan Leagues. It was not an accident that the Farmer-Labor coalition should develop greatest strength first in Minnesota, an agricultural state, and that the Farmer-Labor class political action idea should be spreading westward into farm states like North Dakota, rather than eastward into the industrial states. Gompers was never able to create a "bloc" of his "card men" in Congress. The "farm bloc," altho it has been small and made up of old-partyites, has been a constant threat to reaction.

This situation is not complimentary to the city worker. But these are the facts. That parasites like Bradfute, and others who [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and

New Crisis in Coal Industry

President Coolidge Plans to Break Miners' Strike

For an English Daily!

Communist International Urges Necessity of Starting Publication by November 7, This Year

Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, in a stirring appeal to the Workers Party and all its Language Federations, urges the necessity of an English language Communist daily in the United States. He says:

TO THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA
AND ALL ITS LANGUAGE FEDERATIONS

Dear Comrades:—It is with great pleasure that the Communist International has learned of the progress that the Workers Party has made in the past few months. We are especially gratified at the militant spirit that has manifested itself in the Party since the Second Convention in December, 1922. The unity of spirit, the determination to work and the understanding of the path to be trodden and the general tactics to be applied, augur that, in the near future, the Workers Party will mature to one of the truly Communist mass parties of the world.

The composition of the Workers Party with its 18 Language Federations is unique among the parties of the Communist International. Altho these Federations might act as a hindrance to revolutionary work, they, on the other hand, allow the Workers Party to come into direct contact with the great mass of foreign-born workers, who, are the most exploited in the country. The Workers Party has, we think, solved the question of Language Federations in a satisfactory way, in that it regards the Federations merely as propaganda sections of the Party. The comrades of the Language [illegible] appeal to grasp their task in the right sense, and to understand that the Party should be a unit despite its [illegible] tongues. The Communist International notes with satisfaction also that several of the Language Federations have good, militant organs in their languages whereby they are able to reach wide masses of workers.

At this point, however, we must say a word about the nature of your press. It is the duty of the foreign-language press to lead the foreign-born workers in the United States to an UNDERSTANDING OF THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM AND THE WORKERS MOVEMENT IN AMERICA. It is a mistake when foreign-language papers in America deal too much with the conditions in Europe only. Even though foreign-born workers naturally are interested in the affairs of the country from which they have emigrated, it is the duty and task of the Communist foreign-language press in the United States to awaken these workers to class-consciousness and to struggle against the capitalism under which they are exploited, viz. the capitalism in the United States.

It should not be forgotten, either, that a language paper is able to serve the workers of that special language only. This is a most serious hindrance to really revolutionary propaganda among the great masses of the American workers. It is a most deplorable fact, that AGAINST SOME TEN FOREIGN-LANGUAGE COMMUNIST DAILIES THERE IS NOT A SINGLE ENGLISH COMMUNIST DAILY IN AMERICA. Every comrade whose heart beats for the sake of Communism must and certainly does deplore this fact and realizes that, UNTIL THE WORKERS PARTY HAS AT LEAST ONE ENGLISH DAILY WITH A WIDE CIRCULATION IT WILL NOT BE ABLE TO REACH SUFFICIENTLY WIDE MASSES OF THE AMERICAN PROLETARIAT.

Comrades of the Language Federations!

The question of an English daily in the United States is as much YOUR question as that of the English-speaking comrades. In fact it is more your problem, since you represent by far the major part of the Workers Party. NOW, THIS IS THE TIME AND THIS IS THE OCCASION WHEN YOU CAN BEST DEMONSTRATE WHETHER THE WORKERS PARTY IS A UNIT OR NOT. The Communist International asks you to consider it as one of your MOST URGENT duties immediately to mobilize all your forces—AS A UNIT—and the support of all sympathizers to the cause of Communism and, together with the English-speaking comrades—yes, the Party as a whole to start

A NATION-WIDE CAMPAIGN FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF AN ENGLISH DAILY!

A fitting slogan for this campaign would be: An English daily for the Workers Party BY NOVEMBER 7, 1923,—an English daily for the Communist movement in the United States by the day of the next anniversary of the establishment of the first Workers Soviet Government in the world.

As a fighting organ of the Communist movement of America, this organ will have the gigantic task of fighting the tremendous power of capitalism and the reactionary bureaucracy of the old labor movement. The paper will be the center of many battles, but these battles will help you to mobilize sufficient masses of militant workers and to secure the victory of the Communist Revolution.

COMRADES, TO THE TASK!

THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL WISHES YOU THE FULLEST SUCCESS IN THE CAMPAIGN.

THE INTERRUPTED FEAST

The Coal Barons now in session at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City, are deeply disturbed by the demands of the Anthracite Coal Miners.

Startling Revelations About the Strikebreaker President

"The Worker," in its next three issues, will publish startling revelations as to just what labor may expect from "The Strikebreaker President," Calvin Coolidge. The articles have been written by Jay Lovestone, author of "The Government—Strikebreaker," and are summarized as follows:

1. PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AS "RED BAITER."
   a) His role in the Massachusetts Preparedness Drives leading the country into the World War.
   b) His "Investigation" of Educational Institutions of Higher Learning.
   c) His connections with the American Defense Society.
2. PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AS STRIKEBREAKER.
   a) In the Boston Police Strike.
   b) His 1920 "Law and Order" Gubernatorial Campaign.
3. WHO IS BEHIND COOLIDGE?
   a) F. W. Stearns, W. M. Butler and the Boston Bankers.
   b) A strong party machine man.

Plan of Campaign for "The Daily Worker" Is Announced

The plan for the raising of the $100,000 fund for the publication of a Daily Worker has been announced by the National Office of the Workers Party, which is carrying on the campaign.

A publishing company known as the Workers Publishing Company, Inc., is being organized and preferred stock selling at $5 per share will be issued to raise the fund necessary for starting publication.

Campaign Committees are to be set up in all Party units. The following circular, issued by the Daily Worker Campaign Committee to the members of the Workers Party, gives the complete program for the campaign:

1. A fund of $100,000 shall be raised thru the sale of shares and general contributions for the starting of the Daily. The Daily will be issued as soon as this amount is secured, but all efforts must be directed to raising this amount so that the first issue may appear on November 7th—the 6th anniversary of the Workers' Soviet Republic of Russia.

2. A publication company shall be formed and known as the Workers Publishing Company. Preferred stock of $5 each shall be issued and money for the publication of the Daily shall be raised chiefly thru the sale of these shares.

3. In carrying on the stock selling campaign, each Federation shall be assessed to sell a certain number of shares, the number being in proportion to its membership and its connections with the labor movement generally.

4. Each unit of the Party, including branches, CCC's, and Federa-

Three Very Urgent Tasks of Every Member of Party

1. Every Party unit shall form immediately a campaign committee for "The Daily."
2. Every Party member must get a new member into the Workers Party.
3. Every Communist must make every effort to have his trade union, benefit society, Workmen's Circle or other labor organization affiliate with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

By JAY LOVESTONE
Author, "The Government—Strikebreaker."

The first public official act of Calvin Coolidge, the strikebreaking president, is a heavy blow struck at labor. No sooner did the new president get to his desk in the White House than he issued a strikebreaking ukase against the coal miners.

After a conference with George Otis Smith, Secretary of the Coal Commission and a frequent contributor to the "Coal Age," the official organ of the National Coal Association, President Coolidge opened the government's affensive against the miners in an effort to prevent them from striking.

Coolidge has ordered the mine workers' representatives and the operators to resume their negotiations for a renewal of their contract at once and to meet immediately with the Coal Commission in New York City. They are now in session at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

The miners' contract expires August 31.

Unless the miners and coal magnates come to terms without further delay the country will have an anthracite strike on its hands Sept. 1. But the President is bent on denying the workers the right to strike in behalf of the check-off system and other working conditions over which the negotiations had recently blown up.

COOLIDGE TO STOP STRIKE AT ALL COSTS

Coolidge has got down to his strikebreaking business with a bang. He does not believe in mincing words about such delicate situations as coal strikes. The Chief Executive has given emphatic orders to the Coal Commission that there must be no strike. The President is ready to go to the limit in putting a halt to any fight the miners may make for the improvement of their conditions or in defense of their unions.

[illegible] close observers of the coal situation in Washington are agreed that this is only the preliminary step of the Government. They all say that this edict of Coolidge banning a miners' strike has positively committed the Government to far more drastic and aggressive action to hold the workers in check.

From the President's past outspoken enmity to labor, and from his "fame" and "heroism" in breaking the Boston Police Strike, it is as clear as broad daylight that Coolidge is preparing to resort to "strong Government action."

The President's followers say that tho the Coal Commission itself has no police force as yet, yet he will follow exactly the same tactics he pursued in the Boston strike. At the outset he will pretend to be taking no sides. Then he will wage a campaign to discredit the miners in the eyes of the public. After thus showing his hand, the President will use the mailed fist against the workers.

Barons Have Faith in Coolidge

The Coal Barons have unbounded faith in Coolidge. They know very well that a majority of the Coal Commission is opposed to the check-off system. They know as well that President Coolidge feels "that it is unfair and un-American and that men who join the union should have their own freedom, draw their full pay and attend to their obligations to the union."

And the capitalists know at least as well where Coolidge would stand in a showdown between employers and workingmen. What the Exploiters of Labor think of and expect from our new President is perhaps best brought out in the following incident: Sometime ago the president of a railroad summing up his experiences with the Governor (Coolidge) said:

"If I had a dispute with my men and Coolidge was the arbitrator, I would be glad to have the men be represented by any lawyer that they chose; and I would be willing to leave my side of the case in his hands without making any plea at all."

In this conference imposed upon the miners by the President, the Coal Barons will be represented by the notorious Labor-hater, Charles Warriner, the chairman of the General Committee of the Anthracite Coal Operators' Association; W. J. Richards, President of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Co.; W. W. Inglis, President of the Glen Alden Coal and Iron Co., and A. B. Jessup, Vice-President of the Jeddo Highland Coal Co. Behind these operators stand the most ruthless and [illegible] industrial and financial interests of the country.

The Philadelphia and Reading interests have at their helm such mighty kings of finance and industry as Edward T. Stotesbury, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., of New York City, and Drexel & Co., of Philadelphia, and at least twenty-three coal, railway, gas, insurance, banking and power corporations; and Alfred H. Smith who holds at least eighty-eight directorships in coal, railway, light, and banking corporations.

The Glen Alden coal interests are an offshoot of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, among whose directors are found such powerful Wall Street kingpins as Harold S. Vanderbilt, who is a director of at least forty-seven railroad, gas, and electric corporations, and the First National Bank; George F. Baker, who is a director of at least

The 8-Hour Day Hoax of U. S. Steel

By H. M. WICKS

The solemn assurance of Gary that the eight-hour day is to be inaugurated in his vast domains is received with scant faith by the hundreds of thousands of slaves who still toil in unutterable misery in his infernos.

The campaign against the 12-Hour Day, that a few months ago was confined to the Communist movement in America, has now swept the nation. So terrific is its momentum that it embraces ever larger numbers. Today there is not one publication in the United States, no matter how servile its demeanor toward capitalism on other questions, that dares openly espouse the continuation of the Twelve-Hour Day.

But in spite of this aroused public opinion Mr. Gary and his associates are not going to yield to that opinion. His promises will remain promises. Time and again on other occasions he has promised the abolition of the long workday, but just so often as the slaves in his mills have waited expectantly for symptoms of fulfillment of his promises, just so often have the promises vanished, as their fire-baked bodies were transformed into the commodity, steel, with the same devastating force that smoke and flame consumed the other fuel hurled into the blast furnaces, in the process of transforming its value into steel.

The promise of the 8-Hour Day is a hoax and a hoax it will remain until the working class wrests it from the greedy claws of Gary by their organized might.

Stand Back of Minnesota!

The workers and farmers of Minnesota have been very much in the limelight during the past few weeks. They are going to stand in full view of the public eye for many days to come.

The election of two United States Senators independent of the old parties is but the beginning. Another decisive step was taken when the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, in session at Duluth, Minn., by unanimous vote decided to force the question of independent political action at the Portland, Oregon, Convention of the American Federation of Labor, starting Oct. 1.

The Duluth declaration has already been published in "THE WORKER." It was contained in a set of resolutions that will make history for American Labor. We are this week republishing these resolutions, feeling that they ought to be considered and acted on by every one of the 38,000 local labor unions that go to make up the American labor movement. Here they are:

Demand A. F. of L. Action

Whereas, the utter bankruptcy of the old political parties and their unfaithfulness to labor is clearly shown in the repeal of the Child Labor Law, the Coronador Decision, the passage of the Esch-Cummins Law, and the infamous Daugherty Injunction which broke the railroad shopmen's strike, as well as in numerous other ways, all of which demonstrates conclusively that labor must have a political party of its own, and

Whereas, the organized labor movement of Minnesota thru its political efforts has successfully elected Dr. Henrik Shipstead and Magnus Johnson to the U. S. Senate, showing that the farmers and workers can be organized into a political party and elect its representatives to the State and National government, and

Whereas, it is behooven upon the American Federation of Labor to lead the great mass of American workers into a more effective and progressive means of defense both as the economic and political fields, and

Whereas, by their assistance in the victories of Dr. Shipstead and Magnus Johnson to the U. S. Senate they have proven their capability of performing this function successfully, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the Minnesota State Federation of Labor urges thru its delegates, that the American Federation of Labor in national convention assembled, modify its former policy and amend its constitution and by-laws so as to remove, if any there be sections which may appear contrawise to this all important step of organizing a distinct political party of the organized workers and farmers.

Bring up these resolutions in your union. Have them adopted and forwarded to Frank Morrison, Secretary, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C. Instruct your delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention to support this class position of Minnesota's workers and farmers.

The city workers of Minnesota, especially, show that they mean business. Thru their Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, they have gone on record as endorsing the stand of the Seattle Central Labor Council, in the controversy of that labor body with the reactionary Gompers' officialdom of the American Federation of Labor.

Workers of the United States! Get behind the Minnesota workers! Help them pile greater working class victories upon the triumphs already won!

What is Brewing in Germany?

By Adolph Thalheimer, Editor, "Die Internationale," German Communist Bi-Weekly

"We are living in a revolutionary epoch, and we are faced by a revolution, if we cannot . . . prevent the fascist movement from . . . seizing power."

These words were spoken some days ago by Dr. Gustaf Stresemann, leader of the German People's Party, in an address to the central committee of his party.

Everyone in Germany feels that we are on the eve of a decisive combat between the bourgeoisie and the proletariat. Everyone knows that the leaders of the Fascist movement in Germany are feverishly arming for it. Ludendorff and Hitler are leading this movement, that numerous officers of the national defense army are closely allied with them and are co-operating with them in preparing to deliver the stroke.

The plans formed by the various Fascist elements, and the time chosen for action, have been changed frequently. But there are innumerable reports, mutually confirming one another, which go to show that the moment is really imminent.

The lines of procedure are also clearly laid down. The Fascist plans calculate on the impending inevitable defeat of the German bourgeoisie at the hands of Poincare and the other imperialist robbers. They are taking advantage of the cowardly weakness of Cuno's government, and the failure of the other bourgois parties and of the social democrats to make good in the national struggle of self-defense.

They rely upon the discontent of the starving petty bourgeoisie and intelligensia, who sympathized with social democracy and socialism in the first phase of the German revolution, and are now severely disappointed.

They utilize the hopelessness of broad strata of the working class, rendered indifferent or despairing by the continued treachery of the social democrats. And for what purpose do they want to utilize all this? For the purpose of waging war on the working class under cover of national defence against the Ruhr invasion and the shameful treachery of the Versailles treaty, and for the purpose of establishing the dictatorship of Fascism.

This dictatorship is to carry out the program of the great industrialists: to shatter the labor organizations, to sweep away every barrier to capitalist exploitation, to establish the ten-hour working day, and to transfer all state undertakings into the hands of private capital.

Perhaps the proclamation of the Rhenish republic, which is being feverishly prepared by the hirelings of Poincare, despite all denials, will set the avalanche arolling. Perhaps some other event.

Nobody can be any longer deceived as to the seriousness of the position. The Fascisti, by themselves, would be insignificant. But they have military support in the national defence army. All sections of the bourgeoisie are ready to bow to them; for all are aware that once the struggle breaks out, it is a question of the dictatorship of Fascism or the dictatorship of the proletariat. Social democracy as a party is not feared. It is incapable of fighting. Its leaders will either make a cowardly retreat or submit.

The sole real power which, at the head of the proletarian masses, can and will take up the fight against them, is the Communist party.

Our Party is putting forth the utmost energy to render the working class capable of battle and victory. During recent weeks and months it has gained great sympathy and confidence, and won many readers and members. The Party, down to the last member, is filled with the determination to meet the Fascist coup with the utmost force and determination. It is carrying on a broad mass propaganda, in order to prepare the workers, employes, and lower officials for determined defense against the Fascisti, and to neutralize or partially win over the petty bourgeoisie.

The struggle will be severe. It will decide the fate of the German labor movement for the next few years.

The decision will also be of the greatest importance for the French working class.

The French working class can alleviate the struggle of the German working class, if it will take up with redoubled energy the fight against the annexation plans of Poincare, and against the plans of the Comite des Forges for the plundering of the German working class; if it will increase its propaganda among the occupation army, and its work of enlightenment among the peasantry.

The Communist Party of Germany has just issued an appeal to the Party (published in last week's issue of "The Worker"), giving exact instructions, politically and organizationally, for the struggle. The fight will find the Party at its post.

"Socialists" Save German Capitalism

The German "Socialists" have again come to the rescue of the German capitalists. The "Socialists" have joined in the vote of confidence given the Stresemann government. "Socialists" sit in the Stresemann cabinet, and the German capitalist, Hugo Stinnes, will continue to co-operate with the French capitalists in plundering the German workers.

This is the role the German "Socialists" have played ever since the overthrow of the Kaiser. It was the role of Kerensky, the social-revolutionary, between the downfall of the czar and the creation of the Soviet Republic in Russia.

While the "Socialists," Hilferding, Solmann and Schmidt, join Stresemann in maintaining the German capitalist republic, the French Comites des Forges, speaking for the exploiters of France, confers with the representatives of Stinnes, Krupp, Stumm, Haniel and Thyssen, the master lords of the Reich.

While the "Socialists" blind the workers to their own interests, the French and German capitalists will get together in the hope of further enslaving the masses in both countries. They have attempted this in the past but failed. The German bosses wanted a 50-50 agreement, while the French held out for a 60-40 division of the spoils. It is expected that the German exploiters, fearful of the discontent at home, and seeing the masses in the Socialist Party deserting to the Communist ranks, will make any sort of agreement to maintain their power.

But this new betrayal of the "Socialists" will only result in another short truce. The Communists will use this breathing spell to strengthen their forces, to bring over to their side new masses of German workers disgusted with the alliance of the "Socialists" with the German capitalists. The creation of a German Soviet Republic has not been defeated. It has only been postponed. Communism waits on victory in Germany.

U. S. Dollar Diplomats Join Turks in Oil Victory Over France, England in Near East

American dollar diplomacy, joining forces with the Turks in the Near East Peace Conference, at Lausanne, Switzerland, has won another victory for the Standard Oil Trust. The victims are the imperialisms of England and France. The situation is analyzed by the French Communist, Louis Louzon, as follows:

By LOUIS LOUZON
(Special to "The Worker")

LAUSANNE, SWITZERLAND.—The key to the situation growing out of the signing of the Near East Peace Treaty here must be sought in America. The United States, whose role in Europe becomes daily of greater importance, has declared that she is standing aside from European politics solely for the purpose of being better able to protect the interests of her own capitalists in Europe.

Interior Asia is called upon to play the leading role in the future economics of the world. The United States, for whom the markets of the New World no longer suffice, is aware that the best means of paving the way for predominance over the Old World is to occupy the future centre of economics. Thus it has gained a foothold in the south west of Asia Anatolia and Persia are its first aims.

It is therefore easily to be understood that it has done its best to prevent England and France from winning any privileged position in Turkey, such as would have been obtained by these countries had Turkey been placed under the obligation to pay in gold. This explains the abrupt change of front on the part of English diplomacy.

England has abruptly ceased to support France in this question, and Curzon placed Poincare in the dilemma of either retiring before the demands of the Turks and signing the peace, or resuming hostilities again. This would, however, have meant that Poincare had to send troops to Tchannak and Constantinople to aid the British forces there.

As Poincare could not send fresh troops to the Orient, solely for the purpose of protecting the interests of the owners of Turkish obligations, or at least could not do this without committing suicide, France gave way. Ismet Pacha and America are victorious.

England's Position

The attitude taken by England, and her volte face in the Ruhr question, fully characterize the change of front in English foreign politics. At the time of the Versailles peace negotiations, the following tacit agreement had been arrived at between the English and French bourgeoisie: France received the hegemony over Europe, she may do as she likes in Central Europe; on the other hand England reserves for herself the rest of the world, especially the Near East, the key to Asia.

But in the execution of this plan, England immediately collided with America, for America also put in a claim to the "rest of the world." This rival was too powerful for England She realized that the United States would have to be given a free hand.

American imperialism was carrying on an exceedingly active policy in Asia Minor, and even in Persia, where the Standard Oil Co. obtained a concession for the whole of the petroleum on the coast of the Caspian Sea. American capitalists made arrangements for a number of loans, and England looked on without demur.

Compelled to renounce her world policy, England turned once more to Europe She must attempt to regain in Europe the possibilities of expansion which America had forced her to abandon in the Orient. Her European policy thus becomes more energetic as her oriental policy declines. She beats a retreat on the question of Turkish obligations at the same moment as she arms for a decided intervention in the Ruhr question. She will claim from America her support in her European policy as compensation for her renunciation in the Orient.

In 1919, Lloyd George said to Clemenceau. I leave Europe to you; leave me the world. Today, Baldwin says to the rulers on Wall Street. I leave you the world, but you must help me to suppress France in Europe.

Thus the alternating influences and aggravations of imperialist struggles for power are changing the political groupings in Europe; and not their least effect is the acceleration of the moment of social conflict.

COOLIDGE—A GOVERNMENT STRIKEBREAKER!

Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, broke the strike of the Boston Police in 1919—thereby being made acceptable for Vice-President by the Capitalist class what controls the Republican Party and the United States Government.

Coolidge, strikebreaking Governor, and now President, is especially fitted to continue his union smashing policy. He fits in perfectly with the character of the United States Government which is the official union-smashing, strikebreaking agency of the capitalist class of this country.

"The Government—Strikebreaker"

By JAY LOVESTONE

A book of 300 pages, tells the story of the strikebreaking, union-smashing policies of the U. S. Government in all the big national strikes of the past few years. It lays bare the Government's nefarious activities against the workers in the Rail Road Strike, the Textile Strike, the Coal Miners' Strike and scores of lesser conflicts between labor and the employing class.

Paper Binding 75 cents

This book should be read by every worker. It provides an arsenal of incontestable facts, gathered from original sources which condemn the Government as a strikebreaking agency of the employing class, and a ruthless enemy of the workers.

WORKERS PARTY, 799 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY

Farmer Labor Party in "Chi" Shows Decline

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY
(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The rapidity with which the Farmer-Labor Party of Cook County—which is factually all there is of the F. L. P.—is traveling the road to political extinction, was indicated here Sunday when only about twenty delegates attended the quarterly convention of that organization.

At the previous quarterly convention, held in the same hall shortly after the Cleveland meeting of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, there were approximately 150 delegates present. There was also a spirit of optimism which was entirely lacking yesterday among the mourners of what once was a promising party.

And it appears that was the main trouble. It was promising, but when the crucial moment arrived it did not live up to its promises. It promised political unity but turned bitterly against it when unity was achieved at the Cleveland convention.

Since that historic gathering the fortunes of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party have been rapidly ebbing. And to add to its misfortunes, Samuel Gompers has now given his blessing which should be sufficient to damn it in the eyes of all militant and progressive workers. And worse still, the editor of the official organ of the F. L. P. proudly featured this benediction in his paper.

Gompers has at last discovered that the "F. L. P." has good intentions even tho it is lacking in political sagacity.

Since the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party the F. L. P. has felt like a little infant left by its parents on a stranger's doorstep. Its parents—Fitzpatrick and Nockels—don't know exactly what to do with it, but Sammy Gompers has come around once or twice to take a look at the infant, perhaps with a view to adoption, provided it agrees to take Dr. Sam's non-partisan medicine.

The principal event Sunday was the speech of a fraternal delegate from the Socialist Party who declared that the S. P. and the F. L. P. were now the only two parties that represented the interests of the workers. He was given a vote of thanks which was ordered inserted in the minutes. The S. P. delegate also invited the F. L. P. to send a speaker to the coming Debs meeting. The invitation was accepted.

Considerable discussion exists among the leading members of the Farmer-Labor Party of Cook County. This was the main topic of the convention. The usual fluff was indulged in about the famous "round up" by the Workers Party at the July 3d conference.

The speaker who was a member of the credentials committee which seated all the delegates to the July 3d convention resented the attacks on the Workers Party in the following language: "We are what is left —we can look around on ourselves and say, we are what's left of that convention." And Brother C. M. Madden has set his finger on the very thing that is the trouble with us—internal dissension. The finest, cleanest men I have ever met in the labor movement are in the Workers Party, and I am sorry to say that I disagree with them fundamentally. But I do not believe we should go around telling lies about them—saying that they packed our convention, and so forth. We will never get anywhere by calling names. The American working man is determined to have a political party of his own."

Neither Edward Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, nor Jay Brown, secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, appeared at the convention. John Fitzpatrick arrived during the afternoon session but took no part in the proceedings. A debate took place between Anton Johannsen, Chairman of the organization committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Robert Buck, as to whether delegates to the State convention should be appointed or elected. Buck held to the former point of view.

Outside of that and the raffling of an used automobile, the 20 members did not create any excitement.

West Va. Likes F. F. L. P. Program

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—The formation of a Farmer-Labor Party in West Virginia is a distinct victory for working class independent political action. This victory was made possible, against the opposition of the reactionaries, by the presence of a large rank and file delegation.

The question of affiliating with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was not decided at this time. This question will come up for action at the next convention of the West Virginia Party to be held in March, 1924.

We have just received a copy of the Platform of the West Virginia Farmer-Labor Party. The entire first section of this platform, 6 pages of a total of 14, is word for word the exact duplicate of the "Statement of Principles" of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party adopted at the Chicago Convention.

John Farmer's Last Stand

By HAL WARE and KARL REEVE

It has become increasingly clear to everybody that the present farm crisis means something more than the individual ruin of hundreds of thousands of farmers; it means that the whole arrangement of farm tenure and distribution of farm products is a failure.

Even as far back as 1921, Senator Ladd, speaking before the Senate, said, "It is not true that the war was responsible for our present dangerous economic crisis. Agriculture was going down hill before the war, and when agriculture is going down hill, all industry is going down hill. "Production per acre had fallen off; soil fertility was being depleted; farm earnings were declining; farm mortgage indebtedness was piling up; tenancy was increasing and rents becoming every year more burdensome, and there was a constant movement of migration from the farm to commercial centres. Under our present methods of financing agriculture and of transporting and marketing farm products the industry was on the road to bankruptcy even before the war." (Congressional Record, December 15, 1921.)

The period of bankruptcy has now been reached. The 1910 United States census report shows that the mortgage debt in 1910 was $1,726,853,000; whereas the latest report of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the mortgage debt as $7,257,700,000 or four times greater than it has ever been in all the 130 years preceding.

Add to this tremendous debt the bank loans in farmers' personal and collateral security, estimated by the Department of Agriculture at $3,869,415,000 together with the chattel mortgages and merchants' loans, and the farmer's debt amounts to well over 15 billion dollars.

The Congressional Commission of Agricultural Inquiry finds that 49 cents of the farm dollar goes to the railroads, 17 cents to the food manufacturers, 14 cents in profits to the retailers, wholesalers, the manufacturers, and, only 20 cents to the farmer. So that if the farmer wishes to pay back his 15-billion debt he must first pay the fundamental costs of producing his crop, out of his twenty cents.

Before the farmer can get a good start toward again becoming solvent, he must pay the interest on his debt, which amounts yearly, at the average interest, to the astounding sum of 140 dollars for each farm in the United States.

Then there is the terrific item of taxes which, to say the least, hampers the farmer in his struggle to come back. According to the 1922 year-book of the Department of Agriculture, the land values and taxes in 1921 were $.709 per acre, as compared to $.314 in 1913, an increase of 226 per cent. "Taxes," says the report, "absorbed one-third of the farmer's income in 1921 as compared with less than one-tenth of his income in 1913."

More and more farmers are losing hope and giving up the unequal struggle, realizing that to plant a large crop means merely the loss of more money. We have wheat as an example, for it is one of the most significant crops in the United States, constituting a large part of the income of our exports as well as an important part of our domestic commerce. More than two million farmers in the United States produce it.

In 1919, according to the 1921 year book of the Department of Agriculture, it was found that the approximate average cost of producing a bushel of wheat is $1.87. The finding was based on records secured from 284 representative farms, covering all the states of the wheat belt —North and South Dakota, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Minnesota and Washington. There was found to be a wide variation in the net cost per bushel, three-fourths of the farms producing wheat at a cost of two dollars or less per bushel, but only two farms producing it at a cost as low as one dollar per bushel.

The average cost of $1.87 is a startling figure when compared with the present Chicago price—considerably below a dollar. No matter how it is figured, a farmer cannot produce wheat for less than a dollar a bushel, in the Bread Basket of America —the wheat producing states—where yields per acre are low and acreage per farm is large, the farmer cannot produce wheat for less than $1.50 per acre. The problem must be discussed on that geographical basis, for that is where practically all the worker's bread comes from.

Compare the lowest estimate of cost of production—$1.50—with the present Chicago price, then deduct the average farm price from the market price, and it is found that John Farmer is getting about 60 cents per bushel for a product that costs him at least $1.50 to produce.

The figures show that, far from securing a new foothold, the farmer may be losing as long as the present system prevails. We are told by the 1922 Department of Agriculture year book that in striving to maintain his bare title to the land, the farmer was forced to go increasingly in debt the past year, while practicing the strictest economy. Even then, says the report, thousands have been obliged to give up the struggle, let the land go, lose all the money they've paid for it, and start anew." Which means that the dispossessed farmer becomes a farm laborer or is absorbed by the city. Over two million men left the farms last year and were only partly replaced by excess of births over deaths on the farms and by new farmers from urban centers—who are hardly likely to be more productive than were the dispossessed farmers and their families.

The farmer has been forced to lower unmercifully his standard of living while he was pushed on without hope by the momentum of habit. His yearly labor income is figured by the Congressional Commission at $464, and the purchasing power of that income is only $219. And this in spite of the fact that unpaid child and wife labor has been largely introduced. The 1920 census figures given out by the United States Department of Labor bulletin, report that out of 1,060,858 children between the ages of ten and fifteen years who are engaged in occupation, 647,309, or 61 per cent, are engaged in agriculture. The bulletin adds: "The 1920 census does not report on working children under 10 years of age, but it is known that such children are employed in large numbers in agriculture."

Here, then, is a statistical crosssection of the situation which has brought to the farmer's revolt against the banks, the railroads and the middlemen. In the latter stages of this process that is dispossessing the American farmers of their land and homes, the farmers have become more closely allied with the city workers. Facing the same enemies, the tendency to combine their political protests has rapidly developed.

This tendency crystallized into action in Chicago on July 4, when the rank and file of labor and farm organizations entered into the first definite pact for a concerted fight against their exploiters, and created the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The initial program of the farmers, which was enthusiastically and unanimously passed by the workers' organizations, contains a demand that the land must belong to the users of the land—the farmers—and that a moratorium for five years on farm mortgages shall be inaugurated. This program is the challenge of the farmers to those who have wrested their farm and their income from them. Goaded to desperation by the farm crisis, they take their places by the side of the workers in the struggle for economic freedom.

Gary's Promises to Abolish 12-Hour Day Sound Like Hoax

Gary, the industrial despot, gives the widest publicity to his every utterance. In flaring headlines we are informed by the daily press of the action that the 12-Hour Day is to immediately give way to the 8-Hour Day. Then we read the Gary interpretation in the main body of the article to the effect that plans have been perfected that will be pushed forward without "unnecessary delay." This is further qualified by the assertion that within the next six weeks the corporation will "begin to inaugurate the 8-Hour Day."

This is to be accomplished if, and when, 60,000 additional laborers are secured, according to Mr. Gary. In other words, when Gary can secure 60,000 additional laborers who are willing to work for the starvation wage of $4.00 a day he may reduce the hours of labor somewhat.

So all the blatant headlines to the effect that the 12-Hour Day is a thing of the past are simply capitalist humbug emanating from the open prostitutes of the daily newspapers.

Gompers Asserts Himself

Samuel Gompers, an inveterate publicity seeker in order to gratify his lust for power, which is not less inordinate than that of Mr. Gary, rushes into print with an alleged "refutation" of the position of the steel trust. Gary boldly asks for "whitewash" this contemptible governmental instrument of the railroads.

The campaign against the 12-Hour Day is such that the steel trust has succeeded in arousing millions of workers who sympathize with the slaves of Gary. Now is the time for organized labor to proceed for the organization of the steel workers and if the trade union movement of this country were not under the blight of Gompers-ism the question of the 8-Hour Day would not be up to Mr. Gary for decision. With the labor movement as it is today there is a two-fold task imposed upon the militants in America. The steel workers must be organized and at the same time the Gompers machine must be forced to yield control of the American Federation of Labor to those who view society as an irreconcilable struggle between the workers and the capitalists.

Kansas City for F. F. L. P.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Sunday, August 5th, a meeting was held composed of Farmer-Labor, Trade Union and other elements sympathetic to the idea of independent working class political action. The personnel of this meeting was practically the same that had financed the sending of a delegate from the Kansas City Farmer-Labor Party to the Chicago Convention.

The delegate to the Chicago Convention reported to this meeting. His report was favorable to the Cook County., Ill., Farmer-Labor Party group. The report of J. G. Brown, secretary of the old Farmer-Labor Party and the statement by Robert M. Buck was read and discussed in detail.

I. E. Snyder, who was present at this meeting and who had been a delegate to the Chicago Convention from the Farmer-Labor Party of California, was called on for a report. Following his report and with the secretary of the Kansas City Farmer-Labor Party not voting, the meeting unanimously went on record in favor of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and its program.

The Farmer-Labor Party of Kansas City as an organization has not yet acted upon the question of affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, for the good and sufficient reason that it is hardly possible to call together a larger number of its original members than that represented at the above meeting.

Attacks of New Republic and New York Call on Federated Farmer-Labor Party Exposed

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO, Ill.—Two letters, written by W. E. Zeuch, national committeeman of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, have been made public here in reply to attacks of the New Republic (Liberal) and the New York Call (Socialist).

National Committeeman Zeuch, a prominent figure in the Wisconsin farmer-labor movement, takes both these sheets to task for publishing misleading statements throughout the Federated Farmer-Labor Party Conference, especially the publication in The Call" of a letter by Chester C. Platt, to the effect that the Wisconsin Non-Partisan League had rejected affiliation with the Federated Party. The letter to the New Republic follows:

To The New Republic,
421 W. 21st St., New York City.

Sirs:—I must protest. I went to the Farmer-Labor Conference at Chicago as a delegate from the Non-Partisan League of Wisconsin. I attended every session. Was a member of the Organising Committee and of the sub-committee that drew up the plan of federation and in other ways took part in the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. I think, therefore, that I may qualify as a witness. Since I am not a Communist, Socialist or any other "ist," I feel justified in claiming to be an unbiased witness.

I was a bit surprised to read the report by Robert Morss Lovett in the New Republic several weeks ago. Of course I was prepared for the attitude of superior wisdom and condescending scorn which is so characteristic of our self-constituted intelligentsia. However, we workers and farmers are so close to the concrete problems of life that we have little stomach for those little nuances of irony which may tickle the risibilities of endowed professors at our expense. We are constantly up against the problem of getting a daily wage that will allow us to live a decent life, or the problems of marketing our products so that we will not be ruined from bankruptcy. Our problems can not be solved by sarcasm. In a more joyous era we might be disposed to overlook his caricature of our conference.

Furthermore, we have a right to expect honest reporting from a paper with the pretensions of the New Republic. When I read such statements as "The Workers Party was in full control," "The Workers Party—took control of proceedings as soon as the convention got down to business," and that the new party is dominated by the Communists, I felt that Lovett could not have been at the Conference, and that he must have gotten his dope by cribbing from the Chicago Tribune or some other such unbiased source of information. When he put a statement made by one of the Wisconsin delegates into the mouth of Chairman Bouck I knew that he could not have been present.

The facts relative to the Chicago Conference are as follows. The old Farmer-Labor Party issued a call for a conference to achieve a united front among the liberal and radical political groups. Six hundred delegates came in response to that call. The old Farmer-Labor Party tried to use the Conference to put life into its dying organization. The rank and file of the Conference rebelled against such attempts on the part of the officers of the old Farmer-Labor Party. The delegates felt that they had come to establish a new party which should take in all the elements represented at the conference. When the matter came to an issue the delegates voted overwhelmingly in favor of the formation of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The industrial workers and the dirt farmers stuck together on this proposition from the first to last. Less than ten percent of the delegates bolted the Federated Farmer-Labor Convention. Those who bolted were largely labor politicians, intelligentsia and wealthy persons who dabble in liberal movements. When the rank and file ran away with the Conference the fact that both of these men had fought for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as evidence that the new party was Communist. The animosity of this Red Herring of Communism across the trail. They attempted to use the presence of Ruthenberg and Foster at the Conference as the fact that both of these men had fought for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as evidence that the new party was Communist. The animosity of this contention is evident to anyone who will take the time to read the declaration of principles and platform of the new party. The disgruntled minority attempted to maintain that the Conference was packed. The Workers Party had ten delegates out of six hundred. Aside from these ten there were about one hundred and thirty or one hundred and forty delegates who were from left wing organizations and may have been influenced by the advice of Foster and Ruthenberg. But even at that less than one-fourth of the delegates would have been under Workers Party influence.

Under the plan of federation the various elements have influence in proportion to their membership. The Workers Party has 20,000 members. One fair-sized city central labor body that joined the federation would have more power than the whole of the Workers Party. Of the thirty-three members of the Executive Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party there are "Labor Party ers" organizations, ten represent old line craft unions, six represent unions with left tendencies, three represent miscellaneous groups. Will someone please tell me how the Communists can run away with a political party so officered? There is one thing that is certain about the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. It is in the control of the rank and file. It has no Hillquits or Bergers, no Fitzpatricks or Bucks. Its president is a western dirt farmer. Its secretary is a real industrial worker.

The Conference was remarkable for the youth of the delegates. Gray heads were rare. A movement of young men and women can carry on.

Most sincerely,
(Signed) W. E. ZEUCH,
National Committeeman.

The letter to the New York Call says:

To the New York Call,
412 4th Ave., New York City.

Sirs:—Your issue of August 3d carries a news item to the effect that the Non-Partisan League of Wisconsin has withdrawn from the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

As a member of the Executive Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, representing the Wisconsin Non-Partisan League, I wish to inform you that the news item was untrue.

The Non-Partisan League of Wisconsin has not taken official action upon the question of affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The letter of Mr. Chester C. Platt which you publish is misleading. So far as I am aware it represents the opinion of Mr. Platt alone and does not represent the consensus of opinion of the Non-Partisan League of this state. The delegates from Wisconsin whom he mentions are overwhelmingly in favor of uniting all farmer and labor factions into one party. No one of the delegates, so far as I know, with the exception of Mr. Platt, has taken a stand against affiliating with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. What action the Wisconsin Non-Partisan League will take is a matter of the future.

It is against the policy of the progressives of this state to attack any movement of the working class. They reserve their fire for the common enemies of all people who labor. Mr. Platt is a New York politician transplanted to Wisconsin and rather recently, and does not understand the attitude of the progressives of this state in such matters. For some reason unknown to his friends and acquaintances he is extremely hirsute on the subject of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and uses his time to write letters blackguarding it.

Do not let certain party be supposing that Mr. Platt is the Progressive party or represents the progressive groups in this state. When the people of this state get ready to take action on the question of affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party or any other third party movement they will speak for themselves, and in no uncertain tones.

Until such time as the Non-Partisan League takes official action on the question of affiliation I will remain on the Executive Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. It has my unqualified personal support.

I am wondering whether the Call has the character to publish this denial with the same prominence they gave to the falsehood.

Sincerely,
Signed: W. E. ZEUCH,
National Committeeman.

Zinc Miners Battle Thugs in Illinois

By CARL HAESSLER
(Special to "The Worker")

TAYLOR SPRINGS, ILL.—"Another of them damn reporters."

That was the word went round among the gunmen and deputies on the sidewalk in front of Miners' Hall in Taylor Springs, Ill., as I dropped off the Hillsboro jitney and prepared to break into print. They had carefully presented to the St. Louis Star reporter when he tried to get news out of them for the capitalist press. Taylor Springs is a fair bit northeast of St. Louis.

A smelterman had been shot by a gunman on the third day of the 100 per cent strike against low wages, 12 to 16 hours a day and a scab shop. The gunman was also a temporary deputy sheriff. The American Zinc Co., the smelter trust, had seen to that.

But the gunman and the rest of his armed crew, none of them Taylor Springs boys, all imported, had got a bit tough with the strikers' wives who were acting as pickets in front of the plant and in the street cars that ordinarily carried the working force of 300 to the plant.

The women, formidable Amazons some of them, spoke their tons sweetly to the gunmen. The gunmen hurled sour curses at the women. The women's men folk rushed the car to avenge their insulted wives.

A guard drew a gun. The gun went off. The bullet sped thru the thigh of William Garcia, a striker, member both of the United Mine Workers and of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter workers. The strikers, all unarmed, drove home rough lessons in courtesy with their fists. The battered bodies of the gunmen were the unwilling pupils. They finished their course in the Hillsboro jail and graduated in a hurry into distant parts with a promise never to go to school in Taylor Springs any more.

"Never too old to learn," said the elder of the pair of thugs that got the roughest of the lessons. He'd been a union miner in his younger days and only half realized what work the smelter manager, Kenneth Rossman, had in store for him.

"All this and a lot more was peeled off to the "damn reporter" as soon as I had identified myself. "Where's your credential?" demanded Adolph Corazza, of the organization committee, when I said I had come for The Federated Press. Soon as he saw the magic press card his dark hand-some young face lit up and he grabbed my hand. In a second the Secretary John Mann of the Kortkamp miners spread the news that a Federated Press man, labor's news service, had come to get the truth of the shooting story and spike the Associated Press lies.

Organizer Ed Carbine of the smelter workers told me the tale briefly and clearly. For three years the zinc works have been an open shop sore in a union community. Several attempts to organize failed. Now with wages going up everywhere and labor getting scarce Carbine saw his chance to civilize the smelter. In a couple of weeks 25 per cent of the men were organized. A house to house canvass made it 50 per cent.

The company hired dicks and stool pigeons. It fired every known union man. When the union had over 150 of the 300 men, it demanded recognition. The company hooted the union members out of the gates. Over 200 took out union cards. The company arranged for gunmen. The strike was called Tuesday, Aug. 7. Union membership jumped to 85 per cent that same morning and to 97 per cent by night. Wednesday was peaceful. No work and no strife.

Thursday morning the unarmed striker was shot. An hour later all was quiet again. Col. Culbertson, of the Illinois national guard, a tall open faced not bad-sort-of-a-guy, lumbered into the village. State Mediator Dan Dineen hotfooted down from Springfield. The colonel had nothing to do but twiddle his thumbs on the porch of the Hillsboro hotel. The mediator found the company wouldn't mediate. "Union shop? Nothing doing!" said the manager in conference.

But the strikers see that the company's threats to close down entirely are bunk. Like the man of God who had received a call to a more remunerative pulpit and was seeking divine guidance but meanwhile packed his trunks, the company is keeping its fires going in the furnaces. The market for zinc is pretty good.

Sentiment in the towns is strong for the strikers. Everyone was proud that no local boys had been mixed up in the melee as company gunmen. One of the nine non-unionists in the works had collapsed from the heat, a white collar doing unaccustomed work before the furnaces. He's in the hospital now on the floor above the wounded striker, Bill Garcia, the wounded striker, is lying. Comments on the scab were not gentle. Caustic jests fly 'round. It seems that the local undertaker had helped to fan the fink on the way to the hospital. The man continues to live and townsmen see it as an undeserved joke on the undertaker.

The affray was the natural and usual fruit of the policy of hard-boiled employers who deliberately send gunmen on the boss when the workers peacefully band together to correct unbearable conditions.

Common labor gets as low as $3 a day in the American Zinc Co. smelter here. Skilled labor gets no more than $4.50. Hours are eight a day with extra hours up to 12 and 16 at the whim of the company and without punitive overtime. Deodato Campagna, a boy of 16, was fired when he demurred at doing a second continuous eight hour shift Sunday morning right on top of an eight hour shift Saturday night. He'd have got far for the 16 hours.

The company operated a smelter in Kansas in the glorious days of the lamented Allen industrial court law that put Alexander Howat in jail. The Illinois boys set the company to rights. "This aint Kansas," they told the manager. He wanted to have coal from the mine. He could have it if union men comprised the unloading crew. "I'll pick my own crew," says he. "Then pick your own coal," says the miner's committee.

Gunmen on the loose are now less plentiful in Montgomery county. Hand hammered courtesy is the style in Taylor Springs.

"Socialists" and the United Front

"The united front of prominent "Socialists" in Oklahoma with the capitalist parties has come to grief. Following the Johnston policy of non-partisan political action, the "Socialists," with the Farmer-Laborites and Non-Partisan Leaguers, threw all their resources behind a group of Democrat politicians who had endorsed J. C. Walton for governor. Mr. Walton was elected, and great was the elation of the yellows.

As is usually the case with all reformist candidates of this type, Mr. Walton, whose principal support was a hybrid organization called the Ku Klux Klan, "Reconstruction League," has now recanted his former professed radicalism and is avowedly an enemy of the workers and farmers of Oklahoma. Even worse than his stand as a representative of capitalism is his support of the sinister Ku Klux Klan sentiment that is rampant in Oklahoma.

While an alliance with the Ku Klux Klan would not be repugnant to such creatures as the leaders of the Socialist Party in New York City, who play the game of William J. Burns, it was too much for the Oklahoma "yellows" to stomach, so they are now piously denouncing Mr. Walton as an igrate and traitor to labor.

The treachery to labor rests squarely upon the alleged "Socialists" and not anywhere else. It is the inevitable result of the decisions of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, at which the Socialist Party is desperately clinging, in spite of the fact that they are looked upon as barnacles by even this aggregation, as was evidenced by their rout at Albany, where Hillquit, Oneal and Co. were shown the door.

The Collective Agitator, Propagandist and Organizer

By JOHN PEPPER

The Communist Party of Russia has 700,000 members on the eve of the March revolution in 1917.

The Workers Party of America today has about 20,000 members.

This shows that the two Communist parties in their respective stages about equal numerically, but not equal politically. What is the difference between the Workers Party of America today and the Bolshevik Party of Russia on the eve of the Kerensky revolution?

The main difference is that the Bolsheviki were then already a MASS PARTY, although they had only 17,000 members, whereas the Workers Party has had a mass party as yet, despite its 20,000 members.

To be a mass party does not ALWAYS mean that a party must embrace hundreds of thousands in its ORGANIZATION; but it does always mean that it must have, deep roots within the masses, and that it must lead the masses in the daily struggles as well as to the barricades of the revolution.

IN THIS SENSE the Bolshevik Party of Russia, with its 17,000 members, was already a mass party. IN THIS SENSE the Workers Party, with its 20,000 members, is still not a mass party.

Why is the Workers Party not a real mass party? Wherein does it fall short?

The Workers Party is not enough of a POLITICAL PARTY. The old sectarian spirit still lives in many comrades who fear that they will lose their Communist virginity in the political struggle.

The Workers Party is not UNIFORM enough. The work of the sixteen Language Federations is not yet welded into one.

The Workers Party is not enough AMERICAN. Many of our comrades do not see their greatest enemy in the AMERICAN capitalism, and do not recognize the AMERICAN capitalist government as their deadly enemy.

The Workers Party is not enough COMMUNISTIC. There are comrades who see Marxism only as a collection of dogmas. There are comrades who do not know Marxism at all, and cannot see farther ahead than the daily trade union struggles.

The Workers Party needs to have a deeper POLITICAL INTEREST.

The Workers Party needs a strict CENTRALIZATION.

The Workers Party must concentrate its forces still more in the struggle against AMERICAN capitalism.

The Workers Party must have an intensive Communistic Marxian EDUCATION.

In other words, we need more AGITATION, more PROPAGANDA, more ORGANIZATION.

Our party has become so large today and the tasks which stand before us have grown so tremendously that the PRESENT INDIVIDUAL METHODS of agitation, propaganda and organization no longer suffice.

The Workers Party cannot grow, and cannot accomplish its great tasks without new, mightier COLLECTIVE METHODS of agitation, propaganda and organization. Lenin, the greatest leader of the world proletariat, said:

THE PRESS IS A COLLECTIVE AGITATOR.

THE PRESS IS A COLLECTIVE PROPAGANDIST.

THE PRESS IS A COLLECTIVE ORGANIZER.

The Workers Party cannot grow and become a real mass party without the press, without a MIGHTY ENGLISH-LANGUAGE DAILY.

Only an ENGLISH DAILY can lead our party-comrades into the thick of the political life and struggle.

Only an ENGLISH DAILY can give the sixteen Federations a uniform ideology, and bring about the democratic centralization of our party.

Only an ENGLISH DAILY can really make the knowledge concerning the facts of American capitalism and mechanism of the American government into the common possession of every party member.

Only an ENGLISH DAILY, thru a Marxist and Communist education can turn the 20,000 party members into good Communists, and in addition can turn 20,000 sympathizers into Communists.

A grown-up man cannot wear children's shoes. A party which begins to develop into a real MASS PARTY can no longer get along with INDIVIDUAL methods of agitation, propaganda and organization. WE NEED THE ENGLISH DAILY. WE NEED THE POWERFUL COLLECTIVE AGITATOR, PROPAGANDIST AND ORGANIZER. Every Communist should put forth his entire energy as INDIVIDUAL agitator, propagandist and organizer, in order to build up the English daily, the COLLECTIVE agitator, propagandist and organizer.

Minneapolis Council and Organized Labor Greet War Prisoner

By STELLA C. GEORGIAN
(Special to "The Worker")

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Amid e tolling of the court house bells e President Harding, the Minneapolis City Council, controlled by Soialist and labor aldermen, voted ten nine to elect a committee to extend greetings to J. O. Bentall, member the Workers Party, who has just been released from Leavenworth enitentiary.

The resolution was introduced by lderman Bastis and caused a storm protest from the conservative embers. Vote was by roll call and high ran the feeling that as the last otes were recorded the voters were outing their "Ayes" and "Nays" at e top of their voices.

Comrade Bentall was convicted under the espionage law during the war a speech which he made at a large icnic near Hutchinson. His case was arried to the state supreme court hich reversed the lower court and ordered a new trial. As this decision ame about two years after the close f the war, it was expected that no urther action would be taken. However, the courts demanded their ound of flesh and a new trial resulted in a new conviction which was stained by the state supreme court. omrade Bentall's sentence was commuted by President Harding to exire just five weeks sooner than it ould normally have done.

A banquet for the close friends and mpathizers of Comrade Bentall is rranged for Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon a big picnic ill be held in Glenwood Park to elcome him back to the ranks of the illiant workers.

On Wednesday the Trades and abor Assembly also elected a committee to extend the greeting of that rganization to the returned "convict."

BLOOD AND STEEL!

The Story of the Struggle of the Workers Against Czar Gary's Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry.

By JAY LOVESTONE

The Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry has aroused the interest of not only the workers involved. A murmur of public disapproval is heard thruout the country against this relic of serfdom. Public men, churchmen and social organisations are giving expression to the utmost antipathy to it. The American Federation of Labor has entered upon another attempt to organize the steel workers; while the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are actively engaged in organizing the workers for a victorious fight against the inhuman twelve-hour day.

"BLOOD AND STEEL" tells the whole story of this inhuman plot against the workers. Read it, get others to read it. Order a number of copies and sell to all workers in all industries. The steel workers must have your support in their fight—which is also your fight.

The Great Steel Strike

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

"THE GREAT STEEL STRIKE", by William Z. Foster, is a book of the first importance in the history of the American labor movement. The great struggle of the steel workers for organization and recognition in 1919, and their terrible battle against opposition among the reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, constitutes one of the greatest epochs in labor history.

The 12-Hour Day in the steel mills has now again become a national issue. Foster's keen analysis of the steel situation, the problems of the steel workers and of their organization is as vital information to-day as when written at the close of the great conflict that shook the mighty kingdom of steel to its foundations. Coolidge Has Plan to Break Coal Strike thirty-four railway, coal, gas, electric, banking, insurance, telephone, telegraph, securities, and the United States Steel Corporation; William Rockefeller, who is a director of the National City Bank, the biggest Bank in America, and thirty-three copper, power, railway, gas, and electric corporations; and Beekman Winthrop, another director of the National City Bank, and twelve steel, railroad, shipbuilding, and savings bank corporations.

It is to the protection of the interests of this unholy galaxy of sworn enemies of Labor that "Strike-breaker" President Coolidge has dedicated himself.

Coolidge Eager to Spring at Throats of Miners

President Coolidge is anxious to spring at the throats of the miners. He is out for a fight, and is looking for blood—workers' blood. He it planning to capitalize the present coal crisis for his own political future.

Coolidge is eager to use the same kind of strikebreaking tactics in the coal controversy as he did in the Boston police strike.

In his mortal thrust against the miners, President Coolidge is playing for big stakes. Rendering strike-breaking service in the anthracite controversy would dwarf even his service in the Boston police strike. Alongside of the feast of browbeating and terrorizing 150,000 powerfully organized miners the act of destroying the municipal policemen's union in Boston fades into insignificance.

Coolidge's tactics in the present coal dispute are dictated solely by his desire to win the unquestioned and unquestionable support of the blackest reactionaries of the country. The President has very little, if anything at all, to lose as far as labor is concerned. Even Sam Gompers, that old midwife of reaction, dares not pledge Coolidge any more than skin-deep allegiance. Bit to the employing class in general and the powerful New England manufacturing and banking interests in particular, Coolidge must cater. With them he must play a different game. Having an eye on the Republican Presidential nomination in 1924, Coolidge is losing no time in lining up at least the eighty-eight votes of a solid New England delegation. Already such dyed-in-the-wool reactionaries as Senators Keyes and Moses, of New Hampshire, are openly proclaiming his as the Republican Presidential choice for 1924.

Miners! Be on Your Guard!

The miners must be on guard against the dangerous manoeuvres of the strikebreaking government and its strikebreaker President. They must not permit themselves to be inveigled into surrender to the flaming ambitions of so avowed an enemy of Labor as is now at the head of the Government.

The miners should be prepared to a man to resist to the limit the savage onslaught launched against their union at the behest of the overlords of finance and industry by the Union-smashing President Coolidge.

Gary Sends Us Propaganda

The close connection between the Steel Trust and the kept press is shown by the fact that Elbert H. Gary's United States Steel Corporation is sending out fullpage sheets of that page of the issue of "The Times, Sunday, July 29, that contained the laudatory article on the 12-Hour Day. This stuff is sent out to long lists of names in the Steel Trust's office in the hope of misleading those who are liable to get the truth about Steel Trust oppression. How we happened to get on this list is a mystery to us. But it came under our open postage, so the great billion-dollar steel trust didn't lose so much after all.

Three Lessons—New York, Albany, Chicago

By JOHN PEPPER

The First Lesson

These three cities symbolize three stations of the Labor Party movement and show the application of three basic tactics.

New York is the seat of the American Labor Party. This American Labor Party was founded by the Socialist Party and is called "American" must likely because it is not a national organization, not even a state organization, only a local city group. For the creation of this remarkably "American" local organization, the Socialist Party was aided by the Farmer-Labor Party of New York and a few Jewish trade unions. The Farmer-Labor Party of New York is another marvelous creature. It is no party at all, has not a single organization in New York and it has little in common with the national organization of the old Farmer-Labor Party. It did not even send delegates to the July 3rd Convention at Chicago. The role of the laboring masses is performed in this "Party" by De Hunt the journalist and the role of the farmer masses by Lefkowitz the teacher.

The American Labor Party was created at the very outset as a private institution of the Socialist Party, and has never for a moment represented anyone but the Socialist Party and its voters. The Jewish trade unions belonging to it do not represent any addition but consist of the old stock of Socialist Party voters. When a part of the trade union movement of New York and the Workers Party tried to join the new organization they were greeted with sabotage and expulsion.

The American Labor Party has never for a moment been anything but a disguised Socialist Party. The Socialist Party felt that it is bankrupt and wished to give a new name to the old dubious firm. The Socialist Party felt that it is no longer being taken seriously and it donned a new mask. In Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, Snug the joiner disguises himself in a lion's skin and Bottom the Weaver wears a donkey's head. The lion's skin of the Socialist Party was—Lefkowitz and its donkey's head—De Hunt. No wonder that no one was frightened at the American Labor Party and that no one fell in love with it, that no one has taken the American Labor Party seriously—not even the Socialist Party itself. The Socialist Party decided recently that at the next election in New York it would put up its candidates on the Socialist Party ticket, and would drop the sign of the American Labor Party.

The American Labor Party is dead. No sooner was it born, than it was dead. The Socialist Party was its midwife and the Socialist Party was its baby-farmer. The fate of the American Labor Party shows clearly the fallacy that it is impossible to create a Labor Party without the trade unions and farmer organizations as backbone of the Labor Party. The nation New York in the history of the Labor Party movement shows that the attempt to create a Labor Party, must disintegrate after a brief existence if it is simply a new name for an existing small political group.

The Second Lesson

Albany was the headquarters of the New York State Convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. Three elements were present at this convention: 1—The Socialist Party; 2—Some representatives of the rank and file of the trade unions; 3—Railroad leaders who composed part of the Democratic Tammany Hall machine.

The railroad leaders did not want a Labor Party, but wanted immediate participation in the elections of the old capitalist parties. Their aim was the very same as that of the official American Federation of Labor with its old Gompers slogan: "Punish the enemies and reward the friends." Their aim was that of Johnston, the leader of the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action.

A part of the rank and file delegation was class-conscious and wanted the immediate formation of the Labor Party. Another part was not class-conscious, but represented the feelings of dissatisfied workers and wanted some kind of action without delay.

The Socialist Party went to Albany in order to represent "Independent Political Action"; but at the same time it was anxious not to lose the friendship of the railroad leaders. The Socialist Party leaders, old slick politicians, wanted to square the circle, with the only result that the railroad leaders beat the Socialist round-heads into the square-heads.

The Socialist Party did not dare to fight in Albany for the idea of a Labor Party, trembling to lose the friendship of the labor leaders. It betrayed the Labor Party in Albany in order to gain the favor of the official railroad brotherhoods, on the same way that it betrayed the Labor Party in Cleveland so as to win the favor of Johnston and Keating, and as it betrayed the idea of amalgamation in order to be tolerated by Gompers. The Socialist Party no longer strives to gain the support of the revolutionary rank and file, for the very reason that the rank and file is revolutionary. And its whole tactic consists today of seeking an alliance with the reactionary labor leaders just because they are reactionary.

Albany stands for the greatest defeat in the political career of the Socialist Party. In 1919 it lost the confidence of the rank and file. Since then, it has not succeeded in striking roots in the masses anywhere. And in Albany the Socialist Party has lost what they wanted. They wanted to block the formation of the Labor Party, they wanted to create a Socialist Party within the old capitalist parties. The only tactic which could have led the Socialist Party to victory was exactly the opposite of that which it pursued: 1—Struggle for the immediate formation of the Labor Party; 2—Appeal to the rank and file against the leaders; for the Socialist Party had the dogma, as formulated by Hillquit, that the rank and file and the leaders are the same and cannot be separated. The Socialist Party has the dogma that the Labor Party can be formed only when not the rank and file alone is for it, but also the big international unions, in other words, the labor officials. The Socialist Party tactic was bound to go bankrupt in Albany, because these dogmas are just as little true for Marxian science as the dogma of the virgin birth by Mary is true for natural science. Neither Gompers nor Johnston will ever bring about the Labor Party. The way of the creation of the Labor Party leads over the political corpses of the $25,000 a year labor leaders. The process of creation of the Labor Party is, in other words, the process of the separation of the rank and file from the influence of the high labor officials. It is probable that the pressure of the rank and file will win over a big part of the small officials for the idea of the Labor Party. It is even possible that when the pressure from below is still greater, some of the high officials will be leaders in the Labor Party movement here in America, and will serve to their last breath as the Praetorian Guard of the capitalists. The greatest lesson of Albany is that in the United States the idea of a Labor Party can win only thru an appeal to the rank and file, only thru the fight against the reactionary leaders.

The Third Lesson

The July 3rd Convention at Chicago presents the third tactical lesson. There were three contending groups present in Chicago: 1—The old Farmer-Labor Party officials; 2—A rank and file representation of over 600,000 workers and farmers; 3—The Workers Party.

The Workers Party faced a difficult tactical dilemma at the July 3rd Convention. It knew that the Convention would be a pure rank and file convention and that none of the national and international unions would be represented. It knew that the whole officialdom of the labor movement is against the Labor Party, Gompers having been against the formation of the Labor Party before the Convention, Johnston having declared that he is "Strongly opposed" to the formation of the Labor Party, and Hillquit having declared that "the Socialist Party is not in favor of the immediate formation of the Labor Party." And it was a matter of common knowledge that the Workers Party in the last year has been developing a more and more intensive propaganda for the idea of the Labor Party.

What sort of tactic was the Workers Party compelled to employ in this situation?

In contrast to the Socialist Party and in contrast to all those crippled by skepticism who believe that the whole social development in the United States is nothing but a vicious circle, the Workers Party holds to the opinion that the recent development of three new facts: 1—Centralization of the government; 2—Leveling of the working class; 3—Disintegration of the old parties, has made the formation of a Labor Party not only possible, but inevitable. The lessons of the Cleveland Conference and the formation of the amalgamation movement have proven conclusively to the Workers Party that the way of the Labor Party in America takes a different direction than in Great Britain. It will be impelled not from above by the officials, but from below by the rank and file.

The Central Executive Committee of our party decided before this July 3rd Convention that it would not ape in Chicago the tactic of the Socialist Party in New York in the formation of the American Labor Party: that it would not force the formation of the Labor Party in case only the Farmer-Labor Party and the Workers Party should appear at the Chicago Convention. For the Labor Party must not be degraded to a new name for an old, small political group, but must be based on trade unions and farmer organizations. The Central Executive Committee after careful evaluation and after thoro debate decided that the representation of half a million workers and farmers would form a sufficiently broad basis upon which to found the Labor Party. There were present in Chicago delegates representing 600,000 workers and farmers. The Workers Party therefore waged the most energetic fight for the immediate formation of a Labor Party.

The officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the old Farmer-Labor Party were frightened back at their own courage. After much hesitation and wavering they revealed themselves traitors, and declared that they do not wish to form a Labor Party at all now, and refuse to admit the Workers Party into the Labor Party. The Executive Committee of our party tried every means to procure a compromise. We offered to accept the old Farmer-Labor Party as part of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party; we proposed five places on the National Executive Committee for the Farmer-Labor Party, and only two for us; we wanted to make every concession on the program. But on the main question we could not make a compromise, if we would avoid being trailors like Fitzpatrick and his comrades. We could not concede on the question of the Labor Party and affiliation of the Workers Party. If we had conceded in this question, we would have applied the same tactic as did the Socialist Party in Albany, and the result would have been the same. The Socialist Party in Albany proposed postponement of the formation of the Labor Party in order to secure alliance with the railroad leaders, losing thereby all power for attraction over the delegates of the rank and file. In the end, the railroad leaders could throw them out, and not a rooster crowed for them. The officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor demanded that we agree to putting off the formation of the Labor Party, and at the same time they put up a motion to throw out the Workers Party, only because it was Communistic, only because it was an adherent to the Third International. The Workers Party thereupon replied in Chicago, in keeping with its duty as a revolutionary party. It fought uncompromisingly for the immediate formation of the Labor Party, thereby gaining the unprecedented support of the delegation of the rank and file, with the result that now it is the recognized leader of the Labor Party idea, and that it was not the Workers Party, but Fitzpatrick and the other officials who had to leave the Convention beaten.

We have three tactical lessons before us: the lessons of New York, Albany and Chicago. Defeat in New York because a small political group without real support from the trade unions wanted to form a Labor Party. Defeat in Albany because a political group sacrificed the idea of the Labor Party for alliance with reactionary labor leaders. Victory in Chicago because the Workers Party allied itself with the rank and file and fought for the idea of the Labor Party. These tactical lessons must be understood by every Communist. We are convinced that every Communist who does not stand hopelessly under the ideological influence of the old Farmer-Labor Party and the Socialist Party, will understand.

The Workers Party To-Day--And To-Morrow

By JAMES P. CANNON

I. Some Aspects of the Labor Party Campaign

(This is the first of a series of articles on party questions by Comrade Cannon which will appear weekly in "THE WORKER")

The struggle for a Labor Party in America is still in its infancy, and so is the career of the Communists. Both, however, have progressed to the point where lessons may be drawn from the tactics employed, and this is one of the chief gains of both. It was nobody's theory, but the decree of history, that these two developments—the beginning of the organized fight for the labor party, and the appearance of the Communist Party in the open arena of the class struggle—should take shape simultaneously. And it requires no prophet to say that the two will be henceforth inter-locked. The attitude of the labor party cannot be considered separately from the role of the Communist Party, in it any more than the Communist Party can be considered independently of the Labor Party.

The recognition that the awakening to class consciousness of the American workers would be reflected in the movement toward a labor party marked a decisive turning point in the life of the Workers Party as well as in the struggle for a Labor Party.

As soon as we saw that our fate as a Communist nucleus was indissolubly bound up with that of the broader movement of conscious and semi-conscious workers for political expression, the revolutionary changes in our conceptions and activities began. Consciousness on the part of the party initiates these changes, but necessity was the driving force. The very nature of the demands made upon the party compelled it to bend and shape itself to the requirements of the new task. Sectarian conceptions could not live in this atmosphere.

And if our participation in the broader movement has exerted a powerful influence on our own party, no less can be said of this labor party itself. The Chicago Conference which, as Comrade Pepper truly said, was "not the end, but rather the beginning of the formation of a genuine Labor Party," reflected the deep impression already made by the Communists. The genuine labor party—that is the party formed and supported by the organized masses—lies in the future. There will be much propaganda, many conferences and long, hard struggle before it is a reality. But the Chicago Conference threw a searchlight on the road that leads forward in.

It showed that the movement for a Labor Party has reached a new stage since the Communists have appeared. Its existence is the organized form and a militant character—this is what the Communists are giving to the Labor Party movement. The Labor Party is no longer an issue to play with; a means of recording one's sentiments and marking time. Chicago the Communists showed that they intend to go forward with the fight for the Labor Party regardless of who drops by the wayside; and the rank and file delegates there, who really want the Labor Party, showed that they will go with those who lead the fight for it, even at the risk of being called Bolsheviks.

Before Chicago we said the movement for a Labor Party would get no help from the reactionary leaders, but that it inevitably takes the form of a struggle against them. After Chicago we can also say that even many "progressive" officials, who have been "standing" for the Labor Party, are not willing now to make a serious fight for it, and that for the present, if we want to remain true to the Labor Party, we must go ahead without them. The Chicago Conference brought out clearly, and emphasized more than ever, the essential rank and file character of the present stage of the Labor Party campaign, and, therefore, enlarged the role of the Communists.

The attack on the rank and file Conference at Chicago showed that the reactionaries will fight any serious move toward a Labor Party so fiercely, and draw the line so sharply, that there will be no middle ground to stand on. All those who wish to be friends with the reactionary officials will have to take their stand against the Labor Party and against the rank and file workers. Those who want the Labor Party will have to fight with the rank and file against the present leaders. The "friends" of the Labor Party and the advocates of nebulous "independent political action" will be rejected by the rank and file, as they were at Chicago, and by the reactionaries, as they were at Albany. The Labor Party issue is rapidly dividing the entire labor movement into two distinct camps for the greatest battle in American labor history.

The left wing, i. e., the class conscious elements of the rank and file, versus the reactionary officialdom—that is the line-up. The very idea of the appearance of the working class as an independent party in the political arena implies a certain degree of class consciousness. And for that very reason class consciousness is the only sound basis upon which the genuine Labor Party can be built or the present struggle for it organized. There is plenty of evidence already to prove that the size and strength and stability of the Labor Party movement is equal to the size and strength of the militant left wing. And further evidence we draw the conclusion that the organization of the Labor Party must begin with the organization of the left wing into a separate political body.

The workers of America have made many attempts in many places at independent political action; and, while this experience has not been uniform, it shows in every case that such action has no stability unless it is led by an organized body class conscious workers. Any other condition results in a mushroom growth which only lives for a day.

Labor Parties formed with the hope of quick political success begin to disintegrate with the first failure. Most of the state units of the old Farmer-Labor Party collapsed after the first campaign. Where they lived longer and made a stubborn effort to keep in the field it was invariably due to their control by a body of militant workers who were committed to the Labor Party as a principle. The state of Washington provides the classic illustration of both these points.

The Farmer-Labor Party in this state has been organized for several years and has weathered several campaigns, local, state and National. At one time it had the backing of the whole labor movement of the state; but failure to win in its first election by any large majority, due to foolish mistakes, by what may appear to them as our own narrow party interests, or by over-anxiety for quick results.

The interest of the Workers Party are identical with the interests of the wider circle of radical workers who are seeking for expression thru the labor party. Unless our party plays an active part in the labor party movement, it is bound to wither into a futile sect, and the developing class struggle will pass it by. And those over-zealous "friends" of the labor party who are willing to subordinate the Workers Party, or eliminate it entirely, would rob the labor party of an element indispensable to its life and growth. The presence of the disciplined body of communists within the Labor party is the one and only guarantee that it will not be killed by its savage enemies from without, or sabotaged and betrayed by its unreliable friends within. The labor party will have a stable and healthy growth from now on only to the extent that it becomes organized, develops a militant character, and carries on an uncompromising struggle against the capitalist parties and their agents in the labor movement. The communists will assist the labor party to follow this line.

The weakness and lack of aggressiveness of some of the elements who have hitherto played an important part in the labor party, imposes a double task upon the communists. We are obliged by the new developments to take a much larger share of responsibility in the labor party campaign, and to give more of our time and energy to it. And these increased duties and responsibilities demand that we build and strengthen the Workers Party, for our effectiveness in the broader movement is measured by the strength and discipline of our own independent party of communism. The campaign we are now starting to increase the membership of the Workers Party is one of the most important immediate steps in the struggle for the labor party.

The part payment applications are to be remitted to us only after full payment has been made. Every party member shall be obligated to purchase at least one share for himself and sell at least ten more to a fellow-worker.

2. Every party member shall be given a supply of applications for shares to sell to the workers in his shop, union, and other workers' organizations.

3. At every meeting of the branch the question of the Daily is to be the first order of business. Reports of the Campaign Committee on funds raised as well as the activities of every member in the drive shall regularly be made.

Socialists in Buffalo Rouse Workers' Ire

By JOHN J. BALLAM
(Special to "The Worker")

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Credentials from the Socialist Party, which was making three delegates, were finally received at the third meeting of the Buffalo Labor Party, called to complete nominations for the city elections, and to act upon the recommendations of the executive committee. The "Socialists" were seated.

From this it might be inferred that the "Socialists" were ready to abide by the constitution of the Buffalo Labor Party, but events developed otherwise.

The Executive Committee of the Buffalo Labor Party recommended that Pat Quinlan, editor of the Socialist weekly, "New Age," must withdraw his name as a candidate on the Socialist Party ticket, if he accepts the nomination of the Buffalo Labor Party. A motion was made to concur in the report.

A delegate demanded a statement from the "Socialist" delegation and the Chairman of the Buffalo Labor Party, who is prominent in the Buffalo Central Labor Council, John Doyle, called upon the "Socialists" to state whether as an affiliated party they were ready to withdraw all their candidates in the city elections. The Socialists" replied that they were not ready to make a statement and that they had no authority to decide for their party. Pat Quinlan took the floor and tried to beg the question by saying that the elections were "non-partisan" and pleaded to be allowed to run on both tickets.

James Campbell, of the Molder's Union, ripped the hide off this specious plea by exposing the fake of so-called non-partisan elections showing that behind every candidate there are class interests. After scores of delegates had denounced the Socialist Party for their dog-in-the-manger and anti-working class attitude and after delegates of the Workers Party had challenged the Socialists" claim to be a party of labor and called upon them to give up their special interests and get united front with the workers as the Workers Party was doing, the convention finally forced the "Socialist" spokesman on the floor.

"Comrade" James Battestoni, Socialist delegate, said that he represented a national (?)—(New York City and Milwaukee) party with international affiliations and that therefore he could not make a decision binding his party; that they came to the Buffalo Labor Party after the house was built; that his party in Buffalo would not consent to be the water boy for the Labor Party; that his party was based on eternal principles (sic); that his party cast 17,000 votes in a city election; that therefore the Socialist Party was nominated its candidate way back in June he could not be bound now to withdraw them in favor of a Labor Party which may put up bad men; and that anyway he wanted to "wait and see" what would happen."

This speech incensed the delegates. They demanded a showdown. One delegate demanded to know where the Socialist vote of 17,000 came from; was it not a labor vote? Another delegate pointed out that the so-called Socialist Party in Buffalo has only 25 members.

Finally the Chairman accepted an amendment in the interest of unity which instructed the Executive Committee of the Buffalo Labor Party to appoint a sub-committee of three to confer with the Socialist Executive on the withdrawal of its candidates. This amendment was put and carried over the strenuous protests of scores of delegates. This gives the Socialist Party of Buffalo three days of grace when it must either decide to go on a scab and anti-labor ticket or come into the Labor Party and form a united front with the Communists and all other workers and thus repudiate the policies of Hillquit, Lee, Berger and Co.

Our Comrades are proving their devotion to the interests of the working class of America by standing shoulder to shoulder with the militant rank and file, uniting them in their struggle for their immediate needs and preparing them for their final conquest of political power and the establishment of the workers as the ruling class.

The Workers Party in Buffalo, thru the activities of its members in the unions and in the Labor Party, is rapidly winning the confidence of the organized and unorganized workers in this city.

In Buffalo, today, it is impossible to scare the workers by telling them that we are reds, Bolsheviks, etc. As one delegate said in the Labor Party convention during the debate on the Socialists, "The trouble with the Socialist Party today, is not that it is too revolutionary for this convention, it is a matter of fact the Socialists are too damned conservative for the average unionist. What we want is action and we want action now. If the Socialist Party wants to delay, let it line up with Gompers where it belongs."

The United Front

By MAX BEDACHT

The tactic of the united front (and thereby we luckily come upon another paradox) is the consistently-continued policy of splitting.

For the policy of the working class there can be only one leitmotif—the interests of the working class. Where these interests are disregarded, the policy serves the opponent, the capitalist class.

The leaderless or misled Colossus of the American working class has until now disregarded his interests almost completely and has thereby served the enemy.

THE WORKING CLASS HAS NO SEPARATE POLITICAL FRONT. ITS UNITED FRONT WAS NOT ONE OF PROLETARIANS AGAINST CAPITAL, BUT WITH IT. As long as there did not arise for the working class a resolute leader who would make clear for it the lessons of its economic struggles, just so long did it continue, politically, to pull at the chart of capitalism; for the S. P., incapable as an instrument of leadership for the working class, would not only do nothing towards establishing an independent united front of the working class, but, as the party of the lower middle class muckraker, it produced the bridle with which even the most radical sections of the working class could be harnessed before the wagon of the bourgeoisie.

At this point, the revolutionists had to effect a tactic by means of a split. They had to split away the most awakened, most revolutionary part of the working class from the common political front with bourgeoisie and proletariat, and in this way to create the nucleus for an independent, uniform front of the working class against the bourgeoisie. In this case also, splitting was the prerequisite for unity.

However, the work was not completed with the split. The masses of workers had to be assembled about the nucleus of unity of the working class created by the split. This work, the splitting away of the proletarian masses from the common front of labor and capital, the setting up of an independent united front of the working class, cannot be achieved with the same slogans with which the Communists, the revolutionary Socialists, were separated from the reformists or Social patriots.

In the matter of the united front it is not a question of uniting elements which belong together thru their ideas. It is not a question of organizational unity of elements which think alike. It is much more a question of common dealing, common action, for the solution of common problems upon which we are wholly agreed; notwithstanding all deep-going differences over the essence, form, or tasks of the revolution. As much as compels the Communists, get he has this one in common with them, that he wants to prevent the destruction of the trade unions by the capitalists. Regardless of the differences existing among the most varied groups of the working class, as for instance, between independent trade unionists, members of industrial organizations (I. W. W., W. I. P. U., etc.), or politically between Communists, S. P. members, F. L. P. adherents and proletarian tail-enders in the capitalist parties, they can still unite on questions dealing with immediate problems. Economically for instance, on the question of a maximum work-day of eight hours; politically, guarding the right to strike, defense of constitutional rights for the workers, and a thousand other demands. The tactic of the united front must show the proletarian masses that they have common interests in spite of all ideological differences. And practically, it must bring about that in spite of all ideological differences, the masses shall fight in common, for their common interests. With this, there is no demand made upon anyone participating in such struggles, to betray his ideology which is suited to himself or to give up his organization.

With the carrying out of the tactic of the united front, the splitting away of the laboring masses from the united front of bourgeoisie and proletariat will then ensue in the struggle, and thru the struggle, and an independent uniform front of the proletariat will arise against the bourgeoisie.

The establishment of such a united front is the condition sine qua non of the proletarian revolution. It is therefore clear that the tactic of the united front is no empty manoeuvre of the Communists, but the accomplishment of their revolutionary duty. And it is therefore no less clear that the opponents of the united front, no matter how revolutionary he his behaviour, hates and fears the revolution. If he rejects the united front on the ground that it is but a dishonest manoeuvre for the proposer, he is like the sharper who rejects a play because he considers the other one more clever than he hopes to be able to practise his finger-skill upon him, undetected. Yes, it is true—the sharper is caught in the game. But that he rejected make the innocent game responsible for his exposure that is demagogy in the highest degree. The honest fighter for the proletariat has nothing to fear from any assistance in the establishment of a united front of the working class. Whoever wants the one, must want the other also. And if the tactic of the united front were only a manoeuvre of the Communists, it would then be the tenfold duty of honest Socialists to participate in it. For only in the practical accomplishment would the dishonesty of the proposer be revealed to the masses.

Just as the splitting of the S. P. was to give the Colossus of the working class a head which ramifies its organisation in all parts of the organism of this class as a free nervous system, so should the united front lead the Colossus to march and to fight. Both are revolutionary requisites. Not to want one of the two, means not-to understand the revolution, or if means its betrayal.

Brutalities of Coal Czardom Are Exposed

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Nowhere in the United States has labor been compelled to wage a greater struggle for its existence than in Pennsylvania. Official lawlessness, corruption and frightful terrorism have been the rule here for decades in order to keep labor in subjection.

The history of labor's struggles in Pennsylvania is a history of the most vicious court injunctions, clear rule, murdered union organizers, shattered homes of union sympathizers. But with all these methods of oppression the insatiable industrial magnates of this state were still unsatisfied, so in 1919 they took advantage of the war hysteria and passed the notorious Pennsylvania State Sedition Law and in 1921 it was amended to make it even more effective as a weapon against labor. Among other things the State Sedition Law declares that sedition shall mean:

"To incite or encourage any person or persons to commit any overt act with a view to bring the Government of this State or of the United States into hatred or contempt."

On the night of April 27th, 1923, a number of Pittsburgh police broke in thru the window into the home of Anna Budnik, a workingwoman who arrived from Europe eight months ago. Anna Budnik is a humble, church going woman. She belongs to no organizations and takes no part in any movement. The walls of her two-room home are decorated with pictures of saints and a crucifix adorns the window of the room that is used both as kitchen and sleeping room. Anna Budnik, who is to become a mother, was awakened from sleep when the window was forced open.

"Upon seeing strange men climb in thru the window and begin to search around I became frightened. I almost lost my speech. I was unable to cry out or to utter a word." One man took me by the arm and was leading me to the door. I realized that he was about to take me away. I placed my arms around the neck of my ten year old little girl and refused to go. I did not know who the men were and where they were to take me. One of the men then placed his arms around my little girl and another around me and tore us apart. They tore part of the flesh out of my left hand scratching my face. Two men picked me up and threw me into a wagon."

This is the story related by Anna Budnik thru an interpretor. Anna Budnik was arrested without warrant. She was detained in prison for eight days. She kept alive on the bread because she was unable to relish the unwholesome food offered her. The office of the District Attorney has no record of her arrest. It was brought to the attention of the office of the District Attorney that Anna Budnik is detained in jail thru a mistake by neighbors who feared for her ten year old child. Due to the experience at the hands of the police Anna Budnik is in poor physical condition and needs the care of a physician.

Matt Budnik, the husband of Anna Budnik, was also arrested without warrant from the factory where he worked. After being in jail for twelve days he was released on $1,000 bail. He was arrested on April 27th but has had no hearing yet. There are no charges brought against him.

Joseph Jokubauski, who does not belong to any political group or industrial organization, who lives on the floor above Budnik was also arrested without warrant. While his wife was out looking for bail for her husband, their seven year old child was killed by an auto. The Pittsburgh papers carried a headline: "Child killed—Red Released."

Both men were discharged by their employers because of the arrest. The police were in search of some one who had formerly lived (about eight months ago) in the rooms now occupied by Budnik.

Let the reader judge who it guilty of sedition. Honest workers who dare to agitate for improved social conditions or those who are responsible for "bringing the Government of this State or of the United States into hatred or contempt" by terrorizing innocent workers and causing tragedy and misery to be brought upon them.

Fascisti Leader in Italy Is Angered By American Labor

The following letter was written by a former "Fascisti" leader in Italy, who, disgusted with the conditions existing in that country, has come to America. He is now a member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, and represented Italy at the World War Veterans, the Socialist Party and the Fascisti Alliance of North America.

From this letter it can be seen how the Fascisti were organized for the purpose of the destruction of the Socialist Party and its labor movement, and in the interests of the capitalist class, and how the Fascisti are now turning on the capitalist class and are organizing a working-class alliance. Its offensive, according to the young Fascisti ex-deputy, is conducted on the basis of spreading false reports.

"Bottai denounces the activities of Communist organizations among the emigrants in inciting them not to send money to Italy since it would support a tyrannical government. . . .

"Bottai also denounces the tactics of the World War Veterans, which he says contains doubtful elements against the New York Fascisti."

Sterile "Marxism"

By H. M. WICKS

While on an organization trip the attention of the present writer was called to the June 28th issue of the "Weekly People," official organ of the Socialist Labor Party, wherein the national secretary of that sect, one Arnold Petersen, utilizes four columns of space trying to extricate his executive committee from the pillory in which he nailed them when he charged that they committed a fundamental error by proclaiming that labor is a commodity.

In his reply Mr. Petersen quotes from the pamphlet "Value, Price and Profit" alleged to have been written by Marx, wherein Marx is made to declare that in using "the word 'value of labor,' I use it as a popular slang term for 'value of laboring power'."

So pathetic, so sterile is the understanding of Mr. Petersen that he actually thinks Marx wrote the docutment attributed to him, in spite of the fact that in a preface to the pamphlet the notorious scoundrel and ingrate son-in-law of Marx, Edward Aveling, admits that he found notes for such a pamphlet among the writings of Marx after the death of Engels.

This is a plain confession of the fact that neither Marx nor Engels during their lives considered the document worth publishing. Yet Petersen, the last of the Mohicans in the S. L. P., triumphantly asserts that Marx himself has a whole chapter in "Value, Price and Profit" dealing with the "Value of Labor." Aveling admits that Marx had nothing to do with arranging the chapters. He says: "My small part in the preparation of this work has been reading the manuscript, making a few suggestions as to English form of expression, dividing the work up into chapters and NAMING THE CHAPTERS, and revising the proof of press." (Emphasis mine.—H. W.)

If Mr. Petersen really wanted to quote an authentic work of Marx on labor power he would have referred to Marx by Aveling he should have quoted the "Misere de la Philosophie" in The Poverty of Philosophy) where, in more consistent, less erroneous term, "value of labor" is instead of the "value of labor power." The "Misere" was written by Marx in 1847 when the fundamental economic theories were not fully matured and in a preface to this work Engels specifically declares:

"It is scarcely necessary to remark that in this work the language is not identical with that of 'Capital'. In this work Marx still speaks of labor as a commodity, and of its purchase and sale, instead of labor power." (Page 27, Poverty of Philosophy.)

While the Marx of 28 (fell into this error, the mature Marx was very careful to emphasize the tremendous importance of carefully distinguishing between the confusing and meaningless term "value of labor" and the correct scientific term "value of labor power." However, it is not even the Marx of 28 that the S. L. P. quotes, but the ingrate son-in-law, Edward Aveling, who was so ignorant of Marx's works that he perverted the notes used by Marx against Weston in 1865. The fact that Marx definitely abandoned and repudiated the term "value of labor" prior to 1865 is proof of the perfidy of Aveling and incidentally the stupidity of the executive committee of the S. L. P.

The decrepit theoretical smokestack of the Socialist Labor Party becomes sterile repeating the mechanical formulae of the Marx of 28, while remaining totally ignorant of the intellectual development of Marx as he approached his crowning achievement, "Capital", where all his early economic writings were revised considerably. His complete abandonment of the unscientific bourgeois term can be found in Part VI of the first volume of Capital where Marx refers to the "value of labor" as an irrational expression of the value of labor-power, and mercilessly ridicules the vulgar economists who used the terminology of the present day Socialist Labor Party.

The spurious atavism of the S. L. P. and other sectarians lies in their blind devotion, amounting to religious fanaticism, to every line attributed to Marx. They are dogmatists of a type that Marx held in the utmost contempt. With what shafts of satire would Marx have scorned the pretensions of parasites whose stock in trade is religiously repeating his earlier writings because they appear to justify hopeless sectarian blundering!

The difference between we Marxians of the Workers Party and the sterile secretarians of the Socialist Labor Party is that we are critical followers of Marx, using the intellectual weapons of scientific socialism to advance the revolutionary movement, while they make of Marxism a dead dogma and quote from all his writings without understanding the intellectual development of Marx the man, or the historical development of critical Communism.

Despite the crude efforts of Mr. Petersen to bolster up a case for himself and his co-enthusiasts of the executive committee of the Socialist Labor Party, that aggregation stands branded as anti-Marxian. Its economic confusion is on the same low level with its grotesque perversion of history, as it follows the intellectual leadership of the renegade Karl Kautsky in maliciously perverting the fundamental Marxian position on the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Kautsky-like, Petersen vilifies Marx by referring to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat as a "loosely coined phrase" which is a "reactionary measure as far as the United States is concerned."

For a long time the dunder-heads of the S. L. P. have been repeating the "scientific explanation" of the servile apostate, Karl Kautsky, against the "Dictatorship of the Proletariat," When so-called Marxists resort to the cheap expediency of reformers doing confidently because the recipients of the keen sympathy of the press.

Some there still are who believe that they read in the history of capitalist press. W. G. Butt and E. G. Hall of Withrop, Mass., bearing of the wonderful opportunities in the New Hampshire mill fields. Messrs. Jobs going begging, hoofed it to Concord, New Hampshire, and applied to the state fee employment bureau. They were informed that there were only 50 or $7 jobs listed, and so they had to be satisfied with less; how much, less the news item does not specify. Somewhere in New Hampshire, there are two young men, sadder but wiser.

Detroit to Discuss Party Policies

The 5th Year Film Show is going to be shown at the Labor Temple, 14th St., cor. 2nd Ave., August 22nd to the 25th, was recently reviewed by Comrade M. J. Olgin as follows:

"Russia emerges from the shadows. The stern face of the giant land is alight with new pride. . . .

"Where the Czar's servants crunched in beastly greed the bones of the common people, children's voices fill the air with merry chatter; children of the working class, reign supreme in the old forbidden palaces, in the awe-inspiring castles, in the extravagantly beautiful villas by the sea. No comfort is too high for the proletarian children.

"Where the cossack swung his sabre to crush and maim protesting workmen free from the air flutters the red banner, and proletarian masses, masters of their own country march in endless columns in affirmation of their power.

The Third International meets in the Coronation Hall of the Romanoffs.

"Work everywhere.

"Russia is busy. Russia digs coal, builds bridges, builds schools, builds brain and muscle, builds up a new generation to whom the nightmare of the past will be a legend.

"Russia is smiling. Good humor shines from eyes that looked numberless of times into the face of death."

"Red soldiers marching, red soldiers at their drills and in action all of these and hundreds of other scenes one sees by watching "The Fifth Year."

Sadder but Wiser
By WILLIAM SIMONS

BOSTON, Mass.—"Six and Seven Dollars a Day for Farm Jobs," was the indignant reproach cast by our local press at the bold brigands who are holding up the farm owners for outrageous wages. Editorials were written in condemnation of the wretches who thought not at all of the prosperity of this renowned section of the country, and seized the opportunity to extort unearned money from the helpless farmers, their country's pride. The farmers who have been exploited by the financial interests whose bidding the newspapers are doing, suddenly became the recipients of the keen sympathy of the press.

Some there still are who believe that they read in the history of capitalist press. W. G. Butt and E. G. Hall of Withrop, Mass., bearing of the wonderful opportunities in the New Hampshire mill fields. Messrs. Jobs going begging, hoofed it to Concord, New Hampshire, and applied to the state fee employment bureau. They were informed that there were only 50 or $7 jobs listed, and so they had to be satisfied with less; how much, less the news item does not specify. Somewhere in New Hampshire, there are two young men, sadder but wiser.

The Bills of the Victors

Those brave capitalist souls gathered in the conclaves of the Institute of Politics, at Williamstown, Mass., to settle the problems of international politics, have decided that Soviet Russia has less chance of recognition under President Calvin Coolidge than it did under Harding. To be sure, the opportunities were not very great even under Harding, with Hughes and Hoover doing the advising. But with U. S. Senators coming home with pro-Soviet views and oil capitalists returning from Moscow with concessions in their pockets, the stand of "The Three Hatchets" was beginning to waver.

The Harding-Hughes-Hoover trio often mourned over the czarist debts that the Bolsheviks refused to pay. Coolidge will also have many opportunities for shedding tears over these debts, if we are to believe a New York Times dispatch from Berlin, quoting Leonid Krassin to the effect that: "Russia's economic condition has improved so much that she no longer needs to purchase international recognition at a heavy price of reassuming the burden of the Czarist debts." This is the Krassin, late Soviet trade envoy in London, who was so moderate in his Communist views that he was replaced by Christian Rakovsky, the aggressive head of the Ukrainian Soviet Republic.

This Soviet optimism may raise another spectre for world imperialism. The Russians have repeatedly declared that the damages inflicted by intervention upon the workers and peasants under Soviet Rule more than offset the Czarist debts. Thus, the Soviet, being strong enough to repudiate the indebtedness of the late Czar's government, might go a step further and submit its own bills to London, Paris, Washington, Berlin and Rome for damages suffered.

This is not a phantom of the imagination. France is trying to collect more billions of gold marks from Germany. She is doing this as the right of a victorious nation to collect damages from a conquered foe. Soviet Russia stands triumphant over all her enemies. She is not only entitled to, but is getting into a position where she will be able to present her bills of indebtedness of the heads of all the imperialist governments that tried to accomplish her ruin. And their number is legion. One of the biggest bills could be presented to the Coolidge administration at Washington. There are big chances that it will be so presented.

Spreading "The Truth"

Another deluge of "the truth" about the revolutionary movement in the United States is to fall upon "the public mind." It is to be vomited upon a helpless land by the National Civic Federation, according to its president, Alton B. Parker, corporation lawyer. But the preliminary announcement of this "open shop" gang leader in evening clothes indicates that the quality of the promised "truth" will register the same putrid brand as always. Mr. Parker, for instance, who allows all his witnesses in court to take the oath "to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" gets away with this:

"Fortunately, in the American labor movement, which the Communists are desperately endeavoring to capture, there is an adequate and well-organized defense. This is evidenced by the recent action of the United Mine Workers of America in ordering the expulsion of all members accepting the doctrines of Communism; by the action of the American Federation of Labor in threatening to cancel the charter of any local establishing relations with the Third International."

Members of the miners' union have nowhere been expelled for accepting the doctrines of Communism. President Lewis has threatened to oust members belonging to the "outlaw" (with the International) Miners' Progressive Committee. But none has been expelled for this reason. Some miners in Kansas were expelled by their local organization for attending a meeting that sent a delegate to the Pittsburgh Conference of the Progressive Committee. The crooked lawyer, Parker, however, refrains from giving publicity to these desperate acts of bureaucratic despotism within the labor movement.

Local unions of the American Federation of Labor could not, if they would, establish relations with the Third (Communist) International, because the International only accepts the affiliation of its Communist sections in the world's different nations. Perhaps Mr. Parker's publicity refers to the fact that some central labor bodies have given individuals credentials to the congresses of the Red International of Labor Unions. But this isn't the complaint that Gompers has against the Seattle, Minneapolis and other central labor bodies. His chief grievance here is that these labor bodies demand an independent "Labor Party," that they favor amalgamation and other Trade Union Educational League policies, and seek governmental recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic.

Among the members of the committee that is to help spread Parker's Civic Federation propaganda against Communism are John Hays Hammond, multi-millionaire; Samuel Gompers, Frank Walsh, the two cultured Grand Rapids furniture manufacturers, and Warren S. Stone, the engineers' chief. Just how these pillars of "Labor" feel about the Red menace, and John Hays Hammond, multi-millionaire, who has the greatest interest in "Labor Spies," such as Hiram Bingham, Hutcheson, protector of Mussolini's Fascisti agents in this country.

The warped and twisted information that this band of multi-millionaires will send out to "the public" will resemble the truth but little, if at all. The only hope that the Pan-Hellenic Federation crowd can have is that a few Henry Dubb readers of the capitalist and "Socialist" press may believe some bits of it.

"Forgive and Forget"

The "Socialists" are not yet convinced that they were kicked out of the Albany Conference for Progressive Political Action. In an interesting document, addressed to William H. Johnston, national chairman of the Conference, they urge the president of the International Association of Machinists to call a "New State Conference."

It is difficult to understand what the "Socialists" hope to gain by a second gathering. The railroad brotherhoods, with their Tammany Hall allies, have definitely decided to trail with the old parties. The "Socialists" are against the organization of a "Labor Party" on the theory that "the time has not yet arrived". Even in New York City the "Socialists" have betrayed the shadow of united independent political action to be found in the American Labor Party. The only hope the "Socialists" can place in a second state conference is that it might give them an opportunity to regain some of the prestige lost in the first ill-fated meeting. In order to get this opportunity the "Socialists" promise Johnston they will "forgive and forget" everything that has already happened. This is the promise of one who has lost. It is the plea of the supplicant for favors. It is a confession that the abject servility of the "Socialist" leadership to the trade union bureaucracy has been increased by another degree.

All this the broad membership of the labor movement will never "Forgive and Forget." The workers and farmers are demanding a united class political front. The railroad brotherhoods will not give it to them. The Conference for Progressive Political Action, organized to blaze new paths, has turned about and is trying to force a retreat of labor's advanced elements to the old party positions they have long abandoned. And the "Socialists" are hanging on to this retreat with all the desperate tenacity of hungry camp-followers, willing to subsist on wayside leavings.

The heavy task, therefore, of uniting the oppressed in the struggle for class political action falls on the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, in New York State as elsewhere. All workers and farmers who look forward, and refuse to turn back, will enlist their organizations under its standards.

A Real Menace to Negro Workers

"The Messenger" is a Socialist publication seeking to speak for Negroes. It is more a part of the "Socialist" front against Communism, than it is an organ espousing the cause of the colored workers. This is more manifest than ever in the August issue of this publication, containing an editorial, "The Menace of Negro Communists."

The same editorial, headed "The Menace of Jewish Communists," or "The Menace of White Communists," might just as easily have appeared in Cahan's Daily Forward, or Oneal's New York Call. In fact, the Randolph-Owen editorship seeks to take in the whole field when it declares, "Communism can be of no earthly benefit to either white or Negro workers in America."

We wonder why these editors confined themselves to America. Perhaps they were afraid to face the actual working out of the Communist program in relation to the subject nations and races of the world imperialism that sits in power in London, Paris and Rome.

But these editors do drop themselves into a trap when they conclude with a final flourish, "How foolish, then, it is to advocate Communism to the Negro Workers before they have even grasped the fundamentals and necessity of simple trade and industrial unionism."

What we do the "Socialists" advocate industrial unionism? This is a question "The Messenger" editors should answer. Only thru the Communist activities of the Trade Union Educational League do we find any real drive for amalgamation—for industrial unionism. And the most bitter attacks of the "Socialists," especially "Socialists" in the labor unions, are directed against the Trade Union Educational League, because of its struggle to create industrial unions out of the present conflicting craft unions. Only thru really class conscious industrial unions can the United Front of all workers in the huge steel, meat packing, lumber and mining industries be won. And the struggle to achieve this goal is a Communist struggle. The Negroes, like the white workers, will learn that one menace they must overcome is that of "Socialism" trying to chain them in the lap of reactionary labor. The place of all Negro toilers is in the militant ranks of the organized workers, inspired by the principles of Communism.

The Inhuman Demands of "Profits"

"In every stock-jobbing swindle every one knows that sometime or other the crash must come, but every one hopes that it may fall on the head of his neighbor, after he himself has caught the shower of gold, and placed it in safety.

"APRES MOI LA DELUGE! is the watchword of every capitalist and of every capitalist nation. The Red

They call him "red," and hiss the name they call the words sting man is the animal who delves in mine to bring the world its coal; who guides the train thru dangers to its goal; who toils at lathe and forge and plow the tracks and carries a world's burdens on his back. And should he dare to overlords complain, demand a decent wage for brawn and brain—they call him "red."

Who call him "red"? you ask. The men who'd set a worker at his task and coin his blood into their illgot gain; who'd starve his children, rob him of his health, that greed may loll in luxury and wealth. They've hired the press to call him "red" as well—this brand of parasites, this brood of hell.

My mind reverts thru centuries of long ago to those who helped the race to upward climb, and from the beast to human stature grow (which black Reaction counts as crime). So while our planet whirls thru space, till bigotry and greed are dead, each warrior gladly takes his place in serried ranks of the deepest "red"—Adopted from Walt Drummond.

Give "The Call" a Medal

The double cross of the Royal Order of Sikhs should be voted the New York Call by the Stresemann Government of Germany. Why? The "Socialist" organ in New York gives first page space to the pictures of a Gang of German Fascisti, under the caption of "Defending the German Government." It states the real purpose of these white guards when it says, "These troops are used to repel attacks against the government by dissenting groups." No doubt. The Call will now round up some pictures of the remnants of the Wrangel's, or Denikin's counter-revolutionaries and print them, too. It might also add the picture of a goodly number of American "Socialists" to its rogue's gallery. That would be a valuable collection for posterity.

Greetings to Marty

In common with workers of other countries, American Communists send their heartiest fraternal greetings to Andre Marty, just released from a French prison where he has spent four long years. During these four years the name of Marty has become the symbol of international working class solidarity, and his valiant leadership during the Black Sea Mutiny has been honored by the French workers in numerous elections, in which the imprisoned Marty headed the poll.

The release of Marty is a great victory, both for our French comrades and a triumph for Marty, whose career and personality has inspired such a powerful movement that it would not be disregarded, even by such an arch reactionary as Raymond Poincare.

The Communists and the Labor Party

The Australian Labor Party has accepted the affiliation of the Communist Party of Australia. There are seven Communists on the Central Executive Committee of 33 of the Labor Party. Considerable interest is therefore attached to a declaration that appeared in a recent issue of "The Workers' Weekly," the official organ of the Australian Communist Party, as follows:—

THE LABOR CONFERENCE AND THE COMMUNISTS

The endorsement of the principle of the affiliation of the Communist Party to the Labor Party has broken down the last barrier between the revolutionary workers and the workers as a whole.

The road is now open for the Communists to carry their propaganda to the masses unhindered. The Communist will still continue to meet mass opposition, but the fact that the Annual Conference of the Labor Party has officially recognised the Communist Party as an integral part of the Labor movement is a greater weapon in the hands of the Communist than the Capitalist slogans which his reactionary opponent in the Labor movement will use against him.

It breaks the heart of the conservative to see his cherished institutions change. And the fact that the Labor Party which has so often assailed the militant workers has now recognised them not only as a part of the movement, but as an organised part of the movement, is indeed a change.

The Communist Party will take full advantage of this change that it fought so hard for; it will continue its work of educating and organising the workers for Communism. The Communist Party rightly looks upon this decision of the Conference as a result of its work during its short history. It looks forward to greater results following upon this open recognition of the Communist Party by the Labor Party.

The Communists have not ceased to be Communists. The Communist Party has not ceased to be a Communist Party. On the contrary, the Communist Party will now become a real Communist Party, a party of the workers, a revolutionary political party, which will gather to itself the best elements from the Labor movement as whole, and weld these elements into a fighting vanguard of the Australian Labor movement.

Yet less discipline, but more discipline. Not less work, but more work. Not less education, but more education. Not fewer Communists, but more Communists. Not a smaller party, but a larger party. These must now become the slogans of all Communists in taking up their task for the future. This is the only meaning that the United Front can have for a Communist.

Next Issue of "Progressive Miner"

The forthcoming issue of the "Progressive Miner," which will appear August 15th, will contain very interesting correspondence that passed between Lewis and Farrington both before and after their recent alliance.

It will be remembered that Farrington has charged Lewis with very gross corruption in the administration of his office, practically claiming bribery on the part of operators to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars for permission to operate mines, while on Lewis' part Farrington is charged with having accepted bribe money from W. J. Lester to permit him to run his Herrin mine.

The Progressive Movement in Illinois has gotten so hot for Farrington that he decided to "make up" and Lewis was glad to welcome him at a time when he was under fire. The alliance of these two old labor politicians has a great educational value to the miners and the correspondence is quite recent.

Browder Answers Attack by Lefkowitz in New York Call on the Federated Farmer-Labor Party

Earl R. Browder, associate editor of the Labor Herald, official organ of the Trade Union Educational League, has written an answer to the attack, published in the New York Call, July 29, by Abraham Lefkowitz, of the New York City American Labor Party, on the Federated Farmer-Labor Party Convention in Chicago. It is as follows:

By EARL R. BROWDER

Dear Sir and Brother —I have just seen your article in the Call Magazine of yesterday's date, and the whole thing is so extraordinarily out of line with the facts that I feel you must be the victim of misrepresentation. I can not reconcile myself to the opinion that you would, with deliberation, so viciously misrepresent the events before and during the Chicago Convention. Feeling that you have been misinformed, I am going to give you some facts which you can easily verify if you are really interested in getting the truth of the matter. The outstanding misstatements in your article, as opposed to the actual facts, are as follows:

It was not agreed at any private conference between the Workers Party and the Farmer-Labor Party that the latter should "hold a convention of its own group," etc., as stated in your second paragraph. The first knowledge which the Communists had of the proposed Convention came with the publication of the official call for same. The invitation that the Workers Party later received carried no intimation of a separate convention for the Farmer-Labor Party, but was to attend a "Monster Unity Convention" to establish united action of all working-class political forces. Read the official call for proof of this.

The determination of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party leaders to hold their own narrower convention before the big affair, was an afterthought on their part, brought in to meet some situation in their own ranks. When we were informed of that change in their plans but a few weeks before the Convention, we immediately sensed a move against us—but we accepted the change without a protest, even tho it was an arbitrary act which departed fundamentally from the original call.

The many minor misstatements about the personnel of the delegates may be ignored in this letter, altho they convey an impression that is completely contrary to the facts, more serious is the false charge that "twenty-four hours before the Farmer-Labor Convention was to have been called to order the leaders of the Communists who had been cooperating with the Farmer-Labor leaders served notice that they would not be bound by their previous understanding but insisted that the conference be transformed into a convention." I take it for granted that you had been informed to this effect, but I want to tell you that whoever so informed you told you a deliberate and unvarnished lie. We had never had any understanding that limited the actions of the Chicago Convention. We had attempted to come to some understanding as to what was to be done, but had been met by the Farmer-Labor Party Cook County leaders with a refusal to bind the Convention in any way. Their position was that the Convention must be left perfectly free without any kind of agreements being arrived at beforehand. What we did do 24 hours before the Convention was to write to the National Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party a letter suggesting that their own narrower convention before the large body met, should be restricted to their regular delegates from the Farmer-Labor Party and affiliated unions. This suggestion of ours was officially accepted by the Farmer-Labor Party National Committee.

In spite of this understanding the Cook County leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party attempted immediately the convention opened to seat every one in their narrower convention except the Workers Party and a half dozen other delegates, quite plainly a hostile move against the Workers Party, altho their own credentials committee unanimously recommended that everyone, including the Workers Party, be seated at once. The efforts of the Cook County leaders to discriminate was naturally opposed by the vast majority of the delegates, at least 600 out of 650. It was this false move on the part of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party leaders which was the beginning of their estrangement from the body of the delegates.

Let me emphasize that the Workers Party did not want to be seated in the narrower convention—neither did it want its members who were delegates from other organizations to be seated. We officially requested that this be not done, and our request was accepted beforehand. But the breach of understanding on this question made by the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party leaders forced the question before the mass of the delegates, who unanimously, voted to seat every one at once, with the Workers Party not voting on the question.

You state that the organization committee was opposed because the Communists had control of it. It was not true that the Communists had a majority of any Committee But the composition of the organization committee was accepted on the floor of the Convention, on the half of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party by Delegate McVey, and no one at any time proposed any alternative plan for selecting it. The Cook County Farmer-Labor Party leaders fought against it only because the motion carried an endorsement of the immediate formation of the Federated Party; they were against the idea of the Federated Party and not against the method of selecting the committee which they agreed was fair representation of the convention.

The fact is that the Cook County leaders have suddenly abandoned the idea which led them to call the Convention. What their motives were for this can only be conjectured. But the fact that they did not make one single proposal to the convention is proof of that statement. The last-minute proposition which their spokesman spoke was absolutely ill-timed. It was deliberately (and in their own caucus openly) framed to create an excuse for breaking away. Several proposals in their name were turned down on the grounds that "the Workers Party would accept it; we want something they cannot accept." You can verify this fact from a dozen sources, the authenticity of which you cannot question.

In the face of all these facts your charges of breach of understanding and bad faith on the part of the Workers Party can only be the result of gross misrepresentation made to you, or of gross dishonesty on your part. I cannot bring myself at this time to believe it is the latter which is the reason I write you. It is particularly hypocritical and "dishonorable," this mud thrown at the Workers Party, because the people who threw it are themselves guilty of their own charges. May I ask that you investigate my statement and let me know if you do not think that a public retraction and your false and misleading article is in order?

And why not, while talking about the Chicago Convention, say something about the program and principles adopted, and whether they fit the needs of the workers or not? After all, that is the real issue before the workers, and your false childish charges and counter-charges which are only a smoke-screen to hide the retreat of some demoralized soldiers of the labor movement. What do you think about the program?

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Earl R. Browder

World Famous Communist Journalist Greets Campaign for "Daily"

Karl Radek, world-famous Communist journalist and one of the dominating spirits in the Communist International, has cabled his greetings to the committee in charge of the campaign for "The Daily Worker." It is as follows:

"The publication of an English-language daily by the Workers Party is of the most vital necessity for the American movement. All efforts must be made by the entire party to establish this 'Daily,' which will take a leading part in the political and economic problems of the United States. I wish you the best of success in this campaign, and have full faith in the American comrades."

NOTE—William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, will be one of the speakers at the meeting this Thursday [illegible]

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The contemplated action of the bureaucratic machine of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against the active members of the Trade Union Educational League has already begun. In compliance with orders from the general executive board steps have already been taken to remove the active and devoted union members for the only reason that they belong to the Trade Union Educational League. The machine believes that it can get rid of the League members by breaking up the organization. With such action the reactionaries hope to dispose of the "League Program" in the union. In the fight against the League the reactionary machine hopes to hide its criminal inability and reactionary tactics, that have been responsible for the present demoralized conditions in the unions.

The beginning was made in Chicago with two League members who were delegates to the Joint Board. Obeying an order from "The International's" office in New York, Vice President Meyer Perlstein of "The International" preferred charges against them for belonging to the Trade Union Educational League.

Big Struggles of U. S. Labor Demand the Communist Daily

Messages of greeting accompanied by pledges of support continue to pour into the headquarters of the drive for "The Daily Worker."

They come from the spokesmen of the workers in all sections of the country. They are all permeated with the enthusiasm that helps put this big drive across to victory.

Earl R. Browder, associate editor of "The Labor Herald," joins his co-worker William Z. Foster, whose statement we published last week, in urging the immediate necessity of a Communist Daily. Browder says:

Party Activities Demand "Daily"

"The Communist activities [illegible] Party, all unanimously demand a daily paper to carry the news and our program to the American workers every day of their lives." This is the immediate task. Let every member do his share."—Earl R. Browder.

"Daily" Good Anti-Toxin

"Insurance is the best policy. I am convinced that there is no more effective medium by which the workers can make their political and industrial strength felt in their fight for what they need most than a virile Communist Daily. A powerful workers daily is the best insurance not only against the "poison pens" of the capitalist master-minds but also the best means for spotting the spotlight on the high spots of the class conflict that is day by day more and more engulfing the working masses. The political outlook for 1924 is a stormy one for Labor. All working men and women should get behind the drive to launch a daily to help pilot them thru the troubled waters ahead."—Jay Lovestone.

Pledges Support to Campaign

"The City Central Committee of Local Boston received with great joy and enthusiasm your decision to launch the English Daily, which means a declaration of war upon all enemies of the working class of this country.

"All the delegates voted to send you our fraternal greetings, supporting wholeheartedly your historic decision and pledged to do the utmost financially and morally for the English Daily.

"Some comrades will do their

"On with the Work!

"Long live the Daily of the Workers Party of America."—Robert Zelms, Secretary, Local Boston."

The Youth and "The Daily"

"The campaign for a militant working class daily comes to the front at a time when the young workers of this country must fight side by side with the Workers Party. Child labor has never been more prevalent than it is now and yet there is no aggressive campaign carried on against this dreadful practice of the capitalist class. 130,000 children will not find seats when they return to school this fall. Military camps are humming like beehives and the boys are being drilled for another World War. The children of the workers are being "Goose-Stepped" in the "public" capitalist schools.

"Labor is fast recovering from its long deep slumber. The Amalgamation movement, the forward stride towards a labor party, the cry for a workers and farmers government is arousing them. And now a new light, a new vital fighting force will bring him to his power . . . A FIGHTING MILITANT DAILY . . . A daily which will fight for the youth . . . A daily that will carry with it the hope of the world."—Al Schaap.

Inspiration to Language Sections

"The day when our "Worker" will begin to appear daily will be a day of triumph and celebration for every militant worker in America. It will be an event of great encouragement and inspiration, particulary to us, of the language sections of the Party, to whom the appearance of an English daily will signify that at last the native and Americanized worker is coming into the revolutionary movement to assure its final and lasting success. All support to the campaign for a militant labor daily in the English language!"—Alexander Bittelman, Secretary, Jewish Federation.

Boston Hails Daily

"Boston, aptly called by Villard, the journalistic pour farm, and other cities of New England, all without a labor party, are the fertile field for a communist daily. To shatter the encrusted conservatism of the workers and farmers of this section is a formidable task, which will be lightened by a daily barrage of communist education. Launching the daily on November 7, will be a mighty step toward our goal."—William Simons, Organizer, Massachusetts District, Workers Party.

President Cal Coolidge, the 100 Percenter

Second Article

By JAY LOVESTONE

In his book, "Washington Close Up" Edward G. Lowry has called "Silent" Cal Coolidge "a politician who does not, who, will not, who seemingly cannot talk."

It is a hot day in January when Coolidge talks clearly and distinctly about the problems confronting the country. Yet, Coolidge's whole history—his meteoric political rise from a local figurehead to a national figure and international importance—has been marked by one hundred per cent loyal service to the employing class and uninterrupted hostility to the working and farming masses. Despite President Coolidge's much overadvertised silence and oppressive generalizations and vagaries—such as "a plan to strive for perfection" and "our platform"—every thread of his political record is a chain forged against the city and rural workers.

Having had fortune and greatness thrust upon him, Coolidge has become the thirtieth President of the United States at a time when the country is on the eve of giant class conflicts. The rise of Coolidge, who has ridden into national infamy thru outright strikebreaking activities portrays with painful clarity the unbridled domination of the employing class over the working masses. Nothing can clinch this truth as forcefully as an examination of the President's record.

His Service to Capital

When the capitalists were laying their plans to drive the American workers and farmers into the infernal slaughter in Europe, the Massachusetts employers did more than their bit. And in the Bay State's preparedness drive and other activities to insure the maximum force to save Dollar-Democracy, Coolidge was more than there. Says the Republican Campaign Text Book for 1920: "He was actively instrumental in putting Massachusetts in the lead in preparation and later in the execution of plans which resulted in the big part Massachusetts played in the World War."

Already the army and navy leaders have announced that they are pleased with Coolidge in the Presidency. These war lords point with joy to such declarations of our new President as follow:

"The only hope for peace lies in the protection of the arts of war."

"One of our first duties is military training."

"We must never neglect military preparation again."

"The great problem which our present experience has brought is the development of man power."

"To a free people the most reactionary experience, short of revolution, is war. In order to organize and conduct military operations a reversion to an autocratic form of Government is absolutely necessary."

After he helped smash the Boston police strike he ran for re-election as Governor under the slogan of "Law and Order." In this super-patriotic campaign of his, Coolidge was supported by the powerful capitalist spokesmen of both parties. Congratulations and promises of support poured in on him from Governors, newspapers, Labor-hating Agencies and Chambers of Commerce the country over.

The Democratic Party was about to face a national election Woodrow Wilson, then President, thus wired Coolidge on his Gubernatorial re-election: "I congratulate

The Miners Will Fight!

The strike looms in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields. It is being forced by the mine owners, who refuse to recognize the miners' union and grant an increase in wages. The mine owners have forced the ending of the Joint Conference at Atlantic City, and the mine workers will quit their jobs on Friday, Sept. 1, unless their demands thru the strike.

This week "THE WORKER" has secured the statements of two of the representative spokesmen of the coal miners in the conferences held with the bosses in New York City and Atlantic City. These statements outline the case for the mine workers.

Christ J. Golden, president of Dist. 9, is one of the staunch advocates within the union for the nationalization of the coal mines. As member of a committee on nationalization, he joined in submitting a report on this question that was so progressive that it was rejected and attacked by the Lewis administration.

Rinaldo Cappelini, President of Dist. 7, only recently assumed that position after defeating the candidate of the Lewis administration. Golden and Cappellini stay therefore be considered as closer to the rank and file in the present negotiations with the bosses, than the miners' officials within the Lewis administration. Golden says:

An Exclusive Statement Given Specially to "The Worker"

By CHRIST J. GOLDEN

President, Dist. No. 9, United Mine Workers of America

The anthracite coal miners are going to stand pat. There isn't going to be a pickaxe swinging in the anthracite fields Sept. 1st, unless we get our fundamental demands. The anthracite miners have never gotten a thing without fighting for it. We know we must fight to win anything at all. We know we will have to fight every inch of the way to win any of our demands now.

For three years we haven't had a wage increase. The miners wanted a wage increase in 1922. They fought for one then and they are going to fight for it now, until they get it.

The anthracite miners are determined to get their rights this time. In 1920, after Thompson, head of the Anthracite Com-

The First Response for "The Daily"

The Bulgarian Branch of Madison, Ill., holds the honor of being the first to contribute to the $100,000 fund for the establishment of "The Worker" as a daily. Immediately upon the announcement of the opening of the campaign, these comrades sent in a check for $30.00, with the assurance that this is only the first step in their cooperation to make "The Daily" possible.

Other contributions during the week have been received from the South Slavic Branch of Illinois, $25.00, and John Slezak $10.00.

These contributions are thus far from comrades who are members of the language federations, and promises every assurance that our Federations will do their part in the campaign.

Members of the English Branches! What do you say to this example of the foreign comrades?

Applications for shares have been sent to your branches. Take up the drive for "The Daily" at the next Branch meeting.

Chicago Aids Campaign for Labor Party

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO, ILL.—After one of the most spectacular sessions in its recent history, the Chicago Federation of Labor adopted the Minnesota Federation of Labor resolution calling upon the American Federation of Labor Convention, at Portland, Ore., Oct. 1, to change its Constitution so as to permit the organization of a great labor party in this country. The resolution adopted was presented by J. W. Johnstone, Arne Swabeck, A. Overgaard and a number of other left-wing delegates to the Federation.

The resolution was opposed by a faction in the Federation, but they were unable to defeat it. The Right Wing, led by Oscar Nelson, Vice-President of the Chicago Federation of Labor and City Alderman attempted to kill it for the coming convention by submitting it to a referendum of the local unions which would take two or three months. Nothing [illegible] delegates, who [illegible] solution as much as the Right Wing moved that it be amended so that it would call upon the American Federation of Labor to endorse the Farmer-Labor Party.

The Resolutions Committee taking still another track, voted concurrence in the resolution, and proposed to substitute for the phrase, "including all working class political organizations," in the first resolve, wherefore, the words, "Farmers' and other organizations in harmony with the organized labor movement."

The strength of the resolution was apparent, immediately discussion took place. It swept aside the opposition of the Right Wingers and the farmer-laborites, occupying the center in the Chicago Federation of Labor, who ventured to oppose it. Vice-President Nelson, leading the reactionaries, realizing that his sabotaging motion to submit the question to the local unions had no chance whatever to carry, hastily withdrew it, to save his face. Then, for the same reasons, the Farmer-Laborites took the same action regarding their motion. Upon the special appeal of John Fitzpatrick, who could see a defeat of the Farmer-Labor Party, right in the open meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, the delegate who made the motion to have the resolution propose that the American Federation of Labor should endorse the Farmer-Labor Party, withdrew his motion—to save it from sure defeat. Then the combined center and Right Wing concentrated their fight on carrying the motion proposed by the resolutions committee over the opposition of the Left Wing who voted for original words. The resolution presented originally by the Left Wing delegates carried unanimously as amended by the resolutions committee.

The Left Wing in the Minnesota Federation of Labor presented a similar resolution, which was unanimously adopted by a rising vote. Now the Chicago Federation of Labor gets into line on the same proposition. This resolution unquestionably indicates a big fight on this proposition both in the Illinois Federation and the American Federation of Labor Convention. It is one of the sharpest challenges of Gompers' Non-partisan political policy issued by the Chicago Federation of Labor.

NOTE—The resolution adopted will be found on Page Two.

Send Minor and Engdahl on Big Tour for "Daily Worker"

The opening event of the campaign to establish a great Daily Newspaper of the revolutionary workers of America is the selection of Robert Minor and J. Louis Engdahl to make a nationwide tour in the interests of the $100,000 Fund. The Chicago Local has already arranged for a gigantic mass demonstration to open the tour on Sept. 23.

The selection of Minor and Engdahl for this tour has been made because of the vast and intimate experience of these Comrades in the battles of American Labor. Robert Minor, editor of "The Liberator," and known internationally as Labor's greatest Cartoonist, has been correspondent in last Michigan Copper Strike, when Moyer was kidnapped and deported. In 1913 he was on the job in the famous Paint and Cabin Creek coal strike, in West Virginia, where Fred H. Merrick, District Organizer of Pittsburgh, Pa., was arrested and sent to jail.

Experiences in these and similar battles have placed these Comrades in the forefront of the fight to establish a press which will faithfully and courageously represent the interests of the exploited toilers.

Standard Oil Trust Laughs as Big Price War Massacres Its Troublesome Competitors

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

There is a great tumult thruout the middle west, in the ten states dominated by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, over 14c and 16c gasoline. While the nation went thy has a section of the country indulged in such a jag, albeit a gasoline jag. The only sober element in the tumultuous furore is the Standard Oil Trust, itself, that matches all comers with new reductions in prices, knowing that its golden fortress of profit is impregnable. On the other hand the Socialists, and some LaFollette elements, have showed themselves most tipsy in this gasoline orgy.

When Governor W. H. McMaster, of South Dakota, went into the oil business for a few days in his state, and brought prices down to 9c and 10c per gallon, the Wisconsin Socialists, especially the Victor L. Berger and Milwaukee Leader cohorts in Milwaukee, could not remain inactive.

The Socialists in Action

Surrounded by press reporters and photographers, the Socialist Alderman Arthur Shutkin, and Thomas M. Duncan, private secretary to the Socialist Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, raised $5,000 and plunged for 50,000 gallons of gasoline, that they put on the market for 14c per gallon.

When last heard from the Milwaukee Socialists had quit the gasoline business and were taking a flier in bread, with John D's octopus pushing the price of flivver juice back to normal.

The wail of the "independent" oil companies, out in South Dakota, that the gasoline war was sending them into bankruptcy was accompanied by the wild exhultations of the Socialists that they were really accomplishing great things, while John D., himself, celebrated last Sunday at church in Pocantico Hills, N. Y., by giving a brand new dime (See N. Y. Times, Aug. 21) to a real estate broker, Henry R. Macht, of Manhattan, who happened to be passing and stopped curiously.

All-Seeing Standard Oil

For the Standard Oil Trust makes use of big events and little happenings. It used a place to house its agents at the Genoa Conference, that was to make the Versailles peace workable. Since the war it has got at least a finger into every Balkanized state in Europe, and now it has its foot well planted in the Near East as a result of the peace treaty just signed with the Turks at Lausanne.

But the activities of the Standard Oil Octopus in foreign lands has not at all prevented it from looking after its interests at home. For it has many arms, altho it is ruled by but one head, in spite of all the trust busting efforts manipulated from Washington, D. C.

It was as far back as last May that the Standard Oil monopoly began looking about for ways and means to crush its rivals. At that time it was shown that the capitalizations of the "independents" was running up close to the total of the various Standard Oil tentacles. The Standard Oil group was capitalized at $592,000,000, very close to $600,000,000, while the ten big "independents" totalled a capitalization of 489,200,000 or close to half a billion, a joint capitalization of more than a billion dollars.

Repeat Fight of Last Spring

The big fight last spring, reneated this summer, was the struggle for the control of the Mid-Continent field. The object now, as it has always been, is to wipe out competition, this making it possible to establish any price desired.

It was U. S. Senator LaFollette who shouted from his seat in Washington that there was a danger of gasoline going to $1 per gallon. The "independents" claimed that this could never be unless they were completely wiped out. And so the Standard Oil Trust seems bent on wiping them out.

In the spring most of the cuts by Standard Oil were on crude oil. The "independents" were forced to meet the cuts. In May the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was said to be opposed to any cuts, yet in these August days it was the first to announce a 6.6c per gallen reduction in gasoline.

In the spring LaFollette claimed that Standard Oil was out to "massacre" the "independents," but it is the LaFollette elements that have been active in the middle west in aiding the killing program of John D's oil business. Instead of announcing a program to wipe out private ownership in oil and other basic necessities, the La Follette elements merely complained that the STANDARD OIL! A World Power

Unprincipled Socialists and misguided La Follette "progressives" in the middle west are trying to butt into the mid-continent price war of the Standard Oil Trust against the "independents," thru throwing a few thousand gallons of gasoline on the market. This is surely a confession of the bankruptcy of their intellects. Their efforts are as futile as dipping the ocean dry with a spive.

During the past 11 years, since Standard Oil was "busted" by the government, John D.'s oil business has netted $2,542,402,795 in cash and stock dividends. This figure is in excess of the $2,500,000,000 at which treasury experts estimated the United States government's entire tax collections for the current fiscal year ended June 30, 1923.

It is nearly $800,000,000 in excess of the value of all the precious coal, anthracite and bituminous, mined in the United States in 1921.

It is more than four times as much as the entire receipts of the state of New York from income and profits tax for the year 1922.

It is almost equivalent to the combined values of all dairy products and all vegetable crops, including potatoes, raised on the farms of the United States in the bumper year 1919.

It is 17 times greater than the yearly output of the British Transvaal and is more than half the sum of Britain's war debt to the United States, together with accrued interest thereon to date.

It is this huge octopus, with ambitions for world mo'opoly, that some states and cities of the middle west would compete with in a price war.

There is only one remedy, recommended by ex-Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, at the Chicago Conference of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The recommendation holds for all monopolies, whether for oil, coal, lumber, steel, or the railroads. He said, "Take them!"

Standard Oil heads were enjoying $125,000 per year salaries; felt Pefleved after they had shown that the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey had stolen $12,256,132 in profits during the first six months of 1922; that the whole Standard Oil group had distributed a billion dollars in stock dividends, and that Secretary of State, Hughes, was aiding Standard Oil in foreign fields. That the Standard Oil Trust answered LaFollette, propaganda for propaganda, and nothing was done.

We might repeat that Senator La Follette, and most all his followers, have been in the U. S. Senate during all the eleven years since the Standard Oil Trust was "dissolved." Yet this Standard Oil group, that now comprises two score companies, during these 11 years has declared $1,067,453,925 in cash dividends, and $1,444,948,870 in stock dividends, putting more than two and a half billions of dollars in the pockets of lucky holders of Standard Oil stock.

The New York Times, Tuesday, August 21, declared that the muchbeloved competition of the LaFollette elements and their friends, the Socialists, with its consequent temporary price cutting, had resulted in a plan being reached by the "independents" to pool their interests, rather than place their hopes in the theory of "the survival of the fittest."

Just how the fittest were surviving, however, was shown in this same issue of The Times, in its "Topics in Wall Street" column, Page 20, where it declared:

"The situation, according to information, is such that wells with settled production, in the mid-continent field, can now be bought for about one-fifth of the price quoted earlier in the year. Further reductions in the price of crude oil also are predicted."

This will be tragic news to the great numbers of the lower middle class and even wage earners who have been investing their savings in oil stock. Arthur Brisbane, the editorial wizard of the Hearst chain of newspapers, who has just purchased the Belmont home in New York City, for a quarter of a million dollars, has been advising the readers of the chain to buy stock in Standard oil. Coal is going out of fashion. Oil is the style. Invest in oil, urged Brisbane, and no doubt many have taken his advice and invested their savings in oil wells that will now be knocked down at one-fifth of what they were worth a few months ago. Perhaps John D. will slip Brisbane a few brand new dimes for his services.

Pass Out More Dimes

He can pass out a few more dimes to Edwin L. Clapp, financial editor of the Hearst sheets, who tells the "independents" that they have overproduced. This is what the grain gamblers and their allies the bankers, told the farmers when the new bumper wheat crop came into the market and the price was nearly cut in half per bushel.

Mr. Clapp points out that the Oklahoma-Kansas refineries had 20,000,000 gallons in storage on July 1, more than double the 130,500,000 gallons in storage the previous July 1, 1922. All this after the Standard Oil propaganda had predicted a shortage in gasoline. Thus the Hearst editor tongue lashes the "independents" who have brought "chaos" into the industry in which no doubt both Mr. Hearst and Mr. Brisbane are heavily interested.

Progressives Get Scare

The reaction of the so-called "progressives" to the price cutting war in the middle western states, Magnus Johnson, the U. S. Senator-elect in Minnesota, deprecates the idea of Governor McMaster, of South Dakota, saying the price cut should have been 3.1 cents instead of 6.6 cents, because "too radical action permits the Standard Oil Co. to kill off the independent dealers." But Senator Johnson offers no plan for price regulation. Perhaps she knows that LaFollette's regulation law, in Wisconsin, for the last quarter century have brought no results.

Here's a Socialist, Alderman Shutkin, talking: "When the oil rumors are realized that the city actually would have gasoline to sell at 14c per Gallon, they arrived at the conclusion that public opinion would crystalize against them, and that if they continued to maintain their recent profiteering prices, they would lose the good will of the public."

And here's another Socialist, Hoan's secretary, Duncan, who says: "When faced with unprecedented competition it seems the oil companies, Standard as well as so-called independent, took the attitude of Creek-ett's coon, 'Don't shoot, I'll come down.'"

Call on Coolidge in Vain

But in the same issue of The Milwaukee Leader, Governor McMaster, of South Dakota, is quoted as saying he "repudiates the contentions of Standard Oil. He expressed fear the big company's action would break small dealers, eliminate competition and become a menace against consumers." And in another place it says "The man (Mr. Master) who started the gasoline war is scared."

The complete grip that Standard Oil has on the situation is shown by the fact that in Indiana it sold gasoline at 16c per gallon, while in Ohio, next door, it kept the price at 23c per gallon, a price that generally prevails thruout the east. This has caused Governor Vic Donahey, of Ohio, to issue frantic appeals to President Coolidge to help bring down the price of gasoline. But President Coolidge is too busy plotting ways of helping the anthracite coal barons to interfere with the high prices of the Standard Oil profiteers.

Then the Milwaukee Leader strews this editorial bouquet on the graves of the dying "independents": "Everybody is sorry for the independent oil men, but at the same time they knew what to expect when they tackled John D. Rockefeller by entering his most profitable field of business," yet in another column this same sheet exults editorially. "It pushes public competition to bring down the price of gasoline."

There Is But One Real Fight

The price of gasoline will go up again in the mid-continent field. It will do this in spite of the "Socialist" who offer no definite program for the crushing of the Standard Oil monopoly. The Milwaukee Socialists, like the LaFollette "progressives" in Wisconsin and other states, have shown how ridiculous they are by offering municipal and state palliatives to fight a problem that is not only national, but international in scope. Soviet Russia has its hands on the rich Baku oil fields, in addition to other great oil producing sections of the earth' surface. It has planted the red flag of workers' and farmers' rule over one-sixth of the land surface of the globe. But it does not feel that it has triumphed over the Standard Oil monopolists, and the other capitalist imperialists of the world. It does not feel certain of its victory until it has won the workers and farmers of all other lands to its standards. It offers the Communist program of emancipation, the only constructive and workable program yet offered for the liberation of the earth's oppressed. It offers the Communist Party of the United States, the workers and farmers of the United States. It is the only program, demanding the complete overthrow of the capitalist system, that laughs at the false promises-all offered by so-called "Socialists" and would-be "progressives." The great struggle will begin, the ineffectiveness of fighting the oil trust, the bread trust, the coal trust, or any other trust. They will learn the necessity of seizing all trusts and administering them for the benefit of all under a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

Resist Needle Trades Bureaucracy's War on Militants in the Unions

thereupon appointed a special committee to investigate the charges. The committe considered the charges at two sittings. At the hearing a stenographer was present who took down word by word everything that transpired at the hearing. Fearless at this hearing not only acted as the accuser, but also as the prosecutor and judge. The result of the hearing was that the committee brought in a decision exonerating the two League members, because they came to the conclusion after considering the evidence that the Trade Union Educational League is not a dual organization. This decision was reached by the committee by a vote of five to one. Nevertheless, Perlstein demanded from the Joint Board that they should reject the decision of the investigation committee. He declared that any delegate who would vote against his motion to reject the report will, by doing so, vote himself out of the organization.

On account of the threat of Perlstein his motion was adopted by a vote 11 to 8. Seven delegates refused to do Perlstein's dirty work and refrained from voting, and when who were known to be sympathetic to the League were denied the right to vote. This indicates that the Perlstein's motion to expel the League members only 11 delegates out of 33 present voted.

The action of "The International" against the League in Chicago has been hailed and approved by the capitalist press of the country. Perlstein's statement to the capitalist press gives out the impression that in the service of his country he is wiping out "The League" in "The International" because it is a red organization dominated by Soviet Russia, the Red Trade Union International and the Third (Communist) International. However, Perlstein cannot give a similar explanation to the members of the union. These members are not to be lead by the red scare. So to the membership Perlstein gives the excuse that the Trade Union Educational League is a dual organization. This dangerous piece of dirty work done by "The International" machine will not be tolerated by the rank and file. They will in no uncertain terms express this move on the part of the well paid reactionary officials to split their organization. A mighty wave of resentment is already sweeping the rank and file. This resentment soon will be translated into action and the reactionaries will be driven out of the unions and their stranglehold upon the organization broken.

Big Demand for Real Labor Party Stirring Workers of the Nation

CHICAGO.—The resolutions adopted by the Chicago Federation of Labor demanding that the Portland, Ore., Convention of the American Federation of Labor take a stand for a real "Labor Party" were as follows:

"Whereas, in the struggle between the organized workers and the employers it has become more and more apparent that the power of the government is being used on the side of the bosses, as witnessed by the numerous injunctions issued against the Railroad shopmen, the abolition of the Federal Child Labor Law, the Kansas Minimum Wage Law, and many other similar acts; and

"Whereas, to protect our interests we workers must so organize ourselves in the various governmental bodies, which are now almost entirely controlled by the employing interests; and

"Whereas, in protect our political interests, we must have a political party of our own, the prevailing political policy of Labor being inexpable of getting the best results; and

"Whereas, in many other instances, the workers, acting in Great Britain have built powerful labor parties, which exert tremendous influence in their respective governments; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled declares that labor must form a political party of its own based upon the trade unions and including all working class political organizations, and herewith instructs the executive council to take the necessary steps to form such a party; and be it further

"Resolved, that in order to permit this action, the American Federation of Labor constitution shall be herewith amended by striking out section eight, article three, and be it further

"Resolved, that the delegates of the Chicago Federation of Labor of the 1924 Congress of the Illinois Federation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor stand instructed to introduce and vote for the above resolutions in those conventions."

you upon your election as a victory of law and order. When that is the issue, Coolidge stands four square."

The New York Times of November 4, 1919, said editorially: "The one vital election, the one in which the whole nation is interested, is in Massachusetts. Governor Coolidge's energy and courageous action in the Boston police strike have given him a reputation which won him national respect. He is the candidate of order, of law . . ."

And the notorious New England Red-Hater Henry M. Whitney chimed in with this chorus of hate against the workers in this fashion: "The principles for which Governor Coolidge stands are vital to the life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in the United States and over the whole world."

Big Business Always with Him

When Coolidge was running for a second term as Governor the big Boston Bankers did their all to secure a victory for him in recognition of his strikebreaking services.

Even tho Coolidge was not yet considered marketable Presidential timber in 1920, yet the big capitalists openly invested according to the Senate investigation committee from $60,000 to $100,000 to sell "Coolidge to the Republican voters in the primaries prior to the Chicago National Convention of 1920.

From the San Francisco Chronicle of August 12, 1923, we learn that Coolidge was nominated for the Vice-Presidency mainly because of the manipulations of the California delegates. In this delegation, according to a speech delivered by Mr. Chas. Stetson-Wheeler of California at the 1920 Republican National Convention, "nearly every big investment interest in the Pacific Coast." There were "among the men who dominate great electric light and power interests and the presidents of three of San Francisco's largest banks—banks whose deposits aggregate more than $240,000,000."

Coolidge's nomination as Vice-President was applauded by the powerful financiers of the country. Typical of such whole-hearted indorsement of Coolidge is the following statement made by Mr. Francis L. Hine, President of the First National Bank, 2 Wall St., New York, and a director and officer of the American Can Co., American Cotton Oil Co., United States Rubber Co., and at least a dozen other banks, insurance, trust, and public utility corporations:

"As for Coolidge, I think also the choice is excellent. He lends great strength to the ticket, and I think it a pity that a greater responsibility does not fall to the office of the Vice-Presidency with such a man nominated."

Alvin W. Krech, President of the Equitable Trust Co., 37 Wall Street, New York, and a director or officer of at least 28 more banking, ice, coal, railway, lumber, iron, cotton oil, and power light companies, and Mr. Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank, 13 William Street, New York, and a director or officer of at least 11 more banking, land, soap and insurance corporations, were among the first to express great pleasure at Coolidge's being on the Republican ticket.

Closely associated with these men in business are such finance and industrial magnates as Walter C. Teagle, President of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Paul D. Cravath, Otto H. Kahn, Fredrick R. Coudert, Edward R. Stettinius, T. W. Lamont, Frank A. Vanderlip, and J. Pierpont Morgan.

Now that Coolidge is President, the big bankers and industrial magnates are lauding him to the heavens. The Wall Street Journal has recently said that "Calvin Coolidge is conservative, safe and conservative man." Chairman Robert S. Lovett of the Union Pacific Railroad and director of at least 25 more banking, railway, and steamship corporations has said: "The country is extremely fortunate in having such a clear-thinking, level-headed man as Mr. Coolidge, who stepped into the office in such a great emergency." Also, Elbert H. Gary has rushed in to pat Coolidge on the back with a statement that "Coolidge has demonstrated by his many conspicuous occasions that he is alive to the financial, commercial, and industrial needs of the country, and that he stands for protection of property and welfare of individuals alike."

And tho less than three weeks in office, President Coolidge has already had an official tête-a-tête with such overlords of industry and finance as: William H. Barnes, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, A. C. Bedford, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Lewis E. Pierson, President of the Irving Bank Columbia Trust Co. of New York, Chas. E. Weed, Vice-President of the First National Bank of Boston, Willis H. Booth, Vice-President of the Guarantee Trust Co. of New York and F. J. Kent, President of the Bankers Trust Co. of New York.

Dyed-in-the-Wool Reactionary

That Coolidge is a dyed-in-the-wool out and out reactionary is evident from his following words and deeds:

Delivering an address on Founders Day at the Carnegie Technical Institue at Pittsburgh on April 28, 1921, Coolidge spoke of Andrew Carnegie as "a man who represented American ideals."

How closely President Coolidge is linked to the cast of the women, she was strongly for it."

Bitter Foe of Soviet Russia

Where our new President stands in so far as Soviet Russia can be seen from this gem culled from his speech delivered before the Vermont Historical Society on January 18, 1921: "Russia is under a despotism more despotic than ever was administered by a Czar."

Exposes Himself in Red-Hunt

So energetic a "Red-baiter" was Coolidge that he even took it upon himself to write a series of articles captioned "Enemies of the Republic" in that well-known barbershop and kitchinette journal, the "Delineator" This was supposed to be a series of articles, commencing June, 1921, and exposing the "Reds" in the American Colleges and Universities.

Little need be said in reply to or quoted from this excursion of our President into such noble efforts at saving the Republic. The best characterization of this series in behalf of the "Fatherland" is found in the following telegram sent to Coolidge by the State Board of Administration of North Dakota on July 9, 1921: "We are surprised that a man of your exalted position should give currency to a story which has been proved false."

President Coolidge had quoted Congressman O. B. Burtress regarding the placing of radical books in circulation in school libraries.

Hastens to Free Rum Thieves

There are many representatives and champions of Labor imprisoned today because of their loyalty to the working class. President Coolidge has not raised a finger towards releasing these innocent workers. Coolidge has now announced that he will follow the policy pursued by Harding of not granting amnesty to all of them, but of examining each of the cases separately.

In the meanwhile, in less than two weeks after his taking over the Presidency, Coolidge has already hastened to pardon criminals. On August 16 he gave freedom to "John J. Walsh and James McLone, sentenced to from five to seven years in Atlanta Prison in connection with the theft of a $1,000,000 consignment of liquor from the Black Rock Yards of the New York Central Railroad. Walsh was a Sergeant and McLane a Lieutenant in the New York Central Police Force."

Howat Stirs Coal Miners in Illinois

(Special to "The Worker")

ZEIGLER, Ill.—Alexander Howat, deposed president of the Kansas coal miners, who has been deported in his fight for re-instatement by Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Coal Miners, addressed an enthusiastic audience that jammed Park Pavilion here. The meeting was under the auspices of Miners' Union, Local 992, with President Corbis'aty presiding.

Howat told about the fight waged against the Kansas miners by the Lewis officialdom in the miners' union. He then explained the principles of the International Progressive Miners' Conference, organized at Pittsburgh, in June. It was because of Howat's sympathy and cooperation with this body of progressives that Farrington claims he was compelled to quit Howat's cause, and join with Lewis.

Howat urged the miners to stand by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. He pointed out it was the nearest approach to an all-inclusive, 100 per cent political farmer-labor organization. He urged the miners to send the strongest delegates possible to the January convention of the United Mine Workers.

Resolutions were adopted, without a single dissenting voice, demanding the re-instatement of Howat and all other expelled Kansas coal miners.

Call Is Issued for Convention to Organize the New York City Federated Farmer-Labor Party

TO ALL TRADE UNIONS, LABOR, FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS, CO-OPERATIVES AND LABOR POLITICAL GROUPS

BROTHERS:—On July 3d, 4th and 5th there was organized by a convention in which were represented 600,000 organized industrial workers and farmers the FEDERATED FARMER-LABOR PARTY.

This party of the industrial workers and farmers is the greatest political party representing the interests of the producers which has entered the political struggle in this country.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party is based upon the principles of a federation of existing organizations of the workers and farmers. The constitution of the party provides "Any organization of industrial workers or farmers, such as local trade unions, city central bodies, state federations of labor, national or international organizations, which endorses the principles of this organization, may affiliate with it."

On Sept. 16th, at 2 P. M., there will be held at the LABOR TEMPLE, 243 EAST 84th STREET, a conference of delegates from labor, industrial, political, fraternal and cooperative organizations of New York City to organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in New York City. Nominations of candidates to run in the November elections will be made at this conference.

We extend to your organization a hearty invitation to join with the workers of other local organizations in uniting labor in New York City for the political struggle against their oppressors and exploiters, by sending delegates to this conference. Every organization having up to 250 members may send one delegate. Organizations with over 250 members may send two delegates.

There already exists in New York City the American Labor Party, consisting of a combination of the Socialist Party and the former Farmer-Labor Party together with some local unions. This organization has thus far refused to unite all the forces of labor in one basis and has decided to nominate candidates on the Socialist Party ticket in the coming election. In order to prevent a division of the forces of the workers in the coming election the Provisional Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party extends to the American Labor Party an invitation to send a committee to the Sept. 16th Conference for the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, empowered to agree upon a common slate of candidates for the November election.

You will find enclosed a pamphlet containing a statement of principles, organization plan and a list of the National Executive Committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party showing the organizations represented in the organization of the Party.

Labor in New York City must organize for the political struggle. Send your delegates to the SEPT. 16th CONFERENCE and let us build a powerful party of the workers of New York and fight side by side with the workers of other sections of the country who organized their political power in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in the Chicago Convention.

Fraternally yours,

Provisional Committee for the Organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in New York City.

A Boost for "Amalgamation"

(From the Locomotive Engineers' Journal)

While American unions are debating the amalgamation question, their British fellow-organizations are actually accomplishing amalgamation in many of the important industries. The difference between the two movements is that amalgamation in England is being officially promoted by the general council of the Trades Union Congress, which corresponds to the American Federation of Labor.

This movement, which has in the past two years gained tremendous momentum with the merger in 1920 of seven metal trades unions into one with a membership of 460,000, and the formation in 1921 of the Transport and General Workers' Union with a membership of 300,000 by the amalgamation of 17 unions, has made tremendous progress during the past three months. Twenty-nine out of 35 machinists' unions with a total membership of 800,000 have elected a committee to arrive at a basis for amalgamation into one union. Seventeen unions took part in a recent convention to plan for amalgamation in the textile trades—other than cotton —which it is anticipated will be easily accomplished because there is little overlapping of crafts and the trades are closer together geographically.

There are 14 unions in the printing trades, with a membership of about 173,000, already united in the Printing and Kindred Trades Federation, but a movement is also on foot there to amalgamate into one industrial union.

Actual reorganization and amalgamation has taken place between the National Union of General Workers, the National Amalgamated Union of Labor and the Municipal Employes' Association which will bring into one organization 700,000 general workers in many trades.

While there is much greater need for amalgamation of unions in England, where over 725 different unions with a membership of over seven millions have operated up till now, than in America, where the total number is about 150 unions, with 4,000,000 members, nevertheless it may well be that the British workers' movement has in it some valuable lessons for many American unions, especially since it is being promoted by the able leaders of the British Trades Union Congress.

BLOOD AND STEEL!

By JAY LOVESTONE

The Twelve-Hour Day in the Steel Industry has aroused the interest of not only the workers involved. A murmur of public disapproval is heard thruout the country against this relic of serfdom. Public men, churchmen and social organizations are giving expression to the utmost antipathy to it. The American Federation of Labor has entered upon another attempt to organize the steel workers; while the Workers Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are actively engaged in organizing the workers for a victorious fight against the inhuman twelve-hour day.

"BLOOD AND STEEL" tells the whole story of this inhuman plot against the workers. Read it, get others to read it. Order a number of copies and sell to all workers in all industries. The steel workers must have your support in their fight—which is also your fight.

Many German Labor Unions Amalgamate

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

BERLIN.—This is the convention season in the German trade union movement, and in a number of conventions the question of amalgamation by industries is a chief topic on the order of business.

At the thirteenth convention of the General Federation of Trade Unions in Leipsic last year, a resolution was adopted favoring the idea of industrial unionism, and urging the various trades to consider their amalgamation with other trades in the same industry as rapidly as possible.

The first group to fall in line was the pottery and glaziers' union, which decided to join the building trades industrial union, in which there are already embraced the most important unions in the building trades.

Some years ago the saddle makers, upholsterers and leather pocket makers formed a joint union. At their convention this year, these three decided to amalgamate with the shoe makers and the leather workers.

The fur workers have voted in favor of an amalgamation with the clothing workers.

Despite the vote of their national convention, the ship carpenters have for the present declined to join the metal workers. Of 4,465 members only 2,984 voted, and of these 1,418 favored amalgamation with the metal workers, while 1,539 held out against it. Union leaders expect, however, that a campaign of education among the members will soon reverse the result.

Steel Workers of Nova Scotia Forced to Give up Fight for Present

By JOHN A. McRURY,
(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

SYDNEY, Nova Scotia.—The 3,800 steelworkers employed by the British Empire Steel Corporation, who struck June 27 for a 20 per cent wage increase and establishment of the check-off system of collecting union dues, have voted to return to work, their objects unattained.

After a 100 per cent strike for six weeks, the local treasury is depleted. With no help coming from their international the men decided that if they wanted to save their union the best policy was to return to work.

Three days after the strike began the provincial police were poured into the city and commenced their reign of terror by clubbing peaceful citizens on the way home from church. Over sixty men and women were seriously injured. Then soldiers arrived, recruited from as far west as Winnipeg, equipped with full wartime regalia. Within ten days from the declaration of strike the city resembled an armed camp, the forces marshalled against the strikers including 1,500 soldiers, one warship, a bombing plane, searchlights, and machine guns, etc. The Nova Scotia miners joined the strike in the second week of the struggle in protest against the atrocities committed by the provincial police. Finally the opposition of President John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers of America, forced the miners to return to work.

Study Classes in Marxism

The English Harlem Branch, N. Y., is again on the job with two good study classes in Marxism. After its success of the last season, the Branch feels that the foundation for this work in Harlem has been laid.

The same instructors and the same students are back on the job in the same building with many new faces promised. Quite a number of new students will be accepted, and if the registration is sufficiently large a third class will be accepted.

For those who wish to participate in this work, it is announced that the first class will take up the study of "Capital Vol. I" with Fanny Jacobs as instructor. This class will meet Saturday afternoons at 4 p. m., commencing on Saturday, Sept. 2.

The other class will take up the study of Engel's "Origin of the Family" and Lenin's "State and Revolution" with Julius Codkind as instructor. This class will meet Mondays at 8.15 p. m., commencing Monday, Sept. 4.

Both classes will meet at the Workmen's Circle Building, 143 East 103d Street. A tuition fee of 50 cents per month will be charged, to cover the expenses. Comrades unable to pay will be accepted as students without question.

Let Yellow Bureaucracy Have "The Call"; The Rank and File Will Have "The Daily Worker"

The complete bankruptcy of the New York Call's policy, of attacking all things Communist is given as probably the greatest cause for the new re-financing plan that is now being put into effect by the Socialist daily.

"The Call" is financially controlled by Abraham Cahan's Anti-Communist Jewish Daily Forward. (2) By the declaration of the Call's reorganized editorial staff will not include James Oneal, pro-eminent among the Communist baiters in the Socialist Party.

It was in the issue of Saturday, April 21, that "THE WORKER" published the facts showing the definite adoption by "The Call" of an Anti-Soviet and Anti-Communist policy.

This was to be a ruthless, aggressive anti-Communist policy that was to be apparent thruout the entire paper. This policy was carried out by the managing editor, David Karsner, reaching its highest pitch in the publication of the Francis McCullagh articles, reprints from the New York World, attacking the Russian Soviet Republic.

When Karsner resigned, it was rumored for a time, that Algernon Lee would take the position for the anti-Communist policy in The Call board of directors' meeting, would assume the editorship. But this did not develop.

The present program of re-financing, which gives the Socialist Party only minority control, nevertheless keeps The Call in Socialist hands if Morris Hillquit can rally the support of the Socialist official bureaucracy of the various needle trades unions. Already Hillquit's ability to do this there can be no doubt.

There is another element, however, that seems to feel it is the real saviour in the present situation. It is saturated with the confident hope that it is going to make a real "fair and square" publication out of "The Call," one that it will attract all elements. This is the group that centers about the American Fund for Public Service, popularly known as "The Garland Fund," that plans to give "The Call" $40,000 toward the refinancing scheme. The whole sum of $125,00 is to be made up with the aid of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the International Fur Workers' Union, the United Cloth Hat and Capmakers of North America, the Fancy Leather Goods Workers' Union, District Council No. 9, of the Painters Union, and other sympathetic organizations.

Most active in "The Garland Fund" group are Lewis S. Gannett, an associate editor the "The Nation," Roger N. Baldwin, Secretary of the Civil Liberties Union; Norman M. Thomas, editor of "The World Tomorrow;" Robert Morss Lovett, one of the editors of "The New Republic;" Scott Nearing, author and lecturer, and Harry F. Ward, director of the Methodist Federation of Social Service.

The Board of Directors of "The Garland Fund" also includes William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, and editor of "The Labor Herald," who proposed granting $40,000 to "The Call," and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who favored it.

Behind the scenes the Gannett-Baldwin-Thomas-Lovett group is Charles W. Ervin, former editor of "The Call," and Robert W. Bruere, of the Labor Bureau, Incorporated. It is the belief of this group of liberals, some of whom are members of the Socialist Party, that the refinanced "Call" can be raised to a high plane of impartiality that will satisfy all dissenting groups in the labor movement. They call it "an experiment." With the weight of the $40,000 from "The Garland Fund," they get the chief places on the reorganized staff of "The Call." Mr. Thomas is to be editor, and write the editorials that have been written by Oneal. Herbert Blankenhorn, also of the Bureau of Industrial Research, is to be the managing editor and Evans Clark, who displaced Julius Gerber as secretary of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association, publishers of "The Call," is to be business manager.

It would thus seem as if the liberals had the Socialists eating out of their hands. But the personnel of the board of directors of the refinanced "Call" would indicate a different story. S. John Block, president of "The Call" Association, who told the capitalistic press that "the editorial policy of "The Call" will remain Socialistic," stays on the board. So does Morris Hillquit. The lesser needle trades unions, that are under Socialist control, are also well represented, including Ossip Wolinsky, of the Leather Goods Workers; Max Zaritsky, of the Capmakers; Morris Kaufman, of the Furriers, Philip Zausner, of the Painters. The big needle trades' unions are each represented by two members, for the Amalgamated Clothing workers, Sidney Hillman and Joseph Schlossberg, and for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Morris Sigman and Israel Feinberg. There are only three of the liberals on the board, Gannett and Bruere. This makes 13 members so far decided on. These may be increased to 17 later.

It would not be difficult for the Socialists to rally a majority on this board at any time and overthrow any impartial policy that might be adopted. The Gannett clique that against such an eventuality they can withdraw their financial support, and have their editors and managers resign, confessing the failure of their "experiment."

These liberals, therefore, are not definitely certain that their refinancing program will change the policy of "The Call." There are many reasons to believe that "The Call" will continue its definite, anti-left policy, both politically and industrially.

The Albany Conference showed that there are three definite policies of the working class on the political field: (1) That of the Conference for Progressive Political Action supporting the Gompers' nonpartisan policy; (2) That of the Socialists for independent political action under Socialist control, a wavering position opposed to an all-inclusive Labor Party; (3) That of the Communists in favor of an aggressive campaign for a United Front in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. It is insane to believe, that any labor daily can successfully shuttle to and forth between these three positions. One look at the board of directors will prove that the new "Call" will not support the third position.

The political policy of the refinanced "Call" will be that of the labor bureaucracy that followed Hillquit to Albany, and that supports the Socialist control in the American Labor Party, in New York City.

It is the same official bureaucracy, especially in the needle trades union, that has inaugurated relentless war against the progressives, even to the carrying out of expulsions of members of the Trade Union Educational League, that will have "The Call" as an additional weapon. Solidly in the Hillquit control group are Sigman, Feinberg, Wolinsky, Zaritsky, Zausner and Kaufman. Whatever "liberal" elements there may be on "The Call," it is not to be expected that they will be able to dominate the Socialist anti-radical elements.

Shows Need for Communist Daily

The outlook that confronts "The Call," therefore, clearly shows the need of an English-language Communist daily.

"The Call" will not fight for independent, class political action. A Communist daily will!

"The Call," like the other English-language labor dailies, including the Milwaukee Leader, the Minneapolis Labor Herald and Union Record, will not wage an aggressive struggle for amalgamation of craft unions and nationalization of industry. "The Call" will oppose the bureaucracy in the industrial field. In its efforts to be considered "American," "The Call" will not defend the rights of foreign-born workers. Only a Communist daily will do all of these things.

The efforts to liberalize the Anti-Communist "New York Call" only proves the absolute necessity of establishing an aggressive, militant Communist daily, with a definite, inwaverting policy in the struggle of the workers against their exploiters.

Let the labor bureaucracy have "The Call." The rank and file will have the Communist daily, "THE DAILY WORKER."

Leather Workers for Amalgamation, Labor Party and Recognition

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, Mass.—The annual convention of the United Leather Workers' International Union of North America, held at Peabody, Mass., went on record for amalgamation of the workers in the shoe and leather industry, for local labor parties in each city where there was a local union, and for the recognition of Soviet Russia. Plans were laid for an organization campaign. This International is an independent union, with headquarters in Peabody.

The Convention was addressed by William Simons, District Organizer of the Workers Party.

Eleven hundred lasters are on strike for higher wages at Lynn. The manufacturers have offered a slight increase, but it was rejected.

Massachusetts A. F. of L. Convention

Twenty-six votes were cast in favor of recognition of Soviet Russia, whereas last year there were only 18 in favor of negotiating a trade agreement. Of course, the resolution was soundly trounced, 119 to 26, for this is Massachusetts, for its former revolutionary days, and its present reactionary spirit.

The Convention welcomed the National Conference for Progressive Political Action, since it was in line with the non-partisan policy of the A. F. of L., and had refused to start a third party.

The question of organizing the unorganized was sidestepped by referring it to the Executive Council of the State Branch. The Ohio Workmen's Compensation Act was rejected by a vote of 136 to 19; and the exclusive state fund bill was accepted.

An educational meeting of the Brockton District Shoe Workers' Union, at Eagle Hall, Brockton, was addressed by Dora Lohse, of the Workers Party; William Simons, District Organizer of the Workers Party; and Fred Biedenkapp. Comrade Lohse discussed the part taken by women in the unions, and in industry; Comrade Simons talked over the lessons of the recent strike, the necessity of amalgamation and an independent labor party. The union officials stated that plans were already under way for such a local labor party. The last speaker, Biedenkapp, gave a wonderful talk on the class struggle.

Plan Nebraska P. F. L. P. Ticket

(Special to "The Worker")

OMAHA, Neb.—Plans are on foot here for a full state ticket in the field for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in 1924. It is expected that the Progressive Party, that was represented at the Chicago Conference, in July, by Delegate W. H. Green, will be merged with the state organization of the Federated Party. Green is first vice-chairman of the Federated Party.

An intensive campaign for the Federated Party is being carried on throuout the state, that will be reflected at the state convention of the Nebraska Federation of Labor, Sept. 5, at Lincoln. It is expected that the Nebraska Federation will instruct its delegate to the Portland, Ore., convention of the American Federation of Labor, to support the Minnesota resolution for independent political action.

The Government and the Worker

A Review by Scott Nearing in "The Nation" of

"The Government—Strikebreaker"

by Jay Lovestone

"Four years of American history through the eyes of a Marxist" would be a very fair title for this study of the class struggle in the United States. The book carries a real contribution, for it is a collection of facts by a radical author and publisher, selected and interpreted by those very persons against whom the full vigor of the Department of Justice is now being directed.

"The author begins with a statement of the labor policy of the government during the year, and a summary of the promises that were made to the workers when the life of the republic seemed to be threatened. He then traces the position of the authorities in the case of the railway-shop strikers to prove his contention that the government is America's strike-breaker-in-chief. Following two chapters on the use of the injunction in labor disputes there are a number of sections devoted to the army, employers' associations, and the press. The conclusion of the whole matter is that the so-called American democracy is merely a capitalist dictatorship. There is nothing new in this conclusion. It is unusual, however, to have the issue so well presented by a radical writer.

"Perhaps the book would have been stronger if the author had begun with the steel strike of 1919. Certainly he should have given credit to the workers in the needle trades, and particularly to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers for their spectacular stand against the unionsmashing campaign of the bosses. Then, too, the case is a bit overstated. The government is not really the strike-breaker, but a combination police department, sanitary squad, and propaganda bureau for the vested interests. However, these are minor matters of opinion. The major fact is the diligent collection and clear presentation of a very large number of salient industrial and social facts in a low-priced, readable form. Dollar books are almost as rare nowadays as dollar dinners. Both the author and the publisher are to be congratulated upon their ability to talk English at popular prices."—Scott Nearing.

By JAY LOVESTONE

A book of 368 pages, tells the story of the strikebreaking, union-smashing policies of the U. S. Government in all the big national strikes of the past four years. It lays bare the Government's nefarious activities against the workers in the Rail Road Strike, the Textile Strike, the Coal Miners' Strike and scores of lesser conflicts between labor and the employing class.

Paper Binding 75 cents

This book should be read by every worker. It provides an arsenal of incontestable facts, gathered from original sources which condemn the Government as a strikebreaking agency of the employing class, and a ruthless enemy of the workers.

Cappellini Charges the Mine Barons with Provoking Strike

By ANTONIO PRESI

The anthracite coal mine owners have said that the check-off system for the coal miners is a serious obstacle to the laws of the United States. They want the abolish the miners' check-off system in order to break the law.

The bosses are trying to provoke a strike in order to make millions in profit out of the mountains of culm and slate, and other waste outside their mines.

The clouds of a tremendous class storm are appearing over the anthracite coal fields. The mine owners are directly responsible for this storm, for the reason that they do not intend to concede any demand made by the coal miners.

Rinaldo Cappellini, recently elected president of District 1, the Wilkesbarre-Scranton District, gave me an idea why the mine owners do not want to consider the justice of the miners' demands. He said:

"The mine owners, in nearly a month of conferences, have maintained an unchangeable attitude. They say that our demands are extravagant, exorbitant and inadmissible. The check-off system,' they say, 'is against the laws of the United States.' But this applies only to us. But the same check-off system, when it is used to take money from the miners' pay for the company's stores, powder, rent, insurance and numerous other items, is 100 per cent within the laws of the country.

"The fact is this: for the mine owners everything is within the law; but, for the miners, the law is given an entirely different interpretation. The remainder of the 11 demands of the miners have not even been discussed. You know why. The mine owners want a strike. In the anthracite coal fields there are millions of tons of culm and dirty coal. From these piles, during the world war, the coal barons made millions of dollars in profits. They repeated this during our last strike. They know that another strike means millions more in easy profits from these huge piles of useless waste.

"Their crocodile tears for the suffering of the 'dear public' are only an emotional means for fooling the 'dear public'. The bosses are playing an old game. Their press knows how to play this old game and how to fool the 'dear public.'"

In continuing this exposure of the infamous practices of the mine owners, Cappellini declared that the miner workers are ready to accept the challenge of their exploiters, and to stop the digging of coal, if this is necessary to win living conditions.

"The miners alone know how difficult is their task," said Cappellini. "They alone know how horrible are their living conditions. They alone know how dangerous is their work down in the dark and damp mines, where their lives are always in the hands of death.

"The mine owners can speak very glibly, in refusing the mine workers' demands, as they look into those death holes from the beautiful and superb Pennsylvania Hotel, on 32nd Street, New York City, or from the sparkling ocean shores of Atlantic City. But if they were compelled, for a month, to go down where the miners go, and forced to dig up tons of rock and coal every day, with treacherous gas everywhere, and dangerous rocks above their heads, then their viewpoint, maybe, would be entirely different.

"The bosses say the few days remaining is too short a time to reach an agreement. We say that it is more than enough. Our men will not dig coal after August 31, if the bosses have not agreed to give us all that we ask. We are organized 100 per cent. No scabbery is possible. On the morning of September 1, our men will strike as a solid body in case the Atlantic City conference fails."

I assured Cappellini that all the power of the Workers Party would support the fighting miners until the banner of victory floated over every coal mining tipple thruout Pennsylvania's anthracite coal fields.

mission, told us one night that he would put his name down to a 27 per cent wage increase, they put it over on us by giving us only a 17 per cent raise.

The miners were sore as hell then and terribly dissatisfied. Some of them went off on "vacation strikes" for six weeks or so, not because they expected to change Thompson's decision but merely because they wanted to show the Commission their great discontent and exactly what they thought of it.

MINERS IN FINE SPIRIT

We weren't satisfied with the 1922 settlement and we are now ready to fight harder than ever. The spirit of the anthracite miners for a fight is splendid. The miners are in a fine mood for a showdown.

We know what a victory or a defeat for the anthracite miners means, not only to us but to all the other workers. If the miners had been beaten in 1922, the labor movement in this country would have been thrown back for years. As it was, our ability to resist successfully has done a tremendous amount of good to all labor. I know of locals in Philadelphia that were just starting to pieces during the wage-slashing campaign. After we held the mine owners back in the last strike, these local unions in industries that have nothing to do with anthracite mining were again on their feet and doing well.

The mine owners can fight no harder than they fought in 1922. They can get no more support from Wall Street's most powerful bankers than they did in 1922.

Can't Get Strikebreakers

The mine owners can't get men to dig anthracite. We have a one hundred per cent organization. Even if the mine owners should try to get bituminous miners to take our places it won't work. A bituminous miner can't dig anthracite well. The highest skilled state-certified anthracite miner is up against terrific hazards in his work. On the average two people are killed daily in anthracite mining. In a period of eight years the number of killed and wounded is equivalent to a number sufficient to go the round of all the workers engaged in the anthracite industry.

Even if it were possible for the owners to get bituminous miners to take our places, this game couldn't be kept up for long, because of the havoc the losses in killed and crippled would entail for these workers.

Owners Spread False Propaganda

All this talk of lots of anthracite being stored up is just plain bunk. Let the Operators go on fooling themselves in their attempt to fool the public about the large quantities of hard coal they have in reserve.

As to substitutes, let the owners worry about them. They are the ones who live on the profits of anthracite coal. We don't. If there should be an increased demand for bituminous, we wouldn't worry. We can send out men into the other fields to mine soft coal. An anthracite miner, unlike the bituminous coal-digger, can mine soft and hard coal.

Workers Strong for the Check-Off

The anthracite miners want the check-off. The check-off is fundamental with us and we won't arbitrate or compromise any fundamental also. As John Hays Hammond said Marshall told me in person: "The miners would be fools to arbitrate their vital demands in any other way but upwards.

The miners want the check-off badly. The owners recognize the check-off principle for about 35 other items in their dealings with the United Mine Workers of America. If it is not illegal and right for the owners to apply the check-off principle to collecting rent for themselves and insurance, then the same holds true for the check-off being applicable to wages. But the owners in refusing to apply and recognize the check-off in so far as wages are concerned are afraid to do so because they fear it will make "The Union" too strong for them. The owners are afraid of the check-off creating such a fine spirit in "The Union" as to make our organization invincible.

The owners practice the check-off principle in collecting dues amongst themselves in their own association. They see to it that not a single member of their association fails to pay his dues regularly and that not a single anthracite mine owner fails to join them. Believe me, they sure have got some closed shop for themselves. Why shouldn't they let us have the same rights as they have?

The public has nothing to lose and all to gain by the check-off. The check-off system would prevent the many small "troublesome" strikes, called "button-strikes," often arising from the refusal of the miners to work side by side with those who don't have buttons showing; their having paid their union dues up-to-date.

There is, then, only one reason why the mine owners and their friends, no matter who they are or where they may be found, are opposed to the check-off. And it is precisely for that very reason that the anthracite miners and their friends are as anxious to get the check-off. Sixty-five per cent of the men employed in coal mining have the check-off, and, by God, we are going to get the check-off now for every anthracite miner.

Workers Edit 500th Issue of "Freiheit"

By A. ROVNER

The daily "Freiheit," official organ of the Workers Party in the Jewish language, has hitherto had a special section in the paper to which the workers were the sole contributors. In this section, under the heading "Life and Struggle," the workers were given the opportunity of telling their troubles, and of relating anything of a general interest that transpired in their work places, trade unions, and fraternal organizations.

To have a section of a daily newspaper permanently turned over to the workers was a daring enough proposition, but it has proved a success. It evoked a great deal of interest and the "Freiheit" subsequently made one step forward in the direction of arousing the eagerness of the workers to put their thoughts on paper, and to stimulate their interest in their own daily.

A new daily feature was added in the newspaper, this was a contest for the best description of ones boss, foreman, one's neighbor in the shop or ones organization.

In spite of all predictions to the contrary, this contest was taken up with great interest, thousands of letters poured in from all parts of the country from those interested in it.

Many a picture drawn in these amateur attempts deserved the pen of an artist.

It is only to be regretted, that not more than 100 of these descriptions were published, such were the terms of the contest, that many of the unused manuscripts contained very valuable material.

Having achieved success in the two previously mentioned features, the "Freiheit" made one more daring step and announced its intention of having a whole issue of the paper exclusively prepared by the workers themselves.

The most optimistic of the optimists prophesied failure. Many held that such an issue would become the laughing stock of the town. Others maintained that nothing will come out of it anyway, as there would never be enough worthwile material to fill the space of the paper.

In a word, there was a lot of opposition and very little support for this venture.

However, the thing is now an accomplished fact, and not only was this issue no failure, but it proved the greatest success and will remain a lasting tribute to the services of the "Freiheit" both in its daring innovations and in the way it implant ed self-confidence in the workers.

The occasion for the issue of that special number by the workers was the celebration by the publication of the 500th consecutive number of the daily "Freiheit," which appeared Tuesday, August 14th. The workers' number appeared on Sunday, August 19th.

This issue was written, composed and issued by the workers themselves—with no outside help whatsoever. It is worth while mentioning the topics of the articles in this issue: "Two Paths;" "European Capitalism in Its Dying Stage;" "The Movement for a Labor Party;" "The Press of the Workers and of the Capitalists;" "Marxism, Intellectuals and the Proletariat;" "An Appeal of a Working Woman to Women Workers;" "The Lack of a Soul;" "An Observation of the Condition Prevailing in the Jewish Trade Unions;" "The Role of Psychology in the Labor Movement;" "The Workers and the Intellectuals;" "What Is Becoming of the Jewish Labor Movement;" "Have Political Questions any Relationship to Trade Unions?" "We, the Left-Wingers, Must Be Very Tactful;" "The Workers Heal the Conditions in the President-Day Society." Besides, there were a number of songs, short stories, editorials, congratulations of workers' organizations, a biography of a working-man and the regular news pages.

As announced on the front page of the paper the contributors to this special issue represented the following trades: Carpenters, cloakmakers, weavers, pants makers, ladies' waist makers, painters, men's tailors, furriers, printers, dressmakers and designers.

The very fact that the shop workers could issue this paper and the earnestness with which they took to their task is proof sufficient that there is enough intelligent energy latent in the working class.

It only requires to be awakened by a loving, tender hand, and it will assert itself. And one more thing can be proven by this undertaking, that the workers can consume and digest good literature and a high class of journalism. This dispels the customary excuses of the yellow and so-called workers' press that they must feed trash to the workers as the latter cannot appreciate anything else.

The "Freiheit" may rightly congratulate itself on the success of this issue and the workers may be proud of their achievement.

Splitting Role of Socialists Fully Exposed

By JOHN J. BALLAM
(Special to "The Worker")

BUFFALO, N. Y.—No doubt under orders from the Hillquit Tammany Hall, in New York City, the "Socialists" here have decided to stand pat on their municipal ticket, which is scab and dual to the Labor Party ticket for the coming city elections. This was the only result of the meeting of the committee of the Buffalo Labor Party with the local "Socialist" executive. The "Socialists" had been asked to withdraw their ticket in the interests of unity.

All that remains now as a sequel to the action of the Socialists is their elimination as a political factor in the labor movement of this city.

Thus we have seen how the yellow "Socialists" react to the labor party idea. Now come the black reactionists of Buffalo, who are scurrying for cover, like insects when their protecting stone is torn up letting in a flood of daylight. The old-line Democratic-Republican labor bureaucrats of the Buffalo Building Trades Council fear the action of the rank-and-file. While the Buffalo Labor Party was in the making, they used all their power in the attempt to prevent its formation. Failing in that they then used the capitalist press of Buffalo to try to discredit all who were connected with the B. L. P. raising the cry of "reds" and "bolshevism" in true Gompers style.

Under the leadership of John S. Keyes, President of the Building Trades Council, the reactionaries made a concerted attack upon the B. L. P. and fought bitterly to prevent the Central Labor Council (of which they are a part) from endorsing the Buffalo Labor Party candidates for supervisor and councilmen.

The motion to endorse the candidates of the Buffalo Labor Party was carried by a vote of 30 to 16. After their losing fight the officials of the Building Trades Council served notice of their withdrawal from the Buffalo Central Labor Council. This is not the first time that the building trades have withdrawn their delegates from the Central Labor Council. Whenever they are defeated they withdraw and attempt to split the labor movement only to be sent back by their rank-and-file. What the militant elements in the local unions of the building trades will say to this latest outrage of their leaders remains to be found out. Certain it is that these reactionary officials cannot stop the progress of the idea of independent political action in this city or its crystalization into a real bona fide labor party.

If it were not for the fact that members of the Workers Party are and have been active in their unions, and were the prime movers for the labor party here, and are now influential in its councils, the Buffalo Labor Party would long ago have succumbed to the attacks of the enemy. The Workers Party in the Labor Party is the steel rod that stiffens its resistance and makes for its permanence and success.

In this Buffalo situation our own comrades may easily find a lesson, or two. Some of our members have doubted the wisdom of the policies pursued by our Central Executive Committee in carrying out the tactics of the united front in relation to the labor party movement. It will, however, be found to be increasingly apparent that unless the Workers Party takes the leading role in the formation and guidance of the labor party movement, that movement must succumb to the machinations of its enemies.

Let our members take heart and hope everywhere, when they contemplate the situation here in Buffalo. Eleven months ago the Buffalo Central Labor Council was one of the strongholds of reaction; today it stands proof against the attacks of the most skilful tacticians of the bureaucracy. It has given birth to the first labor party in this State and it is unshakeable in its determination to uphold it against the sabotage and open attacks of the reactionists and yellows. And all this has been the work of a few men under the leadership of Comrade James Campbell, Secretary of the Molders Union here, the fighting Scotchman who has led the militants in Buffalo in their battle against the worn-out policies of the Gompers crowd, by sticking closely to the communist tactics of the united front.

What has been accomplished here can be done everywhere. The workers betrayed and defeated under the leadership of the old-line officials, are waiting for skillful radical leadership.

"Watch Us!" Is Challenge from Workers Party Members in St. Louis, Mo., District

By BARNEY MASS
(Special to "The Worker")

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—With delegates present from all shops and the Federal Employees, the 11th district held the second convention of District 10, Workers Party, at the Federated Building here. The meeting was given over to the Federal Employees, the position and problems facing the Trade Union Educational League and Workers Party. Foster cautioned the delegates, not to become too confident, because the reactionaries are not continually, due to the antagonisms aroused by the progress of the Trade Union Educational League.

The delegates reported on the situation in the shops and unions in their respective territories, and described the activities carried on by the party. These reports were very interesting and gave valuable information to the new District Organizer, L. K. England, placing him in position to know just what is needed in every territory.

Foster spoke briefly on the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the possibilities of establishing a "labor party" in this district were shown to be very good. Great enthusiasm was expressed by the delegates over the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and each delegate was urged upon his return home, to get behind the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, get into correspondence with the National Organizer and thus work in complete harmony with the program laid down by the Chicago Convention.

Barney Mass has been appointed Assistant District Organizer to work with Comrade England, the new District Organizer, who, with the new D. E. C. has outlined a program for this district which will bring results. A city convention has been called in St. Louis for the purpose of rejuvenating the party here.

There is going to be a real party in St. Louis—everyone should watch for developments. St. Louis is going to show the party what a wonderful district this is, and she is confident, after showing results, the party will sit up and take notice. ALL HAIL THE FUTURE'S BIGGEST DISTRICT OF THE PARTY!

Urges Workers' Participation

EDITOR "THE WORKER":—In the last issue of "The Worker" a reader writes that there is absolutely nothing in "The Worker" that I can criticize. It's all "O. K." I don't think so. I think that it lacks one thing to make it a real workers' paper, and that is workers' participation.

Practically everything in "The Worker" that is not supplied by news agencies is written by someone more or less permanently connected with "The Worker's" staff. Now you know of that pursued by the Pravda throughout the whole of its glorious career. Its policy was to have as much as possible of the paper written by the mass of workers at large, and the editorial staff was as far as possible a coordinating agency.

The same policy has been officially adopted and is being well carried out by the Workers' Weekly the organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain. If you will look in the issue of Saturday, July 14, you will find one of its many appeals for workers' participation. This time it quotes Pravda. The Workers' Weekly says:

"Pravda (the Truth) was the first daily paper published by the Russian workers themselves. Here is a quotation from its first number:—

"'We want the workers not just to limit themselves to sympathy, but to have an active part in carrying on our paper. The workers must not say that they are not used to writing; working class writers don't fall readybaked from the sky, but only work themselves up by their practice.'"

That was written exactly ten years ago. It applies today to our paper, the Workers' Weekly. Write to us. Write straight and write short. Don't tell us about organizations, meetings, trades councils, etc.—write to us about your place of work, working conditions, the boss, the foreman—and tell us the truth about how workers live. Then your mates will begin to realize that life is the same everywhere—for the workers. And when they have realized that, they may do something about it."

This may give you some idea of what I mean "The Worker" now—considering as it does of official or semi-official articles with an editorial flavor—is certainly not based upon the idea of workers' participation. And I realize the difficulty of transforming it into one that is. But just this, it appears to me, is the problem now before us, and will continue to be before The Daily Worker.

Workers' participation doesn't fall ready-baked from the heavens; nor does it usually come thru the initiative of the workers themselves. It is up to you to bring it in.

Yours for Workers' Participation,
Theodore Herberg.

By the Editor—We have always urged our readers to participate in the make-up of "The Worker." This was especially true in the campaign against the 12-Hour Day in the Steel Mills. Such an effort was our campaign to secure "The Worst Boss Stories." We shall continue in the future, as in the past, to develop the closest possible co-operation with our readers. Perhaps the writer of the above will help us along by sending us stories of conditions in his shop or factory. We invite him to help do what he thinks we are not doing.

Bentall Bares Vile Rule at Leavenworth

Critical Letter to "The Worker" Causes Officials to Threaten Punishment—Prisoner Making Criticisms, According to J. C. Bentall, a Political Prisoner—Freed from there July 21—Bentall Describes Conditions

Bentall, who was railroaded on a two-year sentence under the federal espionage act and after serving eighteen months was given an unconditional commutation.

Describing his prison experiences in an epistolary address at the Folket's Hus here, Bentall, whose prison job was head nurse in the hospital, said:

"The prisoners try to 'get by' as well as possible. But the dangers there are greater than anywhere else in the world. The bath places and the bedding spread all sorts of disease. If the other prisoners knew, as I did, what sort of diseases some of the prisoners had who used the dishes, they would starve before eating off those dishes.

"In the tubercular hospital the beds were so close together that they were almost touching each other—23 in one little ward—and the consumptive prisoners coughing and spitting. Some in such condition that they should throw off a gallon of blood! I slept there, in the same ward. And the cooks slept there. And all the food was cooked right there in the building, for everybody to eat!

"Nobody can know just how bad this system is, until he has been in the penitentiary—as a prisoner.

"Thirty-odd I. W. W. were put in 'the hole,' which is guarded by two big colored men who are 'lifers.' When a man is a 'lifer' he has no fear or regard for anything. Lifers enjoy beating up the prisoners under their control. One young prisoner was so beaten and kicked by these guards that he was injured for life; he was strong and healthy but if he ever comes out, he will never be strong again."

Bentall is using his freedom speaking for amnesty for all political prisoners. In the spring he will go to Europe.

Minneapolis Welcomes Bentall

By Budd L. McKillips,

MINNEAPOLIS.—Eighteen long months ago, when J. O. Bentall, one time Socialist candidate for governor of Minnesota, left Minneapolis to start serving a term in Leavenworth as a political prisoner, only a handful of friends and a U. S. marshal were present at the depot.

August 11 he returned. In addition to hundreds of friends, an official welcoming committee representing the city of Minneapolis met him when he stepped off the train.

The welcoming committee was composed of aldermen appointed by the president of the city council for that body voted to extend to the former political prisoner "an official welcome back to the city of Minneapolis."

At one time Bentall was editor of the Chicago Daily Socialist. After leaving Chicago he took up farming in Minnesota and was the Socialist party's candidate for governor in 1916. Up to the time he started serving his Leavenworth sentence he was editor of the now defunct Truth, a Duluth weekly.

Labor Dares to Use Free Speech Test in Fight Against the Pittsburgh Steel-Coal Terror

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—As the time for the trial of the workers arrested on July 4th draws near, the fight for the defense are being pushed with renewed vigor. The Workers Party is being supported by the Trade Union Educational League, the Labor Defense Council, the Socialist Party and Liberals and clergymen prominent in the civic life of Pittsburgh.

At this writing the right of the Workers Party to function openly without any interference is not definitely established. The Constitutional rights of free speech, free press and assembly will be demanded for all workers regardless of their political beliefs. The Workers Party will challenge the attempts of the agents of the Steel and Coal Trusts to rob it of its right to put its case before the workers.

"This meeting is looked upon as a test—a test in many ways. The position of the Workers Party will be placed squarely before the working masses and their support for the Party will be asked solely on the basis of its principles and tactics. No big meeting of this character has been held for some time in Pittsburgh and the workers are looking forward to rallying considerable additional strength and supporters to the defense of the persecuted workers.

Put Case before Pinchot

Preparations are also in full swing for laying bare before Governor Pinchot all the horrors of the Pittsburgh outrages committed against the members of the Workers Party. Mr. Robert W. Dunn, Acting Head of the Civil Liberties Union, and Jay Lorestone are preparing to put the case of the defendants up to the Governor on the basis of the workers having their most elementary constitutional rights flagrantly violated. The rights of Workers Party members to agitate and work for their principles openly will be defended and the full restoration of their civil liberties demanded.

It will be recalled that in June 1919 when the notorious Flynn Anti-Sedition Act of Pennsylvania was being put over by former Governor Sproul at the behest of the Steel and Coal interests, Gifford Pinchot appeared as one of the most aggressive opponents of this vicious measure. Governor Pinchot; James H. Maurer, President of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor; Thomas Kennedy, of the Anthracite Miners; George Rowan of the Railroad Brotherhoods; and S. J. McDonald of the Central Labor Union of Scranton then led the fight against the Flynn Act at a public hearing.

In making his plea against the Bill under which all the persecution against the Pittsburgh workers is now being carried on, Governor Pinchot then said that he did not want free speech denied. He objected to the Flynn measure on the ground that it met discontent with force.

Pinchot Kept Fully Informed

For some time the facts of the savage persecution to which workers have been subjected under the criminal syndicalist law have been continually and systematically sent to the Governor. The latter and Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania have had the opportunity to consider jointly a memorandum outlining the wanton outrages committed against the workers by the agents of Assistant District Attorney Myers and the Federal Department of Justice.

In a letter to Mr. Dunn, dated July 20th, Governor Pinchot's General Woodruff replying for the Governor, told of the investigation of such outrages that the Governor was conducting. And in his letter of July 23rd to Dr. Harry F. Ward, of the Civil Liberties Union, the Governor assured him "that the State Police, to the extent they help actively or by their mere presence to interfere, without the existence of necessity of protecting the public, with the constitutional rights of individuals, will be disciplined."

Youth of the Working Class!

ARISE!

On Sept. 2, THE NINTH INTERNATIONAL DAY OF YOUTH calls to the young workers and peasants all over the world.

On this day the working class youth in all countries demonstrates its determination to put an end to its miserable condition. It resolves to be no longer the docile cannon fodder for the capitalist wars. It determines to take its destiny into its own strong and capable hands and announces its decision in no uncertain terms to the capitalist class — the masters, the landlords, the profiteers, the militarists and their tools and hangers-on.

On this day it shows to its enemies the revolutionary unity of the tortured proletariat.

THE INTERNATIONAL DAY OF YOUTH is a strong weapon placed in the hands of the young workers by the Young Communist International which has taught them how to use it against their enemies, and year by year more young workers rally to the DAY OF YOUTH.

Only the organizations affiliated to the Young Communist International have fought energetically against the dictatorship of Fascism, against the danger of war and against the economic repression of the working class youth. In this battle the Young Communist International has received honorable scars in the service of the working class and has proved itself the loyal and honest champion of the revolutionary youth.

The social-democratic youth organizations have continually rejected the overtures of the Young Communist International for a united front of the working class youth in the fight against fascist aggression, and at their Hamburg Conference they have gone still further; they have completely rejected the idea of mobilizing the youth for the inevitable political and economic fight which the youth must make or be crushed.

THE YOUNG COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL, therefore appeals directly to all young workers to fling aside all other considerations and to gather under its banners for the final battle.

TAKE PART IN THE INTERNATIONAL DAY OF THE WORKING CLASS YOUTH!

U. S. Colleges Take Part in Moscow Show

(By F.S.R. PRESS SERVICE)

On Board S. S. Esthonia, at Sea—In the hold of the S. S. Esthonia en route for the Moscow Agricultural Exhibition are twenty-three cases of American exhibits, most of them donated by American colleges and universities.

Among the institution who have contributed their material and services to this cause are Cornell University (N. Y. State College of Agriculture), Amherst, New Jersey State College of Agriculture, and the Pennsylvania State College of Agriculture.

W. A. Brayles, Professor of Agricultural Education in the last named institution, in sending a case of exhibits measuring six by eleven feet, wrote: "I am sure that it is the wish of our Dean that we carry to your people some of the message of better agriculture . . . . I wish you success in the undertaking you are now engaged in."

Several private educational bodies, such as the "World Agricultural Society" and the Extension Division of the International Harvester Company, have also contributed valuable material.

Canadian Gov't Donates Movies

Seven pictures, a total of 6,147 feet of film, showing latest methods of grain raising, irrigation, water power, salmon fishing and canning, maple syrup refining, etc., are donated by the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau. Special arrangements were made by the Canadian authorities to save the payment of duty to the United States on this gift to the Russian people.

The shipment is in charge of Alexander Bucholtz, who will also install it in Moscow according to directions given by the American college authorities. The same ship bears the motion picture expedition of the Friends of Soviet Russia, in charge of William F. Kruse.

The agricultural exposition at Moscow opened Sunday, August 19, with 26 American firms represented. There were speeches by Kamenef, Rykow, Tschitcherin and Krassin.

Without Capitalist Aid

Spokesmen for Soviet Russia are quick to grasp the significance of developing events. It may be taken for granted, therefore, that there is no bluster in the note struck by all the speeches at the opening of the Agricultural Exposition, at Moscow, that, "The success of this exhibition proves that Russia can accomplish her own reconstruction, whether Europe helps or not." This is the big fact that the imperialist propagandists are trying to hide. Hence their flood of printer's ink against the favorable reports brought out of Soviet Russia by American congressmen and senators, and other sympathetic visitors.

It is significant that with the opening of Moscow's exhibition comes the report from Berlin that Senator LaFollette is going into Russia. Instead of attending the State Fair in his own state, the Wisconsin senator will be rubbing shoulders this year with the Russian workers and farmers. It is hoped, as a result, that the narrow national outlook that has characterized some of his decisions in the past, may take on an international vision. It may be taken for granted that LaFollette will not come out of Soviet Russia with any word of encouragement to the ex-Russian bankers and landlords, now sojourning in foreign climes.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the Pittsburgh millionaire, is back from Europe. He did not go to Russia. He exhales the bankers' usual optimism and declares that if the situation in the Ruhr could be adjusted, prosperity would come back to Europe, and the capitalist world would be on its feet again. But the situation in the Ruhr is going from bad to worse. The oppressed thruout all Europe are looking more and more toward the European United States of Workers' and Peasants' Governments as the only hope for their emancipation. Mellon says there is no danger of Germany going Bolshevist. But there may be more significance than words can convey in the New York Times' story of the opening of Moscow's agricultural show, under the heading, "Russia's Military Idol Meets Her Prize Hog." General Budenny will not lead his Red Cossacks into Germany, but long trainloads of pork from the flourishing hog farms of Rostoff-on-the-Don will bring to the German workers the story of the triumph of Soviet Rule over capitalist imperialism, which may persuade the German workers that they ought to have some of the same. All the battles for progress are not fought with the bayonet.

The Murder of the 100

While multi-millionaire coal barons, in New York City, argued for the safety of their investments, and security to coin increasing dividends, the lives of 100 coal miners were snuffed out in the Frontier Mine, at Kemmerer, Wyoming. This wholesale murder of workers in the western mining camp did not cause the coal profiteers even to bat an eye in pressing their demands upon the miners' union representatives. It did not matter with the coal barons when they are lives of the workers. In 18 mine catastrophes, since 1900, three thousand workers have been killed outright. "God wills it," say the coal barons, and continue counting their gold.

They were digging 100 graves out in Kemmerer, Wyo., and the palavering in the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City, went on, the whole power of the United States government allied with the coal barons, opposing the demands of the spokesmen of the United Mine Workers. A victory for the demands of the miners' union meant more of life and happiness to the coal diggers and their families. But it also meant fewer dividends. And the government that sits in Washington, headed by Coolidge in the White House, was created and is being maintained to safeguard profits.

John Hays Hammond, the millionaire mine owner, is chairman of the strikebreaking United States Coal Commission, that watched developments in New York City, and reported them to Hoover and Davis, the cabinet advisers of "The Strikebreaker President" Coolidge. This president hears only the defense of profits. His ears are not open to the demands of the miners' union. They cannot hear the weeping of the widows and orphans of the 100 dead in the Frontier Mine, at Kemmerer, Wyo.

Yet the death of the 100 in Wyoming, and the murder of the thousands that has gone before will be avenged. Thru their own misery and suffering, the great masses of labor will be schooled in the struggle for their own emancipation. In return for the lives of the many, the plundered workers and farmers will take the life of the capitalist system that oppresses them. That will be the beginning of a new day, not a day of mourning and sorrow, but a day of rejoicing for all who labor.

The Miners Will Strike

[illegible] the miners are [illegible] for a strike. [illegible] on its hands before Labor Day.

At the request of the [illegible] Coal Commission, under orders from the Harding administration, the miners have been kept in Hibbing City constantly for the past [illegible] years, [illegible] the mine owners have refused to meet them.

It is the miners' determination of the question of principle in the collection of union dues, and the wage increase of 20 per cent for tonnage workers and $2 a day for men working on a time basis are fundamental demands. At this moment it appears that the anthracite miners will not submit to arbitration of the question of the check-off, but will strike for it on the other points.

Another element making for a strike is the shortness of time at hand for settling the issues. There are eleven demands to be met by the mine owners. The time left within which the disputed points can be straightened out is altogether too short, since the negotiations are being resumed all over again.

The workers are in a mood for a strike. They are bent upon making up their past losses. They realize that if they don't win their demands now they are in for a rather rough sailing. Once the economic depression, already visible in many ways, sets in, the miners don't stand a chance of improving their conditions. For the miners it is the check-mate, and a wage increase NOW.

The anthracite coal miners have the only big union that is one hundred per cent organized in any basic industry in the world. The anthracite miners know their strength and are determined to use it. They will stand firm for their demands. The spirit of the rank and file is at its height for a real showdown.

Reply to This Challenge

Rodzianko, president of the Russian duma that was swept into the discard by triumphant Bolshevism, wants to start a daily paper to fight the Soviet Republic. He has written to David R. Francis, the St. Louis millionaire, who was the anti-Soviet plotting American ambassador, at Moscow, before and after the Bolsheviks came into power. The head of the czar's duma, who is now reclining in the hospitable lap of the Jugoslavian white terror, certainly knew whom to approach with his plea. And Francis knew what to do with the letter. He has had it published, accompanied by his own endorsement and a $500 pledge, in the friendly columns of the New York Times.

Rodzianko does not ask much for his anti-Soviet propaganda daily—only $3,000 or $4,000. And like every beggar licking the boots of capitalism he adds to his pledge, "Be sure that when God pleases to allow us to return to Russia, we shall repay our debt to our good American friends." Rodzianko means, of course, that if his class, the bankers and landlords, ever get back into power in Russia, they will make the workers and peasants pay to the full the dollars advanced by Mr. Francis, and his "rich countrymen." To be sure, what should and probably will happen, is that Soviet Russia will add those $3,000 or $4,000 to the indemnity it will ask when the United States comes begging to Moscow for the right to recognize and open trade relations with the Soviet Republic of Workers and Peasants.

But the greatest protection right now, not only for the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia, but for the workers and farmers of the United States, is the starting of a Communist Daily in this country. Francis, the American millionaire, and Rodzianko, the emigre, counter-revolutionary Russian want a daily paper to fight against Communism. Let the workers and farmers of the United States have a daily to fight for Communism.

Steinmetz Looks Into Future

Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, "wizard" of the General Electric Co., has taken another look into the future, into the electrical age of the four-hour workday, when the collectivist civilization of the East will have spread over Europe, leaving the United States, however, still isolated. It may be said that as prophet Steinmetz sees much clearer than he acts in present situations. Otherwise it would be difficult to explain how he can be a candidate on the Socialist ticket, urge Henry Ford for president, while contributing to the support of Orphan Homes in Soviet Russia, and giving other aid to the Republic of Workers and Peasants.

This last declaration, that has found an outlet thru the columns of the New York Times, is perhaps his most outspoken support of Russian Soviet Rule. He says that the collectivist tendencies of the Slavic people will make them the dominant race of the future. He argues that the leadership of the Germanic and Anglo-Saxon races fell by the wayside as a result of the world war, that they will both give way to the leadership of the Slav, while the United States remains bogged in its own individualism. With this outlook Steinmetz proclaims:

> "We are at the threshold of an age, greater in significance to the mass of humanity than even the hundred years thru which we have passed, miraculous as the fruits of those years may seem to have been.
> "Co-operative human effort will be the solution of most of the difficulties besetting mankind . . . In the fellowship and brotherhood of national human beings, selfish aggrandizement will give way to enthusiastic and whole-hearted collective endeavor."

These are the boldest words that Dr. Steinmetz has uttered. They will not be sweet music to the big bosses. But they will be an inspiration to the millions of oppressed workers in this country, who are listening in increased numbers to the Communist call that comes out of the East. American labor realizes, more and more, that only in response to that call will it be able to reap the full fruits of Steinmetz's new age of "inventions and discoveries." While Dr. Steinmetz looks into the future the masses strive as best they may, even without his active participation in their leadership to achieve his dream NOW.

The Capitalists Want to Kill Foster!
Workers! We Must Defend Our Leader!

By JOHN PEPPER

A small group of gunmen burst into the Carmen's Auditorium in Chicago and fired three shots at William Z. Foster. He was speaking to thousands of members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union who had gathered to protest against the splitting tactics of the reactionary union officials in expelling from the union seven members of the Trade Union Educational League.

The capitalist government not long ago conducted a trial against Foster, accusing him of advocating force and violence. The official labor leaders, from Gompers to Keating, have a thousand times denounced him as an advocate of force and violence. Johnston and Keating at the Cleveland Conference, Gompers at the Convention of the Cap Makers, Rodriguez in the July 3rd Convention in Chicago—all of them did nothing but repeat the speech of the prosecuting attorney in St. Joseph, Mich., against Foster and the other Communists, about the advocacy of force and violence. It was this systematic baiting against Foster which provoked the cowardly gunmen to the attack on Foster. Foster has used only three weapons against the capitalists and reactionary labor leaders—agitation, propaganda and organization. The answer of the capitalists and reactionary labor leaders is—open force and violence: three gunmen and three shots.

We do not know as yet who hired the gunmen. We do not know as yet the role played by the capitalist groups, the Department of Justice and reactionary labor leaders in this dastardly crime.

But we do know the motives behind this attempt on Foster's life.

The three shots are but the reply of the capitalists and the reactionary labor leaders to Foster's revolutionary activity in the interest of the working class.

The three shots are but the reply to the progress made by the Trade Union Educational League and the amalgamation movement, which aim to transform the trade unions into a real power against the capitalists.

The three shots are but a reply to the big rank and file conference of the railroad workers in Chicago, which took up the fight to save the railroad unions from a repetition of the disastrous defeat of the summer of 1922.

The three shots are but a reply to the National Conference of Progressive Miners, at Pittsburgh, which took up the fight against the united reactionary forces of Lewis and Farrington.

The three shots are but a reply to Foster's speech of defense at the St. Joseph trial, where, as a Communist, he proclaimed the fight against the whole capitalist system.

And first and foremost, the three shots are the reply to the July 3rd Convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, where Foster was one of the leaders who helped to forge the mighty weapon of a Labor Party and place it in the hands of the working class. It is not a mere accident, but rather symbolic, that this attempt against Foster's life was made in the same Carmen's Auditorium where the July 3rd Convention was held.

The duty of the workers is to defend Foster, to defend the most outstanding figure, the most prominent militant leader of the American laboring masses. The workers must realize that after the capitalists failed to put Foster into the penitentiary for ten years, they are now seeking to kill him, not as an individual, but as the most forceful advocate of the cause of the working class. And the reactionary labor leaders help to create the necessary atmosphere.

It is the duty of the workers to defend Foster because it is their duty to defend themselves.

How can and how must the workers defend Foster, our leader, and thereby also the cause of the revolution and the interests of every honest worker?

The answer of the workers to the three shots should be—a three hundred-fold amalgamation movement.

The answer of the workers to the three shots shall be—a three-fold energetic fight against the reactionary leaders of the railroad unions and of the United Mine Workers and Ladies' Garment Workers.

The answer of the workers to the capitalist press which, with its slanders helped in the Foster-baiting shall be—a mighty English-Language Communist daily for telling the truth and unmasking the kept press of capitalism.

The capitalists seek to kill Foster because he is a Communist. The answer shall be—tripling the membership of the Party of the Communists, the Workers Party.

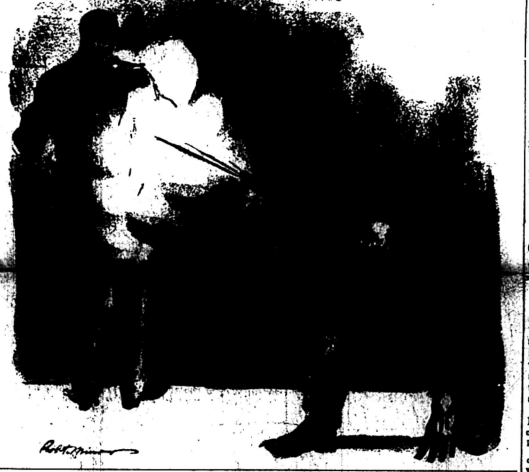
The capitalists want to kill Foster because they fear the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The answer of the labor movement shall be—the broadening and deepening of the Labor Party on a national scale as well as in the cities and states. It is the duty of every Communist and every militant worker to alarm the whole labor movement immediately against the gunmen tactics of the capitalists and against the red-chase of the reactionary labor leaders which makes possible such gunmen tactics. We must mobilize the labor movement in order to surround the body of our leader, Foster, the leader of the American revolution, with a coat of mail of love, admiration and solidarity!

IN EVERY BIG CITY AND INDUSTRIAL CENTER THE WORKERS SHALL CALL TOGETHER BIG PROTEST MASS MEETINGS AGAINST THE DESPICABLE MURDERERS!

EVERY TRADE UNION AND LABOR ORGANIZATION MUST IMMEDIATELY PASS RESOLUTIONS OF PROTEST AGAINST THE HIRED ASSASSINS AND AGAINST THE FOSTER-BAITING BY THE REACTIONARY LABOR LEADERS!

THE CAPITALISTS WANT TO KILL FOSTER! THE ANSWER OF THE WORKERS SHALL BE THE STORMY, UNANIMOUS CRY: WE WILL DEFEND OUR LEADER!

The Last Weapon of Reaction



Attempted Assassination of Foster Fails in Reactionary War on T. U. E. L.

(By Wire to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Attempted assassination of William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, is the latest development in the attack of the yellow official bureaucracy of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union upon its progressive membership.

But the three murderous bullets, pumped from an automatic by one member of a group of hired gunmen who invaded the monster protest meeting of garment workers in Carmen's Hall, here, all flew wild of their mark.

The mark was Foster, who had just been presented amid a great demonstration, as the speaker of the evening, and was launching into an explanation of the present attack by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against the militants in the union, which has already resulted here in the expulsion of seven of the most active and able members of the Chicago organization.

Foster replied to the charges brought against the T. U. E. L. by Vice President Meyer Perlstein, of New York, now stationed at Chicago, to do the dirty work of the Sigman administration. Foster said:

"If Perlstein declares that the Trade Union Educational League is a dual union, he is a liar, and he knows it."

Perlstein was not there to back up his charges. Instead three shots were fired in rapid succession, by the gunman who had suddenly appeared with others at a side entrance. In the tumult that ensued the gunmen made their escape as rapidly as they had made their appearance.

The militant spokesman, Foster, who had been deported from Colorado and Wyoming, who had been arrested, indicted and placed on trial in Michigan during the past year, was perhaps the coolest individual during the commotion into which the meeting was thrown.

Due to Foster's composure, and to the fact that he continued immediately with his speech, the audience regained its composure, and a panic was thus prevented. Foster delivered the remainder of his speech, and was listened to without further interruption.

A great part of the audience was made up of women garment workers who had joined hands with the men in the industry to protest against the expulsion of T. U. E. L. members from the union, on the charge that the T. U. E. L. is a dual organization.

The shooting was the crowning act of a long series of attempts to disrupt the meeting. It was evident from the beginning of the demonstration, attended by thousands who had come to the Carmen's Hall thru a driving rainstorm, that a full crew of sluggers were present to harrass and break up the gathering. These goodies created disturbances that in-

Coal Strike Situation As We Went to Press

By JAY LOVESTONE

President Coolidge has thrown in a "progressive," Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, to seek a compromise in order to avoid a strike.

It is not unlikely that Pinchot will threaten to call a special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature to revoke the State-Mining License System in order to force the miners to accept the 30-Day truce offer.

A small wage increase will be offered the miners as bait to accept the truce proposal.

Pinchot and Coolidge know that once the miners agree to delay their strike for even one day the likelihood of a strike will fade into the realm of the impossible. That is the reason for their great anxiety to secure some sort of a postponement now.

In the meanwhile the mine owners are flooding the country with publicity, spreading the lie that the workers are getting a terrifically high wage and the rate of wages has continually gone up. Not only that. The mine owners are spreading misinformation as to the real value of the miners' wages today.

On August 23rd, the United States Coal Commission submitted a report to the President which shows that the mine owners are weaving their propaganda fabric out of the whole cloth. Says this report: "It may be pointed out that the labor costs formed 61.6 per cent of the sales realization in 1913, and 59.5 per cent in January-March, 1923."

But the Commission, which no one can accuse of having the slightest sympathy with Organized Labor, goes on to say even more.

"In considering the increase of the labor cost two important facts should always be kept in mind—only part of the increase is due to wage scales, a part being attributable to the greater amount of labor necessary, in the later years, to produce a ton of coal, due to the changes in the physical condition of the mines, such as the mining of seams which formerly were considered too poor to work, etc. Another consideration which applies to the labor cost as well as to the other costs and the sales realization is that the purchasing power of a dollar was much greater in 1913 than in 1923."

Of course the Operators do not advertise this portion of the report. And even that small section of the so-called "public" which arrogates to itself the displeasure of reading the official Government surveys has not yet been given that pleasure of seeing this report in circulation. An analysis of this report shows further that from 1919 to 1923 the total labor cost per ton increased approximately 18 per cent. At the same time the same forty-eight coal companies reporting this fact also made a report showing that in this same period the per ton cost of officers' expenses and salaries increased 60 per cent. What is more, the same companies for the same period show a total increase of 180 per cent in the tax cost per ton.

Finally, their accounting report shows an increase in "general expenses" of 45 per cent. No one knows what the "general expenses" include. Not a single Government investigating Commission has ever been able to find out what's what in these "general expenses." But there is not a single naive one in Washington, altho it is a city famed for spurious food, who does not know that these

Foster Predicted Campaign of Violence as Next Step in Reactionary War on T. U. E. L.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

"Their next step is a campaign of violence."

These prophetic words were spoken by William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, at the inspiring demonstration of New York City's needle workers, held at the New Star Casino last Thursday, to protest against the expulsion war launched by the Sigman administration in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against members and sympathizers of the Trade Union Educational League.

Unlike the Chicago gathering, called for the same purpose, Monday night, the New York meeting went off peacefully. Storms of applause repeatedly swept the great auditorium as the 4,000 workers present approved the sentiments expressed by the speakers.

The note of defiance by these militant workers against the campaign of expulsions and terror launched against them, may be summarized in the words of Ben Gitlow, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, when he said:

"It is one thing to expel and another thing to get rid of the left wing movement in the labor unions."

The propaganda attacks of labor's official bureaucracy against the Trade Union Educational League have invariably been followed by violence. This has been true, to a great extent, in the miners' union, where President John L. Lewis, himself, at the Scranton, Pa., Tri-District Anthracite Coal Miners' Convention, incited some of the delegates to open violence against Joseph Manley, secretary of the International Progressive Miners' Committee. Efforts at similar lynching bees have been made in Western Pennsylvania against the militant miners. Alex Howat, for instance, has borne the brunt of this attack in several states.

Foster, therefore, was not indulging in idle oratory, in New York City, three days before the Chicago gathering, when he predicted that "Their (the officialdom of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union) next step is a campaign of violence."

The shooting in Chicago, following upon the expulsion of members of the Trade Union Educational League, involves, more than the struggle withdl the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Its greatest significance lies in the fact that it involves the right of the whole rank and file of the American labor movement to be heard in determining labor's policies.

The purpose of the Trade Union Educational League, its aims and objects, were thoroly presented at the New York meeting, as they were in Chicago, and the official bureaucracy was challenged to show that the T.U.E.L. is a dual union.

"The Trade Union Educational League," said Foster, in New York, "is a movement that has grown up as the result of the stupidity, dishonesty and corruption of the American trade union leadership. The officials of labor, from Sam Gompers to Morris Sigman, are not on the job for

CHICAGO. The stand taken in resolutions by the great mass meeting here of garment workers, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in the face of official tyranny and the terrific shots of would-be assassins, was as follows:

Whereas, the fundamental principle of labor unions is that the union must include workers of all opinions and be tolerant of the convictions of its members, and

Whereas, Vice-President Perlstein, is in Chicago conducting a campaign of persecution against several members of the union, because of their advocacy of amalgamation, the shop delegate system, independent working class political action, and various other policies distasteful to the administration,

Whereas, the excuse he is offering for these persecutions of loyal members, some of whom have belonged to our organization for as long as 15 years, is ridiculous, namely that the Trade Union Educational League is a dual organization, and

Whereas, the trial committee that heard the evidence showed its disagreement with the prosecution by voting 5 to 1 in favor of acquittal, and only 11 members out of a total of 35 on the Joint Board voted in favor of convicting, these 11 members, it is being distributed, 7 not voting, and 3 absent, and

Whereas, Vice-President Perlstein, claims that he is carrying out this persecution upon direct instructions of the General Executive Board,

Therefore, be it resolved, that we condemn these unjustifiable proceedings as contrary to the basic principles of trade unionism and brand as being the most serious disruption into our organization, and be it further

Resolved, that we request the General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to reverse the decision of expulsion and restore these members to their good standing in the union, and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to all local unions and joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and the General Executive Board.

A general membership meeting to nominate candidates for the coming election will be held Tuesday, Sept. 4, at 8 p. m., at 110 Grand Street, Hoboken, N. J. Members must not fail to attend this meeting.

New York Membership of "International" in Stand for Its Rights

The resolutions adopted by the great mass meeting of the New York membership, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was as follows:

Whereas, the General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, because of its bitter opposition to the demands of the militants for Amalgamation, a labor party, and organization of the unorganized has entered a war against the militant and progressive forces in the organization, and

Whereas, the General Executive Board in this war against the militants and progressives desires above all to maintain its autocratic and atristic rule over the membership by disfranchising the militants and stifling their names off the ballot, and

Whereas, the General Executive Board unable to stand the criticism of the rank and file has thru terrorism and brutal slugging denied Freedom of Speech and wiped out every vestige of democracy in the organization, and

Whereas, the General Executive Board has at this time when the conditions in the industry are deplorable when scab shops are flourishing, when thousands of union men are out of work, when the control of the union is laughed upon and ignored by the manufacturers who have made agreements with the union, when the working conditions in the factories are abominable, when the manufacturers thru injunctions are threatening to legally exterminate the organization, when the organization of the unorganized has become a life problem for the organization have started a war against the militant and progressive forces represented by the Trade Union Educational League instead of using all their efforts to solidify and strengthen the organization in order to make it a weapon once more in the interests of the workers, and

Whereas, this war against the members of the Trade Union Educational League in depriving the union of its most active membership will disrupt and smash the organization, and

Whereas, in Chicago the unions has already been victimized by the disruptive tactics of the General Executive Board since many of the most active and most devoted members of the organization have been expelled in spite of the fact that an investigation committee after hearing the charges against them had exonerated them, and

Whereas, the General Executive Board would not tolerate opposition to its drastic expulsion tactics and has suspended locals that have refused to endorse its union smashing campaign, and

Whereas, the General Executive Board wants to tear the organization apart, being what the enemies of Labor have so far failed to do, thus much as they have requested all the locals all over the country to expel the militant and progressive members who adhere to the program of the Trade Union Educational League, and

Whereas, this policy is now being pursued by the right wing machine in all the other unions, and

Whereas, a yellow, lying, pernicious sheet, the Jewish Daily Forward, is using its wealth and influence to spur the right wing on in its campaign to smash the organizations of the workers,

Therefore be it resolved, that the rank and file in mass meeting assembled in New Star Casino on August 23rd, 4000 strong protests most emphatically against this effort to ruin and smash our organization, and be it further

Resolved, that we refuse to recognize the expulsion of the most active and loyal members from our ranks, and that we pledge ourselves to carry on an unceasing war in our local unions, in our executive and joint boards and thru mass meetings and membership meetings against these disruptive tactics of the General Executive Board, and be it further

Resolved, that we will continue to carry on this fight against all the reactionary forces in the Labor movement until the rank and file will again gain the leadership in their own organization and until the fight for amalgamation, a labor party and the organization of the unorganized is won.

The Workers Party at a Turning Point

By JOHN PEPPER

Our Party stands before a modification of its function.

Briefly stated, we can divide the history of our Communist Party since its creation, into three periods.

The first period; the stage of setting up Communist forces, beginning with the separation from the Socialist Party until about the Bridgman Convention of August, 1922.

The second period: the fight for a standing in the labor movement, from the summer of 1922 to the Labor Party Convention in Chicago, July 3, 1923.

And we are now on the threshold of the third period: the period in which we must begin to lead that part of the working class which stands under our influence, into the political struggles against the capitalists and capitalist government. This period begins with the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The Period of Collecting the Communist Forces

The first period, the collecting of the Communist forces, was the period of constant factional fights over the question of the best form of organization into which the Communist forces should be gathered. The first great question of organization was whether there shall be a uniform party or a party built on Language Federations. The second question of organization was of the relation between overground and underground work of the Communists. The third question of organization was whether the underground is the only possible form of existence for the Communist Party in America, or whether, depending upon conditions, there shall be an underground of overground form of organization. That which all these problems had in common was that they were all internal problems of the Party, and not problems of the great, broad, labor movement, and still less were they the problems of general American politics.

It was a period of selection and collecting of Communist elements in the United States. It is therefore self-evident that the main question was the question of Party Unity. The Period of the Fight for a Standing in the Labor Movement.

The second period, the period of fighting for a standing in the labor movement, shows an entirely different picture. The main problem was, how shall the Communists approach the masses, how shall the Workers' Party stand as deep roots as possible into the masses. In general, the tactic of the United Front served to attain this aim. Particularly, the campaign for amalgamation, the defense drive, the campaign for the defense of the foreign-born workers, the anti-Fascist campaign and the fight for the Labor Party were the various roads leading to the various divisions of the masses. The whole life of the Party changed fundamentally in this period which has covered the last year. Our comrades were no longer occupied with questions of the best form of Party organization, but with organizational details of various labor organizations outside of our Party. It was no longer sufficient for our Party members simply to go to the branch meetings of the Party, but it was their duty to become members of labor organizations, and become the most energetic participants in meetings and conventions of the labor movement. We have had no organized factional fights at all during the last year. It is characteristic in the highest degree that, as the main problem was no longer the selection and collection of Communist forces, but the gaining of influence by the Communists in the labor movement, the most usual classification of Party members was no longer who is a "good Party member," but who is a "good trade unionist."

A part of the Party comrades—and not the worst ones—those who rendered the best service to the Party in collecting the Communist forces, did not grasp immediately or altogether the change of function of the Party. They clung to the underground form of organization, as to a fetish, and considered it the surest guarantee for barring out of the Communist Party those, who were not [illegible] from past Communists. But this danger for the Communist Party became they feared that this meant sacrificing of the Communist Party. There was a tendency at that time in our Party, and impatiently demanded the expulsion of those comrades who could not understand and go along with the change of function of the Party. But the C. E. C. of our Party, instead of expulsion of these comrades, exercised patience and fought to convince them, the result that the greatest part of these comrades became the best workers in the trade unions and for the Labor Party idea.

The Period of Political Struggles

The organizing of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party means for our Party the beginning of a new era, the Workers' Party is the only political group which has not betrayed the formation of a Labor Party. At the July 3rd Convention in Chicago, the Workers Party was the political driving force which helped to crystallize into an organization the mighty sentiment of the rank and file.

In the first period of the history of our Party we collected the Communist forces. In the second period, the Communists acquired influence among the laboring masses. But this influence lays a very great responsibility upon us. The laboring masses consider the Communists as their leaders, and they expect that we show them the best ways and means of fighting against the capitalists and capitalist government. In the third period of its history, which is now beginning, it is the duty of our Party to lead into the political struggle the masses which are under its influence.

In the first period our Party was occupied only with internal problems of organization. In the second period it was mainly occupied with trade union problems. In the third period it must occupy itself more than ever before, with general political problems. In the first period the vision of the greatest part of our members did not reach further than the internal factional fights of the Communist Party. In the second period the vision of our Party was enlarged, but with a great part of our comrades it stopped at the limits of the internal struggles of the labor movement. We must now broaden the vision of the Party; We must perceive behind the internal conflicts of the various classes of capitalist society. We must undertake more than ever before, the fight against the government power.

It would of course be a mistake for anyone to believe that the tasks of the first and second periods no longer hold good, and are unimportant to the third period. It goes without saying that we must still select and collect the Communist forces. We still have not the Communist mass party. It is self-evident that we must still conduct the greatest struggle in order to influence the masses. We still have not the majority of the American working class under Communist influence.

But now in the third period we have a richer and more complicated task: We must take over, in addition to the tasks of the first and second period, the tasks of the third period, namely, the task of leading the masses into the political struggle.

This new task creates a much more difficult and complicated situation for our Party, and means a greater modification of the function of the Party than the transition from the first to the second period. It is almost self-evident that a part of our Party comrades—and again not the worst part—cannot immediately and drastically enough understand this modification in the function of our Party. A part of our most active and industrious comrades who have been rendering the best service to the Party in the fight for a standing in the labor movement, and in the fight in the trade unions, do not understand to-day the policies of the Party in the question of the Labor Party. They identify the Party too closely with the trade unions, and even if not in their theory, yet in their practice, they wish that the Party would not be a political party, but simply a left wing of the trade union movement. This view was expressed with distilled falsity in the paper issued by the Williamsburg branch of our New York Party organization in this city. The Party organization is there whenever possible, do nothing as a Party, but everything thru the trade unions. Such close adaptation of the Party to the trade unions as was called for in the organ of the Williamsburg branch means the sacrifice of the role of leadership of the Communist Party as a Party. It is just as erroneous as the slogan which was launched formerly in Russia by the right elements and later by the leftists of the Communist Labor Party of Germany, that the Communist Party shall assimilate itself with the Soviets. Of course, the participation in the trade union movement is a life and death question for our Party. Of course we must compel every Party member to become a member of a trade union. Of course we must support and enlarge the Trade Union Educational League tenfold. But it would be a great mistake and in the present new period an obstacle to the further development of our Party, if we would devote ourselves exclusively to trade union problems, and if we do not realize that a Communist Party must be not merely the left wing of the trade union movement, but a political party, concerned with all political and social questions. In the present period we must ask not only who is a "good Communist," and who is a "good trade unionist," but also who is good at understanding American politics.

We must find not use the tactics of persecution and expulsion toward those comrades who do not grasp quickly enough that this modification in the function of the Party is necessary and inevitable; but we must once more employ the means of patience and conviction. However, that which we cannot sacrifice is that every comrade, whether he is convinced or not, must carry out the policies of the Party and the instructions of the Central Executive Committee decided upon. The comrades who are as yet unconvinced should not forget the classical maxim expressed by Zinoviev: Discipline begins where conviction ends.

Develop Campaign for Workers' Education in Detroit Labor Rank

By CYRIL LAMBKIN, Pres., Workers' Educational Association

DETROIT, Mich.—The Workers' Educational Association of Detroit a year ago embarked upon the policy of widening the scope of its activities of attracting to itself the more alert workers, was particularly trade unionist, aiming ultimately to become the educational and cultural center of the workers of Detroit.

The Association already owned a large building, the House of the Masses, which afforded the opportunity of establishing such a center. Next it was necessary to get recognition from the organized labor movement. This was accomplished last April.

The next task is to carry on a campaign of interest, and attract the more or less militant workers to the house. This task is not a difficult one, provided the more militant workers who are members of the Workers Party, realize the great opportunity presented by the campaign and by the broader operation of such an educational organization for infusing a militant spirit in the rank and file generally.

For the purpose of gaining the full support of the members of the Workers Party, the Workers' Education Association has arranged a special meeting for C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary of the Workers Party, who will speak on "Labor and Education." This meeting will take place in the House of the Masses, 2101 Gratiot Ave., Sunday, Sept. 9th, at 2:30 p.m.

The September "Labor Herald"

A militant mass movement against reactionary leadership is making itself felt in the trade union movement of this country. Whether it is among the shoeworkers of Brockton, Mass., among the coal miners and the steel workers, or the toilers on the railroads, this revolt against the old type of labor leaders and a forging ahead toward revolutionary union ideals becomes more pronounced daily. The September "Labor Herald" takes up these problems very effectively. You will be especially interested in an article on "The Railroad Amalgamation Movement" by O. H. Wangerin, Secretary of the International Committee for Amalgamation in the Railroad Industry, and another by William Z. Foster on the problems of the coming American Federation of Labor Convention to be held in October at Portland, Oregon.

No less interesting and important, however, are such articles as "Lewis Crucifies Nova Scotia Miners," by Tom Bell; "The All-Russian Textile Workers' Union" by M. Braginsky; "The Brockton Revolt," by James Harris; "Victimizing League Militants," by Ben Gitlow; "The Workers International," by Caleb Harrison; "The Russian Worker at Present," by Moissaye J. Olgin; "Selective Immigration," by Clarissa S. Ware, and "Trade Union Officials and Progress," by M. B. Howard.

"The Liberator" for September

What about "The Third American Revolution?" You can read about it, in the article under that heading by John Pepper, in the September issue of "The Liberator." Pepper analyses the fears of the next revolution expressed by ex-President Woodrow Wilson, in his recent article in the Atlantic Monthly, and by U. S. Senator Hiram Magnus Johnson, in his speeches in Minnesota.

In addition to this article and the editorials there is much additional food for thought in the excellent contributions on other great problems before the American workers. "The Yellow Streak in Coal," by J. Louis Engdahl, is a startling revelation of the official tyranny of President John L. Lewis' administration in the United Mine Workers Union over the rank and file. "Treasure Islands," by Jay Lovestone, is an expose of the bloody military rule of America's Imperialism established by General Leonard Wood over the Philippines. Floyd Dell's "Outline of Marriage" closes with the working woman on the stand.

The artistic tone of the September Liberator is rich in drawings by Adolph Dehn, Louis Ribak, Wanda Gag, Maurice Becker, William Gropper, and in features like Robert Miner's double page Coolidge cartoon, and Art Young's latest in his Survival of the Fittest series.

"Young Worker" Gets Youthful

An interesting feature of the September "Young Worker" is the distinctive youthful character of this number. The articles are written by boys and girls, and deal with their problems. Here are some titles: THE KID WORKER, THE PROBLEMS OF CANADA'S YOUTH, WE ARE THEY OUR WARS, THE STREET AND MAIN STREET, A MODERN FABLE. There are also a number of letters telling about conditions of work for young boys and girls, including school children, in such well known firms as the Bethlehem Steel Company, Oregon Packing Company, Sears Roebuck & Company, and other terferred with the meeting. When Ian Marek began an address in Polish, a special effort was made to break up the proceedings. But it failed. Then Foster was introduced and received an enormous ovation. He had spoken but a few minutes when the shooting took place.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the seven expelled members of the union. These were Dora Lifshitz, Israel Dashefsky, Goldman, A. Kanevsky, Jenny Schwartz, J. Litvinsky and J. Terry. Chairman Goldman and the speakers, Davidson and Jenny Schwartz, put the issue before the audience. These were the union officials who had been most enthusiastic in their aid of Vice President Perlstein's organization campaign in Chicago. They have been active and respected members of the union for 15 years.

In reply to Perlstein's dictatorial regime inaugurated against the militants in the union, the mass meeting went on record, in resolutions unanimously adopted, condemning the Sigman-Perlstein splitting tactics, and pledging itself to preserve the unity of the organization at all costs.

It was a coincidence that another speaker during the evening was Moissaye J. Olgin who, while editor of The Freiheit, the New York Jewish Communist daily, had been hauled before the prosecuting attorney by Morris Kaufman, and his Socialist regime in the Furriers' Union, because The Freiheit charged the Furriers' Union officials with employing in New York the tactics that developed during the meeting here.

The yellow officials of the Furriers' Union challenged Olgin at that time to prove that they had hired or used sluggers and gunmen against the union's membership. No doubt, the sanctimonious leadership of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union will adopt the same righteous attitude as its best defense in the present instance.

The shooting in the Carmen's Auditorium here reveals the true nature of the reactionary labor leadership. There is indignation everywhere. The general opinion is that the Sigman-Perlstein clique stands exposed as a union splitting outfit using strong arm tactics. The fight for the reinstatement of the excluded members will be vigorously carried on. While the meeting was in progress, the Sigman-Perlstein elements on the Chicago Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union expelled another member. This fight against the bureaucracy is a fight for all honest trade union men to take up.

New York Answers Call for Daily Worker

The drive for "The Daily Worker" was inaugurated in District 2, New York City, with the election of the English Daily Campaign Committee. The direction of the work will be centered in the hands of this committee, and it is planned to draw in all of the active units functioning under the control of the Party.

The first step in this direction has been taken with a call for a meeting of delegates from all branches in the City of New York to meet at the local headquarters, Friday, Sept. 7, at 8 p.m. Thru this body of workers it is planned to reach the thousands of members and sympathisers in a great personal contact campaign for the sale of shares.

During the coming campaign three Great Demonstrations will be held. The first of these will take place at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and Third Ave., Friday, Sept. 28th.

Foster Predicted the Campaign of Violence

labor. If the leaders of labor had been on the job, there would have been no need for the existence of the Trade Union Educational League. They didn't get on the job for labor, that is why we are on the job. That is why we have organized the Trade Union Educational League.

"The League was first greeted by a campaign of silence," continued Foster. Then it was ridiculed. Now it is being attacked. The old fossilized officialdom is a disgrace to the labor movement. They have not been able to stop the League. Its program is being accepted everywhere. We have taught the rank and file that they have something to say in the union."

Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is directing the attack on the T.U.E.L. forces in Chicago. He was originally sent to Chicago to carry on an organization drive. Foster told how Perlstein came to him for organization ideas. Foster, who is a member of the organization committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor, said he had given Perlstein all the information he had, that he had co-operated with him in every way possible, to help organize the unorganized forces of the ladies' garment workers in Chicago.

Foster then went on to show that where a campaign of silence and vilification fails, the next inevitable step is violence. They can't answer our program, So they slug our members. They beat them up. They disfranchise them.

"We had expected that these expulsions would take place. But we had not even dreamed that they would be started in a union that calls itself revolutionary. It is a disgrace to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that the expulsion of Trade Union Educational League members should first take place in this union. In no other union has this taken place as yet.

"Today the left wing has got the idea of amalgamation stuck in the craft unions like glue."

Foster then made the charge that Abraham Cahan, and his Jewish Daily Forward, that has inspired the war against the radicals in the labor movement, especially in the needle trades, was back of the present attack on the T. U. E. L. and I. L. G. W. U.

"If Sigman is the man that Abraham Cahan has picked out to carry on this fight, then he has got much to learn. The T. U. E. L. has done more to kill sentiment for dual unionism in the labor movement than any other power. The T. U. E. L. is not even a union. It doesn't sign contracts with the bosses. It doesn't reach agreements about wages and conditions. It is only an educational organization. What is the real issue? I do not believe that even the labor officials seriously kid each other about the T. U. E. L. being a dual organization."

Foster then reviewed the tremendous service rendered the labor movement by those who had been expelled in Chicago, among them Israel Davidson and Dora Lifschitz.

This attack was devised in the brain of Abe Cahan," Foster charged again. "Cahan learned this stuff from the Yellow Amsterdam International of Trade Unions, that has followed this program as a definite tactic against the lefts, especially in Germany."

Foster then told how he had seen Benjamin Schlesinger, predecessor of Morris Sigman as President of the I. L. G. W. U., degenerate from his early position as a militant trade unionist. Foster expressed the belief that Schlesinger was forced to give way to Sigman in order that a more militant campaign might be carried on against the left wing.

In conclusion Foster said:

"The salvation of the union is the task of the left wing. Therefore we must stop and carry out the slogan of 'No splits in the union'".

The chairman of the meeting was Elias Marks, of the Cloak Makers' Union, I. L. G. W. U. Other speakers were H. Abrams, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Ben Gold, Furriers' Union, Henry Gewirtzman, Fancy Leather Goods' Workers, and Ben Lifschitz. Other similar meetings will be held in other sections of the city.

Assassination--The Last Weapon of Reaction

It has happened. The fight of the yellow trade union officials against the miltant rank and file workers has come to a climax in a deliberate attempt to assassinate their acknowledged leader—William Z. Foster.

Following so closely the mobbing of Joseph Manley, at Scranton, Pa., at the direct incitement of John L. Lewis, the attempted murder of Foster has a sinister significance. The outrage at Scranton was applauded by the "Socialist" newspapers, the "Call" and the Jewish "Forward." The Republican, Lewis, and the "Socialist" Sigman have shown themselves to be blood brothers.

Reaction fights progress everywhere in the labor movement with the same weapons—expulsions, disruption, sluggers. When all these fail it has one weapon left—assassination. The shots of the professional gunmen at the Carmen's Auditorium, at Chicago, show that the last card is on the table.

The reactionary officialdom wants to kill the left wing in order that it may continue to live.

It was no accident that Foster was the target of the professional gunmen at Chicago. Foster is the man the yellow leaders want to get out of the way; Foster, the leader of the militant left wing; Foster, the tireless propagandist and teacher of, modern unionism; Foster, the organizer of hundreds of thousands of Steel and packinghouse workers; Foster, the unbending fighter all that is alive and forward driving in the American labor movement today.

The yellow leaders have shown that they will stop at nothing to beat back the rising tide of rank and file revolt against their incompetence and corruption. Expulsions and splits are their methods in trade. They violate every clause of the union constitutions which stand in their way. They would rather smash the unions to pieces than let the honest rank and file workers have their will.

The bullets fired from the gunmen's automatics at Chicago were intended to kill not only Foster, but the things Foster stands for—Amalgamation, the Labor Party, and the other measures which will regenerate the labor movement and give it new life and strength. If the bullets had struck their mark the American labor movement would be thrown back decades.

The expulsions of active and devoted unionists, and the use of hired thugs and assassings, is not the concern of the garment workers alone. It is a life and death question to all progressive elements in the labor movement. The workers in every form have a vital interest at stake in the heroic struggle of their fellow workers in the needle trades. The attempt to take the life of Foster brings the burning issue home to every militant worker.

Militant workers! Take up the fight of the persecuted needle workers. Even the searchlight of publicity on the needle trades officialdom. Roll up such a mighty wave of working class protest that they will not dare to continue their criminal campaign.

Down with the treacherous leaders who try to split the unions!

Down with the Employers of sluggers and Assassins!

Finnish Members of Workers Party Get Behind the Drive for English-Language Daily

The powerful Finnish Federation of the Workers Party has responded magnificently to the appeal for an English-Language Communist Daily. The Finnish workers have pledged themselves to raise $25,000 by the time set for the publication of the first issue of the Daily Worker, the sixth anniversary of the Russian Bolshevik Revolution, Nov. 7. The communication received from Fahne Burman, secretary of the Finnish Federation, on this subject follows:

Daily Worker Campaign Committee.

Dear Comrades: We have received your communication of Aug. 15, signed by you and Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Party, notifying us that the Finnish Federation is requested to raise the sum of $25,000 for the Daily Worker—a total of $100,000 to be raised. Altho the quota apportioned to our Federation is quite high, taking into consideration the amount of Finnish workers in the United States from whom this sum will have to be collected, we will however assure you that we will raise our quota as all the other Federations raise theirs, so that an English Daily may be realized.

The circular letters of your Campaign Committee have been translated and mailed to our Branches as preliminary information. In addition to that . . . . . we will now mail to our members and branches letters and instructions as to how to go ahead with the work of raising the money. We hope to be able to raise our quota in this Drive without any expenses, and believe that no part of our quota should be used to collect the shares from other Party units, so that we can be able to turn over $25,000 in cold cash when needed.

The Campaign will be conducted by the Federation office in the same manner as in the past. We shall be able to raise our quota in full by the time set for the first publication of the Daily Worker on Nov. 7th next. With best wishes for a successful campaign, we are

Fahne Burman, Secretary,
Finnish Federation, Workers Party.

With the Finnish Federation pledging one-fourth of the total amount of $100,000 the success of the Drive for the Daily Worker is assured. If the rest of our Comrades will follow the pace set by the Finnish Federation there will be no doubt of a powerful English Language Daily being an established fact.

The Lettish Federation's Support

That the Lettish Comrades will carry out the task assigned to them and live up to their best revolutionary traditions is indicated by the following letter received from the Secretary of the Lettish Federation:

Daily Worker Campaign Committee.

Dear Comrades: The undersigned Comrade was designated as Campaign Manager of this Federation for the Daily Worker and the Bureau pledged itself to do its utmost in supporting the Campaign and will carry it on wholeheartedly in the Lettish Federation.

All announcements and documents pertaining to the campaign will be translated and published in our NEWS LETTERS and distributed in large numbers, as we have no newspaper of our own. Special methods will be employed to raise our quota. Numbers of circulars have been issued to our Branches already, giving them the very first instructions about Branch "Daily Worker Committees" and preparing the way for a general and active Campaign. We are confident that the revolutionary Lettish workers will do their duty in this historic task assigned to them by the Party and the Communist International.

Long live the English Daily!

On with the work for the English Daily!

Fraternally yours, Robert Zelms,
Secretary, Lettish Federation.

The Time Is Ripe

"Every worker and every friend of the working class should greet with joy the appearance of the "Workers Daily." Every effort should be made by organizations and individuals to put the new paper on a solid basis.

"It is humiliating that a great and powerful working class has no press. Imbued with a militant spirit to lead it in its historic struggle against the dictatorship of Capital. It is more humiliating that a great and powerful working-class is day in and day out submitting to the pernicious influence of the capitalist press which aims at degrading labor.

"Let the new daily of the Workers Party be a turning point in the history of the class-struggle in this country. Let its voice become powerful. Let its word reach hundreds of thousands of workers.

"The time is ripe for a leading proletarian daily press.

"Hail the Workers' Daily!"

Chicago Members to Do Their Share to Realize Daily Worker

CHICAGO.—The Chicago City Central Committee of the Workers Party greets with enthusiasm the announcement made by the Party of the launching of a campaign to raise a Fund of $100,000 to publish an English working class daily paper.

It fully recognizes the importance of such a step. It recognizes the need of such a Daily and the powerful aid it will be to successfully advance the struggles of the American workers against their strongly organized exploiters, as well as help build and strengthen our Party and establish its leadership in these struggles.

The Chicago City Central Committee realizes that inasmuch as this English daily will be published in it located the collection of a great share of this Fund falls upon the Chicago membership. It therefore the city where the Party headquarters pledges its wholehearted support to this Campaign, and is ready to lend all its energy to accomplish this task. It calls upon all Chicago branches to immediately get to work and collect the necessary funds on the basis of at least $5.00 per member, to be subscribed during the month of September, and furthermore to prepare themselves to completely carry out the policy on this matter as laid down by the National office.

The Chicago North Side English branch has already decided to raise among its own membership the equivalent of $10.00 per member. This worthy example the Chicago City Central Comittee urges all other branches which are in a position to do so, to follow.

The District Executive Committee has set the goal of $50,000 for the District. A Mass Meeting for the Daily has been arranged for Sept. 21, 8 P. M., at Wickers Park Hall, 2040 W. North Ave.

The Campaign Committee for "The Daily Worker" is as follows: Nick Dozenberg, Manager; Harrison George, Niels Kjar, M. Brooker, M. Marek, J. Anderson, Emil Bechtold, M. Novak, George Maurer.

"The Daily and Party Worker"

"The Party worker, the type of Party member who is never satisfied merely to hold a membership in the Party, but insists upon being an active worker in all Party activities, will greet with unbounded joy the establishment of the "Daily Worker."

"This type of Party member, and he is by far the majority of our membership, has long realized the great need of a revolutionary English daily paper. He has viewed in the capitalist and also in the yellow socialist press attack after attack upon the progressive elements in labor's ranks, with no adequate weapon at hand with which to answer them. He has viewed the most scurrilous attacks by the reactionaries in control of the labor unions, and has had to content himself with insufficient means of the Left Wing of the labor movement.

"With the advent of a powerful English daily, his hopes of meeting these antagonists upon their own ground, will be realized. He knows the need of answering their attacks with the facts of the class struggle. He knows the propaganda value of an English daily organ in which the communist viewpoint is stressed. He realizes into how many a dark corner such a revolutionary organ will throw the light of Communist truth, and what a mighty factor it will be in the upbuilding of a strong, virile Party of active communists. The Party worker hails with delight and boundless enthusiasm the decision of the Central Executive Committee of the Party for the establishment of this weapon for the workers. He will enter likewise into the work required for its erection and maintenance."—Elmer T. Allison.

Detroit on the Job

The following telegram is one of the messages that are being received daily at the office, and that indicate the Daily Worker Fund will reach the $100,000 goal set for it:

"City Campaign Committee for Daily Worker at enthusiastic meeting tonight raised quota of ten thousand dollars. Cyril Lambkin, Chairman Committee, Detroit, Mich."

U. S. Fascisti Ordered to Disband

Obliged by the opposition of organized labor here to disband their present group in New York, the Fascisti will attempt to reorganize under the protection of the Sons of Italy and other bodies. That, according to the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, is the meaning of the news from Rome which has thrown the Fascista movement here into disorganized excitement.

A cablegram printed by Corriere d'America states that the New York Fascista groups have been ordered closed, and the reorganization entrusted to a committee of 12 members of the Sons of Italy. A story in Progresso Italo-Americano corroborates this news in part, mentioning the names of De Silvestro, Ligari and Portfolio as on the new committee.

The Annual Labor Day Parade

Organize the Steel Workers

Let all militants take an active part in the campaign to organize the steel workers, despite the efforts of the reactionaries to keep them out. All progressive workers in the steel industry must try to make the campaign a success, notwithstanding the incompetent leadership, in spite of the fact that only 14 craft unions are interested, instead of the 24 in 1919.

Above all, the militants should strive to give the movement an industrial character. This can best be done by directing the masses of workers of every trade to affiliate themselves to the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. For many years this body has been at least theoretically industrial. Its constitution reads:

"The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers . . . shall be composed of all men working in and around rolling mills, tin mills, steel works, chain works, nail, tack, spike, bolt and nut factories, pipe mills, and all works run in connection with the same."

After the great strike of 1919, the officials of "The Amalgamated," in order to square themselves with the rank and file, blamed the loss of the strike upon the other unions that were federated with them. All of a sudden they blossomed forth into red-hot industrial unionists. They declared that henceforth they would insist upon their jurisdiction and would make the fight upon an industrial basis. Now the militants must see to it that they make good their bluff. And if these reactionaries fail to do it, if they unprotestingly allow the steel workers to be split up again in all sorts of craft fragments, then they should be made to answer for it at the next convention of the Amalgamated Association. The only hope for the steel workers is an industrial union led by militants. The way to achieve it is to insist upon the Amalgamated Association living up to its jurisdiction and then to fire the trimmers at the head of the organization.

The Antics of Stresemann

Dr. Gustave Stresemann, the German chancellor, is both gymnast and contortionist. He must be. He is performing every antic possible to prevent Germany falling into the hands of a Workers' and Farmers' Government. Stresemann assures the London Daily Graphic that:

"If my government falls, accomplishing nothing, then I shall perhaps be the last Bürgerlicher chancellor of Germany. It may be the end. If that happens it will be more of Europe than of Germany which will succumb to Bolshevism."

This is no idle prophecy. But in the same hour that Stresemann was breaking this news to the British, the mark fell on Monday by from 5,600,000 to the dollar. Tuesday, at 1 o'clock, an effort was made to peg the mark at 6,400,000 to the dollar, but by the end of the day it was going at anywhere from 7,400,000 to 7,800,000 to the dollar.

The Socialists, in this last desperate agony of German capitalism, have pledged the workmen of the Ruhr to give up passive resistance under certain guarantees. But the time has passed when the Ruhr steel workers and coal miners can be pledged to anything by the Socialists, as the Socialist apologists for German capitalism have found out. Stresemann was put into power, with the aid of the Socialists, to prevent the inauguration of a German Workers' and Farmers' Government. But a government of the Workers and Farmers is nearer than ever today in Germany.

The Farmer's Plight

By W. H. GREEN
Vice Chairman, Federated Farmer-Labor Party

Statistics are so dry that the average reader in these days of Jazz Movements will step over them.

It will clarify the farmer's present financial condition to assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that from sixty-five to eighty per cent. of the farmers west of the Mississippi River have made no profit in the past twenty-five years, except that made in the increased price of their lands.

For example. Our family came from the coal regions of northeastern Pennsylvania where my father labored before one of those "living hells" as a puddler when the ore was molten into iron before the advent of steel.

With most of his vitality gone and hearing of the Eldorado of the West after the great strike of 1876-78, we crossed the Western prairies behind an ox-team and neighbored with the Sioux Indians.

The United States Government in those days bet you 160 acres of prairie against $14 that you could not make a living upon the land for five years.

We braved the privations, and railroads, schools and other evidences of civilization soon followed. The progress of the agricultural districts was slow but continuous until the hectic conditions produced by the world war.

At the close of the war farm wages were high and we were told in the press and in the forum that America had secured practically all of the gold of the world; that our nation had paid its foreign debts and that henceforth we were to be the creditor nation of the world.

Money was very cheap and that is where our misfortune began.

When money is cheap in America there is a powerful financial group whose influence is weakened.

Not one person in every hundred thousand knew on May 18, 1920, that seven men had it within their power to call in over two billions of the circulating money of the country and burn it up.

Senators and others have charged those members of the Federal Reserve Banking Board with committing a greater crime than Benedict Arnold attempted in the delivery of West Point. At any rate the suicides and insanity casualties during the past three years exceed those of the world war. It might be asked how the reduction of the money supply would produce this disaster.

Suppose, for example, that some Monday morning those merchants learned to their dismay and terror that over the week-end the government had added eighteen more inches to the yard stick. We fancy that if this were to happen that there would be some suicides on Fifth Avenue, and yet all economists and intelligent financiers know that the scarcity of money and the interest rate is the yard stick and scale beam of the products of farm and factory.

This epoch was brought on so suddenly that the farmer who had no debts was caught in the whirlpool and suffered proportionately. What the financiers left untouched the transportation monopoly confiscated. These are some of the conditions that produced the political upheaval in Minnesota, and the political war has only started.

Labor Day, 1923

By JOSEPH MANLEY, Secretary,
Federated Farmer-Labor Party

Labor Day, 1923, finds the American working class facing a crisis.

Their unions, thru the recent attacks by the capitalist institutions, have suffered severe setbacks. Old party politicians and law enforcement bodies dominated by the old parties have been willing agents in the general union-smashing campaign.

From coast to coast, as never before, the workers have made substantial attempts to engage in independent working political action as the only means of relief. These movements have been sabotaged and conspired against by union officialdom. In 1886 the same officialdom successfully crushed a similar rank and file tendency. Today, in 1923, they will not succeed. The rank and file has learned by experience.

At the Chicago convention, July 3, was launched a Federated Farmer-Labor party, which is an expression of this movement for independent working class political action.

Workers Party Demands Emphasized

By ARNE SWABECK

Labor Day in 1923 finds the working class of America again faced with a life and death struggle to preserve its bare rights of organization.

Labor Day of last year was marked by the Daugherty injunction. This year it promises to be the occasion of some similar action against the miners by our strike-breaking president.

Every event in the struggle of labor today gives added emphasis to the two great demands put forth by the Workers Party:

Amalgamation of all divided unions into great industrial organizations, on the one hand, and the federation of workers' economic, political and fraternal organizations into a great Federated Farmer-Labor party, on the other.

Canadian Labor Unions Seek Rights to Carry on Their Own Fights

By JOHN ROBUR
(Federated Press Correspondent)

TORONTO.—Canadian unions are revolting against the rule of their internationals in the United States, and demanding Canadian autonomy.

A resolution involving their issues has been sent to the Dominion Trades congress by the Toronto Trades and Labor council. It proposes that each of the international unions set up a Canadian section having power to declare strikes and finance them, and that Canadian sections have the right to participate in any political activity in the interests of the Canadian working class. It declares that had the Canadian unions these rights at the time of the recent Cape Breton coal and steel strikes in Nova Scotia the result of that pro-est against the use of troops in industrial struggles would have been different. The resolution, introduced by Machinists Local 235, passed the local trades council by a vote of 24 to 16.

The reference to the Cape Breton strike states that while the charter of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, was revoked because they dared to strike against the repeated use of troops in that area, yet such a flood of protest came from every part of the Dominion that had Canadian labor possessed complete autonomy in so far as strike action is concerned, withdrawal of the troops would have been a foregone conclusion, and had the Canadian Trades congress power to levy an assessment for the support of any affiliated section, as has the American Federation of Labor, the result of the recent steel workers' strike would have been different."

According to James Watt, secretary local Trades and Labor council, who opposed the resolution, it means "direct action for political purposes."

BEFORE THE SHOOTING IN CHICAGO

Meyer Perlstein, the Miasolini of the Yellow Bureaucracy, Smashes the Union

By BEN GITLOW

The war in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against the Fascist Union Educational League was inaugurated in real earnest in the Chicago Convention. The director of the fight against the League there is Vice-President Meyer Perlstein.

The Perlstein machine sent to Chicago by the International as organizer of the Boston district. Just now his main activities consist in expelling good active union members from the organization.

Perlstein, under orders from the General Executive Board of the International, started the fight against the Trade Union Educational League by preferring charges against two of the most active delegates to the Joint Board of the Cloakmakers' Union.

A committee was elected by the Joint Board to investigate the charges against these two members. The investigation committee consisted of six members, each representing one of the six locals that comprise the Joint Board.

During the investigation Vice-President Perlstein acted as the accuser, the prosecutor and the judge. He did everything in his power to induce the investigation committee to bring in a report unfavorable to the League and to the two delegates of the Joint Board involved. Nothing however helped him. The investigation committee, which was truly a rank and file committee, refused to be coerced and brought in a decision upon the facts presented at the hearings. The committee by a vote of five to one declared that the Trade Union Educational League was not a dual organization, and that members of the International were perfectly within their rights when they adhered to the League.

Needless to say that Perlstein, the agent of the reactionary machine in control of the International, was not satisfied with the decision. By hook or crook he would have his pound of flesh. When the committee's report came up before the Joint Board for approval, Perlstein made a bitter and vicious attack against it. He threatened the delegates present with suspension from the union if they would dare to vote in favor of the committee's report. Perlstein, an old hand at the game of expelling progressive members from the organization, took no chances. He did not rely entirely upon his bulldozing. He immediately, without any precedent, made a ruling that the seven members of the Joint Board whom he knew to be sympathetic to the League, were not entitled to a vote on the matter. The committee's report was finally rejected by the Joint Board in the following manner. 11 delegates supported Perlstein's motion to reject the report, 8 voted against, 7 were denied the opportunity of voting and seven refrained from voting because they were afraid that Perlstein would carry out his threat. The committee's report was actually rejected by a majority of the delegates present because only 11 out of the 33 delegates present voted to reject.

This gave Perlstein the opportunity to declare the Trade Union Educational League a dual organization and to expel two of the finest union men in the Cloakmakers' Union of Chicago. Perlstein may not know how to organize the industry but he knows how to checkmate the militants. Before a decision of the Joint Board becomes effective it must be submitted to the locals for anproval. This Perlstein knew would give the rank and file an opportunity to condemn the disruptive policy of Perlstein and to prevent the expulsion of its rank and file leaders. So Perlstein ruled that the decision of the Joint Board goes into effect immediately and is not a matter to be considered by the locals.

Perlstein then rushed into print. He got in touch with the capitalist press and the Jewish Daily Forward. In the Jewish Daily Forward the only reason given for the expulsion was the reason that the Trade Union Educational League was a dual organization. In the Forward it would be bad policy to give other than constitutional reasons. In the capitalist press this great union leader showed his true colors. He paraded as the champion of the country and the American Labor movement. The League, he declared, was not only a dual organization but also a red revolutionary organization. It was friendly to the Communists and was under orders of the Communist International. The capitalist press of Chicago congratulated him. They thanked him for his services to American institutions. They complimented him for his audacity and heroism. They pointed out that he acted against the "reds," while Gompers and the rest of the leaders in the American labor movement only talked. They called upon all the leaders in the unions to follow Perlstein's tactics in order to drive the pernicious reds out of labor organizations.

However, Perlstein did not figure on the militancy and revolutionary spirit that dominates the members of the International. The rank and file did not accept his position as final. They rebelled against his brazen, high-handed, disruptive methods. Shop meetings passed resolutions of protest. The wave of indignation rose. Perlstein had to use an iron hand or be doomed. Local 104 refused to bow to his ukase. Perlstein expelled Local 104. The seven members left on the Joint Board who belonged to the League continued the fight for the rank and file. So he expelled them. But the rank and file still rebelled. They printed leaflets. They talked among themselves. They refused to remain quiet. So Perlstein decided to do the Mussolini stunt. He had orders passed, that no leaflets could be distributed at local meetings or in the union offices where the workers congregate. He issued an order that any member who dared to discuss anything but trade questions would be suspended from the organization. Even on the streets of Chicago he ruled that the workers could not do these things. To prove to the rank and file that he meant to carry these orders out he had a committee of ten appointed who would in devious ways enforce the edicts of the almighty chief.

The rank and file who are prepared to fight capitalism will not be scared by a trade union buffoon. The rank and file in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union all over the country will take up this fight. The Perlsteins belong to the camp of the enemies of the workers because they do the dirty work of the bosses in breaking up the unions. In Chicago at the present time the workers are fighting a desperate fight against the bosses and their allies, the capitalistic courts. Thru injunctions the bosses hope to smash the union. When Perlstein should be fighting the bosses he is fighting the rank and file.

The Coal Strike Outlook

"general expenses" only afford the owners another avenue of pocketing millions of dollars annually.

Besides assuming that the Operators are telling the truth about the price of coal rising 50 per ton if the miners get their wage increase there is a leak in their figures somewhere. The Operators say this raise will saddle an additional burden of $90,000,000 on their poor coal-consuming public. Now, the number of tons of anthracite used in the Eastern Territory annually is 85,000,000. On that basis there would be at total rise of $170,000,000 in the cost of coal. Thus, even assuming that the Operators are telling the truth for a change, they would be pocketing a net sum of $80,000,000 on the wage raise. Needless to say the Operators have been making a lot of noise about the public paying more for coal but they have not mentioned a word in all their propaganda about this huge sum of four-score millions that they would pocket by their own increasing the price. The Operators have consistently omitted telling the public by whom they always swear in case of a strike that the $2 a ton increase in the price of coal would be only that much additional tribute paid to the Coal Barons by the anthracite consumers.

THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL, Workers Party Is Praised for Its

NOTE—In this space each week "THE WORKER" will publish, in instalment form, a report of the recent Enlarged Executive Committee Meeting of the Communist International. Each instalment will take up a separate question treated by the world gathering of Communists at Moscow, a gathering that received but scant attention in the daily press. The first instalment follows:

The Enlarged Executive Committee Meeting of the Communist International was a Congress in the real sense of the word, and accomplished work that will be of great significance to the Communist Movement of the whole world. Issuing the slogan of the United Front on a more extended scale, and proclaiming the Communist International as the "leader not only of the minority, but of the vast mass of the toiling workers, out of all strata exploited and crushed by the bourgeoisie—the Communist International, the EMANCIPATOR OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE"—Zinoviev suggested the direction that it did take.

The report of the Presidium showed the splendid work that the Communist International has performed in the six months since the Fourth Congress.

At the Fourth Congress and later at the Leipzig Congress of the German Party, there was a wing, of the Party, that did not agree with the policy of the Workers' Government and the tactics in the Ruhr. The matter was reaching an acute stage at the time of the crisis in Saxony and the Ruhr, when the whole energy of the Party was required for work, and it threatened to cause disaster. The Communist International intervened and brought the counter-revolution a successful issue. Today the German Party is the best fighter among the parties outside of Soviet Russia. It is a living, pulsating, virile unit and is gaining increasing influence and control over the German masses. The Social-Democracy is slowly losing its hold, while even the Nationalists of Germany admit that the Communists are best for the workers alone but have a program for the whole people. The intervention of the Communist International was timely and fruitful.

The solution of the French question did not produce the results that Frossard, who later left the Party, expected. On the contrary: the Party is stronger, more active than ever. With the exit of Frossard and a few small group of trouble-makers, there entered two men, representatives of groups of great value and importance to the Communist movement: Barbusse and Monatte. Especially Monatte, former anarchist and syndicalist leader, will add strength to the Party. Already the Party has done good work in the Ruhr crisis, and the coming months will reveal even greater initiative.

Italy has still needed the attention of the Communist International. The decisions of the Fourth Congress were not faithfully carried out. On the contrary, the Party did not help to bring over the Socialist Party to the Communist position—to fusion with the Communist Party, despite the fact that the Rome Congress of the Socialist Party declared for affiliation with the Communist International. Still harboring sectarian views, refusing to be "contaminated" with opportunistic tendencies, the Communist Party of Italy did not grasp the opportunity to create a solid front with the Socialists, thereby playing into the hands both of the right-wingers, the traitors to the workers, and of Mussolini. These right-wingers split the Party; they refused to accept the Rome decision. The ranks were broken and Mussolini with his black-shirts massacred and crushed the Communists and the militant workers, who, by the treachery of the right-wingers, were left without leadership. By the reorganization of the Executive Committee of the Communist Party, by inviting the Socialist Party of Italy to send a delegation to the Cominters to discuss the question of affiliation of the Socialist Party and of fusion with the Communist Party, and by sending an appeal to the workers of Italy to stand together against the reaction that exules Italy today, the Communist International has established the basis for the strengthening of the Communist Party and for the unity of all revolutionary forces in Italy.

The Workers Party Today---And Tomorrow

By JAMES P. CANNON

3. The United Front Against the Communists

(This is the third of a series of articles on party questions by Comrade Cannon which are appearing weekly in "THE WORKER")

The United Front is a very good slogan, and everybody nowadays seems to be in favor of it. Our United Front slogan has been such a good success that our enemies have adopted it, with an addendum, of their own. Those who are unwilling to make a united front against the capitalists are making a united front against the Communists.

Look at them: Farrington and Lewis, after calling each other crooks and grafters and proving it, unite to fight the "Reds," while indictments against our active comrades in Pennsylvania dovetail nicely into their plans. The Socialist Party makes peace with Gompers and war on us. The "Progressive" leaders of the old Farmer-Labor Party take up the fight against us with Gompers' slogans of "Red," "Force and Violence," etc. While these big dogs spring at our throat the little ones snap at our heels, the S. L. P., P. P., etc.

We were never short of enemies. Quite a number of "Progressives" have been in a sort of coalition with us. Now even some of these are joining in an effort to isolate us. An analysis of the make-up of the American labor movement, however, will show that this situation is not a permanent crystallization, and that it is possible, by using the right tactics in the developing class struggle, to break up the present anti-Communist front and bring about re-alignments of various kinds which will advance the movement as a whole and strengthen our position in it.

No European Analogy

The American movement has no counter-part anywhere else in the world, and any attempt to meet its problems by the simple process of finding a European analogy will not succeed. The key to the American problem can be found only in a thoro examination of the peculiar American situation. Our Marxian outlook, confirmed by the history of the movement in Europe, provides us with some general principles to go by, but there is no pattern, made to order from Europe and barking at our heels. The struggle will dispose of them. It will sweep into the ranks of the fighting party all those who have the courage to fight against capitalism. As for the others, to whom super-radical phrases are merely a cloak to hide behind,—they have already shown that in action they are against us.

The "Progressives"

The fourth element—the so-called "Progressives"—is one that, like the right wing, is peculiar to America. Altogether it makes up a considerable section of the movement, a vague, indefinite, unorganized group shuffling back and forth between the organized militant right and the organized militant left. They are the American "Centrists," but for several reasons they cannot be dealt with precisely according to the formula which the Communists use in dealing with the Centrists in Europe.

They are not nearly so definite a grouping nor so highly developed politically as the classic centrists of the International movement, and one thing, they have practically no organization, no systematic and consistent political philosophy; and they have no recognized, authoritative leaders of the highly trained, professional European type. They do not represent a crystallized movement, but a hazy sentiment which, speaking in terms of America, where anything resembling a class viewpoint is progress, is really progressive.

This "Progressive" element is already quite large, and it is growing. It has not yet acquired sufficient consciousness to develop an organized form; that is why it is so uncertain, inconsistent and non-militant in action. But at bottom it is a revolt against Gompersism. This is plainly indicated by its general support of such proposals as the labor party, Amalgamation, Recognition of Soviet Russia, etc., wherever it is not called upon to fight too hard for them.

Present Alignment Only Temporary

Up until recently most of these progressives were going along in a rather loose alliance with us in support of these measures. At the Chicago Conference, and in some localities before the Chicago Conference, then no fault exists in a single case, a number of these "Progressives" broke away from this alliance and joined the United Front against us. But I do not think the bulk of them naturally belong there, or that we should take it for granted they will stay.

The rapidly developing class struggle will not permit any elements which stand for progress to stay united with the dead reaction of the Gompers regime. The "Progressives" cannot do it without repudiating all the things they have been standing for up till now. Some of the leaders may be willing to do this, but the progressive movement cannot so easily change its character over night.

It is more a shifting movement than a conscious force, and the intensifying struggle accelerates the drift toward the left, not toward the right. This situation offers tremendous opportunities for the Workers Party, and it should certainly be a part of our strategy in the labor movement to look forward to the time when the rapprochement with the "Progressives" at least with those who have not consciously betrayed the movement and gone over to the enemy.

In the next week's article I will undertake to analyze the "Progressive" movement, and the reasons which brought about the break between some of the leaders and the Communist left wing; and, also, to set forth what, in my opinion, our tactics toward them should be in the future.

The "Rights" of a Revolutionist

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

J. B. Salutzky has undertaken to defend a very difficult proposition. He is out in the "Fortschritt," the Jewish organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, to prove the right of a revolutionist to make a revolution against his own revolutionary party. The party in question is the Workers Party, and the right of revolution is defended not in the abstract, but it is claimed by J. B. Salutzky for himself as against the Workers Party.

The history of Salutzky's relations to the Workers Party is long and painful. Originally he belonged to the Workers' Council group which was against an underground Communist Party. As such he aided in the formation of the Workers Party, but soon became disgusted with the struggle between the two factions His disgust was so great that it reduced his party activities to zero. After the transformation of the Workers Party into the one and only Communist Party he entirely withdrew, disagreeing both with the general character of the party and with its particular policies and voicing his disagreement in publications others than those of the Workers Party. He did not, however, give up membership until expelled from the party by order of the Central Executive Committee after long negotiations.

We are not here to argue the merits of Salutzky's behavior or the right or wisdom of the Central Executive Committee in acting as it acted. We are primarily interested in Salutzky's plea for a revolution against a revolutionary party.

Generally speaking, there are only three ways open before a member in relation to his party. He may either agree with the party and work in harmony with its ideas; or he may disagree in some points and still find it possible to work within the party while defending his own stand and demanding changes in the party's conformity with his ideas; or he may disagree with the party in most or all of the major points. In the latter case he cannot remain a party member. J. B. Salutzky disagreed with the Workers Party in all the major points, which was his perfect right. He still remained a member for a long time while contributing nothing in the way of party activities, which was, perhaps, illogical but still within his rights. Now, however, he champions the right to make a revolution against the party while remaining a member, which is absurd.

Membership in a political party is not compulsory, as is membership in the state. Neither is it compulsory economically, as is membership in a labor union. Even in a conservative labor union revolutionaries do not attempt to make a revolution against the organization, but they pursue the policy of converting the membership thru constructive criticism, while remaining active and devoted members of the organization as a whole. J. B. Salutzky preferred to be inactive and hostile to the Workers Party as a whole, at the same time criticizing it bitterly before the outer world. Now he calls the right of revolution. But why did he stay with the Workers Party when his only relation to it was criticism from without? Why does he want to stay within?

A member of the state cannot escape the state which oppresses him, therefore his only way out is a revolution. A member of a union should not withdraw from his union even when he disagrees with its practice, because withdrawal would weaken the working class before which he has to "bore from within." A member of a political party is obliged to sever his relations to the party as soon as he realizes that he is in absolute discord with its policies and that he cannot work in any of its departments. Where does the "right to a revolution" come in?

"Revolutionists," writes Salutzky, "recognize the right of revolution only for themselves and not against themselves, and when they have reached this state of mind, their revolutionism is at an end. This is the substance of party politics in most cases, and unfortunately it is not the exception but the rule. It is easy to raise a cry against machine politics, against mental inertia, against the inability to discuss a situation, and the like. But after you have made the revolution comes the recognition of your own infallibility and the non-recognition of the right of revolution for all others who do not ride triumphantly on the back of the victorious revolution."

It is easy to recognize in this quotation Salutzky's bitterness, but it is still easier to see that his bitterness has led him astray. What does he mean by a right of revolution? Does he mean the right of every individual member of the Workers Party to revolt against the party? But nobody denies him this right. If a man revolts against his party, the first thing for him to do is to get out, the second, to fight against it. Moreover, nobody asks for such rights, and nobody gives them, but they are exercised as a matter of course. When the same Salutzky revolted two years ago against the Socialist Party, he did not go to Hillquit or Berger to demand his right to revolt, but he first quit the party, then launched an attack against it. True, he denounced the Socialist Party while still within, but it was the weakness of the Socialist Party that allowed for such abnormality, and Salutzky himself thought this laxity contemptible. Or would he have fled Hillquit more if the latter had declared solemnly, "Yes, comrade, you have a right to revolt; we are guilty, we are counter-revolutionary, and the old has to yield before the young"? Would not Salutzky himself think such an attitude doubly contemptible?

With all due regard to Salutzky's abilities, we assume that even he is not infallible. Let us, then, imagine Salutzky at the head of an organization and let us imagine a group of members coming up and declaring, "We are out for revolt against you." Would Salutzky bow his head in contrition or would he throw the revolters down the stairs? Would he "recognize their right of revolution" or would he recognize his own right to send them to the devil altho he himself is far from being an angel? This "right of revolution" which Salutzky defends is either an orator's flight of fancy or nonsense. It is an oratorical figure when applied to the individual member since nobody can deprive an individual member of his right to revolt. It is nonsense when applied to a party, because no party on earth, not even a party composed of Salutzky's, will "recognize the right of revolution against themselves." Salutzky defends a nonsensical proposition.

"Most revolutionists," ingists Salutzky in another paragraph, "recognize the right of revolution—for themselves, but not for others. This explains why and, which is more important, how our revolutionists become in the end reactionaries." We beg to differ. Most revolutionaries think a revolution against themselves to be counter-revolution, and quite often they are right. A revolution against the Communist Party in Russia, even conducted by Menshiki and Social-Revolutionaries who claim to be the "real" revolutionists, is counter-revolution. A revolution against the Hungarian Soviet government was counter-revolution. A revolution of the Kapp forces against the democratic bourgeois government of Germany which sprang up from the November revolution, was also counter-revolution. The "revolution" against the Workers Party of a number of groups and "parties" which call themselves "re-revolutionary" and prefer to stay out and do nothing rather than to put, their shoulder to the wheel of history in conjunction with the Communist forces, is clearly of the nature of counter-revolution. Salutzky knows this just as well as any of those whom he is out to fight. Salutzky defends an indefensible proposition made to suit his own case.

But maybe all this artillery of "revolution" is much more harmless than it sounds? Maybe under it is meant the right to criticise the party politics within the party and the right to insist on changes? If so, there is no use to employ the phraseology of revolution, and Salutzky's argument loses its poignant flavor. As to the argument itself, clearly Salutzky, an old party functionary, could not insist on the right of a member to criticize the party from without while boycotting it from within. Clearly Salutzky does not advocate such a division of labor where one group of comrades rake their brains on the building-up of the party while another specializes in criticism and denunciation alone, without as much as moving a finger to aid the party in its work. If this is called the right to criticize, Salutzky again creates an indefensible proposition to suit his own case.

A year ago the present writer was in the same factions with Salutzky. We then fought against the so-called "underground" which, in our opinion, specialized in criticism and denunciation while the "open party" was doing the work. A year later Salutzky defends a super-overground which is to specialize in criticism of the party from above and without, at the same time doing nothing from within. We can just as little go with Salutzky into this aerial abode to judge the party "from the standpoint of God," as we could go with the Number One into the underground abode to sit judgement over the party from the standpoint of preordained perfection.

Another Promising Candidate

NEW YORK (F. S. R. Service)—The Los Angeles branch of the Friends of Soviet Russia announce that they have entered in the "Cannon or Tractor Contest" a member of the Carpenter's Union—Jim Walker.

This branch has laid excellent campaign plans, and is going full steam ahead for the election of this representative of American labor to carry a message to the workers of Russia and bring one back to the workers of America.

John T. Taylor, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor and winner in the first contest, has announced that he will be ready to sail about Sept. 15. It is hoped that the second delegation, "with Jim Walker as part of it," will follow in about a month.

Does Great Good

To Editor, The Worker: "The Worker" and the Workers Party are doing an inestimable amount of good for the workers.

I certainly appreciate your work. Very shortly my husband and myself will call to renew our subscription, join the party and find out how we can raise funds to help.

Remember Michigan Raid One Year Ago

When the bolsheviks go out a-celebrating
They never pick a presidential birth;
But a day famed for "red baiting"
Is the choicest of their dating
For is demonstrates the fact they want the earth.

When Henry Ford is picked up by the copper
And unjustly charged with certain ills,
Oh, his grief it takes a crepper.
(Which for him is something prop'er)
And he never wants to speak of it again.

But when Michigan has slammed into the hoose-gow
A bunch of reds Bill Burns desired to jail!
Oh, each merely wipes his brow
And proceeds to take a vow
For to make a million speeches while at bail!

By HARRISON GEORGE

CHICAGO.—All of which is to remind you that the raids on the Communist Convention last year in August were followed, just as soon as C. E. Ruthenberg was released on bail, by the most gigantic protest meeting the workers of Chicago could put on.

That was on Sept. 17, one year ago, when the Chicago workers, aroused by the attack upon the Communists by Burns and his Michigan satraps, answered the attack by a demonstrative mass meeting at which the Labor Defense Council was launched as a counter attack against the "criminal syndicalist" prosecutions.

Our Birth-Day

A year ago the Labor Defense Council was born. To celebrate our birth-day, the Labor Defense Council has arranged a great mass meeting in which we hope every Chicagoan that attended the meeting a year ago will come and bring his friends and his fellow workers from the shops.

Ruthenberg to Speak Again

This big meeting, which is both an anniversary and a defense meeting where the present perilous situation in the Michigan case will be explained to the assemblage, is also the anniversary of Ruthenberg's last speech in Chicago, since it was at the meeting one year ago that Ruthenberg last spoke to a Chicago audience.

Orchestra and Singers

Not only will the workers of Chicago be favored by hearing Ruthenberg again after the developments of one year, but the Labor Defense Council has engaged the famous Russian Balalika Orchestra to enliven the meeting with music, and the Young Proletarian Singers to gladden those present with song.

Everybody who reads this announcement should come and bring his friends. Remember the date, Sept. 16, at 8 o'clock, and the place, the Douglas Park Auditorium, which is at Kedzie and Ogden Avenues. Admission will be 25 cents.

The Great Steel Strike

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

23 cents, 265 pages

"THE GREAT STEEL STRIKE", by William Z. Foster, is a book of the first importance in the history of the American labor movement. The heroic struggle of the steel workers for organization and recognition in 1919, and their terrible battle against opposition among the reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, constitutes one of the greatest epochs in labor history.

The 12-Hour Day in the steel mills has now again become a national issue. Foster's keen analysis of the situation, the problems of the steel workers and of their organization is as vital information to-day as when written at the close of the great conflict that shook the mighty kingdom of steel to its foundations. Party Fights for Rights in Pennsylvania

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Special to "The Worker")

HARRISBURG, Pa.—Preparations for the big free speech test meetings, Sept. 16 in Pittsburgh and McKeesport, under the auspices of the Workers Party in co-operation with the Civil Liberties Union and the Labor Defense, and Free Speech Council are going ahead at full blast.

Robert W. Dunn, of the Civil Liberties Union, and the writer, as the official representative of the Workers Party, put the whole issue squarely before Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania.

All the facts regarding the campaign of terrorism waged against the Workers Party by the local Pittsburgh authorities and the Federal Department of Justice agents in behalf of the Steel Trust and Coal Operators were laid bare in all their ugliness before the Governor. The likelihood of the State Cossacks and the Steel-owned municipal officialdom breaking up the Pittsburgh and McKeesport meetings in utter violation of the Constitutional rights was put straight up to Governor Pinchot.

Courts Give No Relief

Dunn showed the unsurmountable obstacles in the way of the workers getting justice thru court action. The technical difficulties surrounding the injunction procedure or suit in equity as shown by the Vintondale case; the disproportionate cost involved in any suit for damages; and the difficulty of getting constitutional points decided by the courts,—were all brought home to Governor Pinchot very ably by Mr. Dunn.

Pinchot Calls Down Mayor

In reply, Governor Pinchot said: "You know that I did send a letter to Mayor Lysle of McKeesport calling him down for his interference with the Steel workers holding meetings there. I know what sort of a fellow he is.

"I have told the State Constabulary very definitely that they must keep out of situations of this sort and that applies to the whole State, including the parts you speak of, Pittsburgh and McKeesport. Of course there are limitations to the powers of the Governor with reference to what a local Mayor or Burgess does. If he commits a crime I can arrest him. But on this question of free speech I can only express an emphatic opinion."

Party to Fight Out Issue

At this point the writer, in behalf of the Workers Party and the workers under indictment in Pittsburgh, made it clear to the Governor that Steel Trust or no Steel Trust, Coal Operators or not, State Cossacks or any other forces to the contrary notwithstanding, the Workers Party was bent upon fighting out this issue to a finish.

I told Pinchot the Workers Party was an open legal political party that was officially on the ballot in the State of Pennsylvania in the last elections, and that Workers Party members were today members of a state assembly. It was made clear to the Governor that the Party would resist to the limit all attempts to drive it underground and outlaw it. When I told the Governor that it was only in his State of Pennsylvania that the Workers Party was subjected to such persecution and that it was the activities of the Party to strengthen the Miners' Union and to put an end to the infamous 12-Hour Day amongst the Steel workers that brought on these attacks and raids, he answered: "I am just as much opposed to the 12-Hour Day as you are." But I then quickly pointed out to him that we were right on the job actively pushing these campaigns.

The writer proceeded to tell Pinchot that the Workers Party was going to go all the way down the line in its fight for the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, press and assembly being guaranteed to all the workers of every section of Pennsylvania and that I would, therefore, not surrender my right to speak as a representative of the Workers Party at the public mass meetings to be held in Pittsburg and McKeesport.

Declares for Free Speech

Governor Pinchot, replying, said: "I believe in free speech. I believe in the full constitutional right of every citizen to express his point of view. Of course, if he advocates killing a man I would have him arrested. But let him advocate any form of Government or change he likes. There is nothing sacred about the present economic order. I may disagree with what you are advocating, but that's another matter. In so far as free speech is concerned, I am all with you. My heart is in the right place, there."

Ask Governor to Act

I went on to tell the governor that the Workers Party was fighting out this issue in the open and offered to send him in advance a copy of the speech I would deliver at the test meetings which were also to be addressed by such prominent figures as Bishop McConnell and Father Kazinski, and one of the defendants. It was made clear to him that, of course, such noted persons as Bishop McConnell and Father Kazinski would not be arrested but that the writer most likely would be and that the local authorities and State Cossacks would then proceed to break up the meetings.

The whole case was then put concretely up to the governor when I asked him to take the following three steps: (1) Send a letter to the Mayors of Pittsburgh and McKeesport instructing them not to prohibit the meetings; (2) Send orders to the State Constabulary in the particular localities not to interfere with the meetings; and (3) In case of arrest or disruption of these meetings to send a special investigator like Mr. T. Henry Walnut to make a thoro survey of the situation and report to him in detail, so that prompt and vigorous action might then be taken by the Chief Executive of the State to punish the violators of the Constitutional liberties guaranteed by the State of Pennsylvania.

Would-Be Slayers Still Free

The would-be slayers of William Z. Foster, who fired three shots at him while addressing a mass meeting in Chicago, are still free. It is not expected that the police will exert themselves to find the gunmen. But if a Communist sneezed during a strike, the whole Burns' secret service force, from New York to Los Angeles, would be on the job trying to unravel the plot. The capitalist system is very discriminating as to whom it protects.

Connecticut Organized Into District of Workers Party

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT
(Special to "The Worker")

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—The state of Connecticut, also with its small population of 1,500,000 souls, has been organized and named a new district of the Workers Party has been organized. Hard times and a new Workers Party will consider a doubtful combination for organization.

They must not only effect a strong party organization, one in which every member will understand the class struggle. They must also acquire the knack of building a labor union movement.

Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

mass party of city workers and farmers is no more needed any place than in Connecticut. The citadel of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and of other industrial lords in this state, namely, the capitol at Hartford, where probably more faking and fawning and bribing and imbibing has taken place than at any similar bosses' executive center, must for once and shall echo and re-echo with the voice of the underdog. In five or six of the largest cities preliminaries are now completed for the calling of organization conferences by radical workers and progressive labor unions for the purpose of giving birth to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in this state.

The various English branches of the Party; relief for Soviet Russia; the Labor Defense Council, these and other matters were given attention by the delegates to the district convention. Konrad Loske, William McKenzie, J. Krichevsky, William Gardala, S. Feldman, S. Weisman, and the district organizer were named the district executive committee.

A call was issued for financial support for this new district. Headquarters for the district have been established at Room 6, Labor Lyceum, 38 Howe Street, New Haven, where members, branches and locals are asked to write their organization needs and for further information.

International Youth Day!

Youth Day, International Youth Day, the day of the exploited youth the world over.

The Youth Day of the Communist International is the ray that penetrates the abysmal blackness and despair of the lives of the young toilers.

The Young Communist International clearly visualizes the impending imperialist struggles which will call for sacrifices on the part of the young workers. The race for increased armaments is on, as hotly as ever, in the history of capitalist society. More horrible instruments of destruction are daily being introduced. Poison gases, each more deadly than the other, are constantly being perfected.

The feeble voice of bourgeois liberalism, which was raised against further wars immediately after the great world slaughter, grows weaker and more impotent in the face of the new imperialistic alignments.

New capitalist wars are inevitable and the burden of these wars will inevitably fall on the shoulders of the working class youth.

The call for International Youth Day is carried into effect by fifty and some odd Communist Leagues, in as many countries. On that day, huge and far-reaching demonstrations will simultaneously take place in each country the world over.

It is the task of Young Communists everywhere to bring before the masses of young workers the dangers of new wars. It is their task to build a powerful militant resistance to the attempts of imperialism to embroil the young workers in more wars for profits.

The International Youth Day demonstration by the Young Workers League of New York will take place in Webster Hall, Friday, Sept. 14. It promises to be the greatest and most enthusiastic demonstration ever held by any youth organization. Similar demonstrations have been planned for many other sections of the country. They ought to be supported by the whole of the militant labor movement.

Minor Speaks in Woodland Grove Before Many

Sunday's Outing at Zedler's Grove, arranged by the Labor Defense Council, was greatly enjoyed by those who were present. Bob Minor spoke on the case of Mooney, the French Communists, and showed how the French workers, thru their united efforts, had raised the case to the highest political importance. Similarly, the American workers had exerted tremendous influence in the case of Tom Mooney. He urged that the same spirit be shown by the workers in defending the Michigan cases. The crowd enjoyed the pleasures of the grove, its beautiful woodland, the fine music, dancing, swimming and other sports. The crowd refused to disperse until it was entirely dark. Great credit is due to the Hotel Workers, the Bakers' Council and the Workers Party volunteers, who gave the finest co-operation and support.

Detroit Party Has Plans for Union Activity

DETROIT, Mich.—The recent general membership meeting of the Workers Party was one of the best in many months. The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the Party's Industrial Policy, and to take action necessary to bring about its realization in the life of the Party. After the report, by Cyril Lobkin and Edgar L. Owens an animated discussion took place in which many members participated. The following resolution was enthusiastically adopted by a unanimous vote:

"The members of the Workers Party in the City of Detroit, assembled in general membership meeting in the House of the Masses, Sunday, August 19, 1923, having heard the reports of the District Organizer and representatives of the District Executive and City Central Committees and the discussion thereon resolves as follows:

RECOGNIZING, 1) That our Party cannot become a revolutionary mass party unless it is able to influence and lead the workers organized in the first place in their economic organizations or trade unions.

2) That the very major slogans of the Party: "Amalgamatifin" and "The Labor Party" are ones which cannot be realized except thru convincing the trade unionists of the urgent necessity for them;

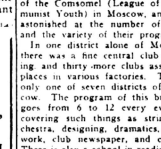
ESTABLISH, a) That the membership as a whole in this city has until now practically failed to carry out the Party industrial policy;

b) That the results achieved thru the efforts of the very few comrades who have been active in the trade union movement unmistakably show that in the City of Detroit the organized labor movement could not only be influenced but practically led by our Party if the industrial policy would be effectively carried out.

Therefore this membership meeting calls upon all the members of the Party to begin at once joining the unions:

Recommends, that the City Central Committee and the Branch Executive Committees carry on an uninterrupted intensive campaign for joining the unions among the Party membership;

And further recommends, that the City Central Committee select an Industrial Commission consisting of members who are trade unionists. This Commission to have power to enforce the carrying out of the Party industrial policy, and to recommend disciplinary measures wherever necessary."



Russia's Communist Youth Society

MOSCOW.—I visited several clubs of the Comsomel (League of Communist Youth) in Moscow, and was astonished at the number of them and the variety of their program.

In one district alone of Moscow, there was a fine central club building and thirty-more clubs assembly places in various factories. This is only one of seven districts of Moscow. The program of this building goes from 6 to 12 every evening, covering such things as string orchestra, designing, dramatics, wood work, club newspaper, and chorus. There is also a school in reading and writing, reminding one that the fight against illiteracy is still on in Russia. They seem to have all the activities of an up-to-date Y. M. C. A. building, with one exception. Instead of holding up religion as an ideal, they hold up anti-religion! They did it just as seriously and with as much devotion to high principle as young Christians have for their faith.

When you came to talk to them, it was evident that what they meant by anti-religion was a devotion to natural science and a profound belief that man, without waiting for miracles, must set out to conquer the world. There was a whole course of lectures, a very popular course, devoted to man's conquest of the world.

It began with the use of tools; it progressed thru the harnessing of wind and water power; it took up steam and electricity, and wireless; it devoted the whole evening to Edison, the newsboy who rose to conquer unknown worlds of science. Man's Mastery of Nature—there was a real thrill about it, the kind of thrill that religious devotion has hitherto inspired in adolescent youth. But it was all thought to be anti-religion. This gives an idea of what "religion" has meant in Russia hitherto—"superstition, submission, fatalism." Against this so-called religion, these young people go forth with real crusading zeal, preaching that they are born to be rulers of nature and of their own destiny.

So different is the situation in Russia from anything we know in the west, that they do not even explain why they should be against religion. They take it for granted that to fight "religion" is a high and holy thing.

"Crucibles of Crime" Exposes Foul Prisons That Capitalism Provides for Its Victims

Reviewed by NANCY MARKOFF

CRUCIBLES OF CRIME, by Joseph F. Fishman. Published by Cosmopolli Press, New York.

Of all the diseases of capitalist civilisation, the putrid, reeking ulcer in the shape of jails and prisons forces itself upon us. Nice people shrink back in horror. Reformers vow to force thru measures of correction. Nothing is done.

Right on these years ago, William C. Osborne made a lot of noise in the capitalist newspapers about the need of reform prisons, taking Sing Sing, of Ossining, New York, as his seat of approach. Then he was forgotten.

In 1919, Col. C. B. Adams, Superintendent of St. Charles, Ill., prison, made a speech before the 46th National Conference of Social Workers and held out very encouraging promises to the effect that in the near future thousands of acres of land will be converted into farms to be used for prisons. He said in part:

"We do progress and prison reformatives are doing real things today which would not have been possible fifteen or twenty years ago. We do progress. The prison of tomorrow will be an improvement upon the old type prison—a prison with cottages inside the walls, and outside the walls farm cottages and colonies."

But Joseph F. Fishman in his book, "Crucibles of Crime," tells how far we have progressed with prison reforms in 1923.

Mr. Fishman was for many years the only inspector for prisons for the United States Government. He made these investigations in the capacity of inspector, and consequently had access to every prison and jail in the country. He gives particular attention to the jails of which there are 3,000 in the United States. A jail differs from a prison in this way. In a jail you have those who are under suspicion of having committed an offense. Only on an average two-thirds of those who are held are actually found guilty and sentenced. A good many country jails also care for the insane before they are permanently declared subjects for the asylums. Imagine, of you can, people in all walks of life, dumped together into pitch dark cells reeking with the odor of night buckets and strong disinfectants, damp walls covered with vermin, as many as six prisoners huddled together in a hole not big enough for two, fed on putrid food, and for all their needs at the mercy of some nonentity of a keeper who has thru political pull or graft been entrusted with the power to lord over them while they are here, and you have a picture of 95 per cent of the jails of this country. In reading his hair-raising description of prisons and jails one is aware of an uncanny resemblance in them to the jails of the 16th and 17th centuries that existed in England, for which that country was notorious at that time, and which have long been abolished there.

Altho he describes each one of the jails and prisons he has visited in detail, they can all, with only slight difference in local customs, be covered by quoting the following description:

"Cells are dark, unsanitary and unfit for anyone to live in. Therefore the rule to permit all prisoners to mingle freely in the open spaces between cells. Not long ago, I visited a jail in one of the wealthiest counties of the State where eighteen prisoners were occupying three cells, and near these, in the corner of the cell, was an insane prisoner who had been confined for five days. Of the eighteen prisoners, six were boys lying on the floor. They were in the same cell with a sick man, and but a few days before a man had died with pneumonia, presumably contracted in the jail. Under such conditions these prisoners had lived for weeks with an air space of 67 cubic feet that should have been 500."

Of course there are jails in which a large traffic in the sale of narcotics is conducted by the prisoners and in which the keepers are accomplices. And there are jails in which the keeper is entrusted with money each day for the purchase of food for prisoners. In one prison the jailer made as much as $75 every day on this deal. It was learned that he was buying the garbage of a Chop Suey joint conducted by a Chinaman—the inhabitants of his jail were fed filth not fit for beasts. And to be sure, there are innumerable jails in which homosexuality and venereal diseases are rampant, and in its most grotesque stages due to crowding and the keeping of young boys and degenerate middle aged men in crowded cells.

This book is a burning accusation of the beastiality of neglect and indifference that our dollar society is guilty of. It marks a blot of shame on our civilization of the twentieth century at which our future generations will look back with appal.

Mr. Fishman ends his book very naively with the sentence: "I have given the facts—will the remedy be applied?" Mr. Fishman knows that the facts have been given before. He knows that the remedy has been outlined before. We wonder how he can still entertain the hope for a remedy under our present form of government that feeds on the misery and degradation of the unfortunate underdog.

Russian Trade Unions

If arguments directed against Communism carried at least a semblance of decency and honest endeavor to understand the Communist philosophy, we could give them the benefit of the doubt and enter into discussion to clear some of the wrong interpretations. But the attacks, an example of which can be found in a recent editorial in the Union Labor Advocate, Westfield, N. J., are cheap lies, and insanely stupid. This editorial in particular sounds so much like the arguments that the capitalists have directed against the trade union movement in America that one is tempted to believe that it was copied in bulk from some capitalist magnate's speech, with the word "communism" substituted for "trade unionism." However, here is the main thought it carries. "Be fair to your employer and he will be fair to you," says this Union Labor Advocate. The article is full of such piffle, and we know workingmen and women will be thoroly disgusted with it.

Alongside this editorial we would like every worker to place a little pamphlet by the Friends of Soviet Russia, "Russian Trades Unions." It is very briefly written and does not take more than a half hour to read thru. A great deal of willful misinformation that has been directed against Russia and Communism falls mighty flat before the facts given, in this pamphlet. After giving a brief history of the functions of the Trade Unions in Russia at the beginning of the Russian revolution it continues with an analysis of the working basis of the trade union movement in Russia today.

It shows the difference between the labor union's position in a country where the workers are the governing class and in countries where capital uses the government to crush the workers.

Socialists in New Stand for Divided Front

At a General Council meeting held Wednesday, Aug. 22, the Socialist Party, disguised as the American Labor Party, again demonstrated its opposition to a united front of the workers when it refused to accept the invitation extended by the Provisional Committee for the Organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in New York City to send a committee to the Sept. 16th Conference to agree upon joint candidates for the coming election.

The invitation had been sent by the Committee with the purpose of preventing a division of the forces of labor in the coming election. The Committee believed that, even tho it might still be impossible for the Socialist Party to participate in the organization of a local of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, yet they would agree to a common action at the polls, to a common slate of candidates. The meeting, however, definitely showed that the Socialist Party chooses to split the forces of labor rather than to join with the rank and file unionists in organizing a united front for the November elections.

The question of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was quite unexpectedly brought up by Delegate Oasp Wolinsky, of the Fancy Leather Goods Workers' Union. Speaking on the report of the Executive Committee, he stated that, while the Committee pursued the policy of watchful waiting, the reactionaries of the right and of the left are taking definite action. A call for a city conference, he declared, had already been issued in the city for Sept. 16. He maintained that the General Council was not in direct touch with the local organizations, and he therefore suggested as a means of counteracting this conference, that a conference be called of all organizations affiliated with the American Labor Party, excluding those that had not been recognized at the previous convention.

In the lengthy discussion that developed on this point, it was quite evident that the call, which had reached practically every labor organization in this city, was causing them much anxiety.

After the decision to call the conference, suggested by Wolinsky, they took up the communication sent by the Provisional Committee inviting them to form a united front for the elections. They read the call of this Committee, and stated that credentials had bee handed them by two delegates from the Committee. These delegates were not given the floor. In fact, no discussion on the question of the credentials was permitted. It was simply brushed aside, and instead they brought in the reply from the Executive Committee to the invitation.

There were now two motions on the floor: one to accept the reply submitted by the Executive Committee, and an amendment that they reconsider, and accept the short statement that the F. F. L. P. is a mask of the (Communist) Party and a fraud on the American Labor Movement. The latter politicians argued that an explanatory answer be given because, as Delegate Abraham Shiplacoff stated, we may know who they are, but there are still a few hundred workers who believe them. Delegate Meyer Gillis, of the Forward, added that there are more than a few hundred and that, whether we want to or not, we will be drawn into a discussion with them. Delegate Jerome T. DeHunt further declared that he had enquiries from a number of Longshoremen's Unions whether the call for the Sept 16th Conference had not been sent out by the Farmer-Labor Party. It was therefore necessary, they insisted, to give an answer that would expose the Communists.

When the motion and the amendment came up for a vote, the chairman even refused to give those delegates who were opposed to both propositions the opportunity of voting against them. Finally, however, he was forced to do this, and five voted against both the motion and the amendment.

Generally speaking, the attendance at the meeting was small, only 50 to 60 delegates being present. Almost all of them were, either known leaders of the Socialist Party or union officials. There were very few rank and file delegates in sight.

Greetings to the Militants

The Second General Conference of the Trade Union Educational League, Sept. 1-2, at Chicago, will be as historic as the first. It is not expected that Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty will send his raiders into the gathering, as he did one year ago. But the T. U. E. L. has many enemies in addition to the politicians and the bosses. The delegates at Chicago will be confronted by the task of carrying on the work of their organization within the unions in the face of the expulsion threats of labor's reactionary officialdom.

It was in Chicago that the Socialist bureaucracy of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union began its outlawing campaign against members of the Trade Union Educational League. President Lewis, in the miners' union, has threatened expulsion, but he has not carried it out. Yet the terror he has invoked has large numbers of miners intimitated. They know well the czarist fist of President Lewis that smashed the miners' union in Kansas and Nova Scotia. On the railroads the campaign for amalgamation has proceeded without, as yet, calling forth a rule of force by those in power.

The attack that is being directed against the T. U. E. L., however, is the surest testimony to its strength and influence. The T. U. E. L. cannot be ignored. It cannot be ridiculed. Its demands for the organization of the unorganized, for amalgamation, for the Labor Party must be answered. And since they have no arguments with which to answer these demands, the backward officials must needs resort to force, the weapon of all tyrants.

It is probably superfluous to point out to the militants in the labor movement that their greatest safeguard is to be found in their own strength. The power that is cast out of well disciplined numbers will be a protection to the carrying on of Trade Union Educational League work. The task of the Chicago Conference, therefore, should be to develop ways and means to crystallize an organization from the growing sentiment everywhere for the League's program. Sentiment is no matter how preponderant it may be, is only effective as it is organized. The First Conference laid the foundation of "The League's" activities. Let the Second Conference rear the superstructure of the Trade Union Educational League, building it so well that the winds of reaction will not be able to sway it by a hairsbreadth. The united front against the militants must be met with the united front of the whole rank and file against both the bosses and their official allies within the labor movement.

Pinchot—Another Strikebreaker?

This is being written during the chaotic days preceding the date for the ending of the present wage agreement in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields. The mine owners' press is losing no opportunity to attack the workers' forces. It has worn out its arguments against union recognition, the checkoff, higher wages and the shorter workday. So it begins to brouse in new fields. Thus the New York Times grows hysterical over the slightest power possessed by the workers. It has discovered new threats to profits in the certificate required of every miner. It fears that the miners' union may withdraw the maintenance men, resulting in the flooding of the mines.

The issuing of certificates by the Miners' Examining Board has resulted in only experienced men going to work in the hazardous hard coal mining industry. The law demanding certificates has been in force for 20 years. It has no doubt resulted in the saving of thousands of lives, since in the unprotected coal mines is constant danger, not only to himself, but to all his fellow workers.

The New York Times, however, is not interested in safety. The mine owners are not interested in safety. The mine owners are interested in profits. The Miners' Examining Board is made up in each inspection district of nine miners, each of whom must have had five years' practical experience mining in the district. This, according to the Times, "limits the anthracite mining industry completely to the hands of the union."

In other words, if the profiteering mine owners, live up to the laws of their own state legislature, it will be impossible for them to import strikebreakers to scab during the strike. This control of the examining boards gives the miners' union holds a strategic position, that has helped win many a strike in other fields. The Times and the mine owners are trying to have these examining boards set aside during the proposed strike, claiming they should not function during this "emergency." They are demanding that such action be taken by Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, declaring that otherwise he has failed as the political executive of the coal and steel dictatorship that rules over the entire state. It is this same Pinchot that has been able to continually postpone the release of Jacob Dolla and other class war prisoners, and who has allowed the white terror to run riot against the workers in numerous sections of the state. But the setting aside of the Miners' Examining Boards would hit home with 200,000 Pennsylvania coal miners. Pinchot will, therefore, not be able to get away with this problem so easily. Pinchot is up against the biggest decision of his career as a "progressive." Will he turn out another "strikebreaker"?

Berger—Friend of Stinnes

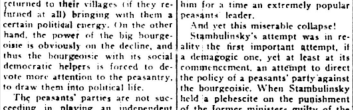
Victor L. Berger, the lone Socialist congressman, and the anti-Communist editor of the Milwaukee Leader, has returned home from Europe. He wants American dollar diplomacy to advance a loan of $1,000,000,000 to the Stresemann-Stinnes regime in Germany, and proclaims that the "notable accomplishment" of the Hamburg Socialist Congress was the refusal of a united front with the Communists.

Under a pro-German mask, Berger posed as a revolutionary Socialist during the war. His real standing as a Socialist became very apparent after the Bolshevik triumph in Russia, in November, 1917. From the beginning he attacked the efforts of the Communists to maintain the Russian Soviet Republic. It is his position, identical with that of the Communist-baiting Abraham Cahan, of the Jewish Daily Forward, that has won out in the Socialist Party, and now dominates this organization.

We do not remember that Berger has ever urged a loan, or even credits, of a billion dollars, or any other sum, to help reconstruct industry and agriculture in Soviet Russia. But his nationalistic brand of "international" Socialism displays its hideous nature when he urges a billion dollars for the German capitalist republic, money that he must know will drift into the hands of Stinnes, Krupp, Thyssen, and the other great capitalists of Germany.

No doubt Berger feels that this move is good "campaign stuff" for the anti-labor German voters in Wisconsin. He is probably looking ahead to next year's elections. But the really class-conscious workers in Wisconsin ought to have something to say about this. When the Brookharts, the Ladds, the Wheelers, and other United States senators in the old parties, can come back from Europe urging recognition of Soviet Russia, it is time that America's workers asked why a Socialist congressman goes to Europe, doesn't even go near Russia, and returns home urging aid instead to the reactionary nation under the sway of the bosses.

Berger has merely shown himself another example of a Socialist who has turned against the revolution and become even more reactionary than capitalist politicians. Berger was a school teacher before he became Socialist editor. He has now taught the workers another lesson. They must profit from it to the full.



The New Day Is Dawning!

This Week!

BY THE ONLOOKER

A year ago, on Labor Day, . . .

While capitalist church dignitaries were preaching from every conceivable pulpit in every conceivable city in the country against the sin of working on the Sunday of the Labor Day celebration, . . . Attended with . . . unfavorable results . . . scenes near Detroit, Mich. We have been unable to find out any of those robbed were workers from the Detroit, Edison Company, miners from the coal, iron and copper pits of the state. Two men in the Sunday morning revelry got their names into print, they the first that they were shot by the gunmen, and we find they were George D. Wilson, vice president of the C. F. Wilson Body Co. of Pontiac, and Joseph L. Webber, of Bloomfield Hills, vice president of the Kenneth - Wisconsin Machine Co., names duly inscribed in the social register of their respective circles. Yet these are the respectables whom the preachers urge as the chosen of the earth, whom the masses must look upon and revere. The churches have joined the Wilsons and the Webbers in every war on the efforts of the iron and copper miners to organize their forces in Michigan. When the next strike wave, however, sweeps the Michigan copper and iron country, the workers may have something to say about the morality of the shorter workday and better pay for labor, compared to the throwing of the bosses in roadhouses at 3 a. m. of a Sunday morning.

Capitalism and Its Money

When Mussolini came into power with his Fascisti dictatorship, he proclaimed that the value of the lire would rise. The Stresemann government, with Socialist finance minister, was created to save the falling mark. But the Fascisti lire, in Italy, and the Socialist mark, in Germany, continue to tumble to still lower depths. There is no power on earth that can save capitalism and its money, not even the Fascisti or the Socialists. The day of Communism is dawning!

Steel Cells for Workers

The Van Dorn Iron Works of Cleveland, Ohio, has been awarded a contract for the fabrication of 700 steel cells for the new county jail in Los Angeles. This building is expected to be the largest of its kind in the United States and will be filled with workers, victims of the present capitalist social system.

Petrograd's Exports Grow

The Russian Soviet government announces that exports at Petrograd now outstrip imports. Which means that the capitalist world will soon be owing the Workers' Regime big, shining American dollars, and capitalism will waver a little more on its shaky legs.

Signs That Don't Fail

An indication that the gasoline war in the middle west is coming to an end is seen in the fact that an "investigation" has been ordered. The report of the investigators will be duly filed and the Standard Oil will be happier than ever.

Master of the Machine

This is the emblem of the Red International of Labor Unions, that is striving for the time when the worker will be the master of the machine he has made and not, as today, its slave.

"Advance Guard for Working Class Defense" Planned by Anti-Fascist Alliance of N. A

The organization of an "Advance Guard for Working Class Defense" to protect union meetings and other labor activities against Fascists assault is being planned by the Anti-Fascist. Alliance of North America, with headquarters at 231 East 11th Street, New York.

According to the plan, details of which have not yet been worked out affiliated unions will be asked to contribute a contingent toward this defense guard, which will be subject to call whenever the defense of labor gatherings is involved.

This move is prompted by the published reports in Fascist organs that the destruction of existing unions and their substitution by "blackshirt" unions is the object of the imported reaction. Instances where Fascist interfered with labor meetings have already been reported in several parts of the country, their comparative rarity in the larger centers like New York being due to the opposition of labor. Every member of the Advance Guard will hold a card of identification.

Help "Organize the Unorganized."

Signs of the Coming Storm

The prosperity balloon is already beginning to spring a leak. Unemployment is noticeably on the increase, and wages are going down. The U. S. Department of Labor and the Federal Reserve Board agree on this and the figures of the New York Department of Labor tell the same story.

The decline started in May and has continued steadily ever since. Wages of factory workers in New York State during the month of June, in this year of prosperity, stood at the munificent average of $27.87, a marked drop below the month of May, while July shows a drop of 33 cents from this figure.

Industry all over the country is beginning to slow down, and already the workers feel the pinch. The Federal Reserve Board reports "a slump in industrial activity, with a parallel decrease in employment, are the outstanding features of the country's business condition in July." Employment at industrial establishments decreased 2 per cent, resulting in a decrease of 3 per cent in average wages of industrial workers.

The important thing to remember is that the depression has been going on for three months, and that the cold and formal statistics are already beginning to be translated into terms of human misery. Less food on the worker's table, a still meaner shack to live in, fewer of the pitiful little "extras" that help make life more bearable for the worker, his wife and kids. Before they have had a chance to forget the terrible plague of unemployment that took such heavy toll in 1920 and 1921, it is upon them again.

It looks like a black winter ahead of us, but there are some who will not feel it, having thriftily provided themselves against a spell of hard times. In the Wall Street Journal for August 1923, we read the cheerful statement that "in cash, inventories and working capital, industry was never in a stronger position than it is today."

Let the workers take heart from this announcement. If they have nothing to show for all the wealth they made, they may at least find some consolation in the knowledge that those for whom they made it will have it. There may be hunger in their own homes, but all is well in Wall Street.

Lessons of the Bulgarian Upheaval Drawn to Attention of Sections of Communist International

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV
Chairman, Communist International

1. The Necessity for Criticism

We hesitated for some time: Is it not too premature to subject the tactics of the central committee of the Communist Party of Bulgaria to public criticism? At the moment this party is exposed to the direct fire of the victorious White Fascist bands.

The bourgeois papers constantly demand that our Bulgarian party be placed outside of the law. In consultation with the Executive of the Comintern, we came, however, to the conclusion that we dare not be silent, that silence on the erroneous tactics being pursued by the party will not save it from ruin, but rather enhance the dangers of this ruin; that it is necessary to track down the errors committed, and to learn the right tactics while events in Bulgaria are yet fresh.

The Communist International is a united Communist world party. The Bulgarian example, without doubt, possesses international significance. Each one of the 60 parties affiliated to the Comintern has its own interests at heart when it seeks to ascertain whether the Central Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party has acted rightly or wrongly in the course of events which may be repeated, in a more or less similar form, in other lands.

In the meanwhile, the leaders of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Bulgaria are struggling their "neutrality" theory in the international Communist press with a zeal worthy of a better cause. This involves two dangers. In the first place, incorrect views are spread abroad and utilized by our opponents in the Second International. In the second place, the defence of an erroneous attitude deprives our Bulgarian comrades themselves of the possibility of rectifying their mistakes and bars their way to really revolutionary tactics.

We dare not be silent! The question is of too great importance, if because of our brotherly relations to the Bulgarian workers, and to the Bulgarian Communist Party, to which we are bound by ties of special friendship, that we feel bound to express our candid opinion. Let our enemies smile maliciously. The Communist Parties have often had to subject themselves to self-criticism, and to order their ranks under the fire of the enemy. It suffices to recollect the example given by the Communist Party of Germany after the March action in 1921. Despite everything, the future none the less belongs to the Bulgarian Communists, not to the reigning Bulgarian Fascists, and not to the "social democratic" Fascisti from the party of the "broad" Tensheviki. (When the Bulgarian labor party split, the right wing designated itself the "broad" social democrats, the left wing the "narrow." Ed.)

2. The Role Played by the Independent Peasants' Parties

The latest events in Bulgaria throw a strong light on some of the most important present day social problems, bearing all on the question of the role played by the peasants' parties. One of the most interesting facts in the most recent history of politics is the attempt to form peasants' parties which presume to play an independent political role—apparently directed against the bourgeoisie and against the proletariat. We have witnessed such attempts during recent years in the Balkans, in Czecho-Slovakia, in Hungary, in Poland, etc. It is an exceedingly complicated phenomenon. It may chiefly be explained by the fact that during the war, and during the further decay of the bourgeois "order," the city has been constantly pushed into the background by the village—in the sense that the importance of the village, its economic and social significance has continually increased. This is the basis. On the one hand, the peasants won a certain amount of political experience during the imperialist war of 1914 to 1918, which shook the village to its profoundest depths, and caused much suffering among the broad masses of the peasantry. The young men from the countryside who had been called up by millions to fight in the imperialists armies, afterwards returned to their villages (if they refurned at all) bringing with them a certain political energy. On the other hand, the power of the big bourgeoisie is obviously on the decline, and thus the bourgeoisie with its social democratic helpers is forced to divert more attention to the peasantry, to draw them into political life.

The peasants' parties are not succeeding in playing an independent role in politics, and are not likely to succeed. In this respect Bulgaria's example is extraordinarily instructive. As the media politic is concentrated in a breakdown more than any other policy during our imperialist epoch. The peasantry has but two alternatives: either to side with the bourgeoisie, which is the sole effective means of defending the real and fundamental interests of the peasantry. Even those peasant parties existing today, and keeping up the appearance of independence, are in reality nothing more than political cannon fodder for the bourgeoisie. It is not by accident that we find so many parsons, lawyers, and rich landowners, among the leaders of the so-called peasants' parties.

We cannot deny a certain depth and broadness in Stambulinsky's attempts. The biography of Stambulinsky is not that of an ordinary man. There was a time in which he had the courage to tell the truth in the face of the mighty ones of the earth. He was sentenced to imprisonment for life, and so forth. Especially during the first period of his government, his policy was characterized by its economic and political significance, seemed as if, were it possible for a peasants' party to really play an independent role, that Bulgaria was just the country for the purpose: it is actually the fact. In Bulgaria 85 to 90 per cent of the population consists of peasants. The city bourgeoisie is comparatively very weak. The two wars by which Bulgaria was visited were exceptionally disastrous to the peasantry. Stambulinsky's past rendered him for a time an extremely popular peasants' leader.

And yet this miserable collapse!

Stambulinsky's attempt was in reality the first important attempt, if a demagogic one, yet at least at its commencement, an attempt to direct the policy of a peasants' party against the bourgeoisie. When Stambulinsky held a plebescite on the punishment of the former ministers guilty of the imperialist war, when he deprived the bourgeois officers of their offices and brought in a peasant militia from the villages, when he armed the peasants, etc.—these were efforts calculated to create popularity for Stambulinsky. But all too soon the "peasants' policy" of Stambulinsky began to change into a policy in favor of the large farmers. In recent times, Stambulinsky did not direct his policy so much against the bourgeoisie as against the working class, and against its leader, the Communist Party. The attempts at keeping to the "middle" line were speedily ship-wrecked. Stambulinsky, in separating himself from the masses, not only forfeited the confidence of the whole working class, but also that of a large section of the peasantry, and himself paved the way for the unhappy fate which overtook him. A "peasants' government" which directs its efforts against both the proletariat and bourgeoisie has proved itself to be an empty and lamentable Utopia, even in an agrarian country like Bulgaria. Nothing but a workers' and peasants' government can help the Bulgarian peasantry to free itself from the clutches of the bourgeois robbers.

3. The Tactics of the Bulgarian Communist Party

The Bulgarian upheaval is a serious historical test of the Bulgarian Communist Party. This crisis, like every other crisis, must serve to show the actual conditions obtaining in the old and powerful Bulgarian Communist Party, which boasts a large membership and is apparently thoroughly adequate to cope with present problems.

Unfortunately, the Bulgarian Communist Party has not stood the test. On the contrary, it has justified the most pessimistic predictions.

We waited on the tip-toe of expectation for the first news as to the attitude adopted by our Bulgarian Party at the beginning of the civil war. But even the earliest reports aroused the fear that the attitude taken would be too passive. The news following exceeded even our worst fears.

"The new government, whose existence is due to a military putsch, replaces the fallen military and police dictatorship of the peasant bourgeoisie by the new dictatorship of the city bourgeoisie, the old bourgeois party . . ."

"The mask of bourgeois legality has been torn aside, and the sole party representing in actual deeds the rights and liberties guaranteed (!) by the constitution (!!) is the Communist Party . . ."

"The toiling masses in town and country will not participate in the armed struggles between city and rural bourgeoisie, for such a participation in the struggle would signify only helping fetch the chestnuts out of the fire for their exploiters and oppressors."

"In the name of the working people we demand the maintenance and expansion of political liberty. We demand full liberty of speech and press, full rights of coalition and holding meetings. We demand measures against speculation and high prices! . . ."

"Up to the present the new government has not yet raised its hand directly against the Communist Party. But the regime of military dictatorship now established is directed against the rights and liberties of the working people, and thus against the Communist Party. We demand that these rights and liberties be restored, that military law be suspended, and we call upon you to gather under the banner of the Communist Party . . ." etc., etc.

Thus declared the Central Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party in its first appeal issued on June 9, 1923.

"The armed struggle between the adherents of the fallen government and those of the new government is not yet finished. The Communist Party, and the hundreds and thousands of workers and peasants united beneath its standard, take no part in this armed struggle. We do not know how this struggle will develop; but it is one into which the broad masses of the people have not yet been drawn up to the present moment. It is the struggle for power between the city and country bourgeoisies, that is, between two wings of the capitalist class . . ."

"The Communist Party, in clearly pointing out the actual aims being fought for by the city and rural bourgeoisies, and in showing that these aims have nothing in common with the aims of the toiling masses in town and village, calls upon the workers and toilers, in town and country to unite, and to fight independently for the preservation of their interests, and for the realization of the slogans issued by the Communist Party."

Thus declared the Central Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party in its appeal of the 11th June. The Central Committee took its stand on this "neutrality" position, and has not budged from it to this day. Two bourgeois fractions are fighting with one another. That has nothing to do with "us." We "demand" . . . the abolition of military law. And this one day after the White upheavall we are . . . so innocent that we demand from the Fascist goverament that it confirms its declarations (on freedom and other beautiful things) by deeds" . . .

The communist workers in the provinces have not all been able to find their way to this "high" pinnacle of statesmanship. They see that naked Fascist reaction is beginning to triumph, they are taking up arms gainst it, and are trying to resist the Fascisti, who are gaining the upper hand, by joining their forces with those of groups of peasants. At Plevna and other places action is beginning among the armed communist workers, supported by the peasantry. But the Central Committee takes immediate steps. We repeat the wording of the remarkable telegram sent by Comrade Lukanov, secretary of the Central Committee, to Plevna:

"Plevna. To Wassiliy Tabatschkin (Secretary of the Plevna Party organization). I hear that there are rumors among you in Plevna, to the effect that I have been arrested, and that extraordinary measures are being employed against us here in Sofia. This is a lie. Do not let yourselves be confused by rumors and provocations. You will receive our appeal. Support to the utmost the attitude taken in it! Take no part either for or against one or the other party. Regards to Tatscha Olga Asen, and other comrades." (The object of these last words was to prove to Comrade Tabatschkin that the telegram was really from Lukanov.)

We have learnt from various telegrams that this Plevna incident was not an isolated one.

As is invariably the case in such occurrences, the errors committed by the Party centrals are ascribed to the workers. The Bulgarian workers are accused of indifference, of lack of fighting spirit, of disinclination for combat, etc. It is thus that the members of the Central Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party write.

These are all mere sophistries. We know quite well that the Central Committee issued the incredible wrong slogan of "neutrality" a few hours after the white revolution, that is, that it began to induce the workers to take no part in the struggle between two cliques both alleged to be equally hostile to us. How are the workers to prove their fighting spirit, when their own party, in the person of the Central Committee from the very beginning, required non-participation in the conflict, to it them?

French Communist Party Greets Efforts of Workers in the United States to Establish a Communist Daily

The French Communist Party heartily congratulates, and wishes the best of success on the occasion of the issuance of the Communist Daily, indispensable in the American class struggle against capitalist exploitation. The revolutionary French proletariat greets the American working class.

New Efforts Made to End Coal Strike

As this issue of "The Worker" went to press, the representatives of the mine workers and the mine owners were again planning to get into conference with Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, at Harrisburgh. Predictions were being made by the miners' officials, especially by Rinaldo Cappellini, of District 1, that the strike would be of short duration. No basis, however, was given for this belief. On page three of this issue, we publish the declaration of the International Progressive Miners' Committee on the present situation. In the accompanying article, we show why the coal miners have refused arbitration.

By LELAND OLDS

Why have the miners' union refused to submit to arbitration of the anthracite mine owners?

Every miner knows that he was double-crossed by the public representative who was chairman of the 1920 arbitration board. The subservience of this hanger-on of the capitalist system has cost anthracite workers at least $30,000,000 in wages which were rightfully theirs.

Recent antics of the Railway Labor Board have confirmed this deep-seated determination not to accept arbitration. Only a year ago this board decreed that a living wage must wait until the railroads were satisfied with profits, and proceeded to lead the Wall Street attempt to substitute company unions for the independent shopcraft unions on the railroads.

Three years ago the anthracite coal commission began by ruling out exhibits that touched the anthracite monopoly in the sensitive spot of profits. Thus the miners' case was stripped of the most important proof of the ability of the industry to pay the increases without increasing the price of coal to the consumer.

The chairman centered proceedings on the question of changes in the cost of living and then repudiated the recommendation of his own economist that the cost of living justified a 27 per cent increase and handed the miners the scant 17 per cent which had been offered by the operators and by the secretary of labor prior to submission of the dispute to arbitration.

This last arbitration performance in the industry was a striking illustration of the subservience of so-called impartial chairmen to the financial overlords who can make or break the smug career of reasonable success and comfort dreamed of by the American middle class. This "impartial" chairman had agreed to accept the findings of an economist engaged to collect data on the cost of living. When the findings turned out to favor a 27 per cent increase the operators' commissioner objected and the economist was fired. Over a week-end the chairman reached the 17 per cent verdict.

It is first-hand knowledge that mysterious influences work on the minds of representatives of the public that underlies solid opposition of the miners to arbitration.

They Protect Would-be Assassins

By BEN GITLOW

Little did the men responsible for the shooting at William Z. Foster, in Chicago, dream what its outcome would be. They did not realize that the shot, that was intended to snuff out the life of one of the most loyal and devoted leaders of the working class, would react against them and their methods. There is absolutely no question that this savage and cowardly attempt to kill Foster was the direct outcome of the terroristic methods employed by the reactionaries against the militants in the unions.

The rank and file, quick to realize that the attempt on Foster's life was an attempt to kill the movement in the unions that he represents, lifted their voices in a mighty protest against this attempted murder. The rank and file, especially of the needle trades' unions, realizing the danger to the whole left movement in the continuance of the methods of terrorism and assassination is raising its voice in a mighty protest demanding at the same time that the gangster and terroristic methods resorted to in the unions against militants must cease.

It is interesting to notice how the reactionary machine in the unions together with Abraham Cahan's yellow Socialist Daily Forward reacted to the shooting. The Forward prints an edition in Chicago. The day after the shooting the Chicago Forward in spite of the fact that the shooting was the sensation of every paper in Chicago did not print a single word on the affair. Evidently the Forward wanted to maintain a conspiracy of silence on the matter.

But the Forward could not keep quite. The rank and file of the needle trades unions were expressing their indignation in no uncertain tones. Did the Forward come out in condemnation of the act? Not at all! The Forward the next day did the direct opposite. Instead of helping the movement to stop such outrages against working class leaders, the Jewish Daily Forward, in trying to ridicule the affair as a comedy of Foster's own making, rendered valuable assistance to the assassins.

Expose Lies of "Forward"

That the Forward story was a concoction of lies originating in the minds of one of its editors, was easily proven by the Jewish Communist Daily Freiheit.

The Freiheit printed the whole story as it appeared in the Forward together with the reports of the affair that appeared in other New York papers. The Forward story stated that Foster hired gangsters to attend the meeting to break it up and to shot at him because it would give him publicity and would also give an opportunity to the Communist forces in the unions to put the blame on the leaders of the unions whom they were opposing.

Imagine such assininity on the part of the Forward. At a meeting called by the Trade Union Educational League Foster would hire gangsters to shoot him. The Forward, however, did not inform its readers that the meeting was held in protest against the expulsion of members from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union who were expelled because they were members of the Trade Union Educational League.

The Forward did not inform its readers as did some of the Chicago papers that those in opposition to the meeting had evidently sent in a gang of sluggers to create a panic and break up the meeting.

Shielding the Guilty Parties

The Forward did not inform its readers after it had changed its story, stating that blank cartridges were used, that an investigation by the Chicago police discovered the holes made by the bullets that were used. If this proves anything it proves that the Forward is not concerned over the possible loss of Foster's life, but is much concerned in shielding the guilty parties.

How did the "International machine" react to the shooting? The "International machine" reacted similarly to the Jewish Daily Forward. Did President Morris Sigman send a committee to Chicago to investigate and bring to account the guilty parties? Not at all! Sigman was not concerned over the attempted killing of so valuable a man to the Labor movement. In a lengthy statement he tried to blacken Foster's reputation by resorting to the most damning fabrications. What interest has Sigman in this shooting that he is so interested in ridiculing it? This is a very pertinent question. The rank and file would like to know its answer.

Sigman knows well enough what took place in Chicago. Sigman knows well enough why the meeting was held. Sigman knows well enough the tactics that were being used by Vice-President Meyer Perlstein in expelling the Trade Union Educational League members from the "International." Sigman knows because the entire campaign against the Trade Union Educational League in the "International" is being directed by President Sigman.

Rank and File Denied Rights

Not only have the militant members in Chicago been expelled, but in addition every opportunity for the expelled to express and defend themselves in the organization was denied them. When the Rank and File came to the meeting to express their condemnation against the tactics of the "International machine," a group of vicious characters, evidently sent there for that purpose tried repeatedly to break up the meeting. When they failed the shooting followed.

Those who hired the gangsters to break up the meeting of the Trade Union Educational League are responsible for the shooting. A miracle of luck saved Foster's life. His death would have been one of the greatest losses to the American Labor Movement. Every one in the Labor Movement, whether he agrees with Foster or not, should have immediately condemned the shooting. Every one in the Labor movement, if he trade has an interest in the welfare of the Labor movement should make an effort to bring to light the guilty parties and so prevent a recurrence of the affair.

But the reactionaries together with the Forward are interested in shielding the guilty parties by spreading the most brazen lies about Foster.

The rank and file however are not fooled by the stories of the reactionaries. They have determined to use the Foster incident as a weapon against the gangsters that is now being used by the reactionaries against the militants and revolutionists in the unions.

The rank and file are not stand silent and permit their leaders to be murdered. The rank and file will no longer allow themselves to be terrorized and slugged into submission.

The shot that was fired at Foster missed its mark. It, however, did accomplish something. It aroused the rank and file. It put the Forward and the reactionaries on the defensive, and gave the rank and file an opportunity of once more asserting themselves without fear as they

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Efforts of the trade unions, farmers' organizations and co-operatives to definitely organize their political power in the state of Minnesota for the purpose of conserving their victories at the polls and winning new conquests in the future has aroused the opposition of the political adventurers who hoped to use this mass movement in their own interests.

The situation in Minnesota today is unique in the history of American politics. There is a strong Farmer-Labor Party movement, but there is no Farmer-Labor Party. The elections that placed Dr. Hendrick Shipstead and Magnus Johnson in the United States Senate were elemental revolts of the exploited farmers and the organized workers of this state.

The name Farmer-Labor Party was used in these campaigns because it is, in itself, an excellent slogan symbolizing the identity of interests between the wage workers, working farmers and farm laborers. In order that the name "Farmer-Labor Party" could have legal standing it was necessary to comply with the state laws regarding political parties, so the successful candidate for the nomination for governor of the state on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket appointed a state chairman. Other candidates successful in the primary elections selected the state committee. But this state chairman and the state committee constitutes the entire Farmer-Labor Party at present.

The state chairman is a lawyer, one E. A. Pike, who has political ambitions and who is opposed to the organization of a definite political party under control of the rank and file of the workers and farmers of this state.

Pike and his cohorts are in a strategical position, inasmuch as they now enjoy complete control of the political machinery that represents

Workers Party National Office in Chicago

The past week has seen the National Office of the Workers Party moved from New York City to Chicago. The new address is Workers Party, 1009 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the last issue of "The Worker" to appear in New York City. The next issue will appear in Chicago. Address all communications in the future to "The Worker," 1009 N. State St. Chicago, Ill.

Italians and Greeks of New York City Protest Against War Threat

Italian and Greek workers of New York City will gather Friday Night, Sept. 7 at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th St., to show that they are opposed to the war that threatens to blaze up between Italy and Greece.

Antonio Presti, editor of Alba Nuova, Italian publication of the Workers Party, who will be one of the speakers, declares that "The sentiment among the Italian workers against Mussolini's high-handed action is overwhelming. There are 150,000 anti-Fascisti in New York City, and over 450,000 in other parts of the country.

"We regard Mussolini as an imperialist of the worst type, and we think he will lead our country into war. The economic condition of Italy is bad enough. To start a war would be fatal."

Among the other speakers at Friday night's meeting will be Arturo Giovanitti, General Organizer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Frank Bellanca, editor of the Italian organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, of the Workers' Defense Union.

Elect Communists in New Zealand

WELLINGTON, New Zealand.—George S. Thompson, elected as a Communist alderman of the Dunedin City council, is the first Communist to hold public office in New Zealand. During the war he was jailed for opposing the draft.

West Va. Organizes Against Coal Bosses

The citizens of West Virginia, determined to wipe out the rule of private coal interests which have in recent years made their state the scene of violent conflicts between capital and labor developing, at times, into a virtual civil war, have banded together into an organization called the "Defenders of West Virginia" for the purpose of "enforcing the Constitution of the United States and reviving the Bill of Rights of West Virginia," according to information received by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Dunne Greets "The Daily"

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

Editor, Butte, Mont., Bulletin

Nothing will mark better the progress of the working class movement in the United States than the publication of a fighting daily paper, expressing the maximum position of labor.

There is today not one daily voicing the revolutionary determination of the courageous and intelligent section of the American working class.

Such a daily will inevitably rally to itself and the Communist Workers Party all the elements of the American working class who are ready to fight capitalism. Let it record the defeats and victories of the American workers and the reasons therefore with maximum precision and its future is assured.

Our Enemies Must Use Guns, Have No Arguments,—Foster

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO—The words of William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, that restored order at the mass meeting here after gunmen had attempted to shoot up the gathering and assassinate the speaker were:

"Our enemies must use guns, they have no arguments left. This is a final demonstration of the complete inability of the enemies of the Trade Union Educational League to answer our arguments for The League program-amalgamation, shop committees, and a Labor Party."

It is significant that one policeman arrived at the hall fully an hour after the shooting. Otherwise police, detectives and secret service agents of Bill Burns' department of justice usually swarm radical labor meetings held in this hall. Up to this writing no serious effort has been made to apprehend the gunmen.

Foster has challenged Meyer Perlstein, vice president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to debate the issues involved.

Great Demonstration Against Attempted Assassination of Wm. Z. Foster

RUTGERS' SQUARE, NEW YORK CITY, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 8, AT 2 O'CLOCK SHARP

Down with gangsters and assassins! The rank and file will not allow such leaders as William Z. Foster to be shot down in cold blood. The Chicago shooting must not be repeated! Foster will be present in person at this Monster Protest Demonstration by the rank and file, and will tell what took place in Chicago. An answer will be given to the lies of The Forward and to Sigman of "The International." Besides Foster others will speak including C. E. Ruthenberg, M. J. Olgin, Ben. Gitlow, J. Louis Engdahl, S. Epstein, Alexander Bittleman, Robert Minor, Ludwig Lore and others.

MEETING UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

Foster Tells Second T.U.E.L. Conference that Left Wing Is Vital Necessity of Workers

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO, Ill.—William Z. Foster, Secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, in reporting to the Second National Conference held here, with 153 union militants representing 81 international unions and every industrial center in the United States and Canada, declared that:

"The past year has produced many proofs, positive and negative, that the Trade Union Educational League is a vitally necessity and highly effective movement. The negative proofs come from the bankrupt trade union bureaucracy which is totally unable to meet the present critical situation of the labor movement. The positive proofs are furnished by the very successful work of the League."

Foster outlined the progress of the amalgamation movement. At least 2,000,000 trade unionists have decided for amalgamation, he said. The latest achievement was when the Lithographers' International Union, a highly skilled craft union, endorsed amalgamation almost unanimously.

The League has also achieved remarkable results in the campaign for a Labor Party.

The League has taken an active part in the movement to win the trade unions in favor of the United States government recognizing Russia.

Important progress has been made in the organization of left block committees in the basic industries. At present such committees exist in industries of railroad, coal mining, metal, building, food, printing, marine transport, tobacco, clothing, leather and textile.

During the past year the League has published the following pamphlets: "Amalgamation," by Jay Fox; "The Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement," by Foster; "The Resolutions and Decisions of the Second World Congress of the R. I. L. U.," and "The Russian Trade Unions in 1923."

The League has prevented four fatal splits in the mine workers alone, the miners of Kansas, Nova Scotia, the coke miners betrayed by the Lewis machine and thirty-six thousand anthracite miners who had determined to split over the town-colliery local system.

In every industry the League has enrolled and enthused the militants and convinced them the true revolutionary tactic is to remain and amalgamate and under no circumstances to split.

Discuss Use of Word "Fakir"

An amusing discussion arose over the disuse of the phrase labor fakir, some of the delegates claiming it is too harsh.

The final conclusion was that in view of the crimes that they commit against the workers there is no word or phrase in any language too harsh to use, but the militants in their locals should avoid mere abuse and use reason and argument.

The way to obtain a following in the rank and file is to convince them not to merely abuse the fakirs.

The question of publishing a series of articles giving details of historic betrayals and steals and giving the record of prominent fakirs is being considered.

The fakirs have abandoned their early attitude of silent contempt for the League and are now conducting a desperate campaign of abuse disfranchisement, slugging and expulsion.

The fakirs of the mine workers and the needle trades are blazing the way.

Carry Fight to Rank and File

The militants are determined to carry the issue to the rank and file and are confident that they will emerge from the conflict stronger than ever.

Organizer Tim Buck reported splendid progress in the Canadian district.

In spite of tremendous obstacles and much unemployment the Canadian labor movement is soaked thru and thru with radical sentiment and over half the locals in the Dominion have gone on record for Amalgamation.

The settlement of the Nova Scotia mine strike showed how completely the rank and file is under their leadership.

The miners struck against the ruthless use of troops against steel strikers.

At once the government, their employers and the arch traitor Lewis mobilized against them.

The government used troops, cossacks and wholesale terror, arrested, indicted and deported their officers for trial.

Lewis revoked their charter and put in a discredited local illiterate named Hartshorn, who had been overwhelmingly defeated in the previous election, to "reorganize" Dist. 26.

The employers announced that they would pay the check-off to Barnett.

Lewis was determined to expel all militants if he had to wreck the District to do it.

The employers, however, wanted coal dug and the mine maintenance men to go back and forced Lewis to grant the militants terms.

These were that the district officers should not be expelled from the union and that all local officers should be left untouched.

Secession Is Prevented

Enormous sentiment developed for secession but the militants persuaded the rank and file to accept these honorable terms and return to work with their organization intact and under the leadership of the reds.

Two amusing features of the case are that Lewis was sending his orders to the miners thru the employers and that Lewis applied for an injunction against the district president.

The League is confident that when the present boomlet, which is not based on extension of the foreign market but on a temporary stimulation of the past terrible depression, will hit the United States industries and that then the American workers will look to militant leadership as the Canadian workers are rallying.

This estimate is based on the present situation.

A war, which is quite probable, may give again a blood soaked prosperity. ? ?

The spirit of the Convention is splendid.

Delegates who felt a week ago that we had years of work ahead of us before we could claim the following of the rank and file are now sure that another year will show large developments in the American labor movement.

Reports on Second Day

The Trade Union Educational League on its second day of Convention received comprehensive reports and recommendations on the following industries: Building, Needle, Railway, Printing, Metal and Coal.

The German comrades were exceptionally active on the floor and have been prominent in all the work of the Convention.

The Convention sent the following telegrams to brothers Mooney, Billings, Vanzetti and Dolla: "Second General Conference Trade Union Educational League meeting to-day hundred-forty delegates send greetings of solidarity.

"We pledge our continuous efforts to arouse the labor movement to take effective action for immediate release of all imprisoned for serving labors cause.

"May you soon return to the fighting ranks.

"William Z. Foster, Sec'y."

And this telegram to the General Defense Committee of the Industrial Workers of the World:

"Second General Conference of TUEL conveys a fraternal revolutionary greeting to those I. W. W. imprisoned by our common capitalist enemy at Leavenworthy Walla Walla, San Quentin and elsewhere and pledges the energies of the League militants to the defeat of the Busick injunction, the anti-Syndicalist Laws and to release their victims. TUEL., William Z. Foster, Sec'y."

Acclaim Russia's Workers

After enthusiastic discussion the conference acclaimed the revolutionary embattled proletariat who have established the workers republic in Russia and fought so gallantly against overwhelming odds for six years.

The Conference called on the A. F. F. of L. to recognize Soviet Russia.

The Conference endorsed the world war veterans for their gallant struggle in the cause of labor and recommended groups of League militants to organize posts to be thorns in the flesh of the bosses and fake labor leaders.

The League drafted an able plan to organize the unorganized and pledged themselves to put it into effect.

The American movement numbering three million is swamped down in the eighteen million unorganized workers and it is a question of life and death, a question brooking no delay, no half-way measures, to get them organized.

Joseph Manley made a report on the Federated Farmer-Labor Party that was received with enthusiasm. He showed that the Chicago Federation of Labor organized the first Farmer-Labor Party in defiance of the fakirs and then lost heart and turned respectable.

Can't Forgive Desertion

The Non-Partisan League of North Dakota was organized by dyed-in-the-wool reds who have also lost their revolutionary fire.

In both cases the masses have deserted the renegades. Even some of our militants are a little timid about the enormous possibilities of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The live wires leading the masses have created a giant and must guide it to victory.

The rank and file can forgive mistakes in tactics but neither will nor should forgive irresolution or desertion.

Three Very Urgent Tasks of Every Member of Party

1. Every Party unit shall form immediately a campaign committee for "The Daily."
2. Every Party member must get a new member into the Workers Party.
3. Every Communist must make every effort to have his trade union, benefit society, Workmen's Circle or other labor organization affiliate with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

U. S. Imperialism Big Factor Driving South America to Eye Russia

By M. YAROSHEVSKY

The World War which advanced the importance of South America as a supplier of raw materials on a large scale, threw the decision of the competitive struggle between the ground-rent and capitalist profits in agriculture, in favor of the latter. In the most advanced countries, like Argentina, Uruguay and Chile, the native bourgeoisie succeeded to power. Foreign capital, which in South America not only occupies the position of great land owner, but also has in its hands the chief railway lines, the shipping companies, the banks and foreign trade, endeavors to cut down the profits of the local capitalist as much as possible and fights against the local powers. The intentions of world capital with regard to its activities in South America, have now completely changed.

As regards the United States the government of South America up to now have barely succeeded in getting short term loans from the New York Banks, and this only under the most onerous terms. The United States built up protective tariffs against the products of the South American republics and at the same time increased by artificial means her own imports into these countries.

The leading republics of South America reached this stage of capitalist development when further advance had become unprofitable for the old exploiting capitalist countries, while the strongly developing labor organizations, very mindful of their interests, exercised a strong pressure upon the profit interests. The South Americans have come to the conviction that no further streams of foreign capital is to be expected in the near future, and that it is absolutely necessary to overcome the present severe crisis by their own efforts. They have therefore been taken towards developing the exchange of commodities in the interior of the Continent, and have formulated for a whole series of railway lines, and local laws regulating rents and terms of tenure.

At the same time, the South American republics began to display more initiative in questions of international politics, whilst they defended their independence with their combined strength, especially with regard to the United States. The struggle of Soviet Russia against the counter-revolution, which was supported by world capital, aroused not only the enthusiasm of the working masses of South America but it was also followed with great interest by many of the ruling circles of the South American republics. This is confirmed by the repeated reports of interviews with Comrades Tchitcherin and Krassin in the South American papers. And in March of this year the Government of Uruguay laid before Parliament the draft of a commercial treaty with Soviet Russia.

South America regards Soviet Russia, as a market for its enormous surplus of agricultural products and raw materials in general, for which it has no market at present. This is one of the motives for the interest which the bourgeois circles of South America display towards Soviet Russia at this moment.

The League of Nations has slapped Mussolini on the wrist by refusing Italians some choice positions on the League's committees. But what does Mussolini care for a little slap? He would rather turn the Mediterranean into an Italian lake.

Editor Haessler, of Federated Press, Blasts Reactionaries' Alibi in Shooting at Chicago

Editor's Note.—Instead of helping hunt down the would-be assassins, who fired three shots at William Z. Foster, while he was addressing a mass meeting in Chicago, on the night Aug. 27, the labor reactionaries are trying to show that Foster arranged to have himself shot, in order to enable him to pose as a martyr. This silly defense is characteristic of those who can think of no better alibi. This position of reactionary labor was supported alike by the capitalist Chicago Tribune and the New York Jewish Daily Socialist Forward; with The Call trailing in bewildered fashion. "THE WORKER" sheds additional truth on the situation by publishing the signed statement of Carl Haessler, managing editor of The Federated Press, a statement made after thoroly investigating the developments in Chicago. He writes:

By CARL HAESSLER
Managing Editor, Federated Press

CHICAGO.—Real bullets were fired at Wm. Z. Foster, according to the police statements following investigation by Detective Sergt. Crowley of the shooting at the mass meeting of members and sympathizers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, called to protest against the expulsion from the organization of radical members.

Sergt. Crowley, in an authorized statement to The Federated Press, denies that any police report has been made branding the shooting a fake, contradicting statements made by the Chicago Tribune on the second and third days following the attempted assassination. He located three marks where the bullets entered ceiling of the hall, all in line with the emergency exit where the gunman stood in the doorway for a brief moment and the platform where Foster was speaking.

"From our investigation we have no reason to believe the Tribune statement that the shooting was faked," reads Crowley's statement. "We have not caught the assailant, but are working on the case. There are three bullet marks on the ceiling at Carmen's hall about 40 feet from the side entrance where the shots were fired, that is about half way between the entrance and the speaker's platform. No report differing from this has been made by the police."

The bullet holes were plainly visible to me. They were evidently made thru hasty pulling of the trigger while the gunman brought the revolver down forearm to level in a crowded space. The first bullet narrowly missed a huge inverted electric light bowl, of which there were two in the line of shots. The second shot wavered a little to the right of the first, but about 6 feet nearer the platform. The last was in direct line and 10 feet closer to Foster.

The manager of the hall declares that he had noticed a number of interrupters who were getting ready for more pronounced action and he spoke to them asking who they were. They told him, he says, that they were members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. He advised them to abandon their tactics and for a while there was quiet. Then after Foster had begun speaking a man in the audience near the emergency exit tapped loudly on the bottom of the seat. Immediately afterwards, the door suddenly opened, a single gunman fired, masking his face with one arm, and fled.

Minnesota City and Land Workers Plan to Drive Political Adventurers from their Ranks

the spirit of revolt in this state. The membership of the organizations of the workers and farmers that helped win the victories at the polls realize the dangerous power wielded by Lawyer Pike. They fully realize the absurd position which this movement occupies without a definite political party to direct its destinies. After a number of conferences between trade unionists and representatives of the farmers' organizations a decision was reached to call a conference in the city of Minneapolis, beginning Sept. 8 for the purpose of definitely organizing to place this movement in the hands of the rank and file.

A joint call was issued, signed by William Mahoney, president of the Working People's Nonpartisan League, and O. Teigen, executive secretary of the Farmers' Nonpartisan League. The former represents the trade unions and some co-operatives, while the latter represents the farmers' organizations and other co-operatives. It is these two organizations that really carried on the burden of the campaign that placed Shipstead and Johnson in the Senate.

Fight for Party Rule

The joint call announces that the conference is "for the purpose of formulating, discussing and adopting plans which will enable the Farmer-Labor Party to conduct the work of education and organization in a more effective manner than before."

Unions, county organizations of the Nonpartisan League and all progressive or district organizations that support the Farmer-Labor movement will be represented.

Response to the call has been gratifying thus far, and both farmers and workers seem to be united in the determination to enter the conference and definitely organize a permanent machine for Party control. On every hand fears have been expressed that without a definitely organized political Party under the control of the organized workers and farmers the movement would become the football of designing politicians. The conference call was a direct challenge to these political sharpers under the leadership of lawyer Pike.

Both William Mahoney and H. G. Teigen, who had formerly worked in harmony with Pike and the legal apparatus called the Farmer-Labor Party, were compelled to break with him and issue the call over his head. In the industrial centers the workers are solidly behind the conference call and against Pike. He is completely discredited among the trade union ists. Realizing his predicament, Pike has started a campaign among the farmers with the object of creating a cleavage between the farmers and the wage workers.

A Campaign of Lies

In order to perpetuate their own control of the movement in Minnesota the politicians have started a campaign among the farmers for the purpose of arousing them against the trade unions. The machine that has thus far controlled the political machinery is busy propagating the idea that the Sept. 8 conference is a conspiracy against the farmers. This cry has been taken up by the hordes of journalistic adventurers in control of many country newspapers thruout the state.

These small town "journalists" are a particularly contemptible type of reptile. There are many of them thruout the United States, ignorant, blatant, one hundred per centers in their pronouncements, the kind of fake forlorn prostitutes willing to sell themselves for anything to anybody that throws them the coin of the realm, playing for the support of the petty shopkeepers that boast among themselves of their cheating of the farmers. But in Minnesota and North Dakota this type of journalist has found refuge in greater numbers than elsewhere in the nation, because of the political agitation carried on by the Farmer-Labor movement. And in the early days of the League, a decade ago, when the first victories were gained in these states, every broken-down politician, printer and ale we would employ as a journalistic bobo, unable to sell his servile brains to the large brothels of journalism in the cities, migrated to these states and proceeded to establish a country weekly newspaper to "defend the interests of the farmers." Many of them have remained and have played the political game. There are dozens of freelance farm publications, edited by this gentry. The farmers cared naught for the motives of these journals, so long as they published articles favorable to the Nonpartisan movement. Thus they came to speak for the farm population, the few of them know a harder from a threshing machine. At political conferences of "farmers" these fly-by-night" fakirs were always in evidence. The farmers were represented in many instances by the country editors, small town merchants who exchange their shoddy goods for the farmers' produce, and the bankers.

It is this gang of petty plunderers that is today trying to create a cleavage between the farmers and workers so that their merry game can continue. They see in this coming conference the most devastating menace to their little game of graft on the farmers that has ever confronted them. They are willing and anxious to wreck the unity of workers and farmers if only they can maintain their positions as parasites upon the farmers.

Must Smash Conspiracy

Against this conspiracy the entire force of the rank and file of the trade unions, farmer organizations and co-operative organizations is being concentrated. In this struggle the Workers Party of Minnesota is exerting its efforts in behalf of the United Front of these two basic groups of producers in the state. For the sake of preserving this unity all tactical and theoretical differences have been abandoned temporarily in order to secure victory over Lawyer Pike and the peanut politicians who see political control slipping from their avaricious clutches.

Realizing fully the immortal words of Karl Marx and Frederick Engels that the "Communists have no interests separate and apart from the interest of the working class as a whole" the Workers Party is consistently adhering to this fundamental principle. We have clearly understood that it is our duty as Communists to participate in the struggles of the working class regardless of the fact that some of the demands put forth in this struggle are for palliative measures, and measures that cannot be realized. The most pressing need of the farmers and trade unions in this state is unity of action. To achieve this unity certain demands are put forth that are distinctly in the category of reformistic measures. These demands are efforts to overcome certain oppressive measures, and it is our duty, as Communists to support these day to day demands and at the same time point to their insufficiency. By supporting these demands of the masses we gain the confidence of the rank and file of exploited workers and farmers. The activity of the Workers Party in this struggle against the conspiracy hatched by shyster lawyers and the lowest pen prostitutes will allay any fears that exist in the minds of the organized masses to the effect that the Communists are disrupters of the labor movement. Should we pursue a policy of isolation by separating ourselves from this vital struggle we would only be committing an act of treason against the working class by playing into the hands of its enemies, but we would be traitors to the revolutionary movement of this country.

Every place that Communists have influence they are working to smash the reaction fostered by the politicians, and are rallying farmer organizations, trade unions and co-operatives to the Sept. 8 conference for the purpose of administering a crushing defeat to these adventurers who have for years used the political movement to their own personal advantage, while the condition of the farmer has gradually grown worse, until today there is an unprecedented exodus from the farms because the labor of every member of the family is insufficient to meet the extortionate demands of the mortgage holding bankers and railroad corporations.

When the jay-bird lawyers, mortgage bankers, petty larceny merchants, prostituted journalistic scullions for the railroads and others, who profess their undying love for the farmers they gouge, come to Minneapolis on Sept 8, they will be greeted with the solid front of representatives of the rank and file of the exploited masses of this state, from field and factory, and will meet the most crushing defeat of their careers.

Steel Trust Has No Monopoly on 12-Hour Day Shown by Conditions Among N. Y. Workers

By SELMAR SHOCKEN

The Twelve-Hour Day is by no means a monopoly of the Steel Trust. The Twelve-Hour Day is an accepted, tho not a welcome institution, among thousands and thousands of city workers. It is especially widespread among the restaurant workers of New York City, and among the maintenance workers of the large apartment houses with elevator service "and all modern conveniences." Practically all workers in the restaurant kitchens are still working under a 12-hour rule. Engineers and firemen, elevator operators, porters, cleaners and other employees of the maintenance departments of factories, hotels, ice plants, etc., are also working 12 hours.

According to a statement of the Amalgamated Public Service Workers Union, an industrial organization which takes into its fold all maintenance workers, from engineer to porter, nearly 95 per cent of all these workers are employed on the 12-hour basis, at a wage rate, which is little above $30 for the best paid men, and goes down as far as $15 and $12 per week for elevator operators. Handy men who are expected to know something of almost any trade, able to repair an electric cable as well as a defect in the steam boiler, receive $25 to $110 per month for the 12-hour day.

The 8-hour day prevails only in very few instances. Breweries, large printing and newspaper plants and some hotels employ three shifts. The Hotel Men's Association, a few years ago, signed a contract with the Firemen's Union on the 8-hour basis and a wage of $31.50 per week. But these are exceptions, and in many plants where American Federation of Labor unions have contracts for engineers and firemen, the helpers work under deplorable conditions.

The American Federation of Labor unions only allow engineers and firemen to join, each, of course, in a separate union. Thus there may be only ten men employed in certain plants, two of these are probably organized in two different unions while the remainder are left to take care of themselves. Many of these are members of the Amalgamated Union. Lately the situation has been aggravated by the influx of many thousands of immigrant firemen who desert the foreign steamships at this port, to avoid returning to the unbearable conditions in Europe. Many German workers are among these immigrants.

Many of the foreign workers were organized in their industry in the old countries and they are trying to renew their connection with the labor movement in the United States. Many of them are unorganized and must be treated to the necessity of organization. But all of them are trying to find employment, and this is where the chief engineers and superintendents of many building and plants use the need of the weak for their own ends and the profits of their bosses. Often in league with private employment agencies, they exploit the newcomer, the "greenhorn," not only thru low wages, but also thru exorbitant fees.

While they are protesting very loudly against the low standard maintained by immigrant workers, the American Federation of Labor unions do very little to "Americanize and assimilate" those who do come in, in spite of all attacks of Samuel Gompers against the present intolerant immigration laws which he denounces as too liberal.

It is left to those militant and progressive trade unionists who have learned and understand the lesson of the class struggle to attract the immigrants to the ranks of organized labor, free them from the clutch of the employment sharks and other unscrupulous methods of exploitation and to make them valuable members of the American working class.

Balieff's "Chauve-Souris" Back Again in New York

Nikita Balieff is back in the United States with his "Chauve Souris." He told the enthusiastic throng that greeted his appearance at Jolson's Theatre that, "I love New York City. NOW," with emphasis on the "Now." Balieff has been saying the same thing on behalf of his fellow Russian players, during the summers in London, Paris, Berlin, Amsterdam, Vienna and Budapest. Let it be known that Balieff's "Chauve-Souris" is now, comes directly from the Theatre Femina, Paris, and after lingering for four weeks in New York City, will go on a tour of the country, an attraction that was best achieved last year.

The Jolson Theatre that will witness the New York engagement has a decided advantage over the century Road, some of last years entertainment, in being three times its size. Those who had hoped to get to see these remarkable talented actors and actresses in support these days in Moscow, but had been kept out by the high prices, will welcome this change. Seats for the four weeks season can be had from Box Office.

There will be matinees on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

The Balieff has not benched up on his English, but certainly has improved in his humor. He kept spanging one joke after another, packed with spicy satire, until it had the audience in stitches.

Some of the last winter's favorite sketches have been retained in the program, such as "The Little Tin Wooden Soldiers," "Katinka," and the Gypsy chorus. A Night at Yarde's Moscow, 1840." The Sleeping Beauty," one of the new numbers, a dance by Mme Anderson and M. Semenoff, artists from the State Theatre, Moscow, is truly exquisite. This artistic production consists of a generous offering of sixteen numbers nicely balanced and very entertaining.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE NOT SPHINX TO NATION'S OPEN SHOP BOSSES

By JAY LOVESTONE

One of our leading financial papers recently called "Cal" Coolidge "the Sphinx of the White House." In this there is not a bit of truth. To the financiers and industrialists of the country Coolidge is anything but a Sphinx as far as Labor goes; and that after all is the most decisive gauge of a man in public office today. So as where a man stands on the Labor problem, the class struggle, and you know where he is fundamentally lined up on the various issues confronting the country at any particular moment.

The whole record of President Coolidge betrays an unmitigated hostility to the working class and its struggle for the improvement of working and living conditions. It is in this light that the following estimate of our President by Mr. C. W. Barron, owner of the Boston News Bureau and Wall Street Journal and publisher of Barron's Weekly is of import:

"No man is better fitted or equipped to lead the United States in its present commanding position before the whole world. The business interests of the country will go behind him as they went up behind Harding."

The Textile Strike of 1919

In February, 1919, a committee of textile strikers from Lawrence protested to Coolidge, then Governor, against the savage brutality of the mounted police in the strike. On Feb. 18th this Committee sought an audience with Governor Coolidge to lay before him the highhanded conduct of the Lawrence city authorities in refusing the workers the right to hold parades or meetings, the outrages committed by the Cossacks, and to request his appointment of an impartial committee of investigation.

The Governor, Coolidge, refused even to see this committee of workers. His answer was merely an act of heaping insult upon injury in so far as the striking workers were concerned. Coolidge said that the matter of granting permission to parade was entirely in the hands of local authorities. His letter went on in the familiar strain of the capitalist sanctifiers of the law and order of profits:

"If the police have assaulted any persons without warrant of law the matter should be brought to the attention of the criminal court. The results which you will secure from the great war and from your residence in America will be exactly what you desire to make them. It is my desire that each citizen of Massachusetts should have the equal protection of the laws and be supported to the extent of the power of the Commonwealth in his right to pursue a lawful occupation. I trust that you will co-operate with the duly constituted authorities of the city, state and nation to this end."

Thus did the aspiring Governor tell the workers to look for solace from the very courts that swung the heavy club of injunctions against them, and thus did Coolidge plainly tell the striking workers that they should shut up and put up, as a matter of gratitude to the country, even the Government acting as protector of the "lawful" occupation of strike-breaking.

The Boston Police Strike

Many liberals, semi-Socialists and so-called Socialists have, since the ascendancy of Coolidge to the Executive Chair of the Presidency, passed sleepless nights pondering the legal, formal responsibility of Coolidge in the 1919 Boston Police Strike. These lovers of the pure truth of the law and adamant adherents of abstract justice, whatever that may be, have been saying that it's all a lie, that Coolidge never did break the strike of police, that he is getting away with credit which is not due him, and that he has therefore been "made by a myth."

All of this might be splendid stuff for filling the columns for the liberal gullibles while the reactionary press is rejoicing at the advent of a sworn enemy of the working class into the dominating position of the Government. A brief analysis of the Boston Police Strike shows that Coolidge was the man behind the guns and that whatever strikebreaking was done he must be given the discredit for it. Let us turn to the now famous Boston City Document Number 108. This is the report on the police strike made by the "citizens" committee appointed by Mayor Peters.

The Police Department of Boston is part of the State and not part of the municipal Government. The Police Commissioner is appointed by and responsible to the Governor. In August, 1919, the Boston policemen began to talk strike because of the wretched conditions and low pay to which they were subjected. The police began to talk of affiliating their organization with the American Federation of Labor in order to rally the maximum support of Organized Labor behind them in their fight. No sooner was strike talk in the air than Coolidge hastened to assure the Mayor and Police Commissioner of his support. Apropos of this phase of the strike, Barron's Weekly for August 27, 1923, said:

"But long before the strike the Governor told the police commissioner that he would back him absolutely in his enforcement of the regulations of the service and the laws of the Commonwealth. He brought troops into the city, nominally for drill, and quartered them at the South Armory and the Cadet Armory; therefore were held at the call of the proper officer. The job, technically in charge could get the Governor, the Attorney General, the Governor's secretary, in five minutes by telephone."

The Disorderly Unemployed

"The Unemployed seemed well supplied with money—from a source which should be investigated. Several were drunk.—Daily Paper.

When it appeared that trouble was in the air the Police Commissioner pinned his faith in Herbert Parker as his counsel to answer the attacks of the policemen. This Mr. Parker, it is interesting to note, was formerly a State Attorney General, an intimate friend of Coolidge, and a graduate of the same school of corrupt practices politics headed by the late Senator Murray Crane.

What is more, when Mayor Peters appointed his "Citizens' Committee" to make a report on the strike situation he picked those bankers and big business men closest to Coolidge—so that all would work smoothly in the process of impartial investigation. At the head of this committee stood James J. Storrow of the international family-known banking firm of Lee, Higginson and Co. Mr. Storrow is also a director and officer of the Columbia Rope Co., the Essex Co., the Fairbanks Morse Co., Franklin Foundation, Galveston-Houston Electric Co., La Fayette Motors Co., Nash Motor Co., Railway and Light Securities Co., Springfield Railway Co., United States Smelting, Refining and Manufacturing Co., John R. Macomber & Co., and Wm. F. Underwood & Co.

Among his associates were such powerful bankers and manufacturers high in the confidence of Coolidge as George E. Brock, President of the Home Savings Bank and Director of the Boylston National Bank of Boston; Market Trust; and the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. Mr. B. Preston Clark, director of the U. S. Clark and Co., Treasurer of Passaconaway Co., Vice Pres. Plymouth Cordage Co., and member of the Executive Committee of the United States Shipbuilding Co. and Manufacturing Co. John R. Macomber, a director of at least seven banking and commercial organizations; Patrick A. O'Connell, a director of at least eight banking and commercial organizations; James J. Phelan, of Hornblower and Weeks, and an officer of banks, lumber companies, mining, and trust companies; A. C. Ratshesky, the well known Boston banker, and Fred S. Snyder, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and banker.

Coolidge's game here was to wait for the decisive moment and then hurl hard. Save the Report of the Plymouth Cordage Co., and member of the Executive Committee of the United States Shipbuilding, Refining and Manufacturing Co.,

THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL, THE EMANCIPATOR OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE

Workers Party Is Praised for Its Initiative and Work Since the Fourth Congress

NOTE—In this space each week "THE WORKER" is publishing, in instalment form, a report of the recent Enlarged Executive Committee Meeting of the Communist International. Each instalment takes up a separate question treated by the world gathering of Communists in Moscow, a gathering that received but scant attention in the daily press. This week's instalment takes up the question "Democratic Centralism Misunderstood." It is as follows:

"Democratic Centralism" Misunderstood

Several slogans of the Communist International have been misunderstood and consequently have produced confusion in the ranks of the Communist parties. Thus, the issue of the "United Front" was misconceived, and as a result it was misapplied. "Democratic Centralism" has not been understood in Scandinavia; particularly in Norway. Norway, therefore, played a considerable role at the Enlarged Executive. The lessons that are to be drawn from this case will be wholesome for the entire Communist movement.

The Norwegian Labor Party is an anomaly in the Communist International. It is made up of trade unions, individual membership being an exception. Altho instructions had been given to the Norwegian comrades to transform the party into one of individual membership, they continually asked for time—which was granted. But in seeking for time, the comrades were impelled by two different motives. One faction, of syndicalist origin, is instinctively opposed to centralism, even when it is qualified as "democratic", while all the rights and privileges that democracy has within the field of centralism as understood in the Communist International. The other, an opportunistic and not thoro Communist faction, opposes centralism, because of an unwillingness to accept instructions that will give uniformity to the Communist movement.

The discussion of the Norwegian question, which was the discussion of "Democratic Centralism," revealed several more spots. Within the Norwegian Labor Party is a group of students who issue a magazine called the "Mot Dag." This group is only partially communistic, and yet has exerted considerable influence over the party. This has been an influence that not only demanded autonomy for the Norwegian Party, but also assumed a most dangerous aspect, in that some of its members manifest anti-semitism.

The discussion demanded evidence; and the evidence was produced. Articles, statements, and the arguments made at the Conference itself, particularly by a member of the "Mot Dag" group, demonstrated that an element was at work in the Norwegian party that would be harmful to the whole Scandinavian movement.

What are the limits of "centralism?" What are the rights of "democracy" within this centralism? It is clear that, since the expansion of imperialism on an international scale, it has become increasingly necessary for the proletariat to have an international organization and international direction, if it is to gain power. The workers of the separate countries cannot fight their battles alone against the internationally organized capitalists. It is extremely difficult to differentiate between national and international lines. Is the Ruhr question a matter concerning only the German party, or one concerning the French party alone? Or is it not rather an international question, involving not only these two parties, but the British, Belgian and Italian parties as well?

Who should coordinate the activities of these parties, if not the Communist International? To whom should be left the question of tactics and strategy: the separate parties—if should not together the Communist International, as the sole body that has an international survey, direct the action: Did the Italian question concern only the Italian comrades, and therefore did not concern the Communist International; or did not the very failure of the Communist Party of Italy to act together with the Socialist Party, lead to the violent reaction that dominated Italy and encouraged the White Guards of other countries to follow in the path of Mussolini?

Zinoviev Lauds Workers Party

And surely, as Zinoviev pointed out in his report, the interference and decision of the Communist International in the American question at the Fourth Congress, to the effect that the Communist Party of America, in obedience to the conditions prevailing in the country, must come out into the open, were based on the idea of "democratic centralism" on the rights and duty of the Communist International to interfere in what appears to be purely national questions, when a settlement cannot be effected by the comrades themselves. The American delegates to the Enlarged Executive could only confirm and applaud the fact that the decision of the Communist International was enforced, and solidified the party, which today is working as a unit. Zinoviev praised the activity of the Workers Party of America, which showed that it had the insight and will to lead the workers.

What then are the rights of democracy? There are problems that are purely local, administrative and technical. The Communist International has not and does not intend to interfere in such matters—provided that can be settled within the country itself. But there are times when the Comintern is too mild, too unwilling to interfere. The Comintern has allowed the British Party to carry on without interference too long, so that today the British Party is unable to function. Well might the British comrades have asserted that the British affair is an affair entirely British. But they have taken a different view, and seeing that they cannot settle the matter and that the advice and experience of the Communist International, of the representatives of all countries and not the Russian comrades alone, will serve best in unraveling the entanglements into which they have fallen, they have come to the Communist International for settlement of their problems.

Not grasping the nature of "Democratic Centralism," the Norwegian and Swedish Parties demanded that the members of the Executive Committee of the Communist International be elected by the respective countries, and not by the Congress of the Communist International. This is a species of federalism that is intolerable and inconsistent with Communist principles, which demand that the Communist International be a REAL international and not one composed of federated bodies. It must have in its Executive not men who are responsible to their National Executives, but men responsible to the highest body in the world, the Congress of the Communist International. Hence, the Executive must be composed of men whom the Congress considers fit for directing the affairs of the whole revolutionary movement of the world.

The Norwegian question and the question of "Democratic Centralism" were the occasion of the most heated discussion, in which the Norwegian comrade, participant in the "Mot Dag" group, assumed a challenging and defiant attitude, and accused the Comintern of being responsible for any trouble that has arisen or might arise in the Norwegian Labor Party.

It was discovered, however, that he was riding on a wave of a majority of two votes (94 to 92) which his faction secured at the last convention of the Norwegian Party. Altho his faction also included the syndicalistically inclined comrades, it was clear that the syndicalists and especially their leader are an integral part of the life and history of the Norwegian Labor Party, with characteristics that time and experience will eliminate. In the opposition, however, were a large part of the Party and the Young Communists, who pledged their support to the Communist International.

The united democratization of the Enlarged Executive, who accused the Norwegian comrade, Comrade Falk, of applying disruptive tactics and of being made of the stuff of which fascists are made, because of his anti-semitism, revealed clearly what the stand of the parties of the world is on this most vital factor in international revolutionary action and strategy—"democratic centralism."

Foreign-Born Worker First to Realize Labor Press Necessity

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

The foreign-born worker was the first to realize the necessity of a labor press in this country. The foreign-born worker was the first to establish a chain of labor papers issued in all the European languages in all the principal American centres.

It was not only insufficient knowledge of the English language and a desire to have specific information about the countries of their origin that prompted the immigrants to resort to a press in their native tongues.

More so it was their natural disgust with the English language capitalist press. That crawling of the American paper on its belly before the rich and the mighty; that bending towards the personal and the scandalous, the trivial and the false which makes the average American newspaper a loathsome reading; that concealment of the most essential facts of public life and distortion of other facts which can be concealed no more; that air of superiority and flippant cleverness which in reality is only a disguise for mental impotence and moral degradation,—all this repels the proletarian immigrant even after he has mastered the English language. All this compels him to cling to his foreign language press long after his daily means of communication and even the language of his home use has become English.

It was also natural that the foreign-born worker should have been one of the first to organize Socialist and Communist propaganda in this country. For was he not free from the influence of the American public school which makes it one of its chief aims to glorify private property, wealth, success? Was he not a product of European social life where capital is thought of as the hereditary and natural enemy of labor? Was he not shocked by the contrast of what he had hoped to find in that colossal country under the stars and stripes and what actually confronted him in the factory, in the mill, in the office, in daily life? Was he not abused and oppressed first as a wage slave and second as an immigrant who, no matter what his intelligence, industry, abilities and aspirations may be, is summarily condemned and manipulated with as an inferior being? Was he not sick of that foolish and self-satisfied prattle about "humanizing" the immigrant thru the injection of a cure-all called Americanization?

And so it came about that the foreign-born worker arose as the leader of every radical movement that sprang up in the working class. The militants in the labor unions are, for the most part, of foreign descent. The Socialist Party had, in its hey day, a majority of foreign born workers. The forces of Communism in the first rush towards revolutionary slogans were mostly composed of immigrants. Even now the mainstay of the Workers Party are foreign language federations. The foreign-born worker took the leading part not because he liked it, but because there is an iron clad social law that the group which suffers more acutely revolts more quickly. The foreign-born has done and is doing enormous work for the American working class in that he formulates slogans, paves the way, helps to organize the backward, stimulates thought and creates that atmosphere of uneasiness which is fruitful with proletarian struggle.

Yet at the same time there is a feeling of uncertainty among the militant elements of foreign origin. The fear of futility is hovering over all their radical activity, and the knowledge of their being isolated from the main body of the American working class has, to a degree, impeded their progress. On the one hand they were being hounded by the state institutions, the capitalist "cultural" agencies and the capitalist press as pernicious destroyers of America's most sacred institutions; on the other hand they were frying in their own juice, seldom coming into immediate contact with the mass of the native born workers. On the one hand they had the disadvantage of being persecuted, abused and degraded for their militancy which is, potentially, of great value for the working class as a whole, on the other hand they did not enjoy the advantage of being protected by the working class as a whole, which by right, ought to have effaced the lines of demarcation between the various groups of the working class and made the cause of those groups one great common cause of the American toilers with no difference of origin, race, nationality, language or geographical division.

This abnormal situation is now in the passing. New life is stirring within the native workers. A flood of class-consciousness is spreading among those whom no raving patriot would dare call non-American. The spirit of revolt is abroad. The progress of the Trade Union Educational League among such unions as are mainly composed of native stock is a manifestation of that spirit. The formation of the Federated Farmer Labor Party, whose first convention, July 3-5, thrilled the foreign-born with the spectacle of large masses of native workers demanding the same things which he, the "foreigner" had been advocating for many years, is another great promise. The penetration of the Workers Party into many regions of the Middle West, the North West and the South marks the beginning of a new era, the opening of a new road where foreign and native workers will march hand in hand towards a great common future.

The Daily Worker is one great step on the road of consolidating the forces of the native and foreign-born workers.

The Daily Worker will not be the paper of the English speaking workers only. It will be the friend, companion and leader of the working class as a whole, foreign born and natives alike.

The Daily Worker will create bonds of unity between the various foreign language groups on the one hand, and between these groups and the bulk of the working class on the other. It will utilize the experiences and the achievements of the foreign born militants in order to make the struggle of the entire working class more energetic and more effective, and it will bring home to the foreign born a better understanding and a more correct appreciation of the character and peculiarities of the native American workers.

The Daily Worker will defeat the feeling of isolation from the foreign-born workers, making it evident even to the less enlightened among them that the great American working class, the real makers of America's future, the master of the coming American destinies, is growing ever closer to its foreign born brothers embracing them in one gigantic struggle for power.

The Daily Worker will fight the cause of the foreign born workers against the attempt of capitalist dictatorship to limit their rights still more and thus to enslave them to their own detriment and to the damage of the entire working class. The Daily Worker will in this fight create new points of contact between the foreign born and the native worker.

Never in the history of this country has there been undertaken a publication of such tremendous significance for the millions of foreign born workers. This is why every organization of foreign born workers and every one of their members should joyfully greet the appearance of the Daily Worker.

Misrepresent Extent of Child Labor in the United States

Wholesale misrepresentations of the extent of child labor are being made in the capitalist press.

Special articles in some of the daily capitalist papers discussing the question of child labor try to point out that child labor is decreasing in the United States, when as a matter of fact it is increasing. The basis for the contention that the number of child workers grows less is the last official U. S. census which reported 1,060,000 child workers in 1920 as against 1,900,000 in 1910 and 1,750,000 in 1900. However, it is not pointed out that

The 1920 count was made in January when farming is at a standstill, whereas the 1910 census was made in April when agricultural work begins in most parts of the country, and because of this practically no count was made of the number of children employed on farms which comprise 75 per cent of the total number of child workers.

Every document issued by the U. S. Department of Labor on the question of child labor emphatically points out that the number of children employed in "casual occupations increased especially in industry during the war.

The census does not take count of the children under 10 years of age "gainfully employed" of which there are thousands in the United States, some working under the most slavish conditions.

No mention is made of the thousands of children in almost every part of the country who work during the summer vacations. Yet the census ignores the vast number of child workers employed the greater part of the year but who, because they attend school for a few months or two are not counted as workers.

Reliable authorities estimate the number of child workers in the United States at this time at 2,500,000, a number larger in proportion to the population than any other so-called civilized country in the world.

The Young Workers League of America, the only working class organization in the United States, organized on a national scale, has set itself the special task of organizing as many of the young workers as possible to put up a militant fight against the encroachment of capital into such as the adult workers are being hard hit and are taken up with their own struggles.

Labor Day In Perth Amboy, N. J.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J.—Excitement resulting from the local civil war aroused by the Ku Klux Klan had died down sufficiently by Labor Day so that an extensive throng quietly listened to a Labor Day Address by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker."

The local authorities were at first strenuously opposed to any meeting by the Workers Party, claiming that the least excitement would stir the local populace to new disorders. They were assured, however, that there would be no trouble and the meeting was held.

A Letter from Missouri

Here is an interesting letter from a farmer, a former coal miner, of Missouri, who has just got acquainted with "The Worker." His story is gripping in the picture that it presents of the conditions confronting the workers, in the cities and on the land today. For obvious reasons we omit his name. He writes:

EDITOR, THE WORKER:—Hello, you all! I have a friend here. He has given me several copies of "The Worker" and I have found them very interesting.

I was born in Lancashire, Rochdale, England, 67 years ago. I've been a worker all my life and have seen some ups and downs during my life. You see, I always worked for wages, and a fool ought to know what that means.

I have owned a farm now of twenty acres for ten years and have no mortgage on it either. It is mostly hills and hollows. I can raise a lot of stuff on it, and do. But not for sale to storekeepers, but to neighbors mostly. I am two miles from the county seat; 5,000 population, so I am trying to get by without running into debt, and I can just manage it by the skin of my teeth.

The farmers are in one hell of a trap, hollering like the devil. They are being hit from all sides. But they can't see where the blows are coming from. The farmer is the most pitiful, helpless, unsophisticated boob in all of these United States of America. He works on his farm he works on his farm, has a deed to sell his products from, in an unknown market, and he has never a word to say about the price of his labor product, either selling or buying. And he's so smart, too, he owns a farm. Pshaw, I get disgusted hearing him talking.

He thinks the Communists want to take his farm. The capitalists are making him run like the devil from it with its taxes, mortgages and debts. It is to laugh. I have a deed; no mortgage debts, notes on this place. But I am not going to think I'm going to own me, oh no! I guess the politicians will let me stay on this place so long as I can manage to pay my taxes. And they are going up every year. If I fail, those good old Republicans and Democrats will brutally show me how to get off, by law. The laws they make so they can protect property rights. You know the taxes must come in, or what will become of the politicians.

Oh, it's a great game. I am not apt to go hungry. I can work the place yet; can raise me some eats. I have a nice orchard of 10 apple trees, 4 kieffers pears, 3 peaches, plums, grapes, strawberry, and more Irish and sweet potatoes than I can tell what to do with. Beans, onions, and about six acres of corn, in fine shape. About 250 chickens and a number one Jersey cow, giving now about four gallons of the best butter making milk in this neighborhood. You see, I have the first crack at all this stuff; so you see, I might say I am sitting pretty. Mind you, I very seldom see any money. I never sell. So I govern myself accordingly.

I have read "The Appeal to Reason" for 25 years, and various other radical papers, books, and everything that money I had would buy.

I was dead the first 40 years of my life and did not understand this horrible capitalist system like millions more.

I am lucky if I can get 50c a bushel for big fine ripe apples; 75c a bushel for potatoes, 12c lb. for last year's hen 4 lbs.; 2c lb. for grapes; eggs 25c in trade dozen; wheat delivered 85c to mill. And so it goes all along here.

And now what about the fellow who must give half of his energy? I say, they have the farmer coming and going. And that's why he's running to town; at least his offspring.

I came from England about 1883; landed in Boston. I have been back three times since. I did some time in the British army, but decided to leave. You understand. I was in Dublin, Ireland, and saw some service there; do you understand; transferred to Aldershot. I could tell you some interesting story from then on but it would take up too much space. I worked in the cotton mills in New Bedford, Mass., Rhode Island, Philadelphia, then came west. Fell into the coal mines here, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and to cap it all I raised a family of two boys and two girls. They're off, and I and the old woman are here by our two selves. I and my two sons dug this farm out of the coal mines.

Do you think I don't know what the matter is with common wage slave? I quit the mines Feb. 10, 1919. I know what things are now for the producing class from experience. I just want to let you know who you are writing and who I am. A coal miners official gave me "The Worker." He's my pupil, he's good, too. Well, I shall see him shortly and ask him to get Lovestone's "The Government—Strikebreaker," and I enclose 15c. for Clarissa S. Ware's "The Passaic Textile Strike." Worker." This ought to be interesting.

Respectfully, C. M.

Free Speech in Brockton, Mass.

BROCKTON, MASS.—Authorities here are seeking to prevent all attempts of the shoe workers, who have gone back to work after a long strike, holding public meetings. Attempts to secure any public open air space has so far been refused.

An attempt to secure the O'Donnell Playground for their strike gatherings were held, for a meeting to be addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker" was flatly rejected. Instead a permit was given for a baseball game.

The shoe workers, however, went ahead and had a large Sunday afternoon protest meeting at the Lithuanian Picnic Grounds, and in the evening Engdahl addressed a second gathering in Eagle Hall. The workers of Brockton are planning an Open Forum with lectures every Sunday. They are also preparing to start a labor weekly.

Gompers Aids Scab Drive

Advertisements heralding a drive for the Boy Scouts of America state that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, "agrees" with Harding, Hoover, Pershing and a number of others prominent in the fight against the workers' organizations, that a nation-wide drive for the Boy Scouts is desirable.

This places Gompers with the enemies of Labor, who know that the Boy Scouts are a scab-training organization. The majority of militia men are former boy scouts as are a great percentage of students who scab during strikes.

The Boy Scouts have a long, black record of activities in this country against the workers, especially union men on strike.

The use of Gompers' name in the drive for the Boy Scouts is an attempt to give to this nation-wide, young scab drive the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor.

Besides acting as strike breakers in America, the Boy Scouts in other countries have been used to fight against labor organizations in Europe and have been condemned by the organized workers in the various countries in which the Boy Scouts exist.

A Leading Essayist Reviews "The Government—Strikebreaker"

By JAMES. FUCHS.

Called by the late Max Nordau "one of the most scholarly essayists of the younger America."—Associate Editor, New Pearson's

"What Frederick Engels said, as early as 1878, about German Socialist literature—that it consists partly of pretentious trash ("hoeheres Blech")—is applicable to almost the entire Socialist literature exceptiated, written and published in the United States. With less than a dozen creditable exceptions, the American output of half a century has been the "partie honteuse" of the international Socialist movement. When the W. P. started its career in 1922, I felt morally certain that it would continue the literary traditions of its two predecessors. Jay Lovestone's book, "The Government—Strikebreaker," came to my desk as a pleasant disappointment. Its appearance marks a departure of happiest augury from the era of slovenly compilations, ignorant muckraking and pseudo-scientific treatises turned out by the Bensons, Russells, Spargos, Wallings, Kirkpatricks "et id genus omne." What I like particularly about it, is its circumspect argument, showing in an incontrovertible way, that the government of the United States has reared to be a masked fautor and servant of high finance and is now a cynically open and avowed one. Jay Lovestone has taken the utmost care to make verifiable every fact brought forward in support of his main thesis, by a multitude of pertinent references to persons, incidents, times, places and sources. The author of this rousing argument, competent-ly dealing with one of the most important topics of the day, is a youth fresh from the school bench. Whatever the prospects and the probable future of the W. P. may be, a quiverful of such young fighters would make it a dominant factor in the American labor movement of the nearer future."

"The Government—Strikebreaker"

By JAY LOVESTONE

A book of 368 pages, tells the story of the strikebreaking, union-smashing policies of the U. S. Government in all the big national strikes of the past few years. It lays bare this Government's nefarious activities against the workers in the Rail Road Strike, the Textile Strike, the Coal Miner Strike and scores of lesser conflicts between labor and the employing class.

This book should be read by every worker. It provides an arsenal of incontestable facts, gathered from original sources which condemn the Government as a strikebreaking agency of the employing class, and a ruthless enemy of the workers.

The Socialist Party Draws the Final Consequences

By JOHN PEPPER

The eighteenth annual convention of the New York State Federation of Labor, which was held in Plattsburgh in the very first days of September, showed clearly that: 1.) The reactionary labor officials still hold undisputed sway over the machine of the State Federation of Labor. 2.) The Gompers-Holland clique is calling the organized labor movement of the whole state of New York State Federation of Labor, lock, stock and barrel, to the Democratic Tammany Hall. 3.) The Socialist Party has given up the last steam fight against the capitalist parties, which in Albany it had still staged.

Ten Facts

To prove this terrible accusation we will marshal ten outstanding facts of the Convention:

The first fact. The president of the State Federation of Labor, James P. Holland, introduced and recommended Al Smith as the "next president of the United States."

The second fact was the call for "three cheers for the next president."

The third fact was the silence of those scores of delegates who are Socialist Party members. We do not expect them to have called for "three cheers for the revolution"; but at least they might have called for "three cheers for the Socialist Party's presidential candidate, Eugene V. Debs."

The fourth occurrence was when Governor Al Smith, the big representative of Tammany Hall recommended that the Convention elect James P. Holland as president of the New York State Federation of Labor.

The fifth happening was the unanimous re-election of Holland and the entire reactionary administration. All the Socialist Party delegates in attendance voted for these most reactionary officials of the whole American labor movement. Governor Al Smith issued the order to elect Holland; the party of Hillquit carried out the order promptly. The New York Call of August 30 gives the following report: "The only danger of a difference between the administration and progressives was thus averted today at the convention of the New York State Federation of Labor, when the report of the compensation committee, presented by Curtis, was adopted with the concurrence of the administration.

"The administration slate received a unanimous vote at the caucus late tonight."

The sixth fact was that President Holland lauded with the greatest vehemence non-partisan political action as the only political method for the labor movement.

The seventh point was that those delegates belonging to the Socialist Party, to the American Labor Party, to the old Farmer-Labor Party protested or argued just a little "independent political action." In a word, in order to win the alliance of Holland and his reactionary gang, the Socialist Party gave up the fight against the influence of the capitalist parties within the labor movement. Hillquit's Tammany Hall was beaten in Albany by the real Tammany Hall after it had risked at least a sham fight. In Plattsburgh Hillquit's Tammany Hall did not take up the fight at all. Hillquit was willing to tolerate the real Tammany Hall in the labor movement as long as he, Socialist Party Tammany Hall, is not driven away from the round table of the reactionary labor leaders.

After the Albany conference I wrote the following in "The Worker":

"The greatest lesson at Albany is that against the real Tammany Hall, the petty, So-Tammany Hall is powerless and useless. Albany has definitely shown that the Labor Party of the American working class can be created only thru the struggle against the capitalist parties, and thru the struggle against the reactionary labor leaders. It has shown that everyone who does not fight against the Gompers and Johnston simply delivers the working class to Harding and "All" Smith."

Not a month has elapsed, and already these words have proved to be true. The Socialist Party does not want to fight against Gompers and Johnston, or against the New York agents of these chiefs, thereby helping to deliver the hundreds of thousands of organized workers of New York in the most literal sense of the word to "All" Smith.

But of course, thru this tactic the Socialist Party has delivered itself up to political decay. The example of the Socialist Party shows clearly that a party of the working class can go to ruin thru two tactics. 1. The tactic of the Socialist Party in the past, thru dual unionism, and official self-isolation from the masses of the organized labor movement. 2. Thru a hectic fear of isolation, thru the policy which, in order to escape isolation does not conduct a fight for the systematic, gradual winning over of the rank-and-file, but makes a weak-kneed face for the grace of the labor leaders of various shades and brands.

New York Branch, Daily Worker Campaign, Directors Meet Friday

A meeting of all Daily Worker Campaign Directors of the New York Branches will be held Friday, Sept. 7, at 8 P. M., at Worker's Hall, 208 E. 12th St. The plans of the District Campaign Committee will be outlined at this meeting, and then the problem of selling shares far and wide will be taken up.

leaders preferred to ally themselves in Albany with the Democratic politicians of Tammany Hall. The Socialist Party failed to appeal against them to the rank and file; it did not undertake the fight for the Labor Party. The final result of Albany was therefore: the rank and file scored the Socialist Party, while the reactionary labor leaders threw them out mercilessly.

After the crushing defeat in Albany, the Socialist Party had two possibilities before it. One way was to draw the consequences of this defeat, to ally itself with the rank and file, to start a fight for the Labor Party, in a word, the United Front with the Labor Party and the struggle against the reactionary labor leaders. The Socialist Party, whose real leader is still Hillquit and not Debs, did not choose this path.

After Albany, the Socialist Party drew the consequences in a different direction. In the Plattsburgh convention of the New York State Federation of Labor we witness a Socialist Party which, following the defeat of Albany, is still seeking to maintain an alliance with the reactionary labor leaders at any price. In Albany, the reactionary labor leaders required that the Socialist Party, as a condition of its being tolerated, shall no longer fight against the influence of Tammany Hall in the labor movement. In Albany, the Socialist Party did not as yet accept this condition, and was kicked out. In Plattsburgh, the Socialist Party accepted entirely and absolutely this condition for its toleration imposed by the reactionary labor leaders. Against Al Smith as candidate for president of the United States it did not present its own candidate, Eugene V. Debs. To the contrary, with a single word, criticize the capitalist policy of the Democratic governor and it allowed this policy to be indorsed unanimously by the State Federation of Labor. With not a word or resolution did it protest against the non-partisan policy of Gompers and his agent Holland. The Socialist Party delegates betrayed not only the Labor Party idea, but even argued just a little "independent political action." In a word, in order to win the alliance of Holland and his reactionary gang, the Socialist Party gave up the fight against the influence of the capitalist parties within the labor movement. Hillquit's Tammany Hall was beaten in Albany by the real Tammany Hall after it had risked at least a sham fight. In Plattsburgh Hillquit's Tammany Hall did not take up the fight at all. Hillquit was willing to tolerate the real Tammany Hall in the labor movement as long as he, Socialist Party Tammany Hall, is not driven away from the round table of the reactionary labor leaders.

Many Unions Join United Front Effort

The call for the convention to organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York City, sent out by a provisional committee of unions, trade unionists and influential members of fraternal organizations, has met with a fine response from leading labor organizations thruout the city. Local 22, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Carpenters Local Union No. 2090; Local 54, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; the Amalgamated Knit Goods Workers; Local Union 442, of the Brotherhood of Painters; Local 12, Metal Polishers; Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit, Branches 54, 198, and 59 with 800 members; Workmen's Circle, Branches 301, 564, 251, 373, 87, 246, and Branch 68 of the Independent Workmen's Circle, have already acted on the communications sent them and elected delegates to the conference.

The workers realize that this movement offers them the opportunity to unite the forces of labor for common action in the coming election.

The Federated Farmer Labor Party does not want to create a sect on the political field. It wants to unite the working class in one political organization on the basis of Independent Working Class Political Action, and does not intend to exclude any workers' organization for any other political views that it may hold.

Labor Organizations must not confuse the Sept. 10th conference with the call for a city convention sent out by the so-called American Labor Party which is nothing more than a desperate effort of the Socialist Party and which, according to its own statement, intends to bar a number of labor organizations from this conference. They intend this to be only a gathering to approve the nominations made at a General Council Meeting by a very small number of delegates from labor unions. The nominations are placed under the Socialist Party emblem and know that the actions of the New York Labor Party to send a committee to the Sept. 10th conference with the view to agree upon a common slate of candidates for the November elections, but they refused. They prefer to face the ranks of labor divided.

The Socialist Party and Labor Party will not stop at this. It will continue its policy of undying the labor movement. Help it in this work by making the Sept. 10th conference a truly representative body of labor in New York. Take up the question immediately at your local union and fix a date for it to send delegates to the conference and help build the movement for a united front of labor.

Walker, California Carpenter, Candidate in Tractor Contest

Tim Walker, of Gilroy, a carpenter by trade and well known in union circles on the coast has been entered as a candidate for the second district of the California congress. He says they will throw all their efforts in his behalf and feel sure of electing him.

A second entry is Comrade K. Okraska of Detroit. He is a miner and has been entered by "Pravda." Comrade Okraska is very popular among the Polish workers and especially among the miners in his district. Several Polish papers have already pledged their support to Comrade Okraska. If he is elected it will make two living messages from Detroit, one of the most important industrial cities of America.

Then, we have A. Sitar, also of Detroit, whom the Technical Aid Society entered, and for whose election they are working hard.

At this time when the reactionaries are combining their forces to create anti-Russian propaganda in America, the following message assumes double importance. It will not only serve as an expression of good will from America but it will also act as a rebuke to the treachery of the traitors among the Russian trade unions, when it returns.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN JAPAN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Unemployment and a general decrease in wages has marked the labor situation in Japan, the Department of Commerce announces. Business men in Japan ascribe a large part of the decline in exports to the Chinese boycott.

The Workers Party Today—And Tomorrow

By JAMES P. CANNON

[This is the fourth of a series of articles on party questions by Comrade Cannon, leader of the Workers Party and the Progressives.]

Why did many Progressives break with us, and what does it signify? This is an important question for us because it has a vital bearing on our present tasks and the whole future of the party. The facts are there for the party, for enlightenment and, most of all, for the education of our party as an integral part of the labor movement. In order to find the answer correctly we should have little difficulty in arriving at the proper attitude toward it.

The great mass of the awakening workers whom we classify under the heading of "Progressives"—those who have broken away from the ruling bureaucracy and who have not yet joined the left wing—are not under the control of any organized party. And it is precisely this situation that makes our task of strengthening and extending the communist influence immeasureably easier than that of our comrades in Europe, who are confronted at every turn by the opposition of powerful socialist parties.

It is our good fortune to have already created a clearly defined, if small, communist party which is operating in an intensifying class struggle with a politically undeveloped, but rapidly fermenting labor movement. These features of the American situation give the communists their supreme opportunity. By following the right line of strategy, correctly appraising the other elements and adopting the correct attitude toward them, our party can drive forward with the speed of a locomotive.

Defining the Progressives

In order to talk about the other elements in the movement we must first define and label them. The word "Progressives" is both a definition and a label for those with whom we are principally concerned in this article. We cannot speak of them as only of the classic terms of the class struggle because they are only partly class conscious. From the standpoint of the International proletarian movement they are neither right left nor center. They are not socialists, communists, centrists, anarchists, or syndicalists. They are—Progressives.

This is a very vague word, it is true, but the section of the American labor movement it describes is, as yet, very hazy in its outlook, and its composition is a hodge podge. It is altogether too loose and indefinite a body to be spoken of in precise socialist terminology. And that is the crux of the question.

Progressivism is a revolt against Gompersism that has not yet developed a systematic philosophy or an organized form. It is not as yet a conscious movement and it does not show a uniform development in all parts of the country, and in all the International unions. The administration of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is not the same thing as the administration of the Seattle Central Labor Union. There is some difference between Fitzpatrick of Chicago and Cramer of Minneapolis. The Detroit Federation of Labor is not the West Virginia Federation of Labor. But all of them, and the hundreds of thousands of workers whom they represent and typify, have certain things in common, they are not a part of the Gompers machine, they are not socialists, and they are not communists.

For several years this progressive movement has been drifting more or less fortably along, putting itself more or less formally on record for progressive measures, but creating no real disturbance in the labor bureaucracy. Gompers, the militant reactionary, had little difficulty in beating it back. It was not aggressive enough to strike sharp collision anywhere. It was not submitted to any real tests and, for that reason, it was not easy to discover its real nature.

Their Uncomfortable Position

But the rapid rise of the Workers Party and the organization around it of the militant left wing, have introduced a new and most dynamic factor into the situation. The progressives, who are disposed to move ahead slowly and peacefully, find themselves in a most uncomfortable position. Between the militant left wing, which tries to hurry them forward at a faster rate of speed, and the militant reactionaries, who launch fierce counter-attacks in order to drive them back, the progressives have no more peace. Under this pressure from the left and right the progressive movement is revealing its true character quite clearly.

The recent startling actions of different sections of this progressive movement—the big gas attack here, the panicky retreat there; the open support of the Michigan communist cases at first, and the denunciation of them a few months later, the joint campaign with the communists for the labor party before the Chicago Conference, and the sudden, unprovoked break at the Conference—all these inconsistent actions are nothing more nor less than the first reactions of the progressive movement to the war between the left and right wings in the labor movement, and the propaganda and pressure each side exerts upon it. That is the real meaning of these recent events.

The progressives do not constitute a homogeneous body, and its lack of consciousness and organization robs it of militancy and certitude; rendering it very susceptible to propaganda and pressure from the right as well as from the left. Under pressure from the left it supports the amalgamation movement. Under counter-pressure from the right it abandons even the labor party.—It oscillates between the right and the left, and whenever it has a minute's peace it stops at its own position—mild support of the labor party and Recognition of Soviet Russia, and still milder support of amalgamation.

Chicago Break No Accident

What took place at Chicago was not an isolated, unexplainable accident. The happenings at Chicago merely dramatized and gave prominence to a ferment in the ranks of the progressives which, prior to the Chicago Conference, had unmistakably manifested itself in several localities, where the struggle between the right and the left brought matters to an issue.

If any of us were greatly surprised at what occured at Chicago and Illinois where it was because we had overestimated the political consciousness and stability of the progressives, and expected too much of them. Such shake-ups will serve a good purpose in the long run if they prompt us to make a more thoro examination of the whole question and bring us to a better and clearer understanding of our own task in regard to it. These events will be worth whatever they cost if we do not deceive ourselves as to what really happened and what it signifies.

At Chicago, when the crisis came, our program made the stronger appeal to the great majority of the convention delegates, including a big section even of the Farmer-Labor Party, and they came along with us. But that did not make them communists. With others, the secret pressure of the Gompers machine and the fear of an open struggle with it, were the dominating factors, and at the crucial moment they broke with us. But that single act does not make them reactionaries, even if, in stress of the occasion, for want of an argument to justify their acts, they turned on us with the stale accusations of Gompers, which, in turn, are only a variation of the capitalists' indictments of those who challenge their rule.

An individual amongst them, here and there, may have already consciously decided to go back to Gompers. Even in these cases, however, for the most part, we look for a consistent series of actions to remove all doubt, before we classify them as reactionaries. Likewise there is a strong probability that some of them have made up their minds to go all the way to the left. This also will have to wait for proof. There has been a shuffling of individuals to the right and to the left, in the progressive movement, as a whole, remains practically the same as before the break-up. Pressure from the forward-driving class struggle, and the greater intensification of the war between the right and the left, will be able to substantially change its character.

Our Attitude Toward Progressives

The progressive movement remains practically the same as before, and our attitude toward it must be proportionately the same. First, we must continue to approach the progressives in a friendly and patient manner; and, second, we must exert all our energy to build the communist left wing as an independent power.

The progressives have shown themselves to be a confused and unreliable body, and for that reason we cannot count too much upon any alliance with them; not even as much as we did before Chicago. Our real ability to influence the labor movement depends, first of all, not on an alliance with the progressives, but on our independent power as a party.

Big Campaign for The Daily in Metropolis

The program of activity in New York City in the drive for "The Daily Worker" is being carefully worked out by the Daily Worker Campaign Committee of District 2.

C. E. Ruthenberg, M. J. Olgin, Ben Gitlow, and Fred Merrick, of Pittsburgh, will speak at the Mass Demonstration for the opening of the campaign at Central Opera House, 67th St. and Third Ave., Friday, Sept. 28th. Great interest is being shown in this affair and everything points to a huge success, moral and financial.

The next demonstration will take place at the New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Avenue, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 21. At this affair there will be the unveiling of a life-size bust of Nikolai Lenin, which will be sent as a gift from the American Workers to the Workers of Russia. The closing demonstration of the campaign will take place Nov. 7th with a commemoration of the sixth anniversary of the Russian Revolution and the first issue of an English communist Daily in America. Special features are being worked out for these meetings, details of which will be announced later.

A concentrated organization drive in the Party branches proper and thru the Workmen's Circle and Local Trade Unions, to sell shares is being planned by the committee. Success in this branch of the work will depend to a great extent on the response to the call for a meeting of branch campaign directors to be held at Workers Hall, 208 E. 12th St., Friday evening, Sept. 7 at 8 o'clock. At this meeting the general plan for the campaign will be outlined and then the plans for the work of selling shares far and wide will be taken up.

The main office for the sale of shares in New York has been opened at 208 E. 12th St. Other offices throut the city will be announced as they are opened. Make all checks and money orders payable to Dr. Abraham Markoff, Treasurer, and send to Room 205, 208 E. 12th St.

Finnish Brooklyn Branch arranged special affair for Sept. 13th. The proceeds will be donated in addition to the quota that this branch has been assessed.

Applications for shares can be obtained from Julius Gelfond, District Daily Worker Campaign Manager, at 208 E. 12th St.

Campaign Manager, Daily Worker.

Dear Comrade: Herewith find enclosed applications for four shares in the new English Communist Daily in America and $20 in payment for same.

The announcement that we are at last to launch a daily paper in Chicago is the best news that the exploited workers of this city have heard for a long, long time. In a city where the workers are poisoned by yellow journalism of the Hearst brand and militant imperialism, Fascism and anti-unionism by the reactionary Chicago Tribune, a daily workingclass paper is sure to receive the support of the working masses. A daily workers' paper is a burning necessity and the Workers Party is to be congratulated for deciding to supply that need.

All Workers Must Unite FORWARD FOR "THE DAILY"

Editor, "The Worker":—I am sure that every class-conscious worker likes "The Worker" because it is in the struggle for all the workers, for better living, and for Communism!

The last time I sent four subscribers to "The Worker," and $2 for its support. I will do best I can for the Workers Party. I am a worker; I live with workers. All workers must unite against capitalism! Long live Communism! —J. I., Madison, Ill.

Chicago Labor Needs "Daily"

The decision of the Workers Party of America to launch a daily paper in Chicago is the best news that the exploited workers of this city have heard for a long, long time. In a city where the workers are poisoned by yellow journalism of the Hearst brand and militant imperialism, Fascism and anti-unionism by the reactionary Chicago Tribune, a daily workingclass paper is sure to receive the support of the working masses. Amalgamation in Marine Industry

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—That the "Plan for Amalgamation in the Marine Industry" is taking root amongst the seamen is plainly seen in the following statement made by a transport worker here.

"I took some of the amalgamation leaflets to the headquarters of the International Seamen's Union and later left a number in the reading room of the Industrial Workers of the World.

"I am going down to the dock tomorrow and will drop some in the pool rooms where the boys hang out when not working. To my mind this is an admirable move and one which should take possession of the marine industry.

"We need amalgamation here very badly. The longshoremen with about 4,000 members, white and colored, and the marine engineers are not affiliated with any international organization. It looks to me as if the longshoremen will go on strike in September for conditions and a slight advance in their scale.

"The I. W. W. boys seem to be giving all their time to the marine industry, and are not pushing other branches. I suppose the reason for this is that the sailors are the only ones organized in that particular branch, No. 510. I am a member of No. 450 and, the, only one in this section. This town is ripe for amalgamation."

When the Police Gets Busy

More than a week has passed since a would-be assassin fired three shots in an attempt to murder William Z. Foster. But no arrests have been made.

In New York City, Policeman John E. Egan, in plain clothes, is shot down on the street. Three young men are immediately arrested and put behind bars, charged with murder.

Two thousand men and women see the attempted killing of Foster. The manager of the hall, in which the meeting was held, said he spoke to men who were trying to disturb the gathering. Known gangsters were in the hall and recognized by many. Yet none has been arrested. Not one has even been questioned by the so-called authorities.

In New York City only one young woman says she saw the shooting of the policeman. On her word alone three men face the electric chair.

This comparison shows clearly the values held by the present social system. The capitalists want to kill Foster. Reactionary labor officials are anxious to get him out of the way. His life is held as nothing. Even the Socialist officialdom of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union sneers at him for his heroic efforts to lift the workers to a higher plane of civilization.

But capitalism recognizes in the policeman, Egan, of New York City, one of its own. If Foster were dead the open shop bosses would feel safer. So it is safe to shoot at him. But it is safe to kill a policeman, a cog in the capitalistic order of force and violence, then the whole capitalist social system totters. Therefore the bosses, and their allies in the labor movement, laugh up their sleeves when men like Foster are attacked; but become terror stricken when even a lowly policeman is in danger. Thus it easy to understand why no arrests have been made in Chicago, why the real leaders of labor will not be protected until labor itself protects them. Let all workers learn this lesson of the attempt on Foster's life in Chicago.

Mussolini Goes to War

Mussolini's aggressive action against Greece is the biggest confession yet of the failure of his Fascisti dictatorship. He is trying to keep his place in the sun thru new injections of jingoism into the Italian masses. But Mussolini will fail. Mussolini may start another war, in fact the landing of 5,000 Italians on the Island of Corfu is already the beginning. But Mussolini will not end the war. It will be ended by the workers of Italy.

Mussolini has the support of imperialist France in his new adventure. In fact, the Italian dictator at Corfu, and elsewhere, is copying the efforts of the French in the Ruhr. Poincare wants to collect his indemnity from the Germans. Mussolini wants 50,000,000 lire from the Greeks for the murder of some Italian boundary commissioners. Greece is just as unable as is Germany to pay. The pound of flesh, if taken, will contain no blood.

The Athens government, like Mussolini rule at Rome, has been ruthless in its war upon the Greek labor movement. The trade unions, as well as the Communist Party, have been outlawed. Greece and Italy therefore, the spectacle of two brutal national capitalisms at each other's throats, at the same time tearing to shreds all the high-sounding phrases that constitute the foundation upon which the League of Nations is built.

Agony and misery for the masses of Germany and France, of Greece and Italy, are the results of the imperialist ambitions of Poincare and Mussolini. But the time is near when the workers of these countries will refuse to pay in blood and suffering. They can be expected to build for a bold stroke to achieve their own emancipation. Mussolini is going into the war that means the end of his Fascisti rule. Imperialism marches to its ruin.

To the Workers of Japan

Workers of all nations extend their sympathies to the masses in Japan caught in the murderous grip of earthquakes, tidal waves, fires and famine. It is the men, women and children of the working class in Japan, as elsewhere, who suffer most during these calamities. They live in the most dangerous districts, jammed together in the crowded sections of the Tokio and other great cities, they have the least able to escape. To be sure the imperial palace caught fire. But no serious damage was done. The Prince Regent removed immediately to another place. The Emperor and Empress are safe at the Nikko Summer Palace.

But the workers, once their homes are destroyed, have nowhere to go. They have no summer palaces in the safe places. They are the first victims of famine and plague, the handmaidens of earthquakes. Those scourges will first take their added toll of death from among them. They are the first who are compelled to riot for food, who are shot down by the gendarmes for rioting.

Factories had been built even on the slopes of resplendent Mount Fuji. Eight thousand spinners died at their work places in the Fuji Spinning Mills.

The workers and peasants of Soviet Russia will especially sympathize with the stricken masses of Japan. If Japanese labor had established its Soviet Republic, then the bought press of the world would have found some way to blame Workers' Rule for this new catastrophe. That is what they did during last years' famine in the Valley of the Volga. The Communists were to blame, said these harpies of world capitalism.

But how different with Japan, with its newest capitalist imperialism. Seismic experts can give many explanations of these natural horrors from their hidden lore. Not the least blame will be launched at the capitalist social order. All relief societies will be on the job to gain riches for themselves. The Salvation Army is already planning to collect $5,000,000. We do not remember that it troubled itself about the millions of famine stricken in Soviet Russia. That was an unpopular cause.

When the fire that swept Tokio reached the city prison, the workers incarcerated there, Communist and Socialist victims of the Mikado's white terror, were turned loose with the other prisoners. The Japanese, the workers, will build again upon the ruins. They will erect new cities. It is a good time for the workers to decide that they will build no more palaces for imperialist rulers, that they will rebuild for themselves alone, new cities, a new nation, a new society. These are the only thoughts that can give cheer to the Japanese masses in their present desperate circumstances.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

The Policies of Madness

France has its Ruhr, Italy has its Corfu and the United States has its refusal to recognize the Russian Soviet Republic. These are alike policies of madness. Poincare treads the footmarks of preceding French imperialists. Mussolini believes himself another conquering Caesar, and Coolidge echoes the Hughes-Hoover anti-Soviet declarations, like Harding before him.

The French franc goes down with the German mark, Italians as well as Greeks will be slam in hostilities between Rome and Athens, but Soviet Russia is establishing her place in the world in spite of American capitalism. The workers and peasants of the Soviet Republic have suffered much. But their suffering is passing. It is the workers in America's factories, and the tillers of the fields of this nation, who will continue to suffer, as they are suffering, thru lack of trade relations with the Workers' and Peasants' Republic. Moscow would like to get the products of American factories for the freed inhabitants of her vast domains. But Washington reiterates "No!" Coolidge says Russia must first have a government that measures up to "American standards," which no doubt means a government ruled by bankers, landlords and great industrialists, a government that hamstrings farmers, throws workers into idleness, crushes strikes with ruthless brutality and imprisons those who challenge its power.

Great Britain, in spite of many squeamish objections, receives Christian Rakovsky, head of the Soviet Republic of the Ukraine, for the new Russian envoy to London, but fails to follow suit by surrender with complete recognition. British imperialism, like that in France, Italy and the U. S. A. would rather have starving workers and penniless farmers at home than aid in the reconstruction program of the First Workers' Republic. These are mad policies indeed—for capitalist imperialism. The Russian workers and peasants have learned that the workers and farmers everywhere are gradually learning, that they must get rid of the parasites and blood suckers who have too long fattened upon their agonies. Let all American labor realize that Washington's failure to recognize Soviet Russia is but another burden placed upon the shoulders of the workers and farmers of this country. They will then refuse to support this mad policy.

The Workers Should Worry

The public schools are opening over the land, and as usual, they are too few seats to go around. But Washington, D. C., dollar diplomacy launched the biggest battleship in the world the other day. Intelligent youths do not make good cannon fodder, so why worry about the schools, say the profiteers. That is all the more reason, however, why the workers should worry, more than ever.

Gompers and His Politics

Sam Gompers will, no doubt, use his solicited correspondence with the "Dollar diplomacy" statesman of the Coolidge administration, to bolster up his position against the recognition of Soviet Russia. If Gompers is with Coolidge on the Russian recognition issue, perhaps he is also with the president on his strike-breaking policies. The one position dovetails with the other. America's workers had better find out where their leaders are at and act accordingly.

Hughes Announces Discovery

U. S. Secretary of State Hughes told the Canadian Bar Association at Montreal that he sees an end of economic wars. This is the first time, to our knowledge, that the behind-the-scenes string-pulling of state has admitted that wars were waged for economic reasons. For making such claims, men were sent to prison, and, as in the case of the members of the Industrial Workers of the World, at Leavenworth, Kansas, they are still there. They can't all be secretaries of state and stay out of jail.

If Mussolini Comes

If Mussolini accepts the invitation of Commander Owsley of the American Legion, as he probably will, to address the legionaires at their forthcoming gathering at San Francisco, he will have an opportunity to stand side by side with Sam Gompers. For Gompers has invited Mr. Owsley to the American Federation of Labor convention at Portland, Ore., in October, and will reciprocate by attending Mr. Owsley's gathering at Frisco. No doubt Mr. Gompers will be able to compare notes with the Fascisti dictator and how to make war upon the thinking and progressive elements in the labor movement.

The Greatest Catastrophe

Newswriters speak of the calamities that have come over Japan as "the greatest catastrophe in the world's history." In this they are mistaken, as they are on all problems of magnitude. Not that we would minimize the plight of the Japanese people, but the world war still remains the world's greatest catastrophe. Five years after it came to an end, the world war still has all the peoples of the earth in direst misery, and new wars are in the making. And the world war was the result of a social system that can be wiped away at any time the masses of the workers realize it is in their power, and use this power. Nature is still kinder to man than he is to himself.

Clarissa S. Ware

Clarissa S. Ware, head of the Research Department of the National Office of the Workers' Party of America, died on Monday, August 27th, at the age of 28 years, after a brief illness of a rare disease of the organs of the stomach. Comrade Ware had been in full health and vigor until two days before her death.

Comrade Ware became a member of the Party three years ago. During the greater part of this period she was engaged in research work for the Party, preparing material for the Party literature. She was the author of the pamphlet "The American Foreign Born Workers," and of a number of reports on special phases of the labor movement, some of which were prepared for the Communist International. At the time of her death she was working upon a series of articles on the Ku Klux Klan. She was also editor of "The Review of the Week," a bulletin on social and economic facts issued by the Research Department, which was widely reprinted by the labor press of the country. Comrade Ware also participated actively in the organization work of the Party, having been a member of various local executive bodies of the Party.

In 1922 Comrade Ware went to Russia as part of the Friends of Soviet Russia Tractor Unit; spending six months there working in the famine district of the Ural mountains, undergoing the hardships of living in freight cars and upon famine rations.

In the death of Comrade Ware, the Party and the Communist Movement have lost a loyal, active worker, who because of unusual training and ability was able to render great service to the cause she loyally supported.

Revolt Rumbles in Germany

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE
(European Correspondent of "The Worker")

BERLIN, GERMANY—August days in Berlin. The mark at a million plus. A month's wages for a pair of shoes. Discontent rumbles ready to flame into revolt . . .

At the Grosses Schauspiel Haus—"The Weavers." Good cast. The stage settings reflect general poverty. "before the war there were real shelves with real goods on them—now they must use a painted curtain," so the "caretaker" is told. The great, beautiful, distinctive theatre, different from anything seen in America, a one-time market hall, is only one-third filled.

The best seats cost fifteen cents. Only at the entrances one sees a pitiful survival of the ancient regime. Well groomed old attendants, actually resplendent in full dress (only born flunkeys can wear it impressively) greet one with the usual "hoflichst bitten darf, gnadige Herrschaften". You give him ten thousand marks—one cent.

In the foyers the difference is clear. Schupo (Police) everywhere. No evening dress to be seen. Clothes neat. German clothes always are, even the moment before they fall apart. Not a pair of silk stockings in the house. The careful, discerning eye sees that clothes are worn threadbare and there are too many patches to be hidden. But collars are white and heads held high. At the bar the most expressive example of all. Beer costs sixteen thousand, a weak lemonade lacking in both lemon and sugar costs ten. So they drink lemonade. Hard times indeed in restaurants when the liberal tip drinks lemonade.

Then the play. The actors merit interest the audience more. Between the dearest and the cheapest seats is a complete stretch. Applause may show appreciation of artistic endeavor but here it certainly registers political opinion as well. Gone is the old time, custom of withholding applause until the end of the act. When, to the tune of smashed finery the weavers shout. "The manufacturers are making a poor as we," there is a roar of applause from the cheaper seats and this is met with round hands clapping from the higher priced seats, when old Hilse preaches patience and a reward in Heaven.

The traditional phlegmatic temper of his is profoundly disturbed. Anti-fascist Sunday witnessed "forbidden" demonstrations on an unheard of scale. Open parades were outlawed. A hundred thousand troops and police were concentrated to seal around Berlin to cope with the expected "disturbances." Instead at the halls on all parts of the city held 200,000 demonstrants, all meetings were dismissed at the appointed hour with a result just as impressive as could be desired. Six workers were slightly wounded in clashes with the police, and over a hundred arrested for disturbing the peace.

The German Communists are doing their time and organizing their strength. No more minority putsch. The position of the government becomes more critical every day. The mark can hardly slide any further without disappearing altogether. The small business class is being wiped out, storekeepers direct their chief attacks on the house. The careful, discerning eye sees that clothes are worn threadbare and there are too many patches to be hidden. But collars are white and heads held high. Lessons of the Bulgarian Upheaval Drawn to Attention of Sections of Communist International

NOTE.—We herewith publish the second and concluding installment of the article by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of th Communist International, analyzing and criticizing the lack of aggressive action on the part of the Bulgarian Communist Party, during the recent upheaval in that country, when the Stambulinski government was overthrown. Zinoviev argues that there were many indications that the workers and peasants were ready for definite action, but that the Communist Party failed in providing a militant leadership. Zinoviev says:

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV
Chairman, Communist International

In his article "The bourgeois military upheaval and the Communist Party in Bulgaria," Comrade Kabaktchiev himself writes that in the districts of Radomir, Parzardchik, Pleven, Schumen, Karkovo, Popovo, Russé, Bela Tcherven Breg, Lovetsch, and Dvenovo (there are 89 districts in all) an armed resistance began among the peasantry, and that the strength of the armed groups reached several hundreds in the districts of Pleven, Schumen and Parzardchik.

How then can it be said to be evident, as pronounced by Comrade Kabaktchiev, that the movement was certain of defeat, even when supported by the Communists?" At the beginning the Whites had but slight powers at their disposal—this is acknowledged by Comrade Kabaktchiev himself.

But Comrade Kabaktchiev has another argument ready.

"The working masses of the cities," he writes—"met the upheaval with indifference, even with a certain relief." (19)

The article published by the periodical of the Bulgarian Communist Party, the Novoye Vremiye, goes even further:

"The masses of Sofia met the downfall of the Peasants' Labor government with a feeling of relief and open (!) satisfaction." (20) The article is entitled: "The upheaval and the situation in Bulgaria."

The masses are well known to have a broad back. Everything can be heaped upon them. But if ever there was a case in which the party leaders are to blame, it is this. Even today they are still raising more violently their protest against the bourgeois coup d'etat that against the triumphant Whites. This they justify "theoretically" by the magnificent "thesis," that for the workers there exists no difference between the two "chiefs" of the bourgeoisie. They name this attitude an "independent" one, but it deserves a very different epithet.

This doctrinaire doctrinaire method of estimating the different groups of the bourgeoisie and the petty bourgeoisie is not confined to the leaders of the Communist Party of Bulgaria. In this respect they remind us of the worst sectarian characteristics of Guesdism (of the earlier description). So long as this was merely a theoretical fad, a literary subtlety, it was not a serious matter, but as soon as it determined the policy of the party in a decisive crisis, it became a real disaster to the party.

The number of small holding peasants in Bulgaria, as often confirmed by Comrade Kabaktchiev himself, is 900,000. There are many medium holders (also extremely poor). In this tiny country there are about 600,000 peasants who are potentially our allies. A portion of these was already at the parting of the ways from Stambulinsky to us at the outset of the upheaval. And we are told that we are dealing here with a struggle between two equally pernicious bourgeois cliques.

At the close of the manifesto mentioned the Central Committee of the Bulgarian party takes its conscience with the slogan of the "Workers' and Peasants' Government." But under such circumstances this slogan is a mere phrase, a dead word, a political cretism. This is not the way to fight for the Workers' and Peasants' government. This is not Marxism.

Stambulinsky has been murdered. The heads of his party have been scattered. Some of them have gone over to the Whites. But the peasants remain. We must unite with them to fight against the bourgeoisie. And we cannot do this without freeing ourselves from old sterile views.

The leaders of the Central Committee probably hoped to save the party from blows by their "neutral" tactics. They did not decide to take up arms. The over-cautious leaders sought to shelter themselves from themselves from the impending danger of civil war beneath the torn umbrella of "neutrality." Do not believe the "rumors" of extraordinary measures taken against the Communists, telegraphs Comrade Lukanov. A few days pass and—was it so difficult to foresee it?—the extraordinary measures" become actual fact. The Fascist government hails repressions on the Communist Party, in Pleven alone some hundreds of Communists have been arrested; it is perfectly clear that the party is being driven into illegality. The whole bourgeois press writes derisively upon the "neutrality" of the Communists, and prepares to deal them fresh blows.

It is difficult to imagine a more dogmatic and wrongful attitude, under the given circumstances, than that adopted by the C. C. of the Bulgarian Communist Party. Stambulinsky was the natural enemy of the working class. His policy of repressions against the Communists naturally aroused a justified indignation and a justified hate against him. And it is of course equally true that the heads of the Stambulinsky peasant's party had more and more degenerated into a group representing the interests of the large farmers. But all the same, it is an amazing error, in such a situation as that of Bulgaria, to represent the whole bourgeoisie, including the peasant party, as one genuine who are still sympathizing, or half sympathizing, with Stambulinsky, as "a reactionary mass." At the moment when the Fascists and the heads of the peasants' party came into conflict, it was (and remains) the task of the Communist Party to take up with reasonable honest adherents of the peasants' party, and to join forces with these against the Whites. Was Kerensky no enemy of the workers in September 1917? And yet the Bolsheviki joined Kerensky against Kornilov. And they lost nothing by it. Kerensky was the only one to lose anything. This is the only way in which the Stambulinsky party can and must be opposed.

The attitude taken by the Bulgarian C. C. approaches very closely to a social democratic attitude.

When we say "social democratic," we are thinking of the good old days of social democracy. The present day social democrats naturally go a great deal further. The leaders of the Bulgarian Menshevik (the "broad" socialists), who form a part of the Second International, participate in the Fascist government, and, it would appear, undertake the role of executioners for this government.

In this manner the Second International identifies itself directly, thru the "broads," with the glorious international family of the Fascisti.

The "neutral" attitude adopted by the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Bulgaria was bound to lead into a blind alley. A waiting policy, combined with a gesture of neutrality, at such a juncture, signifies political capitulation.

The fate of the Bulgarian Communist Party is instructive. It is one of the oldest and most powerful labor parties. The Communist Party of Bulgaria can look back upon at least 25 to 30 years of development. It had won over the greater part of the workers and a considerable section of the peasantry in the course of a long struggle against the "broad" socialists. It deprived the "broads" of all serious influence on the workers' classes. In agitation and propaganda work, the Bulgarian Communist Party has accomplished magnificent work (something after the manner of the German social democracy in its best years). The Communist Party of Bulgaria is led by a staff of leaders composed of educated and tried Marxists. And yet—this terrible error, this great disappointment. It is fearfully difficult to proceed from agitation and propaganda to revolutionary deeds.

As early as 1921 (in an open letter dated May 4, 1921) the Executive of the Comintern directed the attention of the Bulgarian Communist Party to its weak points. Impress it upon yourselves—we wrote in this letter—that victory does not simply fall from heaven. Remember that agitation and propaganda alone do not suffice, that we must know how to make the transition to direct fighting measures at the decisive moment.

The second time that the Executive drew the attention of the Communist Party of Bulgaria to its weak points, a somewhat sharper tone was used. This was on the occasion of the last revolution in Greece. The Bulgarian Central Committee, heading the whole Balkan federation, maintained an apathy with regard to the events in Greece perfectly incomprehensible to a revolutionist.

What is the cause of this?

The Bulgarian Communist Party has been gathering its forces during a quarter of a century by means of organizatory and propagandist work. The question was whether quantity would be converted into quality in good time (whether the old Bulgarian party would be able to put an end to the preparatory period of propaganda and gathering of forces, and at the decisive moment, plunge into the fight for the power) incapable of doing this. The leaders of the Bulgarian Communist Party, during the past few months, have devoted much more thought and care to the protection of the "People's Houses," which were attacked by Stambulinsky, than to preparations for the impending struggle. But this was foreseen by Kabaktchiev, and the whole Central Committee. Just as in 1924 many a leader reveals demi-caste.

The Bulgarian Communists are backed up by the whole of the rail-car workers, the whole of the post office and telegraph employees. It is obvious that this could have been of immense significance in the first days of the upheaval. But we remained "neutral."

The Bulgarian Communist Party wanted a revolution "with guarantees." It has never ventured to even think of a war. "On the day following a revolution, Rumania would march against us, etc." But the Whites were not afraid of the Yugoslavs, and they have begun victories, whilst the "caution" of the Bulgarian Communist Party has earned a severe defeat.

It is difficult indeed to have to say all this at a moment when the scorpions of Fascism are harassing the Bulgarian workers. But we dare not preserve silence. The bitter lesson of the political defeat of one of the strongest parties belonging to the Comintern must be turned to account by the other parties. It is thru these severe and trying defeats that real Communist organizations are developed. We had a right to expect something better from the Bulgarian party. But it seems as if we must drink this cup of sorrow to the dregs. It is only from their own errors and defeats that the workers learn.

These are situations in which it is worse for a revolutionary party not to take up arms than to enter into a fight resulting in a defeat. Our Bulgarian Party was in such a situation. To retire behind the cloak of "neutrality" at such a moment means paralyzing one's own powers.

We do not doubt for a moment but that those hundreds and thousands of communist proletarians who have joined the Bulgarian Communist Party, those who have instinctively plunged into the fight and have been left in the lurch by the leaders will know how to save their party. By a new organization of their forces, by the experience of the latter lesson they learnt they will be enabled to more firmly establish their organizations and prepare themselves for fresh decisive battles and thus under the direct fire of the enemy. After all, the civil war is only just beginning. It can only end with the victory of the Communist Party. The slogan issued by the central committee of the Communist Party of Bulgaria, the slogan of the Workers' and Peasants' government, is the right slogan. We do not accuse the Central Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party of fighting under wrong slogans, but of not fighting at all. The slogan of the Workers' and Peasants' government will find excellent soil in the peasantry which has been shaken out of its indifference by the civil war. The Bulgarian proletariat will follow this slogan to victory thru the severe defeats, thru a period of White Terror.

May our Bulgarian Comrades not lose their courage, may they correct the mistakes committed with all speed. But all other Communist parties may learn from the Bulgarian example how not to do it.

Trade Union Educational League Conference Calls on All Militants to Support Drive for "Daily Worker"

The declaration adopted by the Second National Conference of the Trade Union Educational League, Sept. 2-3, at Chicago, calling on all militants in the Labor movement to support the drive for The Daily Worker," follows:

For the Fighting Daily Newspaper

The militant trade unionists of the United States and Canada, assembled in the second annual convention of the Trade Union Educational League, note with pleasure the announcement of the forthcoming publication of a fighting daily newspaper, devoted to the interests of the working class in the struggles against their exploiters.

The Trade Union Educational League welcomes the powerful assistance which the DAILY WORKER will give the Left Wing in its struggles for the regeneration and strengthening of the labor movement.

The announced determination of the DAILY WORKER to fight for AMALGAMATION of the craft unions into powerful industrial organizations; for the organization of the unorganized; for the FEDERATED FARMER-LABOR PARTY, uniting the exploited farmers and workers for independent working class political action; and for the recognition of SOVIET RUSSIA, the first WORKERS AND FARMERS GOVERNMENT IN THE WORLD, should enlist for the DAILY WORKER the enthusiastic support of all militant trade union ists in this country.

The Trade Union Educational League realizing the tremendous significance of the DAILY WORKER in the campaign against the disrupters and betrayers of the American working class—organized and unorganized—pledges its undivided support to the DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE in its efforts to raise a $100,000 fund to establish the DAILY WORKER by November 7th, 1923—on the Sixth Anniversary of the Russian Soviet Revolution.

Labor Supports Workers Party in Fight for Rights

By JAY LOVESTONE.
(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Hundreds of workers here and in McKeesport attended the free speech and civil rights rallies of the Workers Party, in the face of official terrorism in the latter town.

In Pittsburgh, the Lyceum Theater was filled. The meeting, pres ded over by J. S. Otis, of the Machinists' Union, was addressed by Andrew T. McNamara, business agent of the Machinists, who spoke to the audience as an officer of the American Federation of Labor, and called upon them to support unreservedly the fight of the Communists for freedom of speech and meeting. The same appeal was made by the Reverend Father A. Kasinec, of Braddock, the Catholic priest who distinguished himself in the 1919 steel strike by his firm support of the striking workers.

Fred H. Merrick, District Organizer of the Workers Party, spoke on behalf of the Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of Western Pennsylvania and asked the support of the Communists who are soon to go on trial in Pittsburgh. The audience was stirred and pledged itself to support the authorities and press for the garbling his speech, read from the manuscript. He discussed the program of the Workers Party for political and industrial action, and urged the workers to organize for the building up of a Communist order of society. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal, was given the ile by Robert Dunn, acting chief of the American Civil Liberties Union, which is cooperating with the Workers Party in the free speech fights. Dunn, in an effective and humorous speech, pointed out that the latest "red scare" press stunt of searles had fooled no one. The American Civil Liberties Union was always ready to defend anyone regardless of Illinois Coal Miners Find Yellow Streak in U. S. Senator from Iowa, Feared to Speak with Alex Howat

(Special to "The Worker")

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—U. S. Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, lost $200.00 and the esteem of 4,000 miners of Springfield, Illinois, when he accepted the advice of Sam Gompers, John L. Lewis, so he got in touch with his master, Sam Gompers, who in ing of miners on Labor Day, thus violating his contract and losing a fat check plus expenses in the bargain.

Alexander Howat was scheduled to speak with the Senator. This news sent a cold shiver down the yellow spine of John L. Lewis, so he got in touch with his master, Sam Gompers, who in turn ordered his errand boy, Walker, president of the State Federation of Labor, to inform Brookhart that to speak on the same platform with Howat would be considered an unfriendly act by the Grand Dukes of the American Federation of Labor.

Brookhart Takes Orders From Gompers.

Brookhart listened and obeyed the Gompers' command. The miners were disgusted. They know Alexander Howat as a man who has fought the battles of labor, not in the public press or on the floor of the senate but on the industrial battlefields of this country. They know that he has gone to jail for them and they know that he is willing to do so again while his enemies among the labor fakers make common cause with the capitalists.

The large audience at Springfield did not appear to miss the Iowa senator. Howat spoke for over two hours and was received with enthusiasm. Brookhart had contract to speak in Taylorville on the same day, also with Howat. It took a good deal of persuasion on the part of the miners to induce him to keep his word though it cost two hundred dollars to hear him speak. He finally agreed, presumably because he had lost enough for one day for his obedience to the orders of Samuel Gompers and John L. Lewis.

The "friends of labor" are a most unreliable lot. But everything in them falls by the wayside—obedience another nail in the coffin of non-partisan political action, and gives a big boost to the movement for working class political action.

Dirty Politics and Village Ignorance in Oklahoma Shows Roots of American Fascism

BY HARRISON GEORGE.
(Special to "The Worker")

TULSA, Okla.—Out of the witch's cauldron of political intrigue, religious and racial fanaticism, back-country ignorance and a town-wide graft ing scheme to profit on these dark cross-currents of stupidity and crime, the fact arises that, whether inside or outside the Ku Klux Klan, the humble workers and country folk have been the victims, both of the klan and the dishonest politicians supposed to be "prosecuting" it.

While the Communist workers of this country, organized in the Workers Party, are hounded by William J. Burns and the unspeakable Daugherty of Marion, Ohio, fame; prosecuted under the "criminal syndicalism" laws of various states, which laws are allegedly aimed at forbidding just such violence, force, beatings and lynchings as are the nightly desires of the KKK; the Klan leaders go boldly about the country gathering in, their graft and inciting their dastardly deeds of vandalism and murder.

With Tulsa under martial law by order of Governor Walton, who, having betrayed and lost the support of the radicals, now evidently seeks to force support out of the Klan as a price for withdrawal from the "occupied zone"—after the manner of imperialist France—and while a local "cyclops" of the Klan who pays himself $6,000 a year walks the streets and "dickers" with the governor's agents, three laborers whom this "cyclops" incited to kidnap and whip an old German farmer for the awful crime of "tearing up his bible," are the only ones the powerful arm of the law could find to convict of lawlessness and send to the Oklahoma penitentiary.

Since the open betrayal of the radical farmer-labor forces which elected him, and since the stirring attack on the nest of yellow-socialists and political fakers made by an old time revolutionary socialist, Stanley J. Clark, upon Governor Walton, Oscar Ameringer, Luther Langston, Pat Nagle, Sheldon and other political crooks in control of Oklahoma politics, the governor has felt it supremely necessary to get the support of the KKK. And to have something to trade he clamped down martial law on Tulsa, interfering with the Klan's evening pastime of flogging men, and women as well, in a large field where hundreds gathered to watch the sport with all the sadistic pleasure of a Spanish bull fight.

But those who are beaten, who were always common folks, poor people, workers and small farmers without influence, and the hulk of the mob who were also of the type of village ignorantmasses, witch-burning puritans and Henry Dubbs among the exploited classes, are both victimized by the KKK, which functions as the Chamber of Commerce on the night shift. Then when the "law" swoops down the poor dupes among the workers are the ones to go to the penitentiary while the Kleagles, Cyclops and so on, continue to live in safety and luxury while trading political favors for official protection.

Oklahoma is outside the currents of communist ideology that are sweeping the more populated and cosmopolitan centers, but the communist can see in the Oklahoma situations all the typical elements which make the soil and feed the roots of the most terrible of menaces to organized labor—Fascism. Unless the sprouting sword of communist propaganda cuts thru the confusion and ignorance of workers and farmers, not only of Oklahoma but of the whole agrarian area of the United States, Fascism may blossom under the wing of the KKK in the period of depression and discontent that seems soon to come.

Gompers' Forces Fight the Labor Party in Illinois

The Illinois State Federation of Labor was in session at Decatur at this issue of "The Worker" went to press. Early reports had indicated that all the pressure of the Gompers' machine was being brought to bear to steam roller and crush the demand for a Labor Party. Sam Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, had sent a letter on from Washington, denouncing the move for a Labor Party as a Communist conspiracy. At press time "The Worker" received the following telegram:

* * *

By JOSEPH MANLEY
(Telegram to "The Worker")

DECATUR, Ill.—Heated fight occurred today (Sept. 12) unexpectedly on resolution passed by the Chicago Federation of Labor, in favor of the Labor Party.

Delegate Lillian Herstein, Chicago Teachers' Union, spoke in favor. President John H. Walker and Secretary Victor Olander opposed the resolution. Secretary Olander, a Gompers' man, made a long speech branding the resolution of the Chicago Federation of Labor as Communist propaganda, as a resolution supported by Communists. The convention recessed with the announcement by President Walker, as chairman, that Delegate William Z. Foster would be recognized immediately on reconvening.

The Trail of a "Friend" of Labor

The Story, in Detail, by Which Labor Fakers Betray the Workers

In Springfield, Illinois, the fakirs agree with Gompers' "non-partisan" policy. They've applied it with such success that there is extensive interlocking between the municipal politics of fakirs and union leaders—most of the union skates hold city jobs and everbody is taken care of—except the unorganized rank and file and city employees of course. There are not even more per capita graft politics rankled the coal diggers' locals from the surrounding terrain to join in the Central Labor Union. These course diggers are common working men and trouble resulted. They organized unions among the teachers, street cleaners, and other city employees, who at once struck for decent wages.

It was very sad and ungrateful. Here union men striking against city officials, who were also union officers. It was intolerable that their demands should be granted and on the other hand for the union officers to smash these newly formed unions would lead to very painful criticism in the Central Labor Union from the coal diggers. An appeal was sent to Sammy, who solved the problem with his usual silken diplomacy. He revoked the charter and then incorporated the Central Labor Union, keeping the respectable elements and leaving out the unruly coal diggers. The union skates then smashed the unions of city employees and blacklisted the leaders.

In this neighborhood there are more coal diggers than men of all other crafts together, and they had their taste of a central group, so they organized a council of their own, composed of delegates from the United Mine Workers locals. This council naturally did not love and admire the union smashers of the Central Labor Union. The old Central Labor Union officers had itching palms and an empty treasury, so they laid their plans for a Labor Day meeting, to be followed by a dance, and they did their best to peddle tickets for both. The Miners' Council announced a Labor Day mass meeting, to be followed by a dance and refreshments—everybody free. They made a contract with Senator Brookhart, an Iowa "radical and friend of labor," and agreed to pay him $200 for an earful of eloquence. The old Central Labor Union group at once advertised that Brookhart was to speak at their meeting.

Brookhart arrived Sept. 2, and at once called up Freeman Thompson, President of the Miners' sub-district, and told him that the officials of the Iowa State Federation of Labor and Iowa Mine Workers had warned him not to speak from the same platform as Alex Howat. Now Howat has been a friend and file for twenty years and suffered slander, wrong and imprisonment for them, while Brookhart's total achievements consist of a recommendation that we recognize Russia and a protest at the disfranchisement of the parasites. Certainly Thompson told him that if a bunch of fakirs could influence him, he had nothing to sell the miners but was worth exerting and they did not want him. With this flea in his ear Brookhart hastened to Taylorville, Ill., at which Labor Day show he was also to speak, and laid down his conditions there. "Billy" Deck, another digger, got his message and hastened down to explain to the senator how small an insect he is, compared to Alex and pointed out that there are factions in the senate, too, and Brookhart heads one, so why this soreness?

"Ah," said Brookhart, with a rapt look, "but I believe in law and order and Alex doesn't."

"Billy" Deck was more lenient with the senator than Thompson, and told him Alex spoke in the morning, and if he wished to sneak, when Alex had finished, he could, but they'd not turn Alex down for the whole damn senate. Brookhart decided to swallow his pride and pocket this $200 check as he had lost the other one.

Alex did not fail either in Taylorsville or Springfield to point the moral. There is a professional "friend of labor", so indifferent to labor that he has no knowledge of the biggest controversy the United States labor movement has ever seen—that is, the growing rebellion of the masses against their corrupt and wooden headed officials—or else, if he does know the details of the controversy so venal as to side with Lewis and Gompers. He is willing to speak free in the local churches, but when he deals with the workers, who produce the food and coal and steel whereby he lives, he demands a robber's fee.

It is amusing that at the Springfield Central Labor Union "mass meeting" (five men, seventeen policemen and three babies) Emmet Flood, the American Federation of Labor organizer, who did the dirty work in expelling the miners from the Central Labor Union, and who was the only speaker the fakirs could get, tho they tried for Gompers and Lewis, denounced Brookhart bitterly for "advocating other forms of government."

No man can serve two masters—either he serves the fakirs, and nothing they do can be too corrupt or treacherous, or he serves the rank and file and no aim of theirs can be too revolutionary.

Charters Are Granted New Party Units

Applications for charters for new branches of the Workers Party are coming to the National Office daily as a result of the decision of the party to begin a membership drive.

Many of the foreign language federations are actively prosecuting the work of organizing new branches. During the last few weeks five of the South Slavic branches have been organized and a number of new Hungarian and Italian branches.

The most gratifying results, however, are in the fact that new English branches are being organized. Monday, Sept. 10, the National Office received applications for three charters for new English branches, one at Joliet, Ill., one in Cannonsburg, Pa., and one at Baltimore, Md.

These applications indicate the possibilities lying before the party if an aggressive organization campaign is carried on.

We hope the organization will push heartedly go forward with the task of organizing 10,000 new members by Jan. 1.

Italians and Greeks Unite in United Front at Big Anti-War Meeting

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK CITY—An impressive anti-war meeting attended by over two thousand was held jointly here by the Italian and Greek workers at the Manhattan Lyceum, in protest against the high-handed action of Mussolini against Greece, heading straight towards a new war.

The meeting was arranged by the Italian workers to show their solidarity with the Greek working-class. The hall was packed to the doors. It is many a year since the Italian workers of New York have been able to organize such an enthusiastic and well attended meeting. There were a great many Greek workers present.

On the platform were the representatives of various Greek labor organizations, besides our comrades of the Greek Federation of the Workers Party. The meeting was presided over by Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. The speakers were Ludwig Lore and Andrew Prest of the Workers Party, Nakos and Arvanitas for the Greek Federation of the Workers Party, Giovanni Sala of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, Carlo Tresca and Allegra for the libertarians, James Oneal, Socialist Party. All the speakers denounced bitterly the imperialistic and terrorist policy of Mussolini.

The present Greek fascist government was also severely criticised by the speakers, for it was Colonel Metaxas the Greek Mussolini who, a few weeks ago suppressed with blood and violence the general strike of the Greek workers.

10,000 Workers Join Big Protest in New York C

(Special to "The Worker.")

New York City.—The Trade Union Educational League held a very large demonstration here in Union Square, opposite the Jewish Forward building, on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 8th. Ten thousand workers jammed the square and listened for hours to the speakers denounce against the attempted assassination of Wm. Z. Foster and against the policies now going on in the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union.

Ben Gitlow, editor of the Fr spoke on the league program pointed out to the audience that reactionaries were expelling the herents of the T.U.E.L. program because they were unable to meet issues raised by the T.U.E.L. gram in the Unions.

Gitlow pointed out that assassination of Foster and a hundred leaders of the left wing would not terminate the left wing movement in the unions. If Gompers and crowd want to get rid of Lenz, let them offer something better to the American labor movement than Amalgamation. Organization of the unorganized and the establishment of a labor party.

Olgin Scotches Forward Lies

M. J. Olgin spoke in Yiddish shooting that took place and to the intense amusement workers present ridiculed the fabrication on the attack by the Daily Forward, Socialist sheet ignored all and originated in its own mind Foster himself arranged shooting.

Foster was introduced by Olgin received a tremendous ovation. torial that appeared in the reac of "Justice," official organ Internecine Ladies Garment Workers' Union, that ended up by putting a number of questions to him.

Foster Answers Intimations

The questions were answered Foster as follows:

How did it happen, asked tice," that in the office of the Interna tional has a receipt signed by Foster for $60,000 donated to the strikers instead of $60,000 actually donated by the organization. How Foster account for the $60,000

Foster in his answer pointed that the money was not donated directly to him but to the Amalgamated Federation of Labor. That the Strike Committee had decided to send testimonials to the organizations that had donated money to the strikers. Not knowing how much money The International had donated Foster wrot to Baroff who informed him that their organization had donated $65,000. That accounts for the fact that on the testimonial the sum of $65,000 appears. Later Foster found out from the A. F. of L. office that the International had donated only $50,000, whereupon he immediately wrote to Baroff for the testimonial back to him so that he could correct the mistake. This request was never complied with.

League Financed by Workers.

"Justice" wanted to know how much salary Foster received as secretary of the Trade Union Educational League. Foster answered that he received $40 per week.

"Justice" wanted to know other sources of income Foster had. Foster replied he had none but salary of $40 per week.

"Justice" wanted to know much money The League has. Foster informed his audience that The League published a yearly statement of its expenses, as "Justice" and "The International" could see the books if they desired and that the total expenses including the meeting expenses for the year amounted to $19,000.

"Justice" wanted to knew where Foster got the money to make trips all over the country. Foster replied by pointing out how his trip to New York to attend the Rutgers Square demonstration was paid for by raising up a collection among the workers who attended. The workers who sympathized with his work and the line of the League paid for his trips.

Foster Challenges Sigman.

Foster invited Morris Sigman, president of "The International" to appoint some one to act on a joint investigation committee to investigate the Lefkowitz shooting.

The meeting adjourned with great deal of enthusiasm. The demonstration in front of the Forward building definitely established the fact that the rank and file of the New York City stands solidly behind the militants. The 10,000 workers present were a fitting answer to the attempt to kill Foster.

Minnesota Conference Plans Unity of Farmer-Labor Forces

By H. M. WICKS
(Special to "The Worker")

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Minnesota State Conference of farmer-labor elements culminated in victory, for the principle of the unity of these great divisions of the producing masses and crushing defeat for the reactionaries and political adventurers of all shades who tried to disrupt this conference.

For a week previous to the conference events transpired with such bewildering rapidity that no one could predict what the next day would bring forth. The least of the attacks upon the conference was the consistent

The Communists and the Trade Unions

...ed Press ...ies to Attacks ...y Miners' Officials

By C. E. Ruthenberg

The officials of the United Mine Workers of America, the Associated Press and the New York Times have combined in a campaign of slander against the United Mine Workers' officials and the Communists.

The latest attack is by Carl W. Ackerman, editor. The Federated Press exposes the international character of this campaign. Ackerman's article every one would laugh at if the world-famous author, John L. Lewis or Sec. Green could not have read portions of that writer before publication. It is to break into print that could not have forgotten that United Mine Workers of America are so many dictators, publicity agents of the miners' union have practically indorsed. The Federated Press and repeatedly supported with their time and money and are still doing so at the present time. The charges against the Federated Press are made with such complete disregard of easily verified facts by any means as these the writer is using a private grudge and had not it by the responsible officials. For example, the writer in his effort to make a case says The Federated Press serves approximately 200 newspapers, publications and magazines in Europe and about 120 newspapers in America. The fact is that we serve less than 100 in America and not more than 100 in Europe. These are facts we are always been willing to give out and have frequently published them in our printed reports.

We are accused of being financed and dominated there Moscow. As a matter of fact we are a labor news service, controlled solely by 90 American publications and magazines in America and about 120 newspapers in Europe

Delegates to Bar Association Display Their Ignorance at U.S. Bar Association Meeting

(Special to "The Worker" by Our Own Correspondent)

...ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 3.—The big guns from the leading ...ers of the country, such as William Howard Taft, John W. ...ormer Secretary of State, former Attorney ...eneral of the United States, former Governor ...of the State of New York, and others, were on hand ...of the Monroe Doctrine in relation to ...and Santo Domingo, so discreetly ...from the floor of the United States Senate. ...Latin-American republics that ...sometimes resorts to the ...extremely unpleasant task of bringing the ...lings of civilization to them at the ...nts of bayonets. But as for con...gues, far be it from his desires to ...any territory.

Like Torquemada, the pious dungeon builder of the Holy Inquisition in Spain, who burned the bodies of people that their souls might be purified by the flames of the Auto da Fe, Highest, Mr. Hughes sheds the blood of these backward peoples that the blessings of capitalist civilization may be bestowed upon them. The end justifies the means!

In spite of this considerate treatment at the hands of this eminent Baptist layman, who is in every inch a Christian, the ingrate natives and their leaders refuse to see in the generosity to cast aspersions upon the sacred Monroe Doctrine, which is at once the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights of these nationalities. Mr. Hughes brought tears of compassion to the eyes of his hearers when he related the pathetic fact that there are many natives of these countries so debased that they actually assert the policy of the United States government is one of interference in their internal affairs.

To clarify this distressing misconception on the part of the natives, Mr. Hughes quotes no less an authority than the peerless Presbyterian layman, Mr. Woodrow Wilson, who while President, asserted in an official document; "The Monroe Doctrine was proclaimed by the United States on her own authority... It always has been maintained and always will be maintained upon her responsibility." Therefore it is a piece of brazen impudence on the part of any nation enjoying the benevolent protection of the Monroe Doctrine to dare question the intent of the United States government in applying that doctrine.

Like Mr. Taft, the Premier talked much about the sacred principle of Justice, that bedraggled hag that has been prostitute to every political adventurer since the dawn of recorded time. Like all apostles of things as they are, the American Bar Association imagines that the sacred, abstract, eternal entity called Justice—a universal principle that never changes and has always been the light which will usher in the millennium. In this lawyers' conference the word was handled without the sense shudder that characterized conventions of the yellow Socialist Party a decade ago.

Beneath all the verbiage of the Hughes address one thing was certain and that was the fact that the United States has decisively entered upon a career of Latin-American conquest and has for its purpose the complete subjection of all Latin-American countries to the financial domination of the Monroe Doctrine, he gently but firmly impressed upon South American countries that the sane action of theirs would ever be permitted to hamper the development of the United States. After this thrust of the mailed fist he then endeavored to soothe their ruffled feelings with platitudes about Justice. The most interested listener was Dr. ZaBallos of Argentinia who sat in the front row and seemed astounded at the vociferous applause which greeted the imperialistic sentiments of Mr. Hughes.

A Learned Profession.

Our American schools teach children that there are three learned professions—law, medicine and the ministry. This superstition is fostered by the capitalist press and in Minneapolis column after column of eulogy of this convention was published to impress properly upon the populace the singular honor of having these men consent to assemble here.

But when we view the mental make-up of this convention in the lights of science and history the leaders of this profession appear in their true colors. During a whole week of conferences, speeches and exhortations, not one person displayed the slightest symptom of understanding the problem the legal profession is supposed to deal with every day—that of crime in relation to society. In the course of the past hundred and fifty years the new science of criminology has grown to one of the greatest achievements of history. It is one of the most profound of all sciences. The most painstaking labors of innumerable thinkers has made criminology what it is today, yet not one of delegates to this convention displayed an understanding of the achievements of this science.

Undoubtedly some of them have heard of the giants of the classic school of criminology—Cesare Beccaria, Francesco Carrara and Enrico Pessina. None of the assembled lawyers has ever approached an understanding of the work of these men. A few of them have read vaguely about Lombroso. But beyond Lombroso none of them even know the names of those who have built up the modern school of criminology. The names of Lacassagne and Marsuvrier of the brilliant French school, called the school of the environment, are unknown to the best of them. As far as the American Bar Association is concerned, Frederick Engels, Paul Lafargue, Enrico Ferri and the greatest authority of them all, Willam Adrian Bonger, have all lived in vain.

The sole function of this learned profession is to formulate plausible excuses for the excesses of capitalist society. Their job is to devise means

WE MUST MAKE THE PARTY GROW

Ten Thousand New Members in the Next Three Months Is Our Goal

To the Membership of the Workers Party of America:

COMRADES:—The Central Executive Committee of the party has set the tasks of the months of September and October. The success or failure of the DAILY WORKER and our organization depends upon the work we do and the results attained in the party in the next two months.

During this year our party has made great strides forward in establishing its influence among the workers. It has won the confidence of those hundreds of thousands who accept the leadership. From a sect it has developed into a political party. We have become a factor to be reckoned with.

During this year gone by we have devoted our energies to the work of agitation and propaganda. Through this we have created the favorable sentiment for our party. We are now surrounded by a groups of workers sympathetic with our movement; many of whom are ready to join and will join our party if they are invited to become party members.

While we have been carrying on this work of agitation and propaganda and conducting our political campaigns WE HAVE NEGLECTED THE WORK OF ORGANIZATION. We have not brought into our party the workers who are ready to join. We have not increased our membership as has not increased in proportion to our political influence and the agitation and propaganda we have conducted.

ORGANIZATION CAMPAIGN IMPERATIVE.

Before we can make further progress as a party we must remedy this condition. We must organize. We must weld into the work of building a stronger party. We will consolidate and solidify our party through a DAILY PAPER, through which the party can reach into the membership and through which the party can MULTIPLY ITS STRENGTHEN THE PARTY THROUGH ADDING AT LEAST TEN THOUSAND MEMBERS TO OUR RANKS BEFORE THE FIRST OF NEXT YEAR.

The party still has enemy gangs of workers the fear of bringing new members into the party. There is still a hang over of the sectarian past. Some members feel that they can not invite workers into the organization. Others have not fully drilled into the mission of Communist theories. We cannot build a Communist mass party while holding such ideas. We must bring into the party those workers who accept our principles, even though they may not yet be thoroughly grounded in Communist theory. It is our task, through work of education within the party, later to educate them in the basic principles of Communism.

Our party membership must grow in numbers. We must get strong enough for the great tasks which are before us. We must have a large number of members to draw upon for party activity. We must have more speakers, more writers, more active workers and leaders in the trade unions. WE CAN ONLY GAIN THESE THROUGH A MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN—A MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN WHICH WILL BRING INTO THE PARTY EVERY WORKER WHO IS RIPE FOR PARTY MEMBERSHIP.

ORGANIZE FOR MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

While conducting the campaign for the DAILY WORKER the party must also conduct a campaign for membership. Each branch, each section, each unit must have a drive for membership. Each branch at each of the party general committee, district committee and functionary meeting must report what it and sub-committee is doing to secure members. Every member must be active so that every member of the party brings in a new member.

Here are some of the things that should be done as part of the campaign:

1. Organize public meetings at which the principles of the party are explained and those present are invited to join the party.

2. Secure the services of Comrades Ruthenberg, Cannon, Bedacht, Gitlow, Lovestone, Wicks, H. M. Wicks in the Rocky Mountain District, Olgin, Wagenknecht, Ford, Browder, West and Comrade Max Bedacht. Want as part of the membership drive.

3. Have every member bring another party member, new workers, to a meeting during September or during another party campaign now written. Invitations for membership are to be issued at all such meetings and have those present join the party. Secure the name signed, collect the initiation fee and dues for the next month at the time of the meeting. Have a check-up of your membership at every meeting. Have each member request the name of workers he knows who are ripe for party membership and elect a committee to systematically canvass these workers and invite them to join the party.

4. Have every member of the branch pick out two or three workers who are in the trade unions and systematically supply them with literature and invite them to party meetings with the view of securing application for membership.

5. Secure through your district office a list of the readers of the papers in your city and visit these readers with the view of inducing them to join the party.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE LITERATURE.

The party papers will devote their columns to the membership drive during the next three months. In addition the National Organization Bureau will issue a special eight page leaflet, illustrated with cartoons on "Why the Worker Should Be A Communist and Join the Workers Party." The party will conduct a local and national argument for Communist principles and membership in the party. Sample copies and order blanks will be sent to each branch during the next few days.

Comrades—OUR PARTY MUST GO FORWARD TO GREATER ACHIEVEMENTS. WE MUST BUILD THE ORGANIZATION THAT CAN CARRY THE BURDEN OF LEADERSHIP OF THE COMMUNIST MOVEMENT IN THIS COUNTRY.

OUR MEMBERSHIP IS TOO SMALL TO GO FORWARD TO GREATER GAINS AND GREATER VICTORIES. WE MUST ADD TO OUR ARMY. WE MUST MOBILIZE NEW FORCES FOR THE STRUGGLE. LET US ADD TEN THOUSAND MEMBERS AND THEN PUSH ON. LET EVERY MEMBER, EVERY BRANCH, EVERY CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE, EVERY DISTRICT COMMITTEE AND FEDERATION BUREAU DO ITS PART.

Fraternally yours,

C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

Detroit, Mich., Sees Ukrainian Fascisti in Decisive Defeat

(Special to "The Worker")

DETROIT, Mich.—Sunday, August 26th was a "Jonah Day" for the fascisti elements in the Ukrainian population of Detroit. The fascisti elements, who long for a return of czardom, landlordism and serfdom for the Ukraine of old days received a stern admonition, issued a call for a mass meeting to which the Ukrainian Soviet government sent a fraternal salute in such numbers as to pack the Michigan Avenue hall.

These men and women are fairly well informed about the conditions in their home land thru papers published in Ukrainia and thru correspondence with relatives and friends on the other side.

Sevchins Is Denounced.

The committee which had arranged the meeting were bitter in their savage denunciation of Soviet Ukrainia. They referred to Lenin and Trotsky, and the leaders of the Ukrainian Soviet government in terms of the utmost contempt. At first the audience remained unresponsive, but as the denunciations became much bitter, murmurs of protest came from all parts of the hall, which finally crystallized in a demand for the election of a chairman and secretary.

The arrangements committee did not dare oppose this demand of the audience, and after the election, E. S. Kucznir, the secretary, introduced a resolution that there should be reports of a half hour each from the "pros" and "antis," after which the meeting was to be thrown open for general discussion. This motion was carried by an overwhelming majority, whereupon one Lata, recently returned from Europe and who was to make the report to the fascisti refused to proceed, and left the hall with the arrangements committee.

Police Appear on Scene.

Kucznir then delivered a speech, giving the facts about the Soviet government of Ukrainia. He had spoken less than a half hour when Lata and his committee returned, accompanied by a couple of policemen. The police had been told that a bunch of bolsheviki were trying to break up the meeting. The police inquired of Kucznir on what authority he was addressing that meeting, and he replied, by request of the audience. If you doubt me, ask them."

The police asked all who wanted to hear Kucznir to stand up, and all but about 25 rose. This made the fascisti look rather blue, but they protested that the bolsheviks had "captured" the meeting. They had rented the hall and paid for it, they declared, and they had the receipted bills to prove it. It was their meeting, bought and paid for by good fascisti cash.

Kucznir replied that it was an open meeting. They were not disturbing the meeting. They merely insisted that it should proceed in an orderly manner. The audience by an overwhelming vote had decided that all sides should be heard, and that everything was scrupulously fair. The result was that Lata and his committee and their very few supporters left the hall, sadder but no doubt wiser than before.

Point Your Own Moral.

Fascism is a European phenomena. Triumphing in Italy it is spreading throughout the continent. Like the "flu" it has swept across the Atlantic and is finding fertile soil in the United States. The Italians in America have been fairly successful in organizing the Italian workers against fascism here. The Ukrainian workers in Detroit have thus far been likewise successful. Workers of other nationalities should take heed of the manner in which Italians and Ukrainians are meeting this menace.

Russians Hail "The Daily."

The comrades of the Russian Federation, District One, greet with joy the campaign launched by the Party for a Communist Daily in America. There is no one thing that we can think of that represents such a step forward for the whole American working class movement as a paper that will every day interpret for them the meaning of the class struggle.

Our district convention, held last Sunday, pledged every member to subscribe for at least one share, and has already taken the necessary steps to see that this is carried out. This means that District One of our Federation pledges itself for at least $1,000.

With best wishes for a successful campaign for the Daily Worker,

S. SHOYET, a Russian Section, District One, Workers Party.

GREETINGS FROM FLORIDA.

Dear Comrades:—I am heartily sorry that I can not send more than the within check for $5.00. To help towards the establishment of a Communist Daily.

Fraternally and cordially,

B. E. W., Lakeland, Florida.

Party Touring Speakers for "Daily Worker" and Big Membership Drives

The National Office of the Workers Party is sending out three speakers to visit party branches in every part of the country in the interests of the drive for the "Daily Worker" and to increase the party membership.

The three speakers are H. M. Wicks in the Eastern part of the country; Ben Gitlow in the Central states, and Max Bedacht in the Western states.

All three of these comrades are well known for their party activities and their ability to present the party viewpoint. The subject of their lectures will be "The Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the Workers Party," and will consist of a presentation of the need of a mass labor and farmer party and also the need of a Communist Party. These meetings give each party unit an opportunity to participate actively in the party campaigns, and the National Office urges every branch to arrange to have a speaker assigned to its territory.

Drive for "The Daily" Gets Up Steam in New York City

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK.—The first conference of delegates for the $100,000 Drive to launch an English Communist Daily, met at 208 E. 12th Street. The meeting was opened by Joseph Zack, secretary of the Needles Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League.

In an inspiring address, he showed the importance of an English daily in the struggle against capitalism and the labor bureaucracy and called upon the branch representatives to enthusiastically get behind the drive. He then introduced the General Organizer of the Workers Party, Comrade Cox, who gave a detailed report on the plans which have been formulated.

The opening gun of the campaign will be the great demonstration at the Manhattan Opera House on Saturday, Sept. 25, at which C. E. Ruthenberg, National Secretary of the Workers Party, Molinaux J. Olgin, the noted Russian writer, Gitlow, editor of the Freiheit, and Fred. Merrick, District Organizer, of Western Pennsylvania will be the speakers. Coddard reported that a number of party branches and labor organizations were making strenuous efforts to be prepared to buy large blocks of shares at this meeting. From numerous inquiries that have been pouring in to the local office, it is expected that hundreds of shares will be sold from this meeting on. The recently formed Finnish Federation has already pledged to contribute $25,000.

The conference adjourned until Friday evening, Sept. 27, when the next meeting will be held at 208 E. 12th St.

Detroit Campaign for "Daily"

DETROIT, Mich.—It is a long time since there has been so much enthusiasm manifested as at the meeting of the City Committee for "The Daily Worker." All the comrades were happy in the thought that the party has started out meeting all the efforts for the publishing of a daily paper in the English language. All of them felt that such an event marks an epoch in the history of the party.

The greatest enthusiasts were the comrades from the language branches. Perhaps because having daily papers in their own languages they realize the great value of an English daily, which will interpret the every day events in the light of the class struggle.

For the purpose of successfully conducting the campaign, the following motions were passed;

(1) The quota for Detroit is $10,000.00 minimum.

(2) All branches are to elect two delegates to the City Daily Worker Campaign Committee.

(3) The language branches are to call conferences of sympathetic organizations speaking their language, these conferences to be aided by the City Daily Worker Campaign Committee.

(4) A mass meeting on Sept. 30 at the Labor Temple of the Masses with Robert Minor as speaker.

(5) A big bazaar.

(6) That Comrade Cyril Lambkin be elected campaign manager.

"Detroit has always been in the forefront in party activities," said Comrade Lambkin in issuing the call to action. "In this task, too, it will prove itself in the lead. The comrades will get to work at once, carry on the campaign promptly, wind it up quickly and be ready for new tasks."

...loss of any capitalist government in the world, has been forced, by the determined attitude of a comparatively handful of workers, from a position in which it was aggressively and illegally using the state laws to accomplish the purposes of the repealed Espionage Law, to a position in which it was forced ungraciously to withdraw and to defend its action as best it could.

A Year of Great Achievement.

In the midst of an event we are apt not to see the significance of it, but the accomplishments of the past year in which a little group, at the start isolated and despised, even by the greatest part of the rank and file of labor, the target for the most vicious attacks, both by the higher officialdom of the labor movement and by the authorities, has been able to stand off and turn back the onslaught of the United States Government, that accomplishment must forever stand out as a turning point in the history of militant labor in America.

This has the Michigan defense been able to do! It has been able to force the American government to abandon at least its open participation in the Bridgman case and to hamper even its secret interference to a great extent. It went into a hostile community, which was literally crying for the blood of the Communists, and at the end of a year's struggle it has neutralized that hostile sentiment. It has maintained its united front while the forces of the prosecution have been torn and split by dissention. It has successfully defended William Z. Foster and saved him to serve the working class.

It has met the objects of the enemies of labor, those of destroying the militant wing of the labor movement and of weakening the whole labor structure,—and has instead, increased tremendously the influence and power of militant labor and strengthened the whole labor movement. It has definitely stemmed the nation-wide tide of red raiding, has changed the arresting of labor from a popular sport to a disastrous political undertaking.

It has been by no accident that these things were accomplished. It was by no accident that the forces of the U. S. Department of Justice were turned back; that the rank and file of the labor movement was aroused from a hostile to a friendly attitude; that the labor movement of Michigan determinedly set its face against the persecution and for the repeal of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism Law. These were no accidents, organized, just a year ago, we did stand and how we did is now labor history, history that will always remain a glorious ... of courageous, militant ...gment. Party in Ohio Plans to Push Fight Forward

By JAMES P. CANNON.
(Special fo "The Worker")

Akron, Ohio—One hundred per cent support for "The Daily Worker" Ohio District Convention of the Workers Party held here. Every delegate left the convention with a pledge to buy one or more of the five dollar shares, and 37 shares were sold for cash on the spot. This action came in response to a stirring appeal from Elmer Bosch, chairman of the convention, who declared the establishment of "The Daily Worker" to be the supreme task of the party. Comrade Bosch declared: "We in Ohio will do its full duty in this campaign," he said. "Let us make the Cleveland Local will be realised in action. That slogan is: "Every member of the Ohio District a subscriber to Daily Worker in ten days!"

It was a splendid convention in all respects; especially heartening in comparison with the last convention of the district held in the same city a year and a half ago. Factionalism has been overcome. The whole convention was dominated by the spirit of unity. Debates, (to be sure), but they were all over practical questions, ways and means of giving life to the activities of the party. Ohio has not made as good a showing as the party had a right to expect. This truth was frankly acknowledged by the delegates. They were painfully conscious of it, and they devoted the major part of their time to an animated discussion of the reasons for it and the ways to remedy the situation.

Following the report of the representatives of the Central Executive Committee, the floor was thrown open for discusion on "Trade Union Activity." This was what all had been waiting for; for in this lies the life of the district of the party. Its failure to register in the labor party campaign, its poor showing in the Passaic campaign, its membership, etc. can all be explained in one word: The party has not yet taken root in the trade unions.

Comrade Severino, secretary of the Cleveland Trade Union Educational League took the floor and gave a masterful exposition of the task of the Communists in the labor movement and the way in which they must accomplish it. It was one of the clearest, soundest and most comprehensive ever heard, and it cannot have failed to make a profound impression on the delegates. Comrade Severino took up one by one, the various arguments against the success of the party members to do their duty in the trade unions, and punctured them completely. He did not minimize the real obstacles and difficulties, but showed that the greatest handicap many comrades suffer from is psychological. They have not yet overcome their own traditions and prejudices regarding the trade unions.

A number of others, experienced in the trade union movement, spoke on the different aspects of the problem and cited examples out of their own experience to prove their points. Their entire action was practical, constructive, and if the spirit manifested there is transferred to the party branches we may confidently expect the party in this district to show a great push forward in the near future. Hearty support and co-operation was pledged to Comrade Max Lerner, the new District Organizer. The day was wound up with a very successful and enthusiastic mass meeting in the evening, with Scott Wilkins as chairman, and Max Lerner, Clarence E. Beubler of Toledo, and James P. Cannon as speakers.

District 6, which now includes the whole state of Ohio, has a glorious revolutionary tradition. It was noted for its great activity and militancy. During the year it held the highest, and it constituted a formidable section of the left wing of the Socialist Party which later crystallized into the party of Communism. Its progress since the organization of the Workers Party has been somewhat slow, but the inspiring convention just held at Akron gives the promise that a new period of fruitful activity is at hand. Now we will watch the Ohio comrades to see if they will fulfil that promise.

Young Workers League Pledges $5,000

The Young Workers League has pledged itself to raise $5,000 for the Daily Worker. The Young Workers League is the only organization that has made a definite pledge to raise a definite sum. Only two more days remain in which to raise the $5,000 pledged by the Young Workers League. Will the Young Workers League be the only organization to make good its pledge? Will the Young Workers League be the only organization to raise the $5,000 pledged by it? Will the Young Workers League be the only organization to make its pledge good? It will be unless every member of the Young Workers League gets busy with some definite work during his spare time and gets the money before Nov. 7th, the day set for the first issue of the Daily Worker.

SEND DELEGATES TO MEETING OF THE W. P. DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES.

Here is how we expect you to do it. First of all, every city organization of the YWL should call a meeting of its executive committee, the Daily Worker Campaign Committee, and to have the League work in close harmony with the party on all details of the campaign. All of the League members should go to work on subscription book from now on, to raise their share of the money—FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS! Enclosed with this letter is a proposed program. Whenever possible, the city organizations should hold a general membership meeting and try to get as many non-members to attend as possible. If this is not practicable, if the league is not in a position to hold a mass meeting then a membership meeting MUST be held on this subject. At no meeting can an arrangement be made that will be satisfactory. BUT SOME SORT OF A MEETING MUST BE HELD SEPT. 30th to intensify the campaign funds for the Daily Worker.

The time is very short. Failure to advertise your meeting NOW! Raise your share of the FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS so that you may say you took a real part in the establishment of the FIRST communist daily in the United States. Because we are young, we are not to be a good share of the work. Your city organization should be first in the size of its remittances. Let us hear from you with—RETURNS!

capitalist propaganda of the daily press to the effect that the interests of the farmers and workers of the farmers and workers are diametrically opposed and that they would never get together. All trade unionists and enlightened farmers expect such assaults from the capitalist press. But this same cry was re-echoed by elements professing to speak for the farmers.

In face of the assaults from the official machine of the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota, which is merely a legal instrument that complies with the state election laws and is not in any sense of the word a political party; in face of the combination of lawyers, bankers, newspaper editors and other political adventurers in the Farmers' Nonpartisan League, the conference showed strength to a victorious conclusion.

Altho no permanent apparatus was organized because of inability to reach the masses of farmers, a constitution was endorsed as a basis upon which to proceed to the organization of a second conference to be held next Spring, at which time the political forces of the workers and farmers will be definitely welded into a Farmer-Labor Federation.

Death of Farmers' NonPartisanship League.

The conference is historical, not literally, not only because it marks the first decisive step to organize the farmers' sentiment in unity of action on the part of these two elements of the exploited masses but because it marked the death of the Farmers' Nonpartisan League as the organization founded by C. A. Townley a number of years ago, and which claimed to be the political expression of the farmers in Minnesota and the Dakotas for a decade.

This was realized by the secretary, H. G. Teigen, who signed with William Mahoney, president of the Working People's Nonpartisan League, the joint call that resulted in the present conference. This conference was an opportunity for the Farmers' Nonpartisan League to gracefully commit a dignified suicide. It neglected this opportunity, because it hoped to revive its shattered prestige thru playing the name of the capitalist class against the conference. In this it miserably failed and is now taking invoice of its last will and testament.

There were three distinct elements fighting for supremacy in the days preceding the conference. There were (1) the trade unions, cooperatives and the Working People's Nonpartisan Political League; (2) Townley's Farmers Nonpartisan League, and (3) the journalistic prostitutes, bankers, business men and well-to-do farmers who rallied to the support of F. A. Pike, state chairman of the political machine of the Farmer-Labor Party. In this latter group were many prominent members of Townley's crew, so the second and third groups were two divisions of the same movement against unity of labor's forces.

Two Preliminary Conferences.

The day before the regularly called conference in response to the joint call of Mahoney and Teigen both Lawyer Pike and the Nonpartisan Leaguers called conferences of their own. Pike's conference was composed of the county chairmen of the whole state, while the Nonpartisan League called together its shattered remnants. The farmer conference did nothing but make vague threats. A number of well-to-do farmers and considerable numbers of working farmers responded to the latter conference. When they arrived they discovered the old machine of the N. P. L. in good working order for so ancient a thing. The Nonpartisan conference was called ostensibly for the purpose of perfecting forms of organization, but in reality to prevent farmers from attending the conference called for Saturday. All day long the farmers listened to speeches by members of the machine. Not a word of protest was permitted. The whole delegation seemed to sense the end of the League and to understand the tricks of the machine. For the most part they were disgusted and those of the farmers who were present were anxious to get out of the conference and back to their farms.

The plan that the clique in control of the League did not represent the sentiments of the rank and file. The farmers expected to get a good share of the work. Your city organization should be first in the size of its remittances. Let us hear from you with—RETURNS!

Activity of W. P. in Conference.

Among the most active workers ... the conference were the members ... the Young Workers Party of the Trade Union Educational League. In the ... fight between the trade ... and the Nonpartisans on the one hand and the Nonpartisan League and the Pike machine, the Communists aligned themselves with the first. In the pre-conference activity rumors were rife that the Workers Party was going to capture the conference. Finally this agitation developed to such an intensity that Wm. Mahoney, president of the Working People's Nonpartisan League, issued a statement in the Daily Worker, organ of the St. Paul Central Labor Union, defending the Communists and declaring that it was his belief that these revolutionists were desirous of one thing only—a real United Front of the Farmers and Workers on the political field.

The Working Party in action gave the lie to its traducers. Never once did it use its power to assist this movement and on the other hand to discourage and avoid any action that would tend to disrupt the forces moving in the direction of working class political action.

The situation here was vastly different from the one in Chicago in July. In Chicago a conscious effort was made to thwart the demand of the masses for independent political action by refusing to even consider economic organizations and no political parties. Our position was determined by the knowledge that eventually this state movement will become a part of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and that when that occurs we will automatically become an autonomous unit of the organization.

Our members are playing a leading role in Minnesota. They have gained the confidence of thousands upon thousands of organized workers and farmers and everyone knows the important part we played in this conference, which was the first definite step toward consolidating into a mass party the sentiment existing in this state for the Farmer Labor movement.

THE YOUNG WORKER.

The announcement of a spirited campaign to get the circulation of the Young Worker, official organ of the Young Workers League of America, which is the initiator and sponsor of this campaign.

Altho Gompers has refused to do anything in the matter, the recent convention of the Trade Union Educational League has promised wholehearted support.

Party and labor other timely articles in the magazine are an expose of the brutalities in the Chicago Parental School, by John Williamson, a report of the recent Bureau Session of the Young Communist International, which the League delegate Harry Gannes, illustrated by special photographs; a fine satirical story by Chilsie Lamb, many other interesting features. Snappy, brilliant, informing, The Young Worker is one of the best magazines in the radical movement, and is a distinct credit to The Young Workers League. It is time for the Central Executive and Party branches, or from the Young Workers League of America, 1009 W. State St., Chicago, Ill., for 15 cents.

Miners Must Put Up Fight for Rights in the Pittsburgh District

(Special to The Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Mental weakness, as pointed out by Lenin, is a characteristic feature of petty-bourgeois leaders, known, as District No. 5, Pittsburgh District, the mouthy statement of Frank Hayes, one of the Progressive Miners, just wish.

In their radical chasing activities here, heralding our Progressives, immediately upon entering a district, assert their place of leadership, to tail the story of the Miners' Convention and only heard the finish of the story, and completed it, then wide awake activities of a "quest" changed attitude on the part of these men and the result is the opposite to that desired by the operators. The latest "radical" in their "radical" attempt to chase the Progressives or radicals to the edge of the globe, there to push them off, has taken place at Avella, in Washington County.

It will be remembered that Thomas Cavanaugh, secretary-treasurer of the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America secured work after the big strike of 1922 at Arden mines, to which Local Union 1446 is attached, and immediately began to transform the local union into a progressive local. Some time later Comrade Cavanaugh became chairman of the Progressive Committee at Arden Mines and was confronted with the task of removing the 20 year old condition, whereby drivers and motormen were obliged to work nine hours a day. This task was no easy one. This is proven by the fact that many mine committeemen "got their walking papers," not directly, of course, but indirectly, by the use of the black-list methods and others too numerous to mention, as a result of their fights to remove this serious grievance. Cavanaugh, however, after making one successful attempt, decided that by the use of strategy and the willingness to undergo personal ridicule that the grievance could be removed, so that the miners of Arden Local 1446 could have the 8 hour day in actuality, instead of verbally. The result was just as expected. The officials of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, were obliged to sign in Arden and do the thing they had neglected doing for all these years, viz. "Order the stoppage of the nine hour day."

For six months the Arden miners enjoyed the 8-hour day and were won over completely by the progressive elements because they could see the plugging and determined tactics of the progressives were getting results, and those are the things the miners were interested in. However, the owners of the mine and their tools were soon on the job to stop the progressives, and the efforts these tools put forth were many and frequent, in the following: (1) The opening of an employment agency" in Pittsburgh, from which they expected a constant stream of new men who would serve the company cause. (2) "Placing all radicals to unsafe places in the mine, with the hope that they would refuse to work in them. (3) Trying to get "suckers" to aspire to strategic positions in the local union.

All these efforts failed, so they returned to the practice of the 9-hour day, and when the miners refused to work 9 hours the mine was closed down, threatened to discharge any and all who refused. The attention of the district officials was called to this latest outrage and Vice President Patton, caught in the mesh without any opportunity to consult with his superior officers and being armed only with his ignorance of "how to do things" to the Arden committee to shut the mine down if the company insisted on violating the agreement. Acting on this advice a special meeting was called on Wednesday, Aug. 22. At this meeting it was unanimously decided to carry out the advice and instructions of Vice President Patton—TO STRIKE IF THE COMPANY INSISTED ON VIOLATING THE AGREEMENT." On Thursday, Aug. 23, the officials were sent to Arden to order the return to work, while the coal company decided to change the situation from a strike to a "lock-out."

The next move belongs to the officials of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America. Their duty is clearly defined in the district agreement, which outlines what is to be done when a coal company or representatives shut down a mine or "lock-out" its employees to enforce conditions. That this is their intention is evident from the fact that Aug. 10, eleven days prior to the trouble, one Jim Burgh, at present employed as boss driver, but who at one time was an officer of the Arden Local Union and considered a radical and because of this was given the job of boss driver, told Pres. James McCurry, in the presence of other men, that the company was going to "pull something off" one of these days that would cause the local union to take a stand to shut the mine down, in violation of contract; that the company would then pay off everybody, before whom they pleased and "run the Bolsheviks down the road."

It can be safely stated that Jim Burgh, ex-radical, did not make the above statement inadvisedly. He was only restating a decision of the mine management and that the situation now in existence at Arden Mines is the result of a deliberate and premeditated attempt to clean out the progressives and replace them with the rankest kind of reactionaries, who will undoubtedly allow the coal company to establish any condition they see fit.

Now is the time for the progressives to fight. Get busy, give active notice on the officers of District 5, that the Arden situation must be straightened out immediately and that NO ONE IS "RUN DOWN THE ROAD."

The Workers Party Today—and Tomorrow

By JAMES P. CANNON
Executive Secretary and Editor, The Workers Party

In many respects the Workers Party is in a very healthy condition. Its membership is steadily increasing, its influence among the masses is growing, its activities are widening. Its position as the leader of the revolutionary movement in the United States is becoming more and more established. It is not necessary to go into a detailed analysis of the reasons for this satisfactory state of affairs. They are to be summed up in this statement: the work of the Party is correct.

The Workers Party is rapidly outstripping the whole field; it is using correct methods and forms that are declined to many phases the other parties have learned only half-heartedly. Hence the rapid development of the Workers Party. The Workers Party is the only one that is showing any aggressiveness in driving ahead in the class struggle. It has already put itself at the head of militant movements in the labor world, both local as well as nationally. And these, of course, are the fundamental reasons why it is reaching its rivals to the wall.

There are not many communist radical workers in America but there are very many radical organizations. The whole radical labor movement of America looks pitifully small in comparison with most of the European countries. There is no other country in the world to show a large number of radical and revolutionary organizations, factions, sects and cliques. Except for the Proletarian Party, which is a sectarian split-off from the communist movement, every party is the youngest in the field. We are only four years old as a party. The Socialist Party is the Debsian Industrial Workers of the World is 18, and the Socialist Labor Party is a middle aged lady who doesn't speak of her age any more. The Proletarian Party, if we remember rightly, is three years old, but it is manifestly an abnormal child which sits listlessly in the library reading books which it doesn't understand, and suffers from lack of exercise. It doesn't seem to run and play enough to get the proper development.

These bodies are not much given to agreeing with anybody about anything, but they all agree with each other that the Workers Party is no good. They have a united front on that issue. Those who need to spend most of their energy fighting each other now center their attacks on us; and, strangely enough, they all use pretty much the same arguments and accusations.

As a revolutionary party which aims to represent the entire class interests of the proletariat, our real fight is against the capitalists and the capitalist government first, and next against the agents of the capitalists in the labor movement—the Gompers machine. But in marshalling the revolutionary workers for this fight against the class enemies of the proletariat we have to insist on sound revolutionary policies and principles or otherwise the fight would not be successful. These rival radical parties who espouse false doctrines have only a harmful effect on the movement. To the extent that they have influence they create divisions in the ranks of the class conscious workers and introduce confusion into the struggle. This brings us into collision with them. Our fight against them is a fight against division and confusion.

The Collapse of the Socialist Party.

I was especially struck by the obvious moral and organizational collapse of the Socialist Party. The fight with it in New York City, where it is still entrenched in the needle trades unions and buttressed on a number of property institutions in its control, has a tendency to give us an astigmatic view of its real status. In the country at large it has practically ceased to exist as a vigorous rank and file organization. The young blood has left it and joined the Communists, many thousands have quit the movement, and only a handful of tired old men hold the fort here and there for the Socialist Party, talking about the past revolutionary little today.

The Socialist Party of America could be more accurately called the Socialist Party of New York and Milwaukee. In these cities it represents a real power and it is a real stumbling block to the revolutionary movement. In these places we find it necessary to wage a direct fight against it not only because of its false philosophy, but also because of the treasonable conduct that springs logically from that philosophy. But in other localities, where it has no property institutions, no newspapers and no established professional officialdom, the tendency of our party is to sweep past it completely. The constructive work of our party, its united front tactics, give it the leadership of the radical workers. The necessity for direct struggle with the Socialist Party does not arise for the simple reason that the socialists are not in the field.

The Socialist Labor Party.

We have skirmished now and then with the Socialist Labor Party, but they are never of a very serious nature because the S.L.P. is not a serious factor in the field. The official organ attacks us very heatedly and excitedly nearly every week, but we never find it worth while to engage in answering them. We fight them, nevertheless; and the difference between the method of fighting ours reveals very clearly the difference between a dogmatic clique and a realistic political party.

We proceed on the theory that a party which has a lot of theoretical opportunities, and which takes the wrong position regarding the revolutionary goal of the working class, is to realise it, will not follow a revolutionary policy in the daily struggle. We have to subject them to theoretical arguments now and then, but the average worker does not take much interest in such discussions. So, as a rule, whenever the S.L.P. meets us in the field with a challenge to debate the merits of Daniel DeLeon, we answer with a proposal that they make a united front with us on the common enemy, against the capitalists, the capitalist Government and the reactionary labor leaders. The S. L. P. is a sterile sect that does not understand any life except abstract controversy. Marxism to it is only a collection of dogmas. It is not a party of the class struggle, and against proposals to really fight in the class struggle it is absolutely helpless.

A few months ago I was speaking to a crowd of miners in Southern Illinois. There is a little nest of chronic S.L.P. fanatics in that section, and after I finished speaking they offered to start an argument with me about the Dictatorship of the Proletariat. I answered them in this way:

"I would be glad to discuss this question with you, but it is quite possible that most of these miners here have not made a sufficient study of revolutionary theory to be able to conclude from our debate which party they want to support. Suppose we put the question in another way that will make the case simpler. Right now these miners are suffering a great oppression at the hands of Farrington and Lewis, who are nothing but the agents of the mine owners in the union. I will invite you to make a united front with us against Farrington and Lewis, and for a program that will improve and strengthen the miners' union and make it revolutionary to eliminate it from the hands of its members. We can still have debates once in a while over theories, but in the meantime let us make a common fight against the common enemies of the working class."

When the S.L.P. members refused this proposition the miners would let them alone for any more. They came to the natural and logical conclusion that a party which will not fight today is only bluffing when it talks about fighting in the future.

The Proletarian Party.

The Proletarian Party is not a political party in the true sense of the word because it does not have a national character, takes no part in the political struggle and has never yet has never undertaken any kind of a campaign on a national scale. It appears to be a loose collection of groups and study classes located in about a half dozen cities. Its activity consists almost exclusively of conducting and holding study classes, street meetings and heckling Workers Party speakers. They are quite militant in their fight against the Workers Party but we have never been able to get much help from them in the fight against the labor fakers. They call themselves communists, and, taking them at their word, we have made many efforts to get them to unite with us into one communist party. But they have always refused on one pretext or another. Even the direct appeal of the Communist International could not avail with them. They are sore at us and they refuse to play in our ranks.

The Workers Party and the Struggle.

The Workers Party is in the struggle. It is the only party that is showing any aggressiveness in driving ahead in the class struggle. It has already put itself at the head of militant movements in the labor world, both local as well as nationally. And these, of course, are the fundamental reasons why it is reaching its rivals to the wall.

The Workers Party and its Struggle.

The Workers Party is the only party in the United States that is conducting a struggle against the reactionary labor leaders. It is the only party that is attempting to build a militant left wing in the labor movement. It is the only party that is attempting to organize the workers in the basic industries. It is the only party that is attempting to build a real Communist party. It is the only party that is attempting to build a real Communist party. It is the only party that is attempting to build a real Communist party.

In the last issue of the Daily Worker we learn that the interest in fact enough not only among the Italian groups, but among all the foreign groups.

Why not a real Italian daily? Why not a real Italian daily? Why not a real Italian daily? Why not a real Italian daily?

However, the English Daily must have our full support, and the sooner we get rid of the Daily Worker the sooner will the party be able to support our campaign for the creation of the Italian Daily.

It is also my opinion that every language Federation must devote every effort to the establishment of a daily paper. This is the most essential organ that also for increasing the circulation of the paper among the foreign workers who are able to read English.

Talking all these vital factors in consideration we should not hesitate nor delay for a moment the onward march for the establishment of the Daily Worker.

To the teacher's staff has been added two members of the Young Workers League, Comrades Eugene Bechtold and Martin Abern. The educational program has met with the full approval of the teachers and all have great expectations for a successful development of a better understanding of the problems of the Proletarian Revolution by our membership.

The first term will cover a span of 18 weeks. Each subject will be the basis of a lecture to be given within a stipulated time. At the end of each lecture discussion by the class as a whole will follow. Each student will be given an opportunity to present his views on the subject matter, whether right or wrong.

The lecturers will prepare a set of questions further developing each subject to be submitted to the students at random and answered by them. This method is being pursued in order to develop and sharpen the wits of our comrades. In our daily intercourse with the workers generally, whether in meetings or on the job, we are often asked questions to which it is of the utmost importance to be able to give a correct answer without first having to refer to certain books. The lecturers will also prepare a set of questions for each class meeting to be submitted to the students which is to form a basis for a synopsis written by them. This will give our students an opportunity to further develop their thoughts by consulting reference books.

The capacity of the school will be limited to about 75 students. Our younger members as well as the members of the Y. W. L. are especially invited, but none will be excluded as long as space is available, nor do our members from language branches need to feel that a limited understanding of English is a barrier to participate in the school.

Militants in 2nd T. U. E. L. Conference Pledge Struggle for Class War Victories

By JAMES P. CANNON

The Second National Conference of the Trade Union Educational League has come and gone, and militant labor thereby has marked another milestone in its stormy career. The fruitful sessions of this conference of rank and file workers offer rich material for study and comment.

Almost any single one of its many achievements might well be lifted out of the formal official record and made the subject of an article, the text of which would be this: The Left Wing of the trade unions is on the march and the Trade Union Educational League is its name.

The Second Conference took a definite stand on every important issue confronting the labor movement, and laid down a clear line of policy in regard to it. Especially noteworthy was the attitude toward class war prisoners and the labor victims of persecution of all kinds. The United Front of Labor, which was the guiding principle behind all the conference deliberations, was the ground upon which it proposed a common fight for the release of prisoners, against injunction, and for the defense of workers now in the courts.

The fine spirit of the conference, and its complete freedom from sectarian conceptions or interests, was shown in its steadfast support of the imprisoned fighters, of all kinds, of the League's fight apart from the Industrial Workers of the World on the question of tactics and structure, in spite of these differences it declared the defense of the Industrial Workers of the World class war prisoners to be the common duty of all workers. In the same spirit it denounced the California injunction against the Industrial Workers of the World, pledging the full support of the league militants in the fight against this crushing practical program to make the fight successful.

The sound revolutionary attitude of the conference on this question and the comradely spirit so plainly manifested, brought an immediate response from the General Defense Committee of the Industrial Workers of the World. This committee seemed to realise at once the significance of the action taken: that these were not the ordinary formal and meaningless resolutions which labor bodies so often pass, but that these earnest militants were the battlefield meant every word they said.

The action of the conference resulted in an exchange of telegrams, which should be brought to the attention of every radical worker. These telegrams, together with the resolutions which prompted them, write a new chapter in the long struggle for the release of labor prisoners of war. If all the factions of the movement will action the proposals, in the spirit in which they were made, it can be safely said that the day of liberation will be near at hand.

Besides the members of the Industrial Workers of the World, many other rebel workers languish in the prisons of America. They were not forgotten by the conference. In addition to resolutions, which added a powerful moral force to their cause, special telegrams of greetings were sent to a number of them: to Mooney and Billings in California; to Sacco and Vanzetti in Massachusetts, and Jacob Dolla in Pennsylvania.

The question of the class war prisoners is one of the most dynamic issues in the class struggle today, and it is a serious mistake in tactics besides a violation of class responsibility, to conduct the campaign for their release in a spiritless, routine fashion or, worse yet, to draw factional lines and support only "our own" prisoners. The fate of every labor prisoner, of every group of workers suppressed and persecuted, is the concern of the entire labor movement. This sentiment has become a commonplace, but it has not been realized in action. The conference has life and meaning only when

C. E. Ruthenberg whose trial followed that of Wm. Z. Foster and who was convicted in a county court, must appear shortly for a hearing in the appeal of his case to the Michigan Supreme Court.

Foster, Ruthenberg and the others arrested and prosecuted in a Michigan county court, were active union members and were militantly active in the steel strike and the railroad strike, against which strike Atty. Gen. Daugherty was then seeking the drastic Wilkerson injunction. Wm. Z. Foster, who had led the great steel strike of 1919, was the first to be tried. Ruthenberg was second. This move against them was part of the attack on labor by the open-shoppers and strike breakers.

Ruthenberg's lecture on Sunday, Sept. 16, at Douglas Park Auditorium will cover the developments in the American labor struggle during the last year. In his talk he will tell how labor has met, and is meeting, the attacks by its enemies. Come and bring your friends.

Need Communist Daily

By JAMES H. DOLSON
California District Organizer.

It is not necessary to belittle the work done by the radical foreign language press in this country to state that a Communist daily paper, published in the English language, well edited and full of news chronicling the happenings of the militant labor movement, is a tremendous necessity. It must be established soon. It will be vital factor in the sharpening class antagonisms.

Such a daily can be undertaken if we are in earnest. It is tasks such as these which will test our ability as revolutionists.

Let us put our shoulder to the wheel and put THE DAILY WORKER over with flying colors.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

Gene Debs Says of the Michigan Cases:

"The naked proposition in Michigan is a very simple one. Have men the right to an opinion of their own and the right to meet in public and discuss it? The issue is clear-cut, complete, and simply stated. There is nothing beyond it in the Michigan case. The reams of "testimony" that have flooded the trial are camouflaged; pure bunk and nothing else.

"If we have intelligence enough to understand the vital issue at stake and courage enough to do our duty we will back up our comrades on trial in Michigan to the very last. We are on trial with them and in defending them against this atrocious attack we are simply defending ourselves and our own families and firesides.

"American plutocracy must be boldly challenged and fearlessly met in its atrocious attempt to destroy the last vestige of American liberty by gagging the lips and crushing the manhood and womanhood of the American people.

"Let us all come to the rescue with loyal hearts, willing hands, standing solidly behind our persecuted comrades in the true spirit of solidarity until this dastardly attack upon our cause, the cause of free speech, the cause of humanity, has been repulsed and the rights of citizenship under the constitution completely vindicated."

Workers Rebel at Officials' Alliance with Kept Press, the Bosses, Burns, Scabs and Thugs

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

It is not strange that a wave of revolt should sweep thru the whole structure of the United Mine Workers' Union against the most recent alliance of President John L. Lewis with the bosses, their political stool pigeons, gunmen and secret service agents.

It is easily understood how some of Lewis' staunchest henchmen, like his recent recruit, Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Mine Workers, should rebel at the malicious manhandling of the truth in the series of six articles released by the mine ... union bureaucracy, and published extensively in the kept press, attacking the progressively minded and thinking elements in the miners' ...

The pamphlet is illustrated by two original cartoons, one by Robert Minor and the other by Ellis.

On the back page is an application for membership and subscription blank for the party publications.

Civil Liberties Union Brands Lewis' Anti-Radical Campaign Mass of "Preposterous Lies"

(Special to "The Worker.")

NEW YORK CITY.—Branding the statement, issued by the United Mine Workers of America, thru Ellis Searles, publicity director, on the activities of the Reds in the United States, as a "mass of ridiculous insinuations" issued by the American Civil Liberties Union is concerned, the officers of that organization denied the charges made.

"If it be true that the American Civil Liberties Union 'has not in a single instance come to the assistance of a man or woman not allied with the Communist Searles declares," the officers of the union state, "then a large part of the United Mine Workers of America is apparently a part of the radical movement.

"For in the last 12 months we have had occasion to render assistance and to work in close and intimate co-operation on issues affecting civil liberty with at least a dozen officers of the United Mine Workers of America from local secretaries to district presidents, and those, for instance, of District No. 17 of West Virginia. Among the secretaries of other districts of the United Mine Workers with whom we have co-operated we might mention John Brophy, President of District No. 2; D. L. Thomas, President of Sub-District No. 7 of District No. 12, and McGuire, an officer of District No. 5.

"We have not now and never have had any interest in the tactics of the interfactional fights of the United Mine Workers of America. We have confined ourselves scrupulously, consistently and exclusively to this and and only question with which we are concerned—free speech, free press and free assemblage."

The officers of the American Civil Liberties Union also denounced the assertion of the United Mine Workers' officialdom that the union "worked from within" the coal strike of 1922 on behalf of the Reds as a "preposterous lie."

"Our work in the coal strike of 1922 was concerned entirely with the strikers' right to speak and assemble peaceably," the Civil Liberties Union's officers declare. "In the particular district of southwestern Pennsylvania which Mr. Searles mentions we were insulted by responsible officials of the United Mine Workers of America that the civil rights of the strikers were menaced by the ruthless suppression being carried on by the local authorities assisted by the State constabulary. To say that the Civil Liberties Union sent a delegation in there to 'work from within' is a preposterous lie."

According to the officers of the Union, John Brophy reported to Roger Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union, on May 3, 1922, on the "wholesale violations of civil liberties in the mining districts of Somerset County, Pa."

"The Civil Liberties Union immediately got in touch with mine operating agencies and sent a special reporter there to write up the situation. Newspaper men and others representing our organization worked with Brophy and nine other mine leaders in issuing reports on the situation in these districts. Later the Union sent Mr. Crane Gartz, of Pasadena, Calif., to make a speech survey of the field. Still later, Attorney Arthur Garfield Hays, of New York, took action against the Winton Gale Colliery Company in Vintonville, Pa., which resulted in opening up that town for free speech and free assembly for the workers."

According to the officers of the Civil Liberties Union this is only one instance among many others in which the Union co-operated with labor leaders in the fight for civil liberties in their districts.

"If Mr. Searles," they state, "had the means at his access to our files that he has apparently had to the files of the department of justice agents and the Lusk-Graves police since 1919, and Fred Merrick and officers of the Pro-tective Mines in Pittsburgh, on August 27, of this year, he would be able to discover who are the apparently disloyal ones in his own organization."

Ruthenberg Speaks at Big Chicago Anniversary Meeting

CHICAGO, Ill.—In a meeting held here, which brought a large crowd to the Douglas Park Auditorium, the Labor Defense Council celebrated its first anniversary. C. E. Ruthenberg, whose appeal from the verdict of the jury in his Michigan Criminal Syndicalism trial is now pending before the Supreme Court of Michigan was the principal speaker. His appearance was greated by wild applause equalling the greeting given to him and to William Z. Foster at the mass-meeting held a year ago which opened up the great drive for defense of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism defense.

Chicago workers, who for the past years have responded to the needs of the defense in a way which has tyrified the militant defense all over the country, again showed their appreciation of the importance of the Michigan cases and their willingness to continue the struggle which has so far been fought with a great degree of success. In response to an appeal for the financial support necessary to carry on the defense, a collection of $330 was taken.

Ruthenberg in his speech showed how the attack of Burns and Daugherty in the Bridgman raid which was calculated to destroy the communist movement and to weaken the working class had been turned by the militant workers into a victory. He pointed out that the first attempt of the capitalists to destroy the revolutionary movement in America, that of A. Mitchell Palmer, in the raids of 1919-'20 had resulted in driving the Communist parties underground. "The attack at Bridgeman," said Ruthenberg, "had an effect just opposite to what the capitalists desired. It has rallied the forces of labor against the ruling class. It has established the conditions which have allowed the communist movement to come out into the open and to function before the eyes of the entire working class. The whole labor movement has been strengthened as a whole as a result of the Michigan raids."

Coal Miners Rebel at Lewis' Alliance with Labor's Enemies

A considerable part of the attack contained in these articles is directed at the Federated Press, labor's news service, the favorite Lewis-Gompers indictment being that it is "financed by Moscow."

Editor Carl Haessler, of the Federated Press, points out that these brainstorms would be laughed into the waste basket were they not have the support of President Lewis and Secretary-Treasurer William Green. He says in a statement sent out today:

"The Federated Press can afford to smile at the overheated vaporings of this irresponsible sheet."

War Brought Paid Propaganda.

The situation however is a serious one. It is generally known, for example, that the high officials of the trade union movement have put hired propaganda agents on their staff. This is one of the results of the developments of Gompers' hysterical jingoism propagated during the world war by William English Walling, John Spargo, Charles Edward Russell and other renegade Socialists. At the head of Gompers' staff of propagandists at the present time is to be found Chester M. Wright, formerly editor of the New York Call. It includes "Bill" Roberts, who was driven from the columns of the Chicago Federation of Labor because of his anti-labor articles and news stories in the Chicago Hearst papers.

In the miners' union it had been the custom to elect a member of the union as editor of the official organ, the United Mine Workers' Journal. But this was changed by President Lewis. He has put upon the dens of prostitution in the editorial offices of the Indianapolis, Ind., brass check prated Gompers to find an inmate degraded enough to do his dirty work. This is how he discovered Ellis Searles, who is the Chester Wright and the "Bill" Roberts of the radical baiting staff of the miners' union bureaucracy.

Slush at Temple Mines.

One whole article of the six issued was given over to an attempt to create the impression that Lithuanian members of the Workers Party had provoked the mine war at Herrin, Ill. This is probably the worst stab in the back Lewis has yet delivered at the members of his own union. He has been silent for years in relation to the struggles of the coal miners in West Virginia and other states, where coal miners have been forced into armed conflict with the thugs and gunmen of the mine owners.

Lewis' decision to publish again the verdict of the local coroner's jury that heard the witnesses and viewed the scenes of the struggle at Herrin, Ill. The jury declared that:

"We, the jury, find from the evidence that the death of the deceased were due to the acts, direct and indirect of the officials of the Southern Illinois Coal Company. We recommend that an investigation be conducted for the purpose of fixing the blame more fully on the individuals responsible."

Refused Books and Pay.

The Lewis-Green-Lewis, of the Miners' Union, who comes from Illinois, appears in the role of defender of the mine owners, their imported scabs and armed thugs. Mr. Lewis allies himself with the Southern Illinois Coal Company that broke its contract with the miners' union, tried to operate its mines during the strike, brought in gunmen supplied by a Chicago detective agency, established a reign of terror over Williamson County, subjected local residents to brutal intimidation and finally opened hostilities thru the cold-blooded killing of two union coal miners. This is the murderous anti-union outfit which Mr. Lewis has now allied himself. Similarly in West Virginia. And when Mr. Lewis attacks the Civil Liberties' Union because of its defense of free speech, free press and free assemblage in Pennsylvania, he becomes the brother-in-arms of the notorious assassins, the Pennsylvania State Constabulary (The Cossacks), murderers of Fannie Sellins, jailers

SUBJECT:

A United Front of Labor and The Federated Farmer-Labor Party

As We See It

By A. J. Muste

Well, Coolidge has come out against the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution. In this he is, of course, the faithful spokesman of the Republican Party as a whole. Indeed, the Western Federation of Miners, the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, the Illinois Manufacturers' Association and practically every other organization of employers and capitalists that has expressed itself on the subject "labor" would not be interfered with, that is, labor that is willing to work for three cents an hour, and actually thinks it can be thankful for the chance. Coolidge's views need be no surprise to anyone. They are merely the logical and consistent expression of the whole philosophy of the Republican Party as it has been developed in the last few years. How much interest this fight will arouse among the workers remains to be seen. From the great activities being put forth by the Pittsburgh district, the workshop of the world, one would think that the workers were going to fight for the amendment even by the most ardent supporters.

At the enthusiastic rally held by the Labor Party in the Pittsburgh theaters there were present such eminent reactionary Labor leaders as Duffy, one of the Vice-Presidents of the American Federation of Labor; Daniel J. Tobin, Treasurer of the American Federation of Labor; and Fred Smith, Vice-President of the Boilermakers.

Maurer Visits Pittsburgh.

The whole Organized Labor movement of Pennsylvania is turning its attention to the Party's fight against the International Union is allowing the West Virginia miners to bear an abnormal burden. Some 9,000 are now idle in Logan County, in the Paint and Cabin Creek and Coal River sections. The officials of District 17 are being subjected to what is apparently an interminable persecution by the courts, which requires frequent donations by the miners in addition to the regular dues and assessments. These are around $4.00 per month or double what they are in Western Pennsylvania and Ohio. These sections are almost as much affected as northern West Virginia by the conditions in southern West Virginia, and in fact southern West Virginia is a problem confronting the whole Miners' Union to such an extent that it is grossly unfair to allow the two West Virginia districts to be especially burdened with the conduct of the continual fight to bring Logan McDowell and the other non-union counties within the bounds of civilization.

Real labor progress in West Virginia awaits the development of a strong, militant, aggressive, and organized rank and file movement in the state and the breaking of the detestable power of the Lewis-Gompers reactionaries in the national labor movement.

Workers' Party Free Speech Fight Arousing Masses in Western Pennsylvania

Meetings Broken Up by Police Attacks Only Serve to Increase Interest in Party's Campaign.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 15.—(By Special Correspondent.)—The Workers' Party free speech fight in Western Pennsylvania is arousing the masses. How much interest this fight has aroused among the workers of Pittsburgh and vicinity was shown by the enthusiastic manner in which the meetings of the Party's mayoralty candidate, Wm. Z. Foster, were attended and hung up for a short time, right against Mayor Lyda, who was "talking business" to the workers in the mining sections especially, by local unions are responding to the Defense appeals.

Democrats Take a Hand.

Despite his being busy with the coming Presidential Governor Pinchot manifested an active interest in the whole affair. He has instructed State Attorney General Geo. K. Woodruff to demand full details of the conditions in McKeesport from Mayor Lyda. We have already presented our side of the case to Mr. Governor and have demanded that Mayor Lyda be instantly removed from office for violation of the State Constitution.

The Democrats in the state, especially the Pittsburgh district, are also taking a hand in the fight against the Workers' Party. Mayor Lyda has been a Democrat all his life and has been elected on the Democratic ticket. At the last meeting was held some before him. The Mayor defends this watchmanship for an hour of his time every day, consisting of an occasional visit to the factory at the time plant, was severely lectured to by the Superintendent of the company, who informed him that the company was not in business for the purpose of giving jobs to Communists, and that if he wanted to keep his job he would have to get busy and break up the Workers' Party meetings. Mayor Lyda has been doing his best to do this ever since.

The Democratic Party organization in Pittsburgh is also taking a hand in the fight against the Workers' Party. Democratic Committeeman Joseph Grundy, of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, has been active in the campaign. He is the owner of the Tri-State Paint Co., who are the real bosses of Mayor Lyda are also in the campaign. The owner of the Tri-State Paint Co., who are the real bosses of Mayor Lyda are also in the campaign. The owner of the Tri-State Paint Co., who are the real bosses of Mayor Lyda are also in the campaign. The owner of the Tri-State Paint Co., who are the real bosses of Mayor Lyda are also in the campaign.

Await Outcome of Legal Tests.

Many are eagerly waiting for the outcome of the court proceedings instituted by the Party in the Allegheny Court there will be an argument on the appeal from the decision of Magistrate Langdon imposing a $300 fine. Fines are also levied in the whole case of Mayor Lyda's petty tyranny into the Federal Courts in order to prevent the Manufacturers' Association, and the other Agents of the McKeesport Tin Plate Co. and the National Tube Co. from interfering with the workers' civil rights in Western Pennsylvania.

Amalgamation and Labor Party Win at Convention of West Virginia Federation of Labor

(Special to "The Worker.")

FAIRMONT, W. VA.—The West Virginia Federation of Labor, in annual convention here, joined the rapidly growing procession of forward-looking labor bodies, when it unanimously endorsed resolutions calling for the amalgamation of craft unions, and for the national labor party.

The already existing West Virginia Farmer-Labor Party was also endorsed. Another resolution called for efforts to organize the 12,000 teachers in the state, and to make the schools more beneficial to organized labor.

The main interest in the convention seemed to be centered about the question of who should be placed on the pay-roll for the ensuing year. The progressive element was far from satisfied with the persons elected to fill some of the offices but was not sufficiently numerous nor well enough organized to defeat the machine in control.

Reaction Shows Its Head.

The reactionaries demonstrated their total indifference to trade-union principles by the action taken in reference to J. A. Hamilton, who was admitted as a visitor by the credentials committee, being a member of the American Federation of Teachers, and wishing to speak to the convention on the Teachers' Union. Hamilton disposed of a number of "Labor Heralds" to the delegates outside the hall, having told the credentials committee of his intention before being admitted as a visitor, and not being interfered with while selling them. "The Herald" happened to contain an article criticising Sen. John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers, for his action in the case of the Nova Scotia miners, and the Lewis element among the delegates were horrified that anyone should dare to criticise a person who had sold the magazine might contaminate them. They were able to secure the passage of a motion to put Hamilton out of the hall, and later on the Convention rejected a motion to allow him to speak on the question of the Teachers' Union.

During the discussion G. M. Bugniazet, First Vice-President of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, took the occasion to maliciously attack Foster and his associates as paid agents of the Russian Communists or of the employers. Not an official voice was raised in defense of the rights of free speech within organized labor.

But the Lewis element were so well aware of the inconsistency of their action that they ordered the discussion stricken from the record.

West Virginia Labor Awakens.

This Convention reflected the condition of organized labor in West Virginia. The tyranny of the mine owners of the southern non-union counties casts its shadows over the whole state and forces all labor into a progressive attitude, as is shown by the organization of the State Farmer-Labor Party, which appears to have the support of both the officials and the rank and file. No opposition was offered to the Amalgamation and National Labor Party resolutions. But the habits of mind of the natural conservative, and the connection of the officials with the Lewis and Gompers machines serves to handicap the expression of the progressive sentiment and the execution of progressive resolutions and programs. Labor in this state is beginning to move to the left. But it is not yet conscious that it is so doing nor that the policies it is adopting as a matter of course, are almost impossible of accomplishment as long as the Gompers and Lewis policies rule in national labor affairs.

Lewis is stronely supported even

A New Burns' Paper

By C. E. Ruthenberg,
Secretary, Workers Party.

There has come to the attention of the National Organization of the Workers Party a copy of "WORKERS' VOICE," ostensibly printed in New York City by the Workers' Voice Publishing Company, address unknown.

In this publication there appears a manifesto supposedly issued by the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of America, Frank Little, Executive Secretary, in which there is a declaration that "the Communist Party will continue as a secret organization based upon clear cut uncompromising adherence to the principles of Communism."

Sometime ago we called attention to circulars issued on May Day by a supposedly Communist Party pointing out that these circulars were probably the work of the Burns Detective Agency or other agent provocateurs. This new "Workers' Voice" has all the earmarks of a similar source.

This statement is born out by the fact that there is printed in this issue of the "Workers' Voice," under the heading "The World Today," an entire page which is taken verbatim from the program of the Workers Party. The printing of a Workers Party document, in an underground paper of this character claiming to be in some way connected with an underground Communist Party is the kind of thing that would be expected from the Burns Detective Agency. These methods of the private detective agency have been proven up in the testimony of the noted spy, Bailin, who pointed out that documents were manufactured by private detective agents in order to use them to frighten the capitalists into paying the money to protect the capitalist system. Undoubtedly the "Workers' Voice" is another attempt of this character on the part of a similar spying institution which is short of funds, and desires to break down the employing class of this country.

The Workers Party warns the working class not to have anything to do with the "Workers' Voice" or any similar supposed publication of an underground Communist Party. The underground Communist Party was liquidated by its final convention held last April. No underground Communist organization exists in the United States at the present time.

The only Communist Party in the United States is the Workers Party of America, which is fraternally affiliated with the Communist International and the only organization in the United States which is thus recognized by the Communist International.

Utah Toilers for Labor Party, Amalgamation, Recognition of Russia

(Special to "The Worker.")

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—The Utah State Federation of Labor in convention here has approved substantially the entire program of the Trade Union Educational League. No endorsement was given at the 1922 state convention. President Spiegel's annual report approved of amalgamation and was upheld by the delegates. A nation-wide organization drive in all trades and industries was urged in a resolution calling upon the American Federation of Labor to take immediate action.

Independent working class political action was approved and the A. F. of L. convention at Portland, Ore., urged to forsake the "reward and punish" program and organize a labor party. The big fight was on this resolution. The resolution was sponsored by the Ogden Trades and Labor Assembly.

Recognition of the Russian Soviet Government was unanimously approved. Work is progressing in Utah in an effort to build up the Mine, Mill and Smelterman's Union, the successor of the Western Federation of Labor.

Workers of Three Nations Protest.

Italian, Greek and Yugo-Slav workers in Chicago joined in a huge demonstration at Hod Carriers' Hall, against the war menace in the Mediterranean. Among the speakers were D. E. Early, Earl R. Browder, associate editor of the Labor Herald; Salvatore Iarossi, organizer of the Italian Federation, Workers Party, and Georges Katsiolis, Greek organizer, Workers Party.

Plan Working Class Magazine for Working Class Children

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

For too long a time have the organized revolutionary workers of this country stood by and witnessed their children to attend one of the most pernicious institutions for the molding of the mind, the public school, without taking any steps to counteract the vicious anti-labor and anti-radical propaganda with which the susceptible mind of the child is filled while he is there.

The child of radical parents will very often express himself on such matters as strikes, labor unions, Soviet Russia and so on, in a manner which is shocking, for it shows the deep influence which the schools, his teachers, and the papers he reads, have on him.

In the history class, the English class, and the civics class, the child is subjected to a continuous spray of capitalist propaganda in favor of every act of the boss and the government in power, of the latest, most modern methods, principles and aims, radical political parties, Soviet Russia, and every achievement and achievement of the working class. Especially is this true when the classes discuss "current events." There is a sheet issued by the labor baiters of this country called "Current Events" which is one of the vilest sources of misinformation and insinuations against the working class and its institutions that had ever been published. It is from this rag that the children of the workers are taught to hate the working class and its endeavors and aspirations. It is used as a text on events of the day and those responsible for its publication see to it that it accomplishes the work it was intended to perform. And we must admit that it does its work very well.

It has become a matter, then, of prime importance to the workers of this country to help in the organized fight against the capitalist schools which will not only neutralize the poisoned teachings of the public and high schools, but which will serve also as an organ for teaching working class children that they are primarily members of the working class, and that as such they should learn what their position is in society and how they can help themselves from the chains of slavery, both physical and intellectual.

The Young Workers League of America, at its second national convention held some months ago, instructed its national executive committee, as the supreme body between conventions, to begin the organization of junior sections and the publication of a junior magazine. The organization of the children is already proceeding apace, under the name of Junior Section of the Young Workers League of America. An organizational basis has been drawn up for the hundreds of children that are now organized in groups all over the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The next step to be taken is the issuance of an organ for these children. Plans have already been made for the publication of the initial numbers. Sufficient material has been gathered to guarantee a magazine which is not only attractive, but also instructive. The only momentary drawback is the inability of the Young Workers League to finance the first few issues.

Because of the great importance of this particular phase of its work to working-class parents, the Young Workers League feels justified in asking for financial support for this venture, and it is confident that its expectations will be more than fulfilled. We ask that all Workers Party branches, sympathizing organizations, fraternal societies, Workmen's Circle and Workers' Sick and Death Benefit Society branches, and all other interested organizations and individuals send in a donation, large or small to defray the initial expense of publishing this children's paper. We ask also that these organizations and individuals send to us the number of copies of the magazine they will dispose of as soon as the first number appears.

The magazine will be made up attractively, filled with well-drawn car-

Act of the Social Traitors of Italy, the "New York Call" Defends D'Aragona

By ANTONIO PESCI
Editor, Alba Nuova, Italian Communist Weekly

The tragic drama of the Italian working class is nearly complete. Today, the third anniversary of the seizure of factories by the workers and [illegible] from workers, the social traitors of the "Hamburg Workers' Internationale" are giving the last touch to the treachery which they began two years ago.

The workers cannot protest, for in their name, any miserable scoundrel can and can say what he may like, because those who are crucified, tortured, killed, exiled, in jail, cannot speak. Only the [illegible] of the famous Judas Iscariots of the Social Democratic Party, leaders of the numerically powerful Italian Confederation of Labor.

Yesterday, the remaining forces of that labor organization met in the city of Milan, the once glorious red proletarian city. There were about 1,200 delegates there, representing thirty-[illegible] federations and twenty-five [illegible] Labor (City Central [illegible]) with a membership of [illegible]. That still represents a force, [illegible] before the reign of terror which [illegible] them. However, in 1920, [illegible] in jail, almost whom the [illegible] workers took possession [illegible] factories, the same Confederation counted more than two million [illegible].

In 1920, the Fascist movement was [illegible]. Mussolini, who before the [illegible] was popular among the workers [illegible] Milan, was unable to rally fifty [illegible]. He and his few gangsters were [illegible] a little noise during the [illegible] and Versailles affairs, with [illegible] and Nitti. Musolini was [illegible] enough; and even [illegible] for the time being in the [illegible] field, outside of the labor [illegible] and the class struggle. [illegible] the factory occupation came, [illegible] Fascisti thought it was better [illegible] to keep their mouths shut, to avoid any uneasantness to themselves. The working class was strong [illegible] so that the cowardly Fascisti [illegible] their tail between their legs, and [illegible] out to find a neutral place.

The workers, strong as they were [illegible] not realize what would happen [illegible] a defeat. Their leaders promised them victory. Control Commission [illegible] the factories, increase in pay, and [illegible], no why worry about the morrow? The red banners were floating [illegible] the chimneys of the factories, [illegible] bosses were kicked out, the red [illegible] was at the office door with [illegible] gun, and bayonet fixed, the machine gunners, the world war veterans [illegible] on the roofs with their machine guns ready to vomit shrapnel [illegible] anyone who would attempt to [illegible] the workers from the factories. [illegible] the soldiers were with the workers. [illegible] The sailors were ready to use [illegible] battleships in defense of the working class. The railroad workers refused to run those trains carrying [illegible] Fiorelli (former secret service [illegible] national body of defense of the [illegible] created by Nitti), and now [illegible] by the Fascisti national [illegible]). The post office workers and [illegible] and telegraph operators [illegible] with the working class. The [illegible] and linotype operators [illegible] the anti-labor news. The [illegible] from the valorous [illegible] Arditi, from the brotherhood to the beautiful and [illegible] Arditi, were ready for the [illegible] the battle for the Social [illegible] Peasants' Republic. Every one [illegible] remembers those memorable days [illegible] terror, passion and hope, and [illegible] today as though he were in [illegible] of the tomb of his beloved [illegible]. Where is the echo of this [illegible] glorious movement of the Italian working class? Where is the echo of the triumphal Hymn of Labor? Where are the red banners which flew above the buildings of many Provinces, [illegible] the factories, above the schools, the railroad engines? Where are they? [illegible] were swept off in the rivers of Fascist blood, there are under fire [illegible] some of the labor buildings, they are covered by the fire of the vandals of the bourgeoisie, they are awaiting the day on which, from the workers' blood will be born the force, the new leadership, to lead the Italian proletariat to the final victory.

But who is most to blame for this tragic picture of the working class of Italy? The "New York Call," as usual, blames all this upon the splits made "at the order of the Communist International," see the "Call" of August 26, 1923). But the same Socialist sheet fails to recollect the exact story. The defeat and the disintegration of the Italian labor movement was not by any means the result of a Communist split, but of the ignominious treachery committed by those who are acting in the same way as the "Call" acts in this country, D'Aragona, Buozzi, Colombino, Gino Baldesi and the other Confederalist leaders, members of the Socialist Party of Italy (now Unitarian Socialists, with Turati, Treves and Modigliani as leaders), always refused to co-operate with the Communists in any way. During the occupation of the factories, those misleaders, opportunistic politicians, refused to take the responsibility for a political struggle against the social and political system of the nation. Notwithstanding the demoralization of the state power and state authority, they insisted on maintaining the struggle on the economic field only. Giolitti, who was the head of the government, in his first speech before the members of the senate, after the workers had been compelled by the above-named leaders to leave the factories and accept the "factory control Committees" promised by the same Giolitti, praised enthusiastically the stand taken by the leaders of the Labor Confederation during this extraordinary revolutionary event. And Giolitti is not the man willing to colorize anyone who has not done anything for the capitalist class and for the imperialistic state. But the leaders of the Labor Confederation, in inducing the workers to accept the government's condition, at that time, surely did something for the state by saving it from the working class insurrection, but they opened the road to the criminal hands of Mussolini.

The working class of Italy was already doomed. That defeat came in the most brutal way, as history, it is too terrible even to think that it is an historic reality of our days. Fascismo, until then unknown, being a mere bunch of renegades and scarecrows, berths like nonentities [illegible] the work of butchery, pillage, assassination, destruction and punitive expeditions against the workers, peasants and Socialists. It is true that the workers were as yet stronger, but the fatal blow had already been administered, and the State power was once again in its full brutal vigor. During the few months after the occupation of the factories, Giolitti did not attempt to arrest the workers who were the most active in the revolutionary movement. In fact, one of his first promises to the social traitors had been that he would not [illegible] arrest, that only the [illegible] of the Communist Party and [illegible] Communist Youth and Maximalist workers did in fact [illegible]. The Italian courts have [illegible] sentenced [illegible] to many years [illegible]. There are at present more than three thousand workingmen in Italian jails [illegible] for from two to twenty and even thirty years of prison, for the "crime" of having taken an active part in the revolutionary struggle, and there are more than two thousand still awaiting trial for that same "crime." The Fascisti Grand Council and the Mussolini government army paid the penalty for the ignoble first act of D'Aragona and company.

The second act is not so hard to describe. But even Paris, Bonomi, something which can be of interest to the working class of America and to the working class of Italy. After the first defeat, if there had been the intention among the leaders of the Confederation to regain power and the workers, they would have attempted to co-operate with the Communist forces. But the Communists, who, in Italy, founded the Communist Party, denounced the Third International, denounced the Soviet government and preferred to deal with the assassins of the proletariat, rather than to ally himself with the revolutionary vanguard of the workers. And where the Fascisti were weaker and the working class stronger, they were asked to make peace with the workers. D'Aragona was the chief sponsor of the Fascist labor pact. But wherever the Fascisti were stronger and the workers weaker, the Mussolini border would show no mercy to anyone suspected of belonging in the labor movement. The Communist cried for unity of action, but D'Aragona, Buozzi, Baldesi, Turati, Treves and the others, answered with heroic attacks against the Communists.

One year ago the final and general battle of the Italian workers was the general strike. For more than three months the Communists were clamoring for action against the hundreds of Fascisti crimes perpetrated against the workers, but the Confederal leaders remained in silence. Only at the end of July, when there was a possibility for some one of them to become minister of the King, stilling the occasion of the ministerial crisis for a protest, they declared a general strike. The Fascisti violence was of secondary importance to them. After four days of general strike, in which the workers responded splendidly, fully determined to crush down Fascismo, those same leaders called off the strike, because Facta made a promise to Turati that he would order the disarming of the Fascisti bands. But this promise was made when the workers were lined up in the field and ready for the fight. The workers, being once more disarmed, returned to work, but Facta forgot his promise to Turati and the Fascisti increased their violence more and more until they got into power.

And now we are witness ng the last act of those illustrious Socialists," as they appear to the New York Call. This last one is the complete surrender of the remainder forces of the Confederation of Labor to the Fascisti government. The vote taken at the Congress of Milan by the delegates, means that the work of the treachery of its leaders, begun in 1920 or so, has at last been completed, over the tombs of more than three thousand workers massacred by the Fascisti, over the two hundred members of Labor burned, over the ruins of 800 workers' co-operatives, workers' printing plants, libraries, splendid clubs, private houses, municipal buildings and many other workers' institutions or institutions controlled by the workers.

Workers of America, learn something from this tragic lesson of the Italian proletariat. Beware of the trust those leaders who are denouncing the Communist International. Do not trust those leaders who want to eliminate the revolutionary forces from the labor unions! Be always alert like sentinels! Watch closely those who are at the head of your organization! Do not be soldiers only, but prepare yourselves to become the leaders, the captains in the future battle for your destiny!

The dome just completed in Milan is too sad, too bloody, and we must avoid a repetition of it. The hour is grave even for the American labor movement; but have faith in yourselves, have faith in your organized strength, and fight like warriors the battle of the Communist International!

The Young Workers Co-operate.

The Young Workers League of Chicago, in order to throw its full strength behind the campaign for The Daily Worker, has decided not to hold any branch meetings on the night of the big rally in Chicago for The Daily, Friday evening, Sept. 21. The Young Workers League has also decided not to hold any separate rally of its own for The Daily as it had previously resolved, because of the quick succession of various meetings which would make a League meeting doubtful of success. The Chicago local, however, will make up for this by supporting wholeheartedly and fully the meetings arranged by the Workers Party, both financially and morally. The League members are very well known for their energy, spirit and enthusiasm in such campaigns, and it is expected that in spite of the difficulties, the young workers will go over the top with their quota: $5 000 for the Daily Worker Campaign Fund!

AND STILL THEY COME!

A Marshfield section branch of the Young Workers League is soon to be definitely organized. At its last meeting, Max Bedacht, of Chicago, will be present. Young Worker, put over an able appeal which won many of them over. Regular officers will be elected at the next meeting, Friday, Sept. 17, at 1008 S. Marshfield Ave. Comrade Rose Lurye is in charge of organization and can be reached at the above address for further information.

The DAILY WORKER will light up the path along which the whole working class will march toward emancipation.

Martial Law in Oklahoma Only Fake Move Against Ku Klux Klan

BY HARRISON GEORGE

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 7.—State of insurrection and rebellion exists within and throughout the state of Oklahoma," according to a proclamation for state-wide martial law issued today by Governor J. C. Walton, in calling out 4,000 state militiamen. This is to be done "for the protection of the Ku Klux Klan, which is to say for the support of business men, big and little of Oklahoma. Martial law in Tulsa was not enough.

The governor declared that "all civil power and authority has been overthrown and destroyed" by the Klan. The reason that, as Walton states, the [illegible] has rendered useless all constituted authority "prosecuting attorneys, sheriffs, jury commissioners and [illegible] officers of the government, selected by a combine of the socialistic farmers and workers with the democratic party, which party has always been the radical support and repudiation of what is known here as the "Shawnee Regular" combine of state-owned banks, cement plants, the thousand dollar exemption tax law, minimum wage law, etc., is forced into power by the support of another economic class to fortify his political power. Thus he has forced the Klan, and its business men and other capitalists who hold the Ku Klux Klan in the hollow of their hands.

The small business man is proverbially obtuse — a Babbitt, and seems not to have taken Walton seriously. Hence a sudden access of moral indignation on the part of Walton against the Klan floggings which long ago made the almighty practice of the Klan, and the edict of martial law in Tulsa county.

H. O. McClure, president of the Tulsa Chamber of Commerce, tried to arrange a treaty of compromise between the Chamber of Commerce, which is, of course, the leading spirit of the Tulsa Klan with the Tulsa Tribune as its daily spokesman, and the governor. The Klan seems to have refused to take responsibility for past floggings, modify its future practices and support the governor in exchange for continued organization unmolested by the governor and the immediate withdrawal of martial law from Tulsa. Saturday night, Sept. 15th, the board of directors of the Tulsa Chamber of Commerce voted to refuse to accept its president's report embodying the public part of the compromise, and within a few hours Walton extended martial law to cover the entire state.

When it is understood that Walton has sufficient evidence in his hands to convict on felony charges of riot and inciting to riot, many of the high and influential officials of the Klan, yet allows them to go about freely while [illegible] the only ones who have been sent to the penitentiary are three humble and ignorant Klan members, the insincerity of his drive against the Klan is apparent. The Klan official who was proven to have incited these three members to a flogging, is still untouched.

Meanwhile, as the gangs of dirty politics, supported by the Oscar Ameringer "socialist" turncoats, is being played against the dirtier gang of Klan Ku Kluxism, etc., to keep power over the people of Oklahoma, the socialist farmers who supported Walton and his [illegible] workers who are the dupes of "leading citizens" in the Klan are the common victims of the [illegible] in any way the leaders of the masked assassins and floggers of the Ku Klux Klan.

[illegible] The capitalist government is content in the belief that with a coming industrial depression and a shrinkage of the class struggle, the klan will probably clarify its program into a definitely anti-communist, patriotic orgy of illegal violence against all militant workers—a typically Fascist body drawing its numerical strength from the petty bourgeoisie and the ignorantly patriotic workers.

The capitalist class is prepared to surrender the government of the United States to a Fascist dictatorship, just as the Liberal Premier Facta surrendered to Mussolini, and as Alfonso surrendered to the Fascist General Primo de Rivera in Spain. The reactionary labor leaders, yellow socialists and anarcho-syndicalists who oppose the dictatorship of the proletariat will be found on the side of Fascism. It is a choice between dictatorships. The nascent American Fascism must be met with a united front of all workers' and farmers' organizations.

The Language Federations and the Daily

By ABRAHAM JAKIRA

The establishment in this country of a daily Communist paper in the English language must be considered as an important historic event. Every worker of America should be proud of the opportunity to be one of the founders of such a Daily and do everything possible to make its appearance on the date set.

Thousands of capitalist and reactionary labor papers are flooding the country with lies and misrepresentations about the communists and the communist movement.

The capitalist press is one of the most effective strike-breaking agencies in the hands of the employers. William Z. Foster's book—The Steel Strike of 1919—gives a most vivid picture of the part played by the kept press in breaking that famous strike. As these lines are being written the entire capitalist press is full of wild and fantastic stories about the communists and the Workers Party of America. These stories are spread by Daugherty and Burns thru the infamous heads of U. M. W. A. Our enemies are encouraged by the fact that we, with but a weekly paper in the English language, are powerless to defend ourselves against their vicious and contemptible attacks.

The need for a daily paper in the English language has never been so great. Every American worker and especially the members of the Party, should get behind the drive for the establishment of such a daily. This applies especially to the foreign born workers in this country. These are the most exploited, oppressed and persecuted, yet the most powerless of the working class because of their inability to speak the native tongue. It is the foreign born workers especially who in their struggle with the capitalist class must rely upon the communist press as the sole defender of their interests, their only spokesman in this country. The writer for the last few years has had an opportunity to be in the closest contact with the revolutionary foreign born workers in this country. And he knows the splendid spirit shown by these workers in supporting the communist press in their own language. A glance at the Party press in the numerous languages will readily bear this out. Only a few perhaps know the sacrifices made for their paper by comrades of the Russian Federation during the last few years. The November 7th, Sept. 14 for instance carries an announcement that 40 Russian workers of Detroit donated to that paper one thousand dollars, each one contributing twenty-five dollars today for the Proletarier. A party member in revolutionary Russia [illegible] a month's salary to the [illegible] is an enormous influx of subscription to the paper. Factories, shops and towns [illegible] to work and give, each man his mite, the sum total into thousands of rubles.

On the 15th of May, 1912, appeared the first daily paper in Russian published by workers—"Pravda" (truth). The workers realized by their own experience that, from the first moment, although the price was only two kopecks (one cent) it began to pay its way. Lenin and Zinoviev were living abroad, but contributed regularly, [illegible] the paper a firm line of policy. The body of its paper was filled with living and vigorous matter by the workers' mass itself.

The Russian Historical Commission found in the archives of the Okrana ("Russian Secret Police) a letter written to Lenin at the time by one of the members of the editorial committee, which is reproduced in part, as follows:

"August 14, 1913. Our paper seems to be on its last legs, in its death agony, as you might say; but we are keeping our spirits up and are not thinking of giving in as yet. It is [illegible] daily, but still it circulates amongst the Petrograd proletariat in 12,000 or more copies. It is written by workers, is not 'talking,' and only confiscations have brought it down almost by half. As for losses they are very great, but subscriptions are very great, too. Never yet has a labor paper met with such sympathy and material support as now. Money and greetings pour in on us as from a horn of plenty. . . The workers have become so accustomed, they have so grown into the paper, that it has become an immediate and essential requirement, and for them to lose it would be equivalent to suicide!"

Comrade Herlin, business manager of the "Pravda," 1912 to 1914, writes:

"The office used to receive scores of letters, particularly from the country. 'We very much want to see the good old Pravda, but it is no good subscribing for it, for they don't hand it over, and take you in as well, as likely as not. Couldn't it be done secretly?' And the office despatched this legal paper 'secretly,' in sealed envelopes or parcels, inside other papers, etc. . . . The enormous prestige enjoyed by 'Pravda' and the importance of correspondence from the workshop, may be seen from facts like the following: When a letter appeared in the 'Privodnik' workers at Riga, the Petrograd office of the firm immediately wired Riga and at the request of the latter, the Czarist secret local authorities usually confiscated the issues on arrival, irrespective of whether the central censorship had passed it or not. Nevertheless, here, as always, we turned out to be cleverer and more inventive than the capitalists: on that day an insignificant number were sent as compositors, while the bulk of the copies went the next day to another address."

So closely connected with the daily life of the workers was the "Pravda" that it forced the "Luzatsch" yellow journal of the Menshevists, to suspend for lack of readers, and called the Menshevik "Luch," (forerunner of the present "Luch," "Ray," "Call" type) and maintained its existence continuously from the time of its foundation up to the present time.

The inspiring example of the "Pravda," produced and distributed under infinitely more difficult circumstances than the American comrades have dreamed of, should spur members on to ever greater efforts to establish in this country the first English-language Communist Daily, a powerful workers' paper which will unite the American proletariat for the conquest of political power, will guide and inspire them in all the struggles against their exploiters.

Philadelphia Holds Big Meeting.
(Special to "The Worker")

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—More than 2,000 needle trades workers packed the big hall here to listen to Ben Gitlow and Caleb Harrison at a meeting arranged to protest the shooting at William Z. Foster in Chicago. The meeting was the biggest of the kind that Philadelphia has seen. The sentiment of the audience was unmistakably on the side of the progressives in the unions.

The speakers were frequently interrupted with applause when they denounced the ugly tactics of the reactionary union leaders in using thugs, gunmen and gangsters in order to stop the advance of the left wing movement within the needle trades union.

Many of those who had formerly been identified with the "right wing" expressed their disgust at the methods used by their faction to fight the progressives.

"You Can't Believe a Word You Read"

That's what every workingman and woman says about the capitalist daily papers.

The workers are fed up with lies about Soviet Russia, English, French and U. S. imperialism, and doctored "news" about strikes, unions and the workers' life.

The capitalist daily paper represents the Chambers of Commerce, the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, big business interests, big advertisers, and the whole capitalist class.

The capitalist daily paper gives the EMPLOYER'S side of the class struggle, confuses the workers and creates "public opinion" against them thus helping to defeat the workers in all their struggles.

A Communist fighting national daily in the English language is necessary to keep up a constant stream of trustworthy information for the workers.

Such a daily communist paper will help to build up the unions, crystallize the unorganized into independent working class political action, develop the fighting spirit and increase the class-consciousness of the workers.

A daily Communist paper will fight for the recognition of Soviet Russia, for the release of political and class-war prisoners; for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party; for the amalgamation of the craft unions for powerful fighting industrial organizations; for the organization of the unorganized; for a united front of workers' and farmers' government.

A daily Communist paper will expose the treachery of the reactionary trade union leaders; the hypocrisy of the church; the chicanery of the professional politicians; the prostitution of the capitalist press to the interests of capitalist imperialism; the menace of new imperialist wars; the dangers of fascism and the open shop.

A daily English Communist paper will fight against unemployment, long hours, unsanitary and dangerous working conditions, injunctions, the use of the militia and police in strikes against the use of private detectives and against provocateurs and gunmen employers.

A daily English Communist paper will uphold and support the workers in the exercise of the rights of free speech, freedom of the press, and public assemblage.

In order to establish and maintain such a communist English daily the workers must themselves provide the necessary means.

The Greatest Workers' Daily-"Pravda"

By JOHN J. BALLAM

Since we are about to publish in this country a Daily Communist newspaper in the English language, it may be well to recount briefly the experiences of our Russian comrades in their struggle to establish and maintain the greatest workers' daily newspaper in the world—"Pravda."

We are now in the midst of a great campaign for The Daily Worker, and making a public appeal for funds, whereas our comrades in Russia were under the constant scrutiny of the secret police and carried on their campaign underground.

Our Russian Comrades always realized the vital importance of the workers' press as a means of uniting the exploited peasants and workers in their struggle against their oppressors. They sacrificed time, energy, liberty and often life itself to maintain and to extend the influence of their press.

Recently the Pravda issued a jubilee number celebrating the tenth anniversary of almost continuous existence of that fighting proletarian newspaper, which is the source of the following extracts:

"In December, 1910, the joint party leaders (Bolshevik and Menshevik) succeeded in creating a legal weekly —"Zvezda" (The Star). It was suppressed the next summer, as the editorial board was partly arrested, and partly dispersed. In the autumn the paper fell almost entirely into the hands of the Bolsheviks, and due to its changed character it rapidly began to come closer to the working masses. . . . It stipulated the desire

Show "The Fifth Year" at Orchestra Hall in Chicago on October 6

"The Fifth Year," a nine-reel motion picture film showing actual conditions under which the workers of Russia are living at the present time, will be shown at the Orchestra Hall, 220 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Oct. 6.

The picture gives an accurate insight into the life of both the factory workers and the peasants, and also shows the Red Army in the field and on parade. A traveler just returned from Russia said that one could learn more about Russian life and see more of Russian scenery in two hours by watching this picture than by traveling around a whole year.

Various international labor conferences and a shop soviet session in one of the clothing factories run by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America are high lights of special interest to labor.

Opposition to the film in some sections by forces hostile to union labor, should make the workers of Chicago more than anxious to see this film.

Moscow Is Rapidly Recovering, Shown by Recent Vital Statistics

MOSCOW.—The area of Moscow province before the revolution was 20,000 square miles; with the addition of certain surrounding districts since 1917, it now covers 17,500 square miles.

The population of the province is now estimated at 4,847,000, of whom 2,400,000 live in the city; that is, the population is about the same as in 1911. The growth in the city has been slow as compared with industrial countries in the main, but is more rapid than in Petrograd or Japan as a result of the revival of the industrial and economic activities of the province.

The natural increase in population is running pre-war dimensions. During the last three years the death rate has fallen considerably; in 1920 it was 32.5 per 1,000; in 1921, 29.0; in 1922, 24.4; and the annual rate for the first quarter of 1923 was only 154. The probability is that the death rate during the current year will be below twenty. Deaths from consumption have also decreased to very nearly the pre-war level. It is particularly to be noted that, in spite of the general adverse conditions of recent years, the maternity and infant welfare legislation of the revolution has had a marked effect upon the infant death rate, which has fallen from 297 per 1,000 in pre-war times to 240 at the present time.

Red Sparks in American Literature

PATRICK HENRY'S RESOLUTIONS.
By ROSE SAVONOVSKY.

Prior to the American Revolution, the western hemisphere as she now treats Canada, giving her home rule. She was as yet to learn the lesson that the American colonies were to teach her.

Old Mother Brittania wanted to assert her authority in America. The colonies could not raise any raw material, such as wool, for instance, that England herself produced; they could not manufacture goods, such as cotton textiles that England herself manufactured although they could raise the cotton that England did not raise, but needed for her manufactories. Besides, England claimed the right to restrain, and bind the colonies in every way she wanted to. The American colonies could have as much "freedom" in a word, as they would be allowed by the mother country took unto herself.

The colonists were in much the same fix as a modern working man in a capitalist country, who is at liberty to quit his job—and starve to death if he does not wish to be exploited by his employer. If they did not like the treatment they got at the hands of England, they could petition king or parliament, or both, for a redress of grievances, with the usual result that both politely ignored their mild protest.

In 1765, when abuses were piling up rather high, Patrick Henry stepped into the limelight in Virginia. He had but recently entered the House of Burgesses when that body was confronted with the problem of the Stamp Act just passed by Parliament.

According to this act, a special tax was placed on all checks and documents. The colonies were opposed to it when it was being discussed in England, but now that it was passed, the timorous right wingers of the time were in favor of yielding to this measure as does the growing grain to the breeze.

There were some people, however, who saw the injustices of English dominance, and were opposed to it. Foremost of these were Samuel Adams, of Massachusetts, and Patrick Henry, of Virginia. They were the real militant leaders of the Revolution and England put a premium on their heads.

Patrick Henry introduced seven resolution in the House of Burgesses that made the more conservative members gasp for breath. According to Thomas Jefferson, the debate that followed the introduction of these resolutions was "most bloody."

The first resolution was to the effect that the American colonists, as direct descendants of Englishmen, were entitled to the same rights as were the inhabitants of England. The second resolution stated that these rights had been recognized by two royal charters granted by King James I. The third resolution denied the right to taxation by representation.

"Taxation by representation" was taken up as the war cry of the revolutionists. That the colonies had always enjoyed the right of taxation by representation was brought out in the fourth resolution. The fifth resolution was to the effect that any move to take away this liberty was a "tendency to destroy British as well as American freedom." "That his majesty's liege people, the inhabitants of this colony (Virginia) were not bound to yield obedience to any law or ordinance whatever designed to impose any taxation whatsoever upon them other than the laws or ordinances of the General Assembly" was the sixth resolution. It and the seventh, which provided that any person who would "maintain or assert" that any power other than the General Assembly could levy taxes was an enemy to the colony, were defeated. The first five, after a most heated discussion, were finally adopted.

During the course of this discussion, Patrick Henry made several oldtime speeches in defense of his resolutions. Jefferson wrote, "Torrents of sublime eloquence from Mr. Henry, backed by the solid reason of Johnston prevailed." After enumerating the British abuses with suitable invectives, Patrick Henry exclaimed, "Caesar had his Brutus; Charles the First, his Cromwell, and George the Third" (who was then king of England)—here he was interrupted by the speaker who shouted, "Treason, treason," Samuel was repeated by others. The orator defiantly paused until the noise subsided, then he concluded, "and George the Third may profit by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it."

History does repeat itself. People who have power often, too often abuse it. Then the people who have taken advantage of, some submit without a why or wherefore, while others not only feel its abuses, but bring them to light and oppose them with every fibre of their being.

Temporal issues, although they are the instruments which bring out the powers of liberty-loving people, still, when one looks over the whole of history, do not seem so important as man's inherent love of freedom and his struggle for it.

The abuses of England were the temporal issues of Patrick Henry's day. If he were alive today he would quite likely oppose the abuses of capitalism, and assert himself on the issues of the present day.

Farmers Win Free Speech Fight.

MT. VERNON, Wash.—The Western Progressive Farmers and Workers have staged a comeback in this town where Elmer Smith was arrested recently and fined for repeating the Declaration of Independence. They advertised another speech by Smith, the labor lawyer from Centralia, and filled the town with two thousand farmers and workers from the woods. Smith spoke for two hours. The crowd was so enthusiastic that the American Legion and other ultra patriotic elements were afraid to attempt to break up the meeting. The farmers declare that never again will Mt. Vernon attempt to mob anyone who wishes to tell the truth about industrial conditions.

With the aid of the progressive elements in the neighborhood, Smith has established the constitutional rights of free speech and assemblage in one of the most reactionary towns in the state of Washington.

The DAILY WORKER will lead the American labor movement to the definite end of conquering political power.

Urge United Front of Labor for Big Political Struggle

The time seems ripe for a united front of labor in America. Events are rapidly approaching a new era in the political life of the country, such as has never been known in the history of United States.

The capitalist economic prophesies of the capitalist economists, that nothing might add to, will signal a new "open shop" campaign more ferocious than ever before in the history of labor. The reactionary legislation of the revolution has had a marked effect upon the infant death rate, which has risen from 297 per 1,000 in pre-war times to 240 at the present time.

Is a united front of labor possible? Can our, at present sadly disorganized and divided forces be united into one compact mass to meet these attacks, and what can be done? Federated Labor Party do toward the establishment of such a united front?

These will be the subjects to be discussed at a mass meeting to be held in Wicker Park Hall, 2040 W. North Ave., Friday, Sept. 28th, at 8 P. M. The speakers will be Joseph Manley, Secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Earl Browder, managing editor of the Labor Herald, and Jay Lovestone, author of the "Government Strikebreaker." All these speakers are well qualified to discuss these subjects and they have a very important message to bring to the workers. The meeting is being held under the auspices of the Workers Party, Dist. No. 8. All Chicago Party members should make sure to be present and bring other workers along. Everybody is invited.

Detroit T. U. E. L. Activities.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Detroit Branch of the Trade Union Educational League at its regular meeting heard reports from the delegates who attended the second conference of the League in Chicago.

The League is giving a movie show and dance Saturday, Sept. 22nd, at Arbeiter Haus, 2101 Orleans Ave. The Fox Film Corporation's two-reel picture, "RED RUSSIA," has been secured for this occasion. This picture has been shown in the leading theaters throughout the country, and was only recently at the Fox-Washington in Detroit. It is as if especially adapted as an exposé of the methods of the reactionaries to twist the minds of the masses. The sub-titles bristle in vindictive terms but the pictures themselves serve as an anti-climax. As a case in point, one sub-title announces Lenin as a blood-thirsty autocrat, while the picture that follows shows him with a benevolent smile on his face, playing with a little kitten.

There will also be a two-reel comedy, "THE REPORTER," portraying the adventures of a cub reporter in the clutches of Michigan bandits. This is one of the funniest comedies ever screened and is guaranteed to furnish 80 laughs to a minute. Following the comedy show the floor will be cleared for the dance.

Members and sympathizers of the Labor Sports and Workers Party are urged to give this affair their fullest support. The proceeds of the entertainment will be used to extend the work of the League in Detroit. Admission is 50 cents.

In Free America.

The uprising of a large body of West Virginia citizens resolved to defend liberty in their state and to struggle for human rights in Logan and other "closed counties" is most significant. "Local action against local oppression is the slogan of the Defenders of West Virginia." The same local struggle on a lesser scale is evidenced in the strike among the silk weavers of Paterson where Chief of Police Tracy notorious in anti-labor operations has prohibited street meetings of the Associated Silk Workers and arrested two members for talking "seditious" to their fellow workers. Brockton, Mass., continues to close public grounds to shoe workers, many of whom, since the end of the outlaw strike, have organized in an Open Forum for educational and propaganda purposes. In the Massachusetts mines of the Consolidated Coal Co. where a strike has been in progress 17 months, the operators' gunmen continue their foul slay.

Riots instituted by the anti-Klan factions in Perth Amboy, N. J., and Binghamton, N. Y., show the vicious resentment against the Klan now gradually expressing itself throughout the East. The solution of its own methods by its enemies is of course, righteously protested by the Klan.

Open Forum in Denver, Colo.

Denver, Colo., subscribers of "The Worker" will be interested to know that a Sunday evening open forum has been started at Machinists' Hall, 1716 California St. The Denver Local Workers Party is planning to establish headquarters at this address.

Fall Dance Season Arrives in Chicago

The fall dancing season will be introduced by the great Amalgamation Dance on Saturday evening, Sept. 29th, at the Ashland Auditorium. The great assembly hall that housed the recent convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will be jammed by none other than Sol Wagner (in person) and his ten well-known Society Syncopators.

This affair is the first of its kind arranged by the T. U. E. L. Needle Trades Section. Everything possible has been done to insure this undertaking to be one of the greatest successes in the radical movement. No effort and no stone has been spared to put this thing over. Space does not allow to tell of the ball room and its many attractions but the comforts of the great Ashland Auditorium are very well known to all.

The grave situation in the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union by this time is known to the whole world. The disgrace heaped upon the union who dare agree with the policies and program of the T. U. E. L. is rousing the entire membership. We must get the message of the T. U. E. L. to strengthen the unions, especially in the face of the bosses avowal that they will now start their open shop drive. Those who come will feel the great need of spreading the message of the T. U. E. L.

You are helping the cause of the expelled militants of the I. L. G. W. U. by attending this dance. Naturally you are helping yourself to a good time. We'll see you all, Saturday, September 29th at Ashland Auditorium.

Compers Fails Nation's Youths; Organize the Young Workers!

BY MAX BEDACHTMAN.

After having allowed Sam Compers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to address us for a half hour on the needs of the young workers, the Trade Union Educational League has decided to bring the issue to the rank and file of organized labor.

Sam Compers has failed miserably in his attempt to show the A. F. of L. that it has any program for the organization of the young workers in this country the necessity of organizing the millions of young workers into the unions. Mr. Compers, the high executive council of the American Federation of Labor is made that promise his organization has miserably failed to live up to.

If this is a question which is of such insignificance to the A. F. of L. as compared to other matters, why did they appoint a committee to investigate it? NO! The number of young workers employed in industry is increasing every day. Reports of the U. S. Department of Labor show that in income upon dozens of cities this will round to the tune of a sudden jump. This is largely due to two facts: One is that in the general drive to, from the organized unions in industry the bosses have found that young workers can easily be used to scab, and two, that with the prostituted Supreme Court having declared the Child Labor law unconstitutional, the employment of children has been given a tremendous impetus.

In New Jersey, for example, the organization of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union have found it almost impossible to unionize the dress shops there. Where Mr. Compers because of the enormous number of young workers employed in them. In West Virginia, Kentucky, and the whole southern coal mining district, young workers are one of the barriers with which union organizers have to contend. During the last summer vacation university students from upstate New York colleges were used to break the strike of the railway shopmen on the Pennsylvania, B. & O. Olean, N. Y. Harrisburg and Altoona, Pa. And the shame of the labor movement is the fact that it was the Churchill League for Industrial Democracy, a milk-and-water organization of sky pilots, that took the initiative in writing, printing and distributing a leaflet upon the students to play fair, not to "violate the American college spirit, and affront their own self-respect."

A couple of months ago 60 boys were used as strikebreakers in the plant of E. Wiener Co. when the upholsterers left the shop after an announcement that thereafter the piece work plan would prevail. "Besides the piecework grievance" says a Federated Press dispatch, "the strikers charged that the company was turning the plant into a kindergarten, a claim that was verified when it was found that children even below the permit age were being put into the factory themselves."

And every day brings new instances of the importance which the employment of young workers is assuming in the struggle of the workers against their bosses. While we recognize the fundamental principle that all child labor is to be abolished completely, we also recognize the fact that while it is more profitable for the capitalists to employ the young worker instead of the adult, he will do so. We also recognize the fact that the young workers are forced as producers to an enormous extent, enormous enough to warrant their being organized into unions.

The youngest worker can be organized. Newsboys have been organized into A. F. of L. unions in at least two cities in Seattle where John Nordhern was the leading spirit and delegate to the Central Labor Council, and in Chicago where young Robert Buck was active until his recent death. If only the trade unions would take a more sympathetic attitude towards the young workers there is no doubt of the possibilities for organization. Only recently, in New York, 800 plumbers' helpers who had been receiving from $2.50 to $4.50 a day went out on strike for a uniform wage scale of $6.00 a day, and recognition for their recently formed union, the United Plumbers' Helpers and Assistants Union. They organized their own union and demanded recognition of it by the Master Plumbers Association because the regular A. F. of L. union, the Journeymen Plumbers, REFUSED TO RECOGNIZE THEM!

The bosses, as usual, are more foresighted than the workers. The American Newspaper Publishing Asso. at its recent meeting in New York went on record in favor of sponsoring printing trades schools for the instruction of printers; favoring the establishing of regional schools in every section of the United States and Canada, to be financed by newspapers in their own sections, and creating a printing trades schools fund to be collected from the membership of the association, for the purpose of promoting the school plan throughout the United States and Canada. The official organ of the International Typographical Union remarks that this is a "direct slap at the printing trades unions." And young workers will form the vast majority of these talent at these schools which are nothing but scab nests.

Here is a very important problem which must be dealt with immediately. The progressives and radicals in the labor movement have taken the slogan, "Organize the unorganized!" In this campaign we must not for a moment forget the great masses of unorganized who are young workers and who seek unions. We must go to them to enroll the working youth, to make it easier for them to enter the unions by lowering the initiation fees to accord with the ability of young workers to pay. It is not only for their own benefit, but for union self-preservation. The young workers are rebelling and will forever the future of the trade unions to break the control of the unions ex-

Michigan Is Still Afraid

The first anniversary of the 1922 "Red Raids" in Michigan finds the state made famous by Ford's flivvers still in fear and trembling. The attack on the Communists at Bridgeman, the efforts to send Foster, Ruthenberg and others to prison, has not ended radicalism in the home of Newberryism, with its abundant crop of millionaire U. S. senators.

We glean these conclusions from the columns of the Michigan Farm Bureau News, of recent issue, which carries an article, set in two-column italics, asking, "Will Michigan Farmers Become Radicals?" We knew that iron ore from Minnesota went into the making of automobiles in Detroit. We welcome this indication that the farmer-labor victory in Minnesota is putting iron into the political aspirations of Michigan's farmers.

"Farmers of Michigan have never shown any sympathy for any form of radicalism in the state," wails the Farm Bureau News. "Are the officials of Michigan and the state administrative board going to force Michigan farmers to join the Nonpartisan League or some similar organization? We suggest that the State Coalition Committee make an investigation of this situation.

"The Farm Bureau, the State Grange, and other conservative farmer organizations have always stood for keeping the farmers out of any such radical movement. It now appears that their efforts along this line have not been appreciated by manufacturing and distributing interests."

Pity the poor State Coalition Committee. Stanley M. Powell, associate editor of the Farm Bureau News, confesses that the ambition of the Coalition Committee is to "prevent the spread of radicalism within the state and to insure the dominance of the old line political parties in the state. However," he continues, in a signed letter, "it has been hinted to me that in reality it is merely the political mouthpiece of the Michigan Manufacturers Association, of which John Lovett, of Detroit, is the executive secretary."

When the Farm Bureau News, therefore, appeals to the manufacturers in Michigan's big open shop industrial centers to curb the radicalism in the agricultural districts, it is time the farmers exposed this news bureau for what it really is. Michigan's farmers showed their mettle when they refused to agree on a conviction of William Z. Foster, at St. Joseph, Mich. Let the thinking men among them, the kind that demanded Foster's acquittal, organize and unite their forces with the city workers, with labor in the coal, iron and copper mines, all recognizing their common interests. A drive in this direction would be a fitting celebration of the first anniversary of the raids against the Communists at Bridgeman.

Find the Gunman!

"The Advance," official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, edited by Joseph Schlossberg, asks, "Why does not the Chicago police find the gunman?" whot shot at William Z. Foster while addressing a mass meeting at the Ashland Auditorium.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union has suffered, on several occasions, in Chicago, from the brutal and illegal raids and arrests of the local police and state prosecutors. "The Amalgamated" knows the power behind the bosses' blows. It, therefore, knows whereof it speaks when it says:

"The state's attorney in Chicago has enough power to raid union offices, seize their property and have their officers indicted without any shred of evidence; Why does he not use his great power to bring the would-be assassin to the bar of justice?

"The federal department of justice, at great expense to the American people obtained the useless information that Foster was present at an unprovoked meeting at an obscure place in Michigan, and then spent more money and energy at a useless trial to send Foster to the penitentiary for that crime; Why does not the department of justice use its great and vast machinery to apprehend the man who tried to kill an American citizen? Because that American citizen happens to be William Z. Foster the department of justice, the state's attorney and the Chicago police permit a dangerous criminal to be at large and endanger the lives of other citizens rather than arrest the gunman and thus perhaps reveal the identity of the enemies of labor who had sent him to commit murder.

"Murder was attempted at a labor meeting and that should be enough for the labor movement, regardless of its attitude to the group affected, to demand of the Government to take immediate action. The man who shot Bill Dropper was promptly arrested. Why is the man who shot at a labor meeting of thousands of people free?"

This outspoken declaration of the official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is in startling contrast to the vapid utterances that appeared in "Justice," the official organ of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Instead of raising the cry, "Find the Gunman!" "Justice" wants to know what rights Foster receives as secretary of the Trade Union Educational League. Instead of exposing the would-be assassins, "Justice," edited by the Gompers disciple, Yanovsky, seeks to turn attention from the crimes of the Sigman administration in the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, by throwing slurs at Foster.

"The Advance" might push its efforts to "Find the Gunman!" by addressing a few pertinent questions to "Justice," the mouthpiece of Sigman.

REACTIONARY MINERS' OFFICIALS JOIN HANDS WITH CIVIC FEDERATIONISTS

Nova Scotia Coal Miners Find Law Is "Queer Thing"

(Special to "The Worker")

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia.—John Lewis aped the worst practices of the labor fakirs bosses of this continent when he entered the capitalist courts of Nova Scotia to secure an injunction against the officers of District 26 which would prevent them from using the officers of the United Mine Workers in that field. At the hearing on the injunction application [illegible], the appointee of Lewis, produced an affidavit from D. H. McDougall, vice-president of the British Empire Steel Corporation showing that Lewis had advised Roy Wolvin, president of the corporation, that he was deposing the district officers and revoking the charter of District 26 for making the co-operation of the officials of Besco to carry out his plans. The affidavit also shows that at that time McDougall has only met with Barrett and the provisional officers requested by Lewis.

In the decision handed down by Justice Mellish on August 13th it is made clear while Lewis had power to depose officers he was not empowered to appoint constitutional officers in their stead. Lewis has left the district in the position of having no officers to carry on its business and the only way in which officers could be placed in power was by means of a district election. The local's carried out these things and demanded that district elections be arranged for so that the situation could be cleared up.

However the miners of Nova Scotia are learning that the law is a "queer thing." When the order to carry the decision on the injunction into effect pending the trial in October was issued it was found to merely consist of an order restraining the district officers from functioning as officers in any capacity. When it was pointed out to the judge that he had neglected to incorporate his decision regarding Lewis having no power to appoint provisional officers in the district in order he remarked that he had merely used the statement on this point "in the course of my reasoning." So Lewis gets his injunction against the officers of the district and his provisional officers are in power. The trial in October will not change the state of affairs.

Instead of arranging for a district election as the locals have asked Lewis has sent a circular to the locals instructing them to pay the district per capita to the provisional officers and to "recognize" them. The circular shows that unless the locals do these things they will be expelled from the union. The locals are paying their per capita. The miners know the necessity of an organization for their protection. Even in spite of their opposition to the provisional officers selected by Lewis the locals are obeying the instructions rather than risk expulsion from the union.

Recently the provisional gang rushed to the capitalist press that the deposed officers were attempting to form dual unions. They also stated that the funds that were being collected for defense of the steel workers and miners arrested and blacklisted during the strikes were the Nova Scotia Workers' Defense Committee were being used to hamper the "international" in its work in the district. Committees from the locals appearing before the provisional officers with grievances have been insulted and threatened with expulsion because subdistrict conventions were held. Every move that could be made to provoke the miners into taking action that could be made an excuse for the revoking of local charters has been made. But the miners know that the plan of Lewis and the provisional officers is to expel the best locals and then rush into elections when it is safe for them to do so. For that reason the miners are doing all they can to prevent them getting an excuse to expel their locals.

So far as the Cape Breton miners are concerned there will be no dual union formed. Today is the period of retreat but on the morrow it will be demonstrated that the miners who can retreat in good order can also advance once favorable ground is found for a battle for the possession of the union. It is only fools who attempt to fight their enemies on ground chosen by the enemy.

2,500 New York Pressmen Stop Publication of Daily Papers; Major Berry Is Herding Scabs

By H. M. WICKS
(Special to "The Worker.")

NEW-YORK CITY.—On the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 18, the population of New York awoke to find the news stands swept clean of all the great metropolitan dailies. This was the result of a decree of the 2,500 workers in the press rooms of the newspapers who had voted for a strike at midnight on Monday.

The publishers were caught unawares and were stunned at the quick action of the pressmen, for they had full confidence in the ability of the servile flunkey of capitalism, the notorious strike breaking, scab-herding commander of the American Legion, apostle of American Fascism and president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, Major George L. Berry, to force the men to remain on the job thru his campaign of terrorism.

The members of Web Pressmen's Union, No. 25, affiliated with the International, met at 8 o'clock on Monday night in regular monthly meeting at Beethoven Hall, expecting to hear a report from George L. Berry and the Board of Directors of the International Union who had arbitrarily taken charge of negotiations that he be found and brought to the meeting to report. A committee was dispatched to his elegant suite of rooms at the ultra-plutocratic Waldorf-Astoria, but Berry was "out" and could not be found.

The members of the Board of Directors also remained away from the meeting. A communication from this Board was read to the members that was far from satisfactory, inasmuch as it left conditions in the press rooms practically as they had been for the past year and a half under the terms of the Manton award.

It was plain that the rank and file were again being betrayed by their international officers, who had helped the publishers enforce the odious terms of the award of Federal Judge Martin T. Manton, which became operative on March 1, 1922. The Manton award was the culmination of a struggle which began in 1921, when the publishers took advantage of the depression in the printing industry and attempted to destroy union conditions in the press rooms. The local union was finally forced into arbitration and Federal Judge Manton was selected as the arbitrator. The decision was finally handed down it was so drastic in its provisions that it practically destroyed the achievements of thirty years' struggle for unionism in the press rooms of the city. The union had lost every point contested. Judge Manton, in his decision, used the precise words of the publishers while efforts at conciliation were being made a few months before.

When the interpretation of the award was later in dispute the publishers arrogantly told the pressmen that they were the only ones capable of interpreting the document. "We ought to know what it means," they boasted. "We wrote it!"

Under this decision the hours of work were increased ten hours per week. The part of the award most stubbornly contested by the pressmen was the clause to the effect that the workmen's time was at the disposal of the publisher. Because of irregular demands for workmen in the pressrooms the Manton award decreed that the employers could call the workers at any time it was thought necessary. The publisher was given the privilege to order the men to report for work at seven a. m. one day, at nine p. m. another day or at twelve o'clock noon or midnight. Under such conditions it was impossible for the pressmen to make any arrangements to be with their families one day in advance, since they were virtual slaves, constantly at the call of their masters.

In addition to this drastic clause which was viciously enforced against the pressmen, there was another (Continued on Page Two)

Years Ago Coal Diggers in Convention Ordered Mitche to Quit These Open Shopper

By JAY LOVESTONE
(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK.—At the sumptuous Lawyers' Club of New York the reactionary leaders of the United Mine Workers were wined and dined the other night by the powerful employers for their loyal service rendered to the owning class.

In appreciation of their surrender of the check-off to the coal mine owners, and in consideration of their remarkable "red exposure," the National Civic Federation honored President John L. Lewis, Vice-President Phil Murray and Editor Ellis Searles of the United Mine Workers. The gorgeous dinner party was ostensibly arranged by the unscrupulous, bitter enemy of labor in honor of T. W. Ashforth, President of the Employers' Federation of Victoria, Australia. Mr. Ashforth is a notorious foe of the Australian organized labor movement and has been responsible for breaking many strikes.

Big Step Backward for Miners

While the capitalist press was busy setting up lying story Number Five of the anti-red serial copied from the files of the Department of Justice in Washington and Pittsburgh for Mr. Gompers, the renowned comrade Scripps, ex-editor of the New York Call, Mr. M. Wright, Messrs. Lewis, Murray and Searles were feverishly attempting the United Mine Workers back twenty years.

It is nothing new for our high-salaried reactionary labor leaders to wine and dine in with the political enemies of labor. But never did the [illegible] John Mitchell was officially present at the [illegible] Lewis, Murray and Searles, who did not even a member of the [illegible] for their [illegible] performance of Lewis, Murray, and Mr.

Major Berry Herds Scabs for Trust Press in New York City

clause to the effect that only the publishers had the right to determine the number of men employed on printing. Work on web presses is the most hazardous occupation in the printing industry. There are frequent casualties, and without an adequate number of workmen the dangers are increased considerably. Under all old contracts there was a clause that no men could be discharged or layed off without two weeks' notice, but under the Manton award the publishers could discharge men at any time they desired, to do so, without any excuse whatsoever.

These conditions were endured until the expiration of the Manton award, which was September 1. The publishers knew that the pent-up fury of the men might break at any moment, so they sent out S. O. S. calls to Tennessee for Major Berry, who has had considerable experience in the latter. When the Manton award was forced upon the pressmen.

Berry came in response to his master's call and induced the men to remain at work after the expiration of the period covered by the award so that Mr. Berry had an opportunity to reach an agreement through conciliation. The pressmen accepted the Berry proposal with the expectation of hearing a report on the progress of negotiations with the publishers at their regular meeting.

When Berry again exposed himself as the conscious tool of the employers by running away and hiding from the meeting on last Monday the fury of the membership burst forth in bitter denunciation of the International officials. An immediate strike vote was demanded from every part of the hall, and at twelve o'clock the vote was carried by thunderous acclamation. Messengers were dispatched to the few pressrooms working at that hour and in half an hour the wheels on every web press in all the capitalist dailies of New York were silenced for the first time in history.

And for the first time since the publication of the first daily newspaper in New York City over a hundred years ago the propaganda of capitalism dripping its deadly poisons into the minds of the workers, was stopped. The slanders distributed to their toil were the dejected look of opium fiends deprived of their daily allotment of dope. At noon they hastened to the streets and still the newsstands were barren. In the evening an edition appeared under the name "Combined New York Newspapers." It was an eight page affair containing the names of all the New York English dailies, with the exception of the Commercial, which signed up with the pressmen, and one or two other trivial and uninfluential publications.

Berry "Outlaws" Strike.

George L. Berry, from his Waldorf-Astoria suite, issued a declaration outlawing the striking pressmen and calling upon those "loyal to the International" to remain at work. In a communication to David Simons, president of Web Pressmen's Union No. 25, Berry declared that the strike was illegal and insisted that the men return to work and permit the International Board to carry on negotiations.

Berry was then requested to attend a meeting of pressmen in Beethoven Hall scheduled for Wednesday the second day of the strike. He attended, but left in disgust when he was confronted with such a display of solidarity on the part of the men that he reluctantly expressed his willingness for it. He arose to speak and addressed the pressmen for fifteen minutes, urging them to return to work. He "guaranteed" that work would be resumed at the old wages pending negotiation—fair arbitration, not lawyers' arbitration, he said. This was received with jeers, as the members of the pressmens' union, like most organized workingmen in America, are coming more appealing to pressmen in other cities to come to New York and enjoy the conditions granted them by the benevolent New York publishers. He also holds the club for expulsion over the heads of the loyal members who remain on strike.

There was no response to the Berry proposal, so Berry called a meeting of his own on Sunday afternoon at Town Hall.

"Sovietized" Pressrooms.

The meeting was attended by about 500 and Berry arose to speak, with the other international officials sitting on the platform. As soon as he arose a striker demanded that Simons, as president of the local union, act as chairman. Berry, who had brought in a number of strike-breakers and other thugs to try to intimidate the men, felt more secure than at Wednesday's meeting and arrogantly asserted that he could not permit an official not recognized by the International Union to speak. Simons, who had said nothing up to this point, then arose and, instead of replying to the cowardly ink, Berry, turned to the strikers and said: "Boys, we Will not listen to a strikebreaker. Let's go!" The five hundred strikers arose as one man and walked out, leaving Berry, his executive board and the detectives to listen to the exposition of the principles of unionscabbery.

Here we into a rage and incoherently screamed that the men who did not return to work would lose their jobs, their charter, their right to the pressmen's home in Tennessee, and other benefits. He announced that his harrangue would be published in pamphlet form and distributed to the men who would not listen to him.

"From this moment on," shouted Berry, "we will man every vacant place in the pressrooms of New York. We will put the United States and Canada for men to come to the New York pressrooms," and so on for an hour this consummate traitor to the principles of unionism boasted of his determination to import strike breakers from other units of the organization.

Before he concluded he sought refuge in the last resort of every labor leader who sells himself to the capitalist class by raising the question of red activities in relation to the strike.

"We won't have in our organization men who can be stampeded into such a mear riot as you just witnessed (when the men left the hall hurling defiance at Berry). By a few reds who are trying to introduce the soviet system into the pressrooms of this country."

There was loud applause from the ranks of the detectives and publishers' stool pigeons who substituted for an audience of pressmen. They applauded because this was the only part of his talk they understood, having heard it on many occasions from other lackeys of capitalism.

The Strike Is Spreading.

On Wednesday the makers, affiliated with the International Union, stopped work in sympathy with the pressmen in half a dozen of the larger plants in the city. The contract between the affiliated with the Typographical Union, have a contract that does not expire until Jan. 1, so they are not involved on the job and scab upon the striking pressmen, thereby again vindicating the efficacy of the "sacred contract" in the eyes of the capitalist class in its struggle against the working class.

In spite of the contract, however, most of the men employed in the composing rooms are refusing to respect the scabs, and it is certain that if Berry imports strike scabs to take the places of the strikers there will be a spontaneous revolt of the workers in the newspaper composing rooms.

Insistent demands are being made upon the officials of the Typographical Union to charter down the gauntlet to Berry. This, of course, would be in conflict with the laws of both unions, and arouse a jurisdictional fight in the American Federation of Labor, but such a move is necessary at this time—and necessity knows no law of God or man. Berry, like all other lackeys of capitalism, is opposed to amalgamation and the present strike of the New York pressmen is merely another argument for amalgamation. The militants in the Typographical Union and in his own union, feel that this is an opportune time to take up the fight and definitely eliminate Berry.

"They have no fear of old man Gompers and the simple reason is that the International Typographical Union is strong enough to tell Gompers where to get off at," declared a prominent member of the Berry machine, and their example of solidarity and determination to hold out against the odds against them marks a definite development from the old practices of conciliation and arbitration to mass action, which is the only effective action for the working class in its struggle against the greed and avarice of the capitalist class.

Communist Sentiment Grow

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

Secretary, Workers Party.

Recently the National Office of the Workers Party received a report that in a certain town in Illinois 250 coal miners were ready to become members of the Party.

Another report received in a letter from West Virginia from 255 coal miners of various fraternal groups who wish to become members of the Workers Party.

These two reports and other records of a similar character indicate the growth of Communist sentiment among the workers of the United States. They indicate the possibilities of building up a great Communist party in this country.

Why Communist Sentiment Grows.

The development of this sentiment toward the Communist movement and toward Communist organization is not a mere chance.

Communists, who understand the fundamentals of Marxian science know that the Communist movement must spring out of the experience of the workers themselves.

It is also not a chance that the greatest sentiment on Communist organization has arisen among the miners. The miners during the years since the war have been going thru just those experiences which create Communist sentiment among the workers. Again and again the miners in their great "struggle have found themselves face to face with the capitalist government. The government has openly and boldly championed the cause of the coal barons and used its force against the organized coal miners.

This lesson is teaching the miners that they must awake to the meaning of their struggles they must aim to secure control of the governmental power. Workers who realize the necessity of establishing a workingclass government in place of the capitalist government are ready to join the Communist party.

The realization of this necessity has not only become apparent among the miners but is manifesting itself among the workers generally. The movement for a labor party is an expression of this development in its earlier stages. With a mass movement demanding the organization of a labor party there is bound to be development of that understanding of the class struggle which will create in the left wing of the labor movement that Attitude toward Communism which makes possible the formation of a mass Communist party.

The Organization Campaign.

The Organization Campaign launched by the National Office for the purpose of adding 10,000 members to the Workers Party by January 1st has been initiated because the Central Executive Committee of the Party realizes that the conditions are ripe for a great advance by our party.

Whether we actually gain 10,000 members depends upon the degree of enthusiasm and energy with which the units of the party organize and the membership generally take up this campaign. What has, in the past, stood between us and an increase membership has been a lack of organizational efforts by the members of the Party themselves. This the Central Executive Committee is seeking to change in the campaign now under way. It calls upon every Party member and every Party unit to immediately throw itself into the work of building up the membership.

Membership campaign committees must be organized in every branch of the Party.

Workers who are subscribers for the Party press must be canvassed and invited to become members of the organization.

The militant trade unionists who have been cooperating in the work of the Party must be brought into the organization.

The increase of the Party membership means that all the work of the Party will be strengthened. We will have mobilized new forces which will make possible our forging ahead faster than ever before. This is the great goal of the membership drive. Let us go forward with the determination to make the membership of the Party will have 30,000 members.

Cruse Tells about Role of Nepman in Soviet Russia

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE.
(Special to "The Worker.")

MOSCOW—The story of one of the "Nepmen" (the "New Economic Policy" men who have been permitted to engage in private trade and business). They have to see the loss of revolutionary ideals in the Communist Party, and the steadfast loyalty of the workers.

Let them lay their fears at rest. The Communist Party takes no stock in Nepmen. Its attitude toward Nepmen is to see exploitation goes without saying. And there is no more confidence in the Nepman's membership in the party, not on the part of careerists but of poor souls who need and want work.

THIS IS NOT DUE TO THE ADVANTAGES, MATERIAL OR OTHERWISE, ATTENDANT UPON PARTY MEMBERSHIP. A RED CARD BRINGS MANY NEW DUTIES AND PRACTICALLY NO NEW RIGHTS. It was different in 1921, yet more candidates for membership offer themselves now than then. Party purity is considerably less than that of those employed by Nepmen. As is well known in Russia, it is divided into seventeen categories founded each month upon the value of the "commodity ruble," an average of the purchasing power of the Soviet ruble as applied to a list of essential things the worker needs. Every drop in the paper ruble is accompanied by a rise in the monthly wage, so the workers are absolutely assured of a living, very different from conditions in Germany.

Furthermore, there is an excellent system of social insurance under which the employer pays the whole of from 16 per cent to 21 per cent of the weekly wage of the workers, into a union administered and state controlled insurance fund. Workers are paid full pay from the first day of notice of illness and this continues for a certain period when he goes on the "Invalid List." Communists fare no better than other workers in the matter of getting jobs. This is now declared to be based only on fitness. The ultra responsible posts are filled by those considered politically trustworthy. The only advantage that party members do enjoy is the result of a party regulation whereby anyone receiving from a "Trust" or other concern a wage higher than the party standard must contribute the whole of such excess to the party funds for the benefit of old, invalided or unemployable members. Journalists pay 25 per cent of the income from their books, etc., in the same way.

The life of a Nepman in Russia is not a bed of roses, or at least the roses have thorns. Three per cent per month is collected as tax and in addition he pays high for all accommodations. All houses are government owned; when you apply for rooms the second question is, "How much do you earn." On this the rent is based. Most public institutions and factories conduct restaurants for their employes where prices are but a fraction of those charged outside, and better paid workers must pay more for the same food as their lower paid comrades. Thus the workers are sure of a living, its character dependent not upon the whim of the profiteer but upon official fixation on a commodity price basis. And in a thousand and one ways the Nepman pays, more or less willingly, for his profits are large, but always in the knowledge that his social existence is by no means a permanent thing.

The whole NEP reminds me of the heating system in Lunacharsky's official waiting room. There are three systems represented, a high German style creature of warmth and beauty, while because arranged only for small third coal—and there isn't any. Then there are the modern radiators under the window seats of this beautiful one-time palace, idle for want, perhaps, of any coal at all. Finally, there is a hideous contraption of old brick and plaster, with a rusted old stove pipe shooting very much askew into the chimney of the grand tile stove. It is built to use wood, smoky, smelly, sooty wood, the only kind of fuel Russia had last winter. It stands there, ready to go. The beautiful tile monument is a reminder of the class-monopolized comforts and beauties of the old order. The steam radiators, efficient, clean, economical, with their central heating plant, are the new Communist social wedge into that is to be. And the ugly thing of crooked bricks—that's the NEP. Hideous? Sure. Wasteful? Sure! But it burns wood. When we have plenty of coal we won't need the NEP.

THE DAILY WORKER NEEDED

The Daily Worker is badly needed. No labor group is public ly effective without it's daily newspaper. The Federated Press welcomes every addition to the daily field.

Chicago's First Meeting for the Daily Worker Drive Is Great Success; $7,555 Raised

By HARRISON GEORGE.

Chicago, Communists determined to establish the first daily Communist paper in the United States in the near future, if the spirit pervading the first meeting in Chicago of the DAILY WORKER campaign is any indication.

The meeting, held Friday, Sept. 21st, was attended by good attendance, which grew in attendance, giving several after round of applause to Chairman Louis Krumbein and Comrades Cannon, Ruthenberg, Engdahl and C. E. Ruthenberg, as each voiced the Party's demand for the first English-language Communist daily paper in America—which will be the only English daily in the world.

"I was often told, while I was in Russia," said Comrade Cannon, "that we must call our American comrades had established and kept in the field a daily paper in the language of this country, would we deserve the name of a political party, for only by a daily paper that will fight for the masses of workers of this country every day can we bring these masses support our ideas.

"When the Bolsheviks began to publish their party's daily paper, 'Pravda,' in 1912, there were only 1,200 party members in Russia. Such heroic struggles they fought to keep the 'Pravda' going! Day after day the Czar's censor suppressed it, and after editor was imprisoned, the 'Pravda' had to be printed and circulated in spite of all persecution and workers from the shops were called in to assume editorship, the most drastic financial sacrifices were made but every member realized the importance of a daily paper for the raising of Russian workers, and in spite of all opposition the 'Pravda' circulated 50,000 copies a day in Petrograd alone, while through revolution, counter-revolution, famine, invasion and reconstruction the 'Pravda' lived and still stands, the voice and power of the Russian Communist party.

"So must we, the members of the workers Party, rally to the call, making every sacrifice necessary to establish a daily paper of Communism and not merely because we ought to have a daily as a matter of routine, but because a Communist daily, being different than the so-called labor papers which are absolutely rotten with contamination from the capitalist press, will be the means of rousing the masses to struggle, leading them from victory to victory, from cynicism

Party Shows Life in Butte, Mont., Despite Obstacles

(Special to "The Worker.")

BUTTE, Mont.—A successful street meeting was held here under the auspices of the Workers Party branch last week. Comrade William F. Dunne had been speaking for about ten minutes on "Labor, Industry and Government" when he was arrested by the chief of police. Taken to the station, he was released on his own recognizance for appearance in police court.

Dunne hurried back to the corner, got the crowd to come a block down the street and continued the meeting. After speaking about twenty minutes to a crowd which now numbered over a thousand, he was again arrested. Mrs. J. P. McCarthy then took his place and was also arrested on a charge of her arrest, which incensed the crowd and brought threats to overturn the patrol wagon. Mrs. McCarthy continued the meeting without further interruptions. The sheriff, elected in the Farmer-Labor non-partisan campaign, has offered the courthouse steps for open air meetings.

We sold $18.10 worth of literature. The police judge dismissed the cases against the comrades, holding that arrest under a traffic blocking ordinance he did not hold in these cases. The mayor has since refused a permit but street meetings are going to be held anyway.

The Debs meeting here failed to revive the Socialist party. Addresses were announced and notices were sent out following the meeting. About fifteen members of the Workers Party branch attended the meeting which was called for Musicians' Hall. Miss Elizabeth Gutstein, organizer for the Socialist Party, was present and was much cheered at what seemed to be a goodly number of prospects. She told brightly of how "Gene dearly wished the revival of the Socialist Party, but when asked about principles stated that there was to be no discussion of principles as the meeting was called to re-organize the Socialist Party. She then asked for members and got two responses after a dissertation on the revolutionary effectiveness of paying a year's dues in advance. The missionary and her two converts then filed out, after which the Workers Party members held a propaganda meeting, not wishing to waste the rent paid by the Socialist Party and secured four applications.

A call for a Farmer-Labor party conference, signed by a large number of active unionists and members of farmers' organizations, is about to be sent out. The conference will be held in Great Falls, Oct. 2. Sentiment all over the state is strongly for a Farmer-Labor party with a strong drift towards the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

We can get along without many things but we must have the DAILY WORKER.

Workers Party District Pushing Party Activities

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 21.—The Workers Party of Michigan, District Number Four, was held at the Mason Hotel, Detroit, Mich.

The convention was called to order by Henry Gitlow, who was elected to the temporary chairmanship. Resolutions were adopted calling upon the membership to put into effect the party's organization policy immediately. The call of the Central Executive Committee for 10,000 new members by the time of the next convention was adopted and the convention pledged itself that District Seven's quota would be forthcoming. Resolutions on co-operation with the Young Workers League, and the enlistment of women in party work carried unanimously. The newly elected District Executive Committee was instructed to prepare resolutions to protest against the Bulgarian White Terror, against the Polish White Terror, and against the Greek-Italian conflict which holds the threat of inaugurating Europe's another war.

The resolution on the industrial policy of the party was the occasion for a lively debate. The resolution demanded the industrial registration of the membership shall be completed by Nov. 1st; that all members eligible to membership in trade unions must join at once; that city central and branch executive committees shall carry on an uninterrupted intensive campaign of education on joining the unions, and that provision be made for disciplinary measures against those members who failed to carry out the letter and spirit of the resolution. It was this last clause that drew fire of some of the delegates, but when it was put to a vote it carried almost unanimously.

Delegate Jackman of Indianapolis gave an interesting report of the political situation in Indiana and stirred the incoming District Executive Committee to take steps to send a field organizer to cover that territory and assured the convention that if this were done gratifying results were assured.

The delegates from Grand Rapids reported that the Party locally was in fair condition and asked assistance in carrying out the industrial work and requested aid from the Polish Federation for organizing work among the 15,000 Poles who live in Grand Rapids.

Recent developments in Detroit were reported as very encouraging. The recently created Industrial Commission, charged with the task of reinstating the party's industrial work, reported that results were gratifying and that most of the members would be in the respective trade unions by the first of the year. Educational work was carried under way while other party activities were going forward satisfactorily.

George Tries, of the Sprinkler Fitters' Union, and a member of the executive council of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, addressed the convention on the subject of "Labor" for "a united front of workers and farmers on the political field.

One of the interesting features of the convention was the complete absence of factionalism. Every question was discussed entirely on its merits and the selection of the new District Executive Committee those comrades best qualified for the tasks ahead of the highest committee in the district were chosen. District Seven feels that it has reason to gratulate itself on the achievements of this convention, and we are convinced that the party here is destined to take a leading place in the struggle against capitalism.

A Worthy Example

The appearance of one swallow does not by any means indicate the presence of summer and the fact that Fred Maderi, former president of the Building Trades Council of Chicago, has officially quit the business of being a labor leader for the richer pickings of the real estate field, the encouraging fact does not justify the optimistic feeling that he is only the first swallow to rid the labor movement of his presence.

Mader is what is known in politic labor circles, that is, where Gompers sits as King, as a "bona fide" labor leader. There is nothing radical about him. He was never arrested for violating the criminal syndicalism law, tho in the pursuit of his calling it was not uncommon for him to have to face a coroner on suspicion of having participated in the elimination of some human being from earthly troubles. But that was all in the day's work.

Now, Fred has been running into squalls lately. The union of which he was party boss away and off his job, going under the suzerainty of Michael Boyle. The latter is in jail, by the way, because of his alleged complicity for some court or other which believed that he knew more than he told about the fixing of a certain jury. But that is neither here nor there. He did not go to jail for fighting an injunction, or for the right to free speech, but rather for the right to remain dumb—so he still remains a respectable citizen.

Mader seeing so many dues payings ex fixtures-hangers departing in the direction of his friend's treasury sat down and did some thinking. While thinking he had scribbled with pencil for inspiration he decided to make a few dollars by promoting a boxing match for "charity." When the patriots rubbed the talcum powder dust out of their eyes they could not see Fred thru the smoke. The only consolation they had was to read the headline in the daily papers to the effect that Fred had skidded with approximately $6,000 of gate receipts.

The police were too busy giving hypodermic injections to assemble her in order to make it palatable so Fred did not even draw a steam heated. What is $6,000 anyhow in the life of a labor faker? We might to under the impression that Fred was being banqueted by the National Civic Federation with Elihu Searles and John L. Lewis and dwelling with gusto on the dangers that confront this country from the Reds because of their predelection to "force and violence" when a reporter spied him sitting in a Rolls Royce in front of an office building on Dearborn Street. Like a real reporter he produced his pencil and asked Mader for an interview. Fred as greedy as a hungry gudgeon for publicity grasped the opportunity to advertise his new line of business. He spoke substantially as follows: "I am through with the business of being a labor leader. There is not enough money in it. I am now in the real estate game. If I had served the real estate interests half as loyally as I served the workers I would now have half a million dollars instead of the paltry $250,000 which I have collected."

Here is a martyr to duty if ever there was one. Left in comparative old age with the paltry sum of one hundred thousand dollars! Why the late John Mitchell once head of the Miners' Union left $250,000 and the other Grand Dukes of the American Federation of Labor no doubt would scorn such a paltry nest egg as Fred has accumulated for fighting labor's battles.

With the growing spirit of militancy among the rank and file of the workers, industrial leeches like Mader will find it increasingly difficult to ply their nefarious trade. Mader has set a splendid example that could be followed to great advantage to the workers of Chicago. How many labor fakers will follow Fred Mader to the green grass?

The DAILY WORKER will be labor's political and industrial voice.

The Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma

With the exception of the Ku Klux Klan and "Jack" Walton the political life and death struggle for political power in Oklahoma is the most sensational political struggle in the country today. Governor Walton has lost the support of all the labor movement of Oklahoma in his immediate battle with the Klan. His very existence at which is a threat and a recall is organized labor and radical movements, the radical farmers and workers of the state are inclined by fear of the terrorizing Klan and against their wishes to support Walton's fight on that issue so far as he goes.

The point of greatest danger is that if Walton finds it convenient to his purposes, he will, after getting support enough to over-awe the klan, sell out to it and stop fighting it.

The yellow Socialist tribe of Ameringer and Company are playing safe. If Walton wins, they will win with him; but, being "practical" men, "constructive" Socialists, they are backing and filling enough to be able to keep on the blind side of the klan if the hooded terror wins.

Meanwhile, Walton is exposing enough of klan activities to send anyone who was not protected by federal government influence to prison for life. Whipping parties, "cutting" surgeons, a negro whose ear was cut off and an attempt made to make him eat it, these little matters are of no concern to Daugherty and Burns, but—let the communists hold a convention ! !

Capitalizing Misery

By H. M. WICKS.

The Japanese disaster, like all devastating holocausts, gave the various Christian relief and charitable institutions an opportunity to capitalize human misery. The most spectacular of all these organizations is our old friend, the Salvation Army. The organization has had its panhandlers in the field for some time, ostensibly collecting funds for the unfortunate refugees of the Japanese earthquake and fire. Incidentally the publicity which the Salvation Army paroll will also be spared the necessity of going to work earning an honest living so that they can point to suffering in Japan or elsewhere.

This delectable Christian organization utilized the immeasurable suffering of the World War to ingratiate itself with the reactionary forces of the blackest capitalism, and since that time has functioned as one of the most vile of all religious agencies in fighting the labor movement. After the war frenzy had exhausted itself the Salvation Army, reluctant to surrender the income derived from well-advertised drives, staged a number of "Home Service Drives," wherein it pictured the awful suffering due to the unemployment that swept the country in 1920. In Chicago, Gary and other places in the steel strike district the agents of the Salvation Army promised immediate help to the unemployed strikebreaker providing they would sign an agreement to become scabs in the steel strike and thus help break the heroic resistance in relation to the switchmen's strike. So great was the Christian charity of this swindling crew that they tried to turn decent human beings into industrial scabs. Christianity is the refuge of scoundrels, it proves. It prostitutes itself to every type. It even stoops to hunger to get a chance to pollute the mind with the most vicious ignorance and then proceeds to debauch the body through scabbery.

Horrible as is the present catastrophe in Japan it is nothing comparable to the deadly blight of Christianity, teaching its religion of slavery and submissiveness to capitalism. Victims of hunger and disease may recover from the effects of the earthquake, but once the insidious poison of Christian superstition is implanted in the human organism it is difficult to recover from it. It is the duty of the working class of the United States to strive to protect the Japanese workers from a double disaster by refusing to contribute to this aggregation of dope-peddling scab herders.

See Need of Amalgamation.

NEW ORLEANS.—Never in the history of the South has a greater need for amalgamation been demonstrated than now. Two thousand longshoremen, comprising both the white and colored unions, unaffiliated with any international body, but attempting to "go it alone," struck for a 44-hour week, an advance of 15 cents an hour, and an increase in the number of men in the several gangs. Twelve hundred white and negro screwmen refused to work unless a 44-hour week, an advance of three cents a bale on cotton and better working conditions were granted them. The port is completely tied up and ships are being diverted to other ports. International Seamen's Union sailors are giving what assistance they can to the employers. The Industrial Workers of the World are standing aloof and are giving no assistance to the vessel owners. Longshoremen in the Gulf section go out October 1.

Put Spokesmen of Labor in Filthy Jail at Kansas City, Mo

By J. W. BRUCE.

(Special to "The Worker.")

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Details of the Kansas City jail conditions that have been causing public indignation since the arrest, and later dismissal, of William Z. Foster and John Miholic, leaders of the Chicago Labor Defense Council committee. Foster and Miholic were held for a short time in one of the worst jails of the country, Kansas City, which boasts of being the best of America, must certainly be a thing of the heart.

The Kansas City jail is two floors underground, and the two "jailbirds" were locked in a cell which was over further back than the cells in which the other prisoners are kept, the part of the jail is the isolation block. It is dimly lighted, the air is unspeakably foul and the cells are filthy. The light of day never penetrates into this "isolation block" as it is, in every sense of the word, a dungeon, of the worst mediaeval sort.

Not only communists, but "ordinary" persons indicted for petty crimes, are sent into this hellhole. A short time ago, an advance agent for one of the Socialist Party Debs' meetings, Esther Friedman, was arrested here, together with a number of the street audience, on the ridiculous charge of blocking traffic. They were all fined $25 each. The cases are now on appeal.

It is interesting to note that one of the most vicious judges in the city, a moron named Fleming, who gained his cheap notoriety by saying that "this is a free country but no for radicals" in the Ella Reeve Bloor case, was caught breaking the law himself. He had been out to one of those tempting little "inns" see the outskirts of the city, with a few friends, including, of course, the female element. On driving home, the Judge, much the worse for wear and boozier, drove the automobile with such skill that an accident resulted, and one of the women killed. He was caught red-handed trying to make off from the accident with the license plate taken from the machine. This double violation of the United States law—the leaving of the scene of the accident before making a report, and the removal of the license plates—was innocently overlooked by the thousand per cent Judge who is the patriotic intelligence of the small aroused when the Reds hold a perfectly peaceful meeting.

A united front of all shades of radicals and trade unionists is about to be formed to combat the Kansas City patriots, and establish the right of any political or trade union organization to free speech and free assemblage. "Chicken-dinner" Fleming, as he is now popularly known, will be taken his place sooner than he thinks.

Chicago District Is Going Strong for Membership Drive

By ARNE SWABECK.

During the month of September three new branches have been organized in the Chicago District; one South Slav in Chicago Heights, one Lithuanian in South Bend, Ind., and one Scandinavian in South Chicago. Negotiations have been established with a dozen live wires in Waukegan, Ill., who are already to join the Party in the first meeting to organize an English branch. This will be held Oct. 2nd. District No. 8, is wholeheartedly in the drive to increase the Party membership.

Charles Krumbein has been engaged as field organizer beginning Oct. 8th. He will make regular tours of the District beginning with Moline, Ill., where he will stay for two weeks to build up the Party units and attempt to make new connections in adjacent cities. From there he will proceed to Peoria, Ill., for a week's stay and so forth to the various parts of the District.

The Chicago City Central Committee is dividing the city by territory to arrange the first series of mass propaganda meetings, visiting and inviting all sympathizers and readers of party publications to these meetings, and of their language to increase the party membership. Thirty-five thousand of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. It recognizes the necessity of a united front of labor against the aggressive phalanx of the forces of exploitation that bring to bear every weapon of political and economic oppression in their struggle against the working class.

"The conference calls upon all labor and working class organizations to join with it in its endeavor to create a political unit that will be the expression and the political machine of all elements of labor in Greater New York who not only understand that labor must fight its own battles, independent of, and opposed to all capitalist parties, but who will also recognize that to struggle effectively against the powers that rule present day society we must combine all forces of the labor movement."

Another resolution instructs the incoming Executive Committee to take steps toward having the incorporation for a state branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

North Side, English Branch, Chicago, Is Showing How to Make the Party Grow

By MARTIN ABERN.

The North Side English branch of the Workers Party of Chicago employs methods which though very simple, are yet very effective in keeping the branch active both within the branch and for getting new members. This branch will, we believe, be found near the top in obtaining new members for the Workers Party not only during the present concentrated drive for 10,000 members but during the whole year. It has already in the past three months, but all the year round.

One way that the North Side English branch uses to keep the members on the job is that of healthy competition. The French organizer, Comrade Berglund, has had the branch divided into two teams as evenly balanced from the standpoint of enthusiasm and ability willingness to work as is possible. A section of the town has been divided for the two teams and in turn those sections have been divided so that each member has a definite territory to cover.

In covering the territory, each comrade has in mind the work of obtaining new subscribers for the party papers, The Worker, Voice of Labor, The Young Worker, Labor Herald and others. Each comrade has also a list of prospective subscribers he must visit, or names of subscribers whose subscriptions have expired and whom he must try to get to renew the subscription. The member must cover every newsstand in his territory and endeavor to have the party papers placed on the stand. In the case of the Labor Herald, the comrades have been very successful in placing the magazine on the stands, and the sale of the Labor Herald has been well increased in the vicinity of the North Side English branch. But it is only a start and the comrades are confident of doing much better.

The comrades must undertake to visit the houses in their territory and to become acquainted with the households problems of the workers, the general aspects of the class struggle and the activities and aims of the Workers Party. The comrades always go well supplied with leaflets, and 250 to 500 in addition so that something can always be left for the prospect to read.

In order to stimulate an even greater win, the organizer has arranged that the two teams shall contest for a period of months. Points are given to each team for various results. A subscription to the Labor Herald, The Worker, Young Worker, Voice of Labor, etc., counts 300 points; a subscription renewal, 150 points; placing a subscription on the stands, 1,000 points; getting a new member, 3,000 points; 5 new members, 20,000 points; selling 10 Worker, Labor Heralds, Young Workers, etc., 4,000 points; getting a worker to join the party, 10,000 points and so on. Certainly this kind of competition will assist in bringing results.

Should some comrades be lax, the branch has arranged that there be a bi-monthly or quarterly examination of all the members. At this open quiz, the comrades are asked what subscriptions they got to join the party, how many subscribers to party, T. U. E. L. and Y. W. L. publications, how many papers and magazines sold, have they themselves subscribed, have joined the union, etc. In asking, if necessary, explanations for delinquency, interesting statements are often made. For instance, one comrade when asked why she did not join her union, said that she was opposed to the American Federation of Labor! This resulted in a discussion of the party's trade union position—and the comrade joined the union. Comrades under examination of this sort are apt, sometimes, to be slightly discomfitted, and to avoid future embarrassment, get busy and do some work for the party. Sometimes, the questioned comrade makes an excuse of some sort or other, perhaps in the matter of joining a union or subscribing to publications. If the branch deems the reason satisfactory, the comrade is excused; otherwise, he or she is ordered to comply with the requirements in a given period.

These means of intensifying the party activity and of increasing the membership are not new. The Socialist Party in past years has employed many of them with success, and built up a strong organization in many places thereby. Nor are they difficult; any member can carry out these effective and easy tasks. The North Side Branch is no different than other party branches. The difference is that this branch tries to do something and hence is successful. It is one branch that is not dull, be it a business or educational meeting, for either old or new members. The last branch meeting and educational one, at which the negro problem was discussed, was attended by over a hundred persons. The branch has about fifty members. A short organizational talk was made after the main talk and five listeners made application for membership. The business meetings are also alive; at the ends of the business, two members speak for five minutes on conditions of work in their place of labor, general discussion following. This is always interesting.

Let's hear from other party units how they MAKE THE PARTY GROW.

American Dollars Help Bring Joy to Many in Red Russia

Over 25,000 persons receiving every state in the union have worked dollars to Russia through the fund granted President Hillman of the Russian-American Industrial Corporation and the organized Central Committee of 15 members of the Federation of Russian Workers, Cleveland, and other cities, their families and relatives in every Europe and the Ukraine.

The popularity of the dollar remission service, Mr. Hillman points out, lies chiefly in the fact that the dollars are delivered personally in Russia without deduction of costs to the payee. No other transmission company offers these advantages, forwards money at so low a rate, or has services instituted for the express purpose of aiding the Russian Industrial Corporation. Funds forwarded by the Amalgamated Bank of New York, the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, and some two hundred banks that have availed themselves of the facilities offered by the R. A. I. C. These funds are forwarded by radio or mail, the time required ranging from three days in Moscow to seven days to the most remote parts of the Soviet Union.

"Cannons or Tractors" Drive Closes Oct. 1st

The second contest for a free trip to Russia conducted by the friends of Soviet Russia ends Oct. 1. All votes, in order to be credited to the respective candidates MUST be in before 6 P. M. of that date.

Thus far the most promising candidates are: Jim Walker, carpenter of California; K. Okrasks, miner, Ohio; Simon Feldman, Workmen's Circle of Connecticut.

As a result of the first contest, Joseph T. Taylor, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, won a free trip and will sail about October 1st. The delay being due to personal business. It is hoped that at least one more candidate will be elected to join Taylor in his trip to Russia.

Results of the second contest will be announced later.

To the Boy or Girl Who Works

By JULIUS JESMER.

No other element should feel the need of a working class daily newspaper so much as the youth of the working class. More and more it is you the young worker, who are thrown into jobs of adult workers at less pay and often asked to scab on those when they are in the thick of battle for their rights.

For years you have been the unwilling tools of employers and other capitalists. They control the daily newspapers you have been and are reading. Thru their newspapers which are run directly by their highly salaried and especially trained editors they have been training you to betray your class by scabbing and betraying your own interests by working for low wages.

The capitalist newspapers tell you truth, distort facts and cook up deliberate lies about the class struggle between labor and capital. They say they deliver to you as "news" and tell you what they say is "public opinion." Not having a daily paper for the workers' interests that could contradict their lies and distortions, you and most of the rest of us believed these just because you saw them "in the papers."

Because there was no working class daily paper to tell the truth to you or any other or older worker, you have been used as strike-breakers against the unions and union men have been made to think you were enemies of your own class. Because there was no lie or crime to show that wars are waged for commerce and dollars, you and your fellow young workers were fooled into believing that wars are waged for "democracy" and "patriotism" and sent off to die of wounds and disease while profiteers clean up millions and the workers not killed are worse off that before war began.

Therefore, it is up to us young workers, you and I and the rest—to make THE DAILY WORKER a success, to help get it started and keep it going.

The Daily Worker is a newspaper that will show you every day just where you stand in the fight between capital and labor so tell you the truth and to work only for your well being, to guide you from mistakes and to unite all workers for proper and wise action, then it is up to you to support THE DAILY WORKER by getting your share in the publishing company. It will mean more to you than anything else in your citizenship in a fighting labor party.

THE NEW "Voice of Labor"

Beginning with the October 20th issue, the "Voice of Labor" will become a four-page, half newspaper size propaganda paper. The first issue will be the "American Federation of Labor Convention" number, dealing with the great issues which come before the convention at Portland, Oregon, on October 1.

The October 6th issue will contain a searching reply to the articles attacking the Communist Movement in the United States published in the issue of the United Mine Workers of America. It will be called 101 JOHN L. LEWIS LIES ANSWERED.

The attack made by the Lewis machine on the members of the United Mine Workers in the articles published in the capitalist press will be met point by point, the falsehoods exposed, the misrepresentations of the Communist movement will be proven. There will be articles by Foster, Pepper, Cannon, Engdahl and Bubenberg dealing with the Communist policies in the trade unions.

The Rumblings in Germany

Communism in Germany stands before a new crisis with the approach of the hour when the Ebert-Stresemann-Hilferding government puts into effect its proclamation of surrender in the Ruhr. The hope of the German capitalists is that German sovereignty will thereupon be restored in the Rhineland.

If any agreement has been reached between Berlin and Paris, it is merely a pact between the Stinnes interests of Germany and the Schneider-Schneider capitalists of France for the joint exploitation of the workers of both countries. Whatever Germany will be forced to pay, the German workers will pay out of their own agony, under the combined lash of German and French bosses.

This situation was ably set forth by Edo Fimmen, secretary of the International Federation of Labor Unions, addressing the British Trade Union Congress, as reported in "The Worker" last week. Fimmen declared that, "Nothing short of a miracle can prevent Germany being plunged into another revolution."

The promised German-French settlement in the Ruhr means an effort to strengthen Fascism in both these countries. German Communism is therefore at the crossroads. It must go forward to victory now, or succumb to the black reaction of Stinnes, Hindenburg and the Bavarian Hitler.

Our German comrades can be depended on to pursue the proper tactics at the crucial moment. The German Communists are tried and experienced fighters. They have learned much since the brilliant but tragic struggles of the Spartacists under the leadership of Liebknecht and Luxemboug, when the German social-democracy delivered German labor into the lap of reaction.

Two trusted German Communists, Heinrich Brandler and August Thalheimer, are in Moscow discussing the situation with the officials of the Communist International. The workers' world party will stand back of any revolutionary developments in Germany. This means that the American Communist movement also has its task to perform in this crisis. The capitalists in Washington and Wall Street must not be permitted to aid, financially or with arms, any attack by France, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, or any other capitalist power, against the German workers and peasants.

In the words of Fimmen, appealing to the world's workers, when the German Soviet Republic raises its head:

"Let there be no right or left wing then, but only the class struggle for all. Take care that you are not misled in your fear of a red dictatorship, into accepting a yellow or black dictatorship."

Whether Europe goes Communist or Fascist depends upon the unity in this grave hour, not only of Europe's workers, but of the workers of the world. And labor in the United States must remember that it is a part of the world's working class.

They Fear the Inevitable

Capitalist papers of all shades, from the sensational yellow of the Hearst rags to the black imperialist Chicago Tribune, express fear of the growing alliance between the working farmers and the industrial workers. The convention held in Chicago on July 3rd, where the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was born, sent cold shivers of dread down the spines of those who live on the surplus values stolen from the rural and city workers. They are utilizing the art of their journalists to the obstacles in the way of this powerful alliance, trying to raise suspicion and create discord between the two great sections of the producers of this country.

The Chicago Tribune thunders daily against union labor and points out to the farmer that his misfortunes can be traced, not to the greedy banker who holds a mortgage like a Damocles sword over his head, not to the commission merchants who return him a freight bill instead of a check for his produce, not to the railroad magnates who boost freight rates, but to the grasping, gouging, avaricious workingman in the cities, who insists on getting a little more of what he produces from his master by using his collective power as a club over the bosses' head.

So much for the Tribune. What could you expect? But now here comes the "People's philosopher," Arthur Brisbane, and barks up the same tree. This Katzenjammer economist, referring to the intentions of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in the 1924 elections pooh-poohs the thought that farmer and city worker can be brought together.

Both reactionary and so-called liberal capitalist papers fear the day when the workers in all occupations will rally together under the banner of one great political party and kick the capitalist thieves and their lackeys into the exterior darkness. The "dirt" farmers no longer believe that an improved standard of living for the city worker is what makes the grass grow around his hearthstone and keeps him loaded down with dirt and a life-long debt. He is beginning to understand that his enemy, as well as the enemy of the industrial worker, is the capitalist who robs both. The recent spontaneous revolt on the part of the farmers which sent Farmer-Labor representatives to the United States Senate in Minnesota, is an indication of this. This movement will grow and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, which Brisbane sneers at, and which the Tribune thunders at, will render effective service in consolidating this movement and giving it the proper objective.

The Socialist Defeat in Sweden

The overwhelming defeat suffered by the Socialists in the Swedish elections is a severe blow to the social-democracy throughout the world. It is a severe blow to the Socialists in the Scandinavian countries, and a severe blow to the Socialists in the International Federation of Labor Unions, of which the Swedish labor movement is the strongest affiliate. The Socialists in Sweden, as in several European countries, refused to enter into a coalition with the Communists, and went to the polls on their own platform. The result is a severe blow to the Socialists in the International Federation of Labor Unions, of which the Swedish labor movement is the strongest affiliate. The Socialists in Sweden, as in several European countries, refused to enter into a coalition with the Communists, and went to the polls on their own platform. The result is a severe blow to the Socialists in the International Federation of Labor Unions, of which the Swedish labor movement is the strongest affiliate.

The Social-Democratic government of Sweden, not believing in the dictatorship of the proletariat, allowed the committee to fall into the control of the capitalists, who immediately took advantage of it to reduce the wages of the employed.

Their first move was to refuse employment to strikers. This put the unemployed unionists in the position of being forced to scab on their fellow members to going without work. They chose the latter course. The Socialist Premier, Branting, did not like these methods, but being a democrat, what could he do? Democracy must be preserved at all costs. No dictatorship, such as the workers had in Russia, for him.

Then the capitalists got their opportunity. They locked out hundreds of thousands of workers, and the capitalist-controlled unemployment committee refused to give relief to the locked-out workers. The Socialists tried to remedy this condition by introducing a bill in parliament providing that unemployment benefits must not be withheld from any worker who had been out of work for more than six months prior to the labor conflict. Though this measure secured a majority in the lower house, the Liberals combined with the Conservatives and defeated it in the Senate. This ended the inglorious career of the Social-Democratic government of Sweden.

The unemployed are now left helpless. Hjalmar Branting is not worrying. After he lost the Premiership he was sent to Geneva to represent Sweden on the League of Nations. He upheld the principles of bourgeois democracy even though thousands of Swedish workers may starve as a result. The workers of Sweden may see the folly of expecting that the machinery of capitalist government can be made to function in their interests. The failure of social democracy in Sweden is in striking contrast to the success of Communist policy in Russia, where the workers established their own class rule, consigned the hypocritical pretenses of bourgeois democracy to the graveyard of history and are laying the foundation of the new and purer democracy —the rule of those who produce and render useful service to society.

Who Will Answer This?

Bishop Edgar Blake, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is back in the United States from Soviet Russia. He not only demands recognition of the Workers' Republic, but justifies the execution of the Roman Catholic, Butchkavitch.

Bishop Blake made his justification of the execution of Butchkavitch before the delegates of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Columbus, Ohio. His declaration was given out by an Associated Press dispatch that appeared, very inconspicuously to be sure, in some of the kept publications.

"The Russian Orthodox Church," Bishop Blake said, "was an ally to absolutism. It was the only force that could offer powerful resistance to the Soviets when they came into power. The Soviet Regime was fighting for its life. Butchkavitch was not executed because he was a priest, he said, but because he taught the cathecism to children. Documentary evidence put before the judges at his trial, which was open and above board, showed that Butchkavitch had conspired against Russia in entering negotiations with the Polish government when Russia was being opposed by that government. For this he was executed, ON THE CHARGE OF TREASON."

Bishop Blake points out that other clergymen had also committed treason against the Soviet Government and paid the penalty. But no word of protest was raised until a Roman Catholic ran counter to Russian Soviet Law. Which is no doubt a tribute to the world power of the Catholic Church. All the more reason why some one should be found to obliterate with lies these truths brought back to the United States. Who will answer Bishop Blake? Perhaps Samuel Gompers will tackle the job at the approaching convention of the American Federation of Labor at Portland, Oregon. But he will fail as miserably as all capitalist lackeys fail in attempting this dirty job against the Russian workers and peasants.

Bulgaria Is Boiling

Altho news coming from Bulgaria is very sparse, and often conflicting, it is certain that the workers and peasants are raising their standards against the Fascisti rule of Premier Zankoff, under King Boris.

The peasant revolt is coming up from the Black Sea, while the city workers have announced general strikes for the railroads and in the industries. The peasants are generally followers of the late Stambulinsky government, altho there has been a pronounced drift among them toward the Communist ranks. The Bulgarian Communist Party, one of the most powerful in the International Communist Party, one of the most powerful in the International Peasants' Government.

A victory of the workers and peasants in Bulgaria will have its effect on the whole Balkan situation. Bulgaria is surrounded on three sides by Roumania, Jugo-Slavia, Greece and Turkey, her only outlet to Soviet Russia being by way of the Black Sea to the east. With a large farming population, Bulgaria cannot easily be starved into submission by the hostile neighbors under White Terror rule. The Bulgarian developments will be worth watching.

"The Labor press is to feed them."
—Fraser.

The Labor press without the DAILY WORKER is like an Army without a navy.

The chorus grows in power. Bishop Edgar Blake, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in his interview in New York upon his arrival in this country from a tour of Europe, declared that "the Soviet Government is the most democratic government in Europe at the present time. We like it, we like its Soviets."
Blake. If by "we" Blake means the supporters of the capitalist system of rule and robber, we'll say they can't ignore the Soviets, that stand for the abolition of capitalism.

The press service of the American Civil Liberties Union declares that: "The outcome of the Workers' Party free speech meeting in McKeesport, Pa., confirms the opinion that Mayor Lysle is the servant of the steel corporations and ardently devoted to capitalist principles. The fining of the speakers under a non-existant ordinance is one of the rawest usurpations of power that local officials have ever exhibited even during strike times in the blood steel towns of Western Pennsylvania.

"Con" Shea, Chicago labor leader (Gompers variety), is as gentle as a cooing pigeon but it is a hard job to manage a woman. This was learned when "Con" secured a divorce from his wife who deserted him fifteen years ago. He treated her with the greatest courtesy but she did not appreciate it, he said, "Con" served fifteen in Sing Sing some years for showering kindness on another lady friend. He stabbed her thirty-eight times. Women are sure hard to please.

Have you noticed the changed anti-Japanese tone of the correspondence from the Orient since it was learned that the Japanese war fleet was not destroyed? Our next Japanese campaign will be one to raise funds to finish the job started by the earthquake and kill off the rest of the Japs.

We are told that the Japanese naval commanders warned American warships against entering fortified harbors even on missions of mercy. But of course our gallant captains thought of Admiral Farragut and shouted, "Damn the warnings. Go straight ahead."

The Kansas Republican League has been forced to launch an organization campaign, fearing the growth of radicalism in the state. Farmers must be getting together, a la Minnesota, for some real united action with the city workers.

Ireland's second Free State Parliament opened a few days ago. None of the Republicans who are at large appeared. This will make things quite easy for the Free State Party.

The first city "criminal syndicalism" law that has yet come to notice is recorded in Tucson, Ariz., with, however a sentence of ten days instead of 14 years, thank Gawd!

Without a Workers' Daily the working class is DEAF, DUMB and BLIND.

"Here shall the Press the Workers' rights maintain,
Unawed by influence and unbribed by gain,
"Though an angel should write, still 'tis devils must print."

Samuel Gompers, the Trained Ram of Capitalism

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Trained rams are employed who lead their followers to the pens where they are hitched by the legs to a pulley and slid along until a button is pressed which severs the jugular veins. The Trained Rams are carefully fed by the meat barons. And why not? They are valuable lieutenants and save them a lot of trouble from the sheep.

The Trained Rams resemble in many ways the labor fakers who cajole, bully and deliver the American workers to their masters. The most famous ram is Samuel Gompers. With his corps of lieutenants he leads his sheep-like followers into the pit of helplessness and while they do not literally get the jugular veins cut, their fate is almost as desperate. The workers are more valuable to the capitalists alive than dead. As long as they can be chloroformed into submissiveness, all is well and the wringing of profits out of their bodies can be done with impunity!

The meat barons know from experience that the sheep being led to the knife would become frightened or suspicious if left to themselves and more human labor would have to be employed in keeping them in line. The Trained Rams take care of that. Samuel Gompers is petted and pampered by the wise heads among the American capitalists. He is their most valuable Trained Ram. Without him the lesser rams might quarrel among themselves for the honor of leading the sheep with the result that the sheep might get wise and ditch the lot. Soviet Russia's Growing Power Menaces Great Britain

NOTE—In this space each week "The Worker" publishes a new installment of a detailed report on the proceedings of the enlarged executive committee meeting of the Communist International. This week's article shows how Soviet Russia's growing power is a menace to British imperialism.

The greatest menace to Great Britain is the growing power of Soviet Russia. After the years of blockade and counter-revolution and the years of hunger, England thought that Soviet Russia would be forced to give up her Communist ideas and return to the fold of the capitalist states. The introduction of the New Economic Policy was interpreted in this way. But it was not seen that the New Economic Policy results in a strengthening of the Soviet regime, behind the exposition of trade, which, if this year the crops are good, will amount to 150,000,000 gold roubles. The light industries are constantly improving, the heavy industries still being somewhat hampered. Nevertheless, there is a general consolidation of all productive forces.

The situation in the Orient is reenforcing the Russian position. England has created such a situation in the Near East, in India, and elsewhere, that the colonies are turning against her, and toward Soviet Russia as the only country that understands, and correctly appraises the national question. Soviet Russia, too, has her national question, but this national consciousness is part and parcel of proletarian dictatorship, which takes these national differences into account and co-ordinates them. Our person, on the other hand, has driven the colonial peoples to seek a refuge. These oriental peoples know very well that Comrade Vorovsky was killed at Lausanne as a representative of Soviet Russia fighting for their freedom.

Hence, the fear and hatred of Soviet Russia, which England thought she could crystallize by breaking off relations with Soviet Russia, causing a new blockade and driving the border states and the Fascists into renewed attacks on Soviet Russia. England speculated on another factor in the absence of Lenin from the affairs of state. Can Soviet Russia last without the guidance of Lenin?

Every Communist, every worker, and peasant of Soviet Russia knows what Lenin has meant to the Russian revolution, and to the cause of Communism throughout the world. But England does not know the history of the Russian Communist Party. She does not know that the party has just finished twenty-five years of its history—a history made up not only of victories, but of many defeats. Although, therefore, Lenin's direction in three hard hours would be of inestimable value to the Soviet government, the spirit of Leninism has taken such deep root in the masses that the masses themselves are the best answer to Curzon's insolence. The spontaneous demonstrations on the receipt of the Curzon note and the assassination of Vorovsky should be the best lesson to the frivolity of the western powers.

The Mohammedan World an Enemy of Occidental Power.

The Mohammedan world also sees in the powers of the West, their enemy. They have perceived the treachery with which France and England have tried to subject them.

Especially Turkey, which is too weak to resist the interests of the western powers alone, has been the object of their machinations. But Soviet Russia has revolutionized not only the workers and peasants of Turkey are the natural allies of the Russian workers and peasants and has not hesitated to support them. Hence the alliance between Soviet Russia and Turkey, which has brought about a change of front among the allies.

France, first regarded as the friend, has been shelved and England is now being feasted as the "friend" of Islam. But above all, Turkey and Islam know that their only real friend is Soviet Russia, which is the only power that has helped them in the dark hours.

The Decisions of the Washington Conference Derided.

The situation in the Far East is a most interesting one. The decision of the Washington Conference meant the throttling of Japan. By fixing a ratio of battleships as 5:5:3, it put Japan in a place of inferiority to the other two powers. Japan today is ravaged by the decision to build a large number of fast cruisers and submarines. This led the United States to undertaking the same manner of construction, while England established a large naval station in Singapore. Seeing herself isolated and in danger of being degraded to a second rate power, Japan has turned to Soviet Russia for assistance. When the Washington Conference took place, Soviet Russia was not invited, since it had no basis in the East. But since that time, the Red Army has established itself in Vladivostok, so that Soviet Russia must now be reckoned with.

What are the conclusions of this review of the world situation? Serious conflicts and struggles will soon take place in Europe. Capitalism has not been able to restore any balance. Only in America and England has a temporary restoration taken place. The number of men under arms is greater than before the war, and the war budgets far exceed the pre-war budgets.

The Soviet government faces great dangers, for the imperialist powers recognize the might of that government, and will do everything in their power to destroy it. But Soviet Russia will not surrender. The workers and peasants of Soviet Russia are one in defense of THEIR revolution. The workers of other countries, however, must be prepared to render assistance when the call sounds.

The German workers must not heed the slogan: "Comrades, do not let them provoke us into action," but German Party understandings with French comrades must give their support to the German Party in its struggle against German fascism and French imperialism. The movement in the Orient is in danger. Word has been received that an anglo-Persian agreement has been established. Tchetzan and the elements in Turkey are forming a bloc with the Entente are growing in number. Bitter and hard days of struggle ahead.

Farrington, President of the Illinois Mine Workers, Repudiates Lewis-Searles "Expose"

Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Mine Workers' Union, declares, in a letter to the editor of "The Worker" that, had he been consulted, he would have objected to the publication of the so-called "red expose" provided the capitalist press by President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and his editor, Ellis Searles. It is charged that this "expose," a re-hash of all the worn out Daugherty-Burns-Palmer-Luxk charges, was written up by Chester M. Wright, red-baiter to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

In an effort to learn the attitude of the officials of the United Mine Workers' Union toward the Lewis-Searles attack on the progressives in the labor movement, the editor of "The Worker" wrote the district officials, presidents, secretaries and international board members, putting the question bluntly up to them, "Do you stand back of Lewis, against the progressives. But it seems that even Farrington's stomach has turned at the smell of the nauseating stuff contained in the Lewis-Searles garbage! Farrington's letter reads as follows:

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26, 1923.

Mr. J. Louis Engdahl, Editor,
"The Worker,"
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sir and Brother:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of Sept. 20th concerning the six articles issued by Mr. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal.

I have read the articles referred to in your letter and I am not informed as to what subject matter Mr. Searles has in his possession upon which to predicate his stories and I am, therefore, not in a position to pass competent judgment on his articles, altho I am disposed to disbelieve that part of his articles which charges that the Communist Party was responsible for the so-called Herrin trouble. I was in very close personal contact with the trials that took place over that trouble and I am frank to confess that the trials did not develop anything that would tend to support Mr. Searles' contention.

It may be that he has in his possession subject matter in that connection that would prove his contention but if he has I do not know anything about it, neither do I have at hand any information that would warrant any statement.

Had I been consulted about the matter, I would have advised Mr. Searles not to make the charge and I am sure that all of my associates who were in close contact with the Herrin affair would have done likewise.

Yours truly,
FRANK FARRINGTON, President.

Spontaneous Uprising at Herrin.

Walter Nesbit, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Mine Workers, ridicules the declaration of the Lewis-Searles exposures to the effect that the disturbances at Herrin, Ill., were incited by a few Lithuanian Communists. In a letter to the editor of "The Worker" he writes:

Dear Sir:—Replying to your letter of Sept. 20th with reference to the Searles articles, will say while I do not endorse his opinions I am not prepared to refute them. It is my opinion that the unfortunate and deplorable affair that took place at the strip mine between Herrin and Marion in Williamson County came about thru a spontaneous uprising on the part of the residents of that county and vicinity, preceded by the action of the owners of the strip mine, the brazen acts of their hired guards and gunmen, and the utter disregard for the rights and liberties of the people residing in Williamson County.

Yours very truly,
WALTER NESBIT,
Secretary-Treasurer.

The press service of the American Federation of Labor gives considerable prominence to the "exposure," reproducing some of its worst falsehoods.

"Labor," the organ of some of the railroad unions, edited by the former Democratic congressman, Edward Keating, of Colorado, also boosts the Lewis-Searles propaganda. Thru the Conference for Progressive Political Action, Mr. Keating is doing his best to keep the workers in the old parties, and opposing their efforts to build an independent party of their own.

Part of the Lewis-Searles dope is featured in a special edition of "The Labor World," of Pittsburgh, Pa. While Louis McGrew appears as editor on the manager of the publication, its real owner is said to be Al Hamilton, millionaire mine owner and Pittsburgh financier. It is charged that this mine owner-banker was really the power that raised John L. Lewis, practically unknown in the miners' union, in 1916, to the presidency of the international union. These are the interests most active in spreading the Lewis-Searles attacks on the progressives in the miners' union.

Socialists Again Run Away from Plan for Unity

By BEN LIFSCHITZ.

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK.—The city convention of the abortive American Labor Party here has again shown its unwillingness to achieve unity of all working class political and economic organizations. The convention, consisting of a packed hall of delegates of non-existent Socialist Party and Farmer-Labor Party branches with with a meager sprinkling of trade union delegates, rejected the unity offer made by the convention which organized the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in New York on Sept. 16.

Many unions, such as Locals 1, 9, 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Locals 50 and 68 of the Amalgamated, Local 276 of the Iron Workers, and others had been instructed to fight for unity as the only condition for their remaining affiliated to the American Labor Party. In an attempt to head off this revolt, Morris Hillquit made a gesture for unity, declaring that all organizations ready to accept the platform of the Socialist Party would be welcomed.

But when the committee on credentials submitted the credentials of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party tabled showed that the Socialist Party politicians were not sincere themselves. Without discussion, the committee recommendation was accepted with a vote of 123 to 25. Delegate Vosk, of the Iron Workers, moved reconsideration, and Chairman Lefkovits, in spite of a manifest unwillingness, was forced to read the invitation and reply of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, adopted at their convention, Sept. 16. Lefkovits read only half of the letter. Vosk stated that these exclusion tactics proved that they did not want unity, but the chairman refused the floor to the opposition and railroaded the question thru.

Paul Agne'l, of the Amalgamated Metal Workers, protested the action of the chairman in cutting off the discussion, accusing them of fearing to let the opposition state their case. The S. P.ites and supporters then launched into a bitter attack against the Communists and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. They said that they would not unite with the Communists unless the latter would stop antagonizing Gompers.

"Throw 'em Out!" Yells the Gompers' Pack on First Day; Labor's Ranks Lose Million

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

"Throw him out!" was the pack yell with which the followers of Samuel Gompers opened the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor at Portland, Ore., Monday, Oct. 1.

It was not an accident that this cry was heard on the first day of the convention when an aged man in the galleries asked for 15 seconds to put a question to the offical head of the American labor movement, Sam Gompers.

"Throw him out!" is an official policy of the Gompers' regime at Portland, Ore., just as it is of the John L. Lewis' tyranny in the United Mine Workers' Union, shown by the mobbing of Joseph Manley, at the Scranton, Pa., anthracite Tri-District Convention. Gompers grew timid at Portland, just as Lewis called off his bowling pack of official thugs at Scranton, Pa., and the aged visitor was allowed to retain his seat in the gallery, while Gompers proceeded to expatiate on "the unity of labor."

The Gompers' "throw 'em out!" policy, which assumes at times the form of strike breaking, revealed itself on the eve of the convening of the Portland convention, thru Gompers' telegram to "Major" George L. Berry, president of the Pressmen's Union, who was engaged at the moment in attempting to smash the strike of the members of his own union in New York City.

Gompers supported thruout the strike-breaking activities of the union wrecker, Berry, pledging his aid to the limit to drive the real labor men out of the organized labor movement, who are referred to repeatedly as "the Seattle Reds."

There is no doubt that the hireling press agents of the labor bureaucracy, Chester M. Wright, the renegade Socialist, for Sam Gompers, and the discredited Ellis Searles for Mr. Lewis, are responsible for this misleading publicity. Only these leaders of the high-salaried labor dukes could spawn such fiction as the claim that the delegates to the convention are planning [illegible] Gompers.

Just what is going to happen to the "throw 'em out" attack launched against the Seattle Central Labor Council is one of the big questions before the convention. This problem breaks into the labor news repeatedly, as if the press of the bosses were trying to egg on the Gompers-Lewis-Woll elements against the Seattle workers, [illegible] For the information of these ignorant red baiters we repeat that there is but one Communist party in the United States, the Workers Party, and it is not holding any conventions, special or otherwise, in Portland or anywhere else. But the Wright-Searles outfit, egged on by their masters,

Eleven Workers Party Branches Are Organized in One Week

Charter applications received at the National Office of the Workers Party indicate that the campaign for new membership initiated by the Party to be carried on during the next three months is bringing a quick response.

In the last week eleven charters were issued to new branches organized during the week. Among the branches granted charters are two branches in the North Dakota farming section, indicating the growth of support for Communism among the agricultural workers of this country.

One federation of the Party reported 250 new members accepted during the month of September alone, being an increase of 25% in the membership of that organization.

Party branches everywhere are organizing campaign committees to carry on the membership drive in a systematic manner and there is every indication that during the month of October at least half the total of 10,000 new members, which is the goal of the campaign, will be admitted into the Party.

The National Office urges these Party units which have not already taken action to organize for the membership drive to immediately elect committees and carry out the plan of campaign sent them by the National Office.

20,000 Workers in Washington County, Pa., Back F. F. L. P.

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

(Special to "The Worker")

WASHINGTON, Pa.—The largest and most enthusiastic gathering of workers that ever assembled here for political purposes in this city came [illegible] in answer to a call for United Political Action as advocated by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The meeting was called to order by C. ... Chambers, a real dirt farmer of ... county, who after a short speech in which he outlined the reasons for the gathering, proceeded to do business in a business-like way.

The report of the credentials committee showed that eighty local unions and two central bodies, with a membership of approximately 20,000 were represented. When the delegates left for their respective homes it was hard to guess what caused the registration of joy on their faces, for they had formed a real live County Branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. They had adopted the national program and statement of principles, also a supplement to the Washington County Program, among other things, declaring themselves subordinate to the ... body, and pledging ... [illegible] ... nomination and election of candidates to the local offices.

The spirit of the gathering was typical to the fact that the delegates ... being fooled by the usual stereotyped tests that accompany all old party primary campaigns, for the workers know very well that the capitalists tell the truth about each other ... also that they will "Kiss and Make Up" when the primaries are over.

S. A. Baker, the popular president of the Chartiers Valley Central Labor Union of Canonsburg, Pa., was elected as County Chairman, and J. ... Strong, of Houston, Pa., an active member of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, was elected as secretary-treasurer.

A Party Committee consisting of two representatives from each important section of the county and one from each of the smaller sections, from which an executive committee of five was chosen, promised so much action among the farmer-labor residents of Washington County, that, in addition to being one of the foremost mining and agricultural counties of Pennsylvania, it will be the first in importance from a working class or political viewpoint.

The delegates were representative of nearly all the principle trades, and included beside the farmers, members of the United Mine Workers, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the Glass Workers' Union, the International Union of Journeymen Barbers, and others.

With this array of workers in the political arena with a party of their own, re-elected Republicans, the Mellon and other big interests are going to be put to the task of protecting their laurels. Resolutions demanding the release of the Cliftonville, West Virginia, riot and other class war prisoners were adopted.

Dismissal in Kuzbas Case.

NEW YORK.—Dismissal of five counts of grand and petty larceny against five former members of the Kuzbas Organization Committee has been granted by Judge Alfred Talley here. The persons affected are Eugene N. Baldwin, director, American Civil Liberties Union; Mont Schuyler, Owen Lovejoy, Clair Tellis, Mrs. Mulari, Herbert S. Calvert, Theodore Reese and Tom Barker. In the case of F. Pascal Cosgrove three counts were dismissed and two counts were sustained. The attorneys for the committee, Messrs. Hays and Bigman are confident of victory in this case also.

"Polikushka," the new Russian movie, will be shown in New York City, beginning today, Oct. 7, at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, 110th St. and 5th Ave.

Serious Discontent Sweeps American Imperial Empire

By JAY LOVESTONE.

As the rumblings of revolution are again giving Europe the Red Tremors, giant waves of discontent are sweeping the islands in the grasp of American imperialism.

The Philippines are astir with protest against the dictatorial regime of the iron-fisted Military Governor, General Leonard Wood.

Cuba is in the throes of a serious conflict over the domination of the island by American sugar and shipping interests.

Porto Rico is pleading for independence. The Virgin Islands are groaning under the super-Prussian rule imposed upon them by their new Yankee masters. The wounds inflicted upon the Haitians and the Dominican Republic by the Marines serving as revenue collectors are not healing as rapidly as our Senatorial whitewashers of these outrageous crimes would wish. Nor is the Territory of Hawaii welcoming the suzerainty of the Dole-Castle Trust Co., of New York. And despite Obregon's selling out to Wall Street, not everything looks rosy to American investors in Mexico.

Dollar Democracy and Dollar Diplomacy.

The rule of dollar democracy by our financiers and industrialists at home has been translated into a regime of dollar diplomacy abroad and in our vast colonial possessions. American democracy now truly rests upon a monarchy of gold and an aristocracy of finance.

The story of the rise of Yankee imperialism reads like a gripping best-seller.

In the Philippines the American imperialists have a territory the size of the Kingdom of Italy and the population of Canada. Sixty-five per cent of the foreign commerce of the Philippines is done with this country. These islands are teeming with natural resources, are only three days away from China, the richest and cheapest labor mine in the world, and are the gateway of American capital to the prize market of the Far East where 800,000,000 people live.

In Cuba our financiers have holdings totaling hundreds of millions of dollars. This little so-called independent republic, the one-third the size of the Philippines, has already developed a foreign trade three times the size of the Pacific possessions, or over a half a billion dollars. American sugar magnates own 60 per cent of the plantations and finace most of the rest.

The Standard Oil Co. is getting great concessions in Ecuador, Bolivia, Colombia, Peru, Mexico, Argentina, and Central America. The contract recently closed between Bolivia and the Standard Oil gives the American corporation 2,580,000 acres of petroleum land for 55 years and the right to build and run railways, tramways, harbors, telephone and telegraphs, and all other Bolivian public utilities.

American bankers have concluded successful loans to Guatemala, Costa Rica, Salvador, and Honduras. In Guatemala an American bank has just been set up to draw all paper money out of circulation.

Colombia has borrowed $4,000,000 and is negotiating for an $80,000,000 loan. Ecuador is surrendering its customs receipts to the Standard Oil for a $33,000,000 loan. Peru has pledged its customs to American financiers in consideration of a $60,000,000 loan. Haiti has borrowed $7,500,000, and Chile, $44,000,000; Uruguay, $18,000,000; Brazil, $50,000,000; Argentina, $250,000,000.

Like Roman Empire of Old.

In more ways than one does this American colonial empire resemble the Roman Empire of old. But the outstanding resemblance between the policy of the Roman imperial republic of yesterday and the modern American capitalist imperialistic republic of today lies in the management of the colonies. The American military governor generals of the colonial possessions are the exact prototypes of the procurators and proconsuls governing the provinces of the old Roman Empire. In Rome men were given the office of proconsul or procurator in order to enable them to exploit the provinces they governed as a source of income to redeem either their personal fortunes or the fortunes of their political friends and supporters. On exactly the same principle are our colonial military governor generals chosen today. General Leonard Wood was sent into the Philippines to force upon the Filipinos an economic policy which would enable him to reap invaluable concessions the powerful bankers and manufacturers who financed his primary campaign of 1920, costing close to $2,000,000. Thus we find today Major General Enoch H. Crowder, formerly chief of the American military staff, serving as "ambassador" to Cuba. An American commission is now in Bolivia watching the collection of taxes in the interests of the Standard Oil. In Nicaragua, the only solvent country in Central America, the United States administers the treasury and the customs of the country in the interests of the American bankers and investors.

Trouble in the Philippines.

Since he has arrived in the Philippines, Military Governor General Wood has pursued a policy of forcing the natives to hand over valuable concessions to American capitalists. In this campaign General Wood has made the Philippine National Bank the target of his attack. The bank recently declared in Manila that "the Philippine National Bank is in better shape now than it has been for the last four years." Governor General Wood is now doing his very worst to put this bank, run by the native government, out of business. The object behind this drive of the agent of American imperialism is to remove all hindrances and obstacles to the domination of the islands by American capital.

The Filipinos strongly resent this move of Wood. The Senate and Legislature have gone on strike against this high-handed policy of their American masters. There is talk of independence amongst large numbers of the native population. The Filipinos are bent on preventing the American capitalists from gobbling up their country.

Haller, "Hangman of the Polish Workers," Coming Here, Guest of American Legion

The American Legion has sent an invitation to General Haller, the Mussolini of Poland, asking him to attend their convention in San Francisco. There the American Legion adventurer will be the type of organization he really is. Haller has accepted and is reported to be on his way to this country.

Who is General Joseph Haller?

Up to 1915 Haller had been unknown. At that time Polish reactionaries in the United States by means of a campaign enticed many thousands of Polish youths in this country who were exempted from the draft, to join special regiments in France, which were fighting against Germany for an "independent Poland." The real purpose was to get these youths to shed their blood for the profiteers of the Allied countries. General Haller was chosen by the Polish reactionaries as commander of these special regiments under the high command of Field Marshal Foch.

After the signing of the armistice Haller transported his troops to Poland on French ships. He immediately started fighting against the workers' and peasants' government of Soviet Russia.

Later in 1919, when Marshal Pilsudsky started his drive against Russia, Haller marched against Minsk and Smolensk.

When the Red Army was near the walls of Warsaw, the capital of Poland, many strikes broke out among the workers and peasants of Poland, and the slogan was the establishment of a Soviet Republic. Haller became the gendarme, and with his army suppressed the revolution at its very start. It was then that the press of Poland gave him the title, "The hangar of the Polish workers."

Haller is to arrive in this country on Oct. 6, and he will immediately go to Washington, where he will get an official reception. Haller, who is organizing a Fascist movement in Poland, is an avowed monarchist, and is called the Mussolini of Poland, is to be feted in the name of the United States government, which is supposed to be a liberal democracy. The "Republic" will tolerate the hangar of the Polish workers to make a tour, all over the country agitating for a monarchy in Poland, and against everything that is liberal, and Coolidge will shake the hands of this Fascist general and tender him an official reception in the name of the people of the United States.

The Polish reactionaries of this country are preparing parades and demonstrations in honor of their favorite hero, and with the co-operation and protection of the police, will thus help spread Fascist propaganda among the Polish workers of this country. The Polish workers of this country must realize that the reactionary forces all over the world, irrespective of nationality, are uniting to destroy them. Only when they realize this can they acquire the understanding to defend their rights and to move forward in order to shape a new world out of the old one.

Lithuanians Support Campaign.

The call of the Workers Party for the creation of a $100,000 fund as a preliminary step for establishment of The Daily Worker found prompt response among the Lithuanian workers of this country. With the Communists in the lead, all progressive forces are at work. Not only branches of the Workers Party are donating money, but various other organizations, as, for instance, American Lithuanian Workers' Literature Society's branches, Lithuanian Progressive Women's Alliance, even singing societies stand in the front of this campaign.

The Chicago comrades stand in the lead. Workers Party Branch No. 1 already donated $300, but its goal is $800. Branch No. 4 has nearly $100, with the decision to collect $200. Members of Branch No. 41 are working for the creation of $200. Lithuanian Workers Literary Chorus (L. Kankliu Misrus Chorus) made an application for six shares. Nineteen branches of Lithuanian Women's Alliance bought five shares. Various other organizations are doing their best to strengthen the drive for The Daily Worker.

From the "Smoke and Steel" City (Pittsburgh), Workers Party Branch No. 9 gave $25. Detroit comrades sent $45 and other cities promised to stand whole-hearted support for this cause.

A worker from Robyville, Ohio, writes: "I am sending you $10 for two shares—one for Sidney G. and one for my son, Joe. Please send me the first copy of The Daily Worker. I wish The Daily Worker good success and good luck." Doubtless the Lithuanian comrades will make their full quota until November 7 as required by the Workers Party.

Without the DAILY WORKER the labor movement is gagged.

Report of Finnish Federation.

Comrade Fahle Burman reports for the Finnish Federation that each branch has been allotted a quota and that all branches are hard at work raising their quota so that money will come fast from now on. All report their determination to raise money for the sale of shares and by holding entertainments, meetings, etc., so that the Finnish Federation will pay its quota of $25,000 before Nov. 7.

Comrade Burman reports the following two branches of the Finnish Federation as having already raised their quota, namely: Annesville, Mass., and Canonsburg, Pa. The Finnish comrades of Lanesville sold their quota of shares twenty-four hours after the supplies were received and expect to duplicate it. The Finnish comrades of Canonsburg write, "We hereby remit for shares sold to the Daily Worker Campaign, which is the quota allotted to our branch. However, this is only the beginning, so therefore send us a big bunch of application blanks."

"That's the spirit," says Burman. "Go to it and The Daily Worker will be a reality."

Boston Police Get Aid of Black Hundred in Stopping Labor Meeting

By WILLIAM SIMONS.
(Special to "The Worker").

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 26.—Police bureaucrats outcasted the czar, when they cancelled a meeting called by the Workers (Communist) Party, at Paddock House, at which Comrade M. Katayevich was to speak on "The New Orientation of the Patriots and Soviet Ukraine."

The Ukrainian "patriots" acted the role of agent provocateurs, justifying the police that a meeting was to be held to arouse sentiment against the United States Government. So a "patriotic" police captain snooped around, asking such questions as, "Do the meetings take place in church?" As a member of the branch, the police captain pointed to C. E. Ruthenberg's article in the Worker", "Communists in the Trade Unions" as a reason for the stopping of the meeting. He had been informed, he said, that Katayevich was to speak on the Communist Party of America. Even after the police comrade guaranteed that the speaker would stick to the subject, the captain stated that the meeting could not be allowed in New York for speaking against the government. This was an absolute falsehood, and the police could not produce any paper to back up his statement, even when he claimed to have the written order in his possession. The captain ordered the committee to cancel the meeting and with the speaker yet to come. The captain then proceeded to get further information from the hall janitor, who said would notify the comrade of the hall meeting on Saturday. At that time, the captain left, but upon returning, received additional information from Ukrainian citizens which made it impossible for the meeting to be held. The police captain went to the hall, and the result was a note from the management refusing the hall. A sign was put up on the door by the Ukrainian branch to the effect that the meeting was called off on account of the denunciation of the Ukrainian Black Hundreds.

This is not a question of a meeting being prevented because of the militant spirit of the union workers, as in Pennsylvania. The meeting was stopped, because of the dastardly, treacherous tactics of those who see Ukrainia severed from the Federation of Soviet Republics, in order to fall a prey to the imperialist nations. To stop the truth about Ukrainia, they descend to the level of a police tool against the class-conscious workers.

The right of the Ukrainian comrades to hold meetings will be fought to the last ditch.

An Answer to "Justice" Baroff, Sigman and Yanovsky

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

When I was in New York recently to speak at the great protest meeting of needle workers, held in Rutgers Square, I took occasion to reply orally in detail to the slanders against me contained in the current issue of "Justice," and replied specifically to the nine questions asked by the editor, Yanofsky. Now, let me (being just returned to town) reply in writing.

Mr. Yanofsky, by raising a few dozen intellectual hand-springs, blames the shooting at Carmen's Hall, in Chicago, upon me. Now we can dispose of this matter quite easily. Let me repeat the offer that I made in the Rutgers Square meeting, namely, that the Trade Union Educational League officially challenges Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to join with it in the formation of a committee to thoroughly investigate the whole matter of the shooting, this committee to be made up of an equal number of representatives of the Trade Union Educational League and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, with another member to be chosen by these representatives. To this committee we engage to prove not only that the shot fired was not blanks, but also to identify the name of the gunman who fired the shots. This is a fair and square offer, and if it is not accepted by Mr. Sigman, it will be positive proof that he does not want the truth known in the shooting in Carmens' Hall.

Mr. Yanofsky demanded an answer to his nine questions. I have furnished such an answer, first, orally, and now in writing. We demand therefore, the acceptance of this offer. If it is not accepted, all the sputtering of Mr. Yanofsky will not prevent the proper conclusion from being drawn.

Now to answer the nine questions. Most of them are either insolent or trivial, or both, and are not worthy of notice. But so that Mr. Yanofsky has no rat-hole to crawl into, I am condescending to make reply to them. The only one of importance is number one, in which Yanofsky states his organization gave $60,000 to the strike and received a telegram from me for the sum of $65,000. He wonders where the additional $5,000 came from, leaving the conclusion that there were some irregularities in my finances. This question, as Mr. Yanofsky well knows, is a dastardly attack. He understands perfectly well all about this matter. Let us see the facts: The Amalgamated Clothing Workers donated $100,000 to the steel strike fund. Their convention was coming on and it occurred to our committee that it would be a courteous thing to send them an engrossed testimonial in time to be displayed at their convention. But when this was proposed, the question was raised that the International Ladies' Garment Workers and the Fur Workers had also contributed heavily to the strike fund and that, possibly they might be offended if such a testimonial was sent to the Amalgamated before they received theirs. Hence it was decided to send testimonials to all three simultaneously. Our committee, however, did not know how much the latter two organizations had contributed, as the funds they gave were not forwarded to our committee directly, but to Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, who later turned over all money raised in the general appeal in bulk, not specifying to us what organization he had received them from. We knew the Amalgamated had contributed $100,000, but did not know exactly how much the others had given. So I wrote to Secretary Baroff, of the International, inquiring about this matter. He replied that his union had contributed $65,000 and the Fur Workers $20,000. Having no way to check up on this matter, we had to take his word for it. Consequently we made out the testimonial on the basis of the figures stated in his letter. Later on, when Mr. Morrison, who handled the strike funds, issued his official report on the strike fund receipts and expenditures, we found out that Baroff had made an incorrect statement in his letter. I wrote him at once, asking him that the testimonial be returned so that it could be corrected. This he failed to do, for reasons best known to himself. Being just a little suspicious of his motives, I saved his letter, which is reproduced herewith. Let Mr. Baroff, or his office-boy, Yanofsky, get stranded if he can.

In question number two Mr. Yanofsky wants to know if I made my secretary-treasurer of the Trade Union Educational League and if I had any opposition. In reply I will state that I was regularly elected by the League and that I had no opposition. I may add that I was also elected secretary-treasurer at the Second General Conference of the League, which convened in Chicago Sept. 1-2, 1923, with over a hundred delegates. I hope this very valuable information will satisfy Mr. Yanofsky in these mysterious way.

In question number three, Yanofsky wants to know what my salary is as Secretary-Treasurer and who fixed it. It is $40 per week and it was established by the National Committee of the T. U. E. L. Incidentally, it may be remarked that Mr. Yanofsky, who is so quixical about my income, gets the extravagant salary of $125 per week, which is pure robbery of the I. L. G. W. U. In answer to question number four, I will state that I have no other compensation than my salary. Regarding question number five, I will say that my trips about the country are financed almost entirely by the groups that hold the meetings. In fact, most of them yield a profit to our organization.

In answer to question number six, the T. U. E. L. membership is made up of workers. When they see their unions infested by such over-paid leeches as Yanofsky, they are per-

Fascisti Leadership in America to Spring from Gompers' Bureaucracy

BY KARL R. BROWDER.

When the Fascisti conquered power in Italy, Mussolini established a government which, more than any other in the history of the world, represented the ideals and aspirations of the capitalist class. This government was hailed with delight by the capitalists of the United States. The capitalist papers and magazines, beautifying and glorifying Mussolini and his Fascisti, vied with one another in extolling the virtues of the Black Shirts. The capitalists of the United States, the same that has for six years refused to recognize Soviet Russia because of its "radicalism," while he is "undemocratic," hastened to be among the first to extend full diplomatic recognition to the Fascisti government.

This Fascism is international, and that is how it can exist also in America. It has fully demonstrated to all classes.

In spite, however, of all that has been written about the Fascisti, the workers of America have no clear idea as yet of what Fascism means to the labor movement. An example of the confusion existing is seen in the report of John H. Walker, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, to the Decatur Convention of that body (September, 1923). Here in which the Fascist movement in this country is described as merely an extension of the "open shop" drive of American capitalism. Such a point of view, natural as it may be, is the height of some of the most dangerous aspects of Fascism. It leads directly, even while apparent struggle against Fascism is called for, to actual surrender to the most insidious forms of that anti-working class movement. Thus John H. Walker, in the same report attacking the Fascisti, calls for the organization within the labor unions of posts of the American Legion, which is an outstanding ex-

Under the Fascisti regime in Italy, the Fascisti, this country is organized and financed, and its activities directed. This machine is now functioning in the United States. The Fascisti in Italy, as in this country, are organized in the form of "Anti-Fascisti" leagues, which are supported by hundreds of thousands of trade unionists, and have behind them the power of the present Fascist body in Italy recently responding to a statement in Turati's paper to the effect that the Fascisti have ceased to disband and reorganize upon a different basis. It must be pointed out that in Italy the Fascist Party of Italy is a direct factor only among the Italian immigrant population.

In the agrarian districts of the United States, the roots of Fascism show themselves in the activities of the Ku Klux Klan. This is, without doubt, the most native, 100% American expression of the Fascisti movement. As this is written, the State of Oklahoma, comprising 7,000 square miles of territory more than six times the size of Belgium) is under martial law, due to struggle between the State Government and the Ku Klux Klan. In many other states, particularly in the Middle West and South, the Klan is pushing forward its claim to power with increasing boldness.

The Ku Klux Klan is a curious mixture; one factor is the traditions of post-Civil War days, when the Klan originated as a weapon for the subjection of the Negro recently freed from chattel-slavery—from this it

WARNING!

Our attention was called to the fact that a certain person, professing to be a Soviet Russian courier carrying a message and gold (this must be the Russian gold of which Mr. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers' Union, speaks so much?) for the local Communists, has lately made his appearance in several Midwestern cities and succeeded in procuring financial contributions from workers who accepted his stories at their face value. He was last seen in Chicago under several aliases and each time tells a different story.

We warn all workers that that person is a faker and should be dealt with accordingly.

Discontent in American Colonies

recently in the Philippines that imperialists of other countries ... afraid that the contagion of national independence will spread from the Philippines to their colonies in quick time. It is interesting to see how the capitalist imperialists of all countries line up and forget their differences when their material interests are at stake.

Besides the Philippines and Cuba, ... considerable agitation has been ... up in financial circles here ... over the Tarafa Bill. Tarafa is a Cuban millionaire ... large railway holdings. He recently proposed a measure aiming ... consolidation of some of the ... railway lines and ... of 47 private ports ... by sugar companies for export- ... their products. Many of these ... private railways of ... own in this territory. These ... would be reversed practically ... according to their ...

When Tarafa first proposed this ... the American capitalists ... control 85 per cent of the prop- ... affected, protested vehemently. ... immediately reminded ... that it was not for such be- ... for that the Cuban Government ...

... was permitted to get a $50,000,000 loan in the United States. The American Sugar Refining Co., the Punta Allegre Sugar Co., the American Metal Co., the Cuban American Sugar Co., the Manati Sugar Co., the San Francisco Sugar Co., and over a score of American companies representing a total invested capital of about half a billion dollars sent their agents to Washington to raise a storm of protest. There were even signs of a fake revolution, like the one engineered in Panama by Theodore Roosevelt for the American bankers, being pulled off against the present Cuban administration sponsoring the Tarafa Bill.

Then Major General Crowder rushed to Coolidge to impress him with the seriousness of the Cuban "misbehavior." It was only because Tarafa was clever enough to shield in his bill the Cuban native capitalist interests behind such powerful ones as the Standard Oil dominating the Cuba Co. and the British-owned United Railways of Havana and the influential United Fruit Co. that decisive action by Washington has, to date, been prevented. It is demonstrated that the present system of private sub-ports robbed Cuba of hundreds of millions in revenue from smuggling, and turned the attendant huge financial benefits to American corporations. They were thus in a way supplanting the Cuban government in customs activity.

Much sentiment has been stirred up in Cuba against this high-handed attempt of foreign capitalists to throttle the native government. Tarafa is a very able native political leader. The he may be forced to yield considerably this time, it is a safe bet to look for numerous difficulties arising out of this dispute in the near future. All the cases of the utter arrogant attitude taken by the administration on this matter has given a long way towards proving the bubble of "pan-Americanism."

Discontent Hits Other Colonies.

In the other colonies and spheres of American influence there is considerable ferment brewing. Because of the rapid development of land and dispossessed. They are looking forward to complete independence from the United States. The Virgin Islands are complaining bitterly as can be seen from the following appeal by the editor of the "Emancipator", one of their native papers: "We are cast's who work for wages ranging from ten cents to a dollar a day. Politically we are peons governed by the United States Navy. Federal (U. S.) laws have worked havoc upon these islands. The people live in one room shacks, eat scanty meals; and are forced to move, about in a manner unbecoming civilized people at this age."

Finally, even Mexico does not afford unbounded peace and comfort to American imperialism. Alvaro Obregon has completely surrendered to Morgan and Rockefeller interests and is quickly stepping all pretense at friendship even with the most conservative labor elements, there are disturbing factors on the political horizon in Mexico. There is a national election to be held soon. The most likely successor of Obregon is General Calles who still calls himself a friend of the workers, because he is one of our capitalists being sure that they can win over Calles once he is elected president to the presidency makes the Mexican problem still a source of anguish to the American kings of finance and industry.

Tremendous Significance of Problem

Thus the colonial problem has become one of the major difficulties confronting the Coolidge administration. The problem of keeping the house in order in our vast outlying possessions has taken a place of equal import along side of such pressing national questions as the tariff, the railways, the agricultural conditions, and the serious disputes between the contractors will play a most important role.

Michigan Prosecutors Plan to Force Second Trial of Foster Soon

(Special to "The Worker")

LANSING, MICH.—That William Z. Foster is to be brought to trial again under the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism Law is the news contained in an announcement made by Assistant Attorney General O. L. Smith who had charge of the prosecutions against Foster and Ruthenberg in St. Joseph last year.

"We will push the prosecutions," said Smith, "I have secured a copy of a transcript of the record in the case of C. E. Ruthenberg who was convicted in Saginaw. Ruthenberg's case has been appealed and will get onto the Supreme Court docket in 1924. We expect to bring William Z. Foster whose trial last year resulted in a jury disagreement to trial in January. All the cases of the other 30 defendants under the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism Law except that of October docket of the Berrien County court, but I doubt whether any of the cases will come to trial before January. We will try the other cases immediately after the Foster case is over."

Smith also indicated that operatives in the employ of the Department of Justice are continuing to supply information to the Michigan authorities. This information was to the effect that the defense organization which had made the strenuous defense of the Foster and Ruthenberg cases possible is disintegrating. Smith believed that the weakness of the defense, particularly in their lack of funds, would make a conviction of Foster much easier in the forthcoming second trial.

Ready for New Battles.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Assistant Attorney General Smith of Michigan is to have a great disappointment if he expects to obtain an easy victory in the second trial of William Z. Foster.

This was made plain in an announcement made by the national office of the Labor Defense Council. "The Labor Defense Council is in splendid organization condition to meet any new onslaught of the Michigan authorities," said Moritz J. Loeb, secretary of the organization. The more than 50 branches of the Labor Defense Council are all busily engaged in carrying on the defense work for the coming season and we expect to put up an even more militant defense than the one conducted last year, which was able to break the backbone of the anti-labor prosecutions.

"There is only one danger which the defense has to face. That is in the attitude of many workers that the danger result up out of the Burns-Daugherty red raids are over. Such is not the case. The Department of Justice is only waiting for a let down on the part of the defense in order to accomplish their end by putting Foster and Ruthenberg and others in prison."

St. Louis Joins "The Worker".

(Special to "The Worker").

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Workers in and vicinity lined up solid for "The Daily" at a mass meeting addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," All the foreign language sections of the party were represented at the gathering, and pledged themselves to aid in the building of the English-language daily.

Engdahl also addressed gatherings in Madison and Granite City, Illino's, where the party members are active for "The Daily." It is noticeable everywhere that the membership drive is also progressing satisfactorily, side by side with "The Daily" drive. The slogans heard everywhere are "The Daily" and "The Party!"

Portland Convention Starts

terest, Gompers and Lewis, no doubt feel these falsehoods help rouse the mob spirit against the militants in the labor movement.

It is safe to claim that the same source is responsible for the numerous reports that William Z. Foster is havering about the A. F. of L. convention at Portland, ready to swoop down upon it, capture it and hawl it off to Moscow. Kansas City, Mo., is the farthest point west touched by Foster, and he was in the East when the A. F. of L. convention got under way.

Foster will not be in Portland to lead the fight of the "Seattle Reds," as the Gompers-Lewis publicity agents claim. James Duncan, former secretary-treasurer of the Seattle Central Labor Council, has been seated as a delegate, and he will no doubt lead the fight. Duncan showed his spirit at the Rochester, N. Y., convention of the A. F. of L., and it is to be hoped that he will stand his ground in Portland.

The attack on Seattle labor has simmered down to a question of whether a city central labor body or a state federation of labor have the right to declare for the recognition of Soviet Russia and the Labor Party. On these two issues the Seattle workers have decided to take their stand. They are supported by numerous local and state federations of labor thruout the country.

During the past few days the international conventions of the Moulders' Union and the Electrical Workers, not to mention numerous state federation conventions, have declared for Russian recognition. Gompers and his "throw 'em out" gangsters in official power prohibited a live wire when they attacked Seattle's workers on the recognition of Soviet Russia and Labor Party issues. It will be interesting to watch how they let go. Some of the most prominent of the Gompers' officialdom stopped off in Seattle for several days on their way to Portland and conducted a local investigation. They had assumed, no doubt, however that the convention tackled this problem at the time this issue went to press.

Just how successful the Gompers' "throw 'em out" policy has been during the last four years, during which this policy has been in force, is revealed in the membership reports submitted to the convention. This report shows that the A. F. of L. has lost a million members during the last two years, in spite of the industrial revival that has swept the country during the past year. The official membership figures given are:

1920	4,078,740
1921	3,906,528
1922	3,195,635
1923	2,926,468

For four years, under the Gompers' policies, the strength of American organized labor is being frittered away. This is the result of Gompers' program of "fight the militants and make friends with the bosses."

Politically the Gompers' executive council urges the convention to stand by the A. F. of L. National Non-partisan Political Campaign Committee, the "reward your friends and punish your enemies" circus.

Continuance of "friendly relations" with the American Legion is urged, while the Ku Klux Klan is denounced. The report for this discrimination as between these two bands of American Fascisti remains a mystery. A polite slap on the wrist is handed the foreign importations of fascism. Mr. Gompers will now have to explain 'how he will be able to face Judge E. H. Gary, the fascisti admirer and the head of the steel trust, at the next banquet of the National Civic Federation.

Mr. Gompers, in his report to the convention, takes considerable pride in his "news reports" and propaganda services that have been so busy during the past year attacking workers' radical activities, especially the Trade Union Educational League and the Federated Press.

It cost America's workers last year $19,281.58 to keep three lobbyists hanging around Washington, D. C. One of these is the former Hearst anti-labor reporter, William C. Roberts, of Chicago. What they have done for labor in Washington, nobody knows.

Fraternal delegates to the British Trade Union Congress and the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress took $2,731.89 out of the treasury. Benjamin Schlesinger, former president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, must have recouped on some of the money it cost him to banquet Gompers at Co. in order to be a delegate to the British Labor Congress.

No doubt much could be written, if all the facts were known about the huge sum of $83,512.50 spent during the year for the publication of Gompers' monthly, "The American Federationist," that no one reads. This is more than $7,000 per month spent on this monthly publication alone, while the whole Gompers' pack is howling over the conscience fund investigation of the finances of the Trade Union Educational League because it spends $1,900 monthly for all purposes, including the publication of its magazine, "The Labor Herald."

The cost the workers of the organized labor movement just $12,218.80 in cold cash during the year, so that Gompers' drive to smash the Trade Union Educational Leagues and fight American militants thru the "A. F. of L. Weekly News Letter," probably has a different fraud imposed upon labor anywhere.

These are just some of the facts that the workers of the rank and file slough in which the American labor movement finds itself with the opening of the convention of the American Labor Convention at Portland, Ore. Anyone who protests is greeted with the cowardly cry, "Throw him out!" This is so because the rank fears that its days are numbered, that it will soon be compelled to go.

Michigan Labor Renews War on Syndicalist Law

(Special to "The Worker").

DETROIT, MICH.—Michigan labor is standing four-square in its determination to kill the infamous Michigan Criminal Syndicalism law under which William Z. Foster was tried and under which C. E. Ruthenberg was convicted. In its 54th annual convention, the Michigan State Federation of Labor passed unanimously a resolution unreservedly demanding the repeal of syndicalism law and the dismissal of the cases pending as a result of the raids by Bridgman a year ago.

Characterizing the law as "a standing menace against free speech, free press and assemblage; it is class legislation of the most vicious type," the resolution goes on to voice the indignation of labor, at the refusal of the authorities of Michigan to take action to dismiss the 31 cases in the face of the demands made by the 1922 convention. It goes on to say that the law is extremely dangerous, particularly to organized labor.

A copy of the resolution has been sent to the Governor of Michigan, the Attorney General of Michigan, the prosecutor of Berrien County and the American Federation of Labor.

DON'T MISS THIS!

Readers on Chicago's Northwest Side are invited to attend a lecture by James P. Cannon on the "Struggle with the Workers and the Necessity for a Revolutionary Party." This lecture is given by the Northwest Side English Branch of Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard, Tuesday, Oct. 9, at 8 p. m. It is an opportunity which nobody should miss. With the bosses again preparing for an "open shop" campaign to begin with the coming economic depression and unemployment, th's subject becomes vitally important to all workers. Remember everybody is invited.

Tolers of Gary Hear Workers Party Speaker on Labor Party Issue

(Special to "The Worker")

GARY, IND.—An audience of steel workers from the great Gary mills listened to Comrade T. J. O'Flaherty explain why the workers should form a labor party of their own and depend no more on the capitalist parties. He showed the labor party sentiment in the United States, the efforts of the reactionary labor fakers to check sentiment into the grooves and the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in Chicago on July 3rd. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers Party.

Gary is the scene of the great steel strike of 1919 in which William Z. Foster played so creditable a part, but where on the other hand high officials of the American Federation of Labor covered themselves with infamy. The strike was broken by federal troops sent in by the Democratic administration and thru the treachery of A. F. of L. officials. When the strikers were starving and they appealed for aid to the American Federation of Labor they were informed that nothing could be done for them tho it was a well known fact that the sum of $100,000 donated by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America—an independent union—was available at the time.

Hundreds of workers active in that strike were blacklisted thruout the entire steel district and are still under surveillance.

The A. F. of L. is again trying—or pretending—to organize the steel workers. But the steel workers, betrayed once before, are determined not to risk another betrayal with those who left them to face the music alone in the last struggle. A meeting was arranged in Gary recently by the A. F. of L. organization committee. Considerable money was spent advertising it but only 35 persons were in the audience. Many of them were members of the Workers Party. The first speaker said that he did not want any radicals or foreigners in the organization. It must be a 100 per cent American union. This talk so disgusted those present that the next speaker tried to take the sting out of this undiplomatic utterance by saying that he did not wish the previous speaker misunderstood. Yes, they wanted radicals and every worker regardless of political view is the organization, but they wanted the radicals to keep quiet.

In view of the fact that the great majority of the steel workers are foreign-born the sincerity of these paid parasites posing as organizers can be judged. The workers of Gary believe that they do not want to organize the workers but they want to spend the $70,000 which was left over from the 1919 fiasco.

The sentiment for labor organization is very strong in the steel mills at present. The workers believe the time is now ripe. The mills are busy. Machines are being imported by the hundreds. The steel workers, however, are not inclined to take anything like any organization that will separate them. They want a union that will include all the workers in the mills and do not want to be the prey of per capita sharks who divide them into groups for the sake of the cash they can squeeze out of them.

I interviewed several workers coming from and going to work. They hold a high opinion of William Z. Foster and give him credit for putting up a splendid fight in 1919 in spite of the obstacles placed in his way by the Gompers machine and the old stuffed goose, Mr. Michael Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers.

The great problem in Gary is the organization of the steel slaves. Those on the ground believe that it is a job for the militants.

Young Workers' League Pledges Itself to Raise $5,000 for the Daily Worker

The National Organization of the Young Workers League has pledged itself to raise $5,000 for The Daily Worker. The Chicago League has set the example for the rest of the Young Workers League.

At a recent mass meeting for "The Daily" in Chicago, the Young Workers League of Chicago accepted the task of raising $1,000 for the Workers Daily. This pledge was greeted with wild enthusiasm by the audience and the committee in charge. With 12 branches thruout the city and every member actively engaged in the work, it is positive that the young workers will pass the $1,000 mark in a short time.

To show that they meant business a check for $25.00 from the Englewood branch of the Young Workers League was turned over to the Campaign Committee.

Attention! Members of the Young Workers League Who Are in the Workers Party.

Your attention is called to a letter which was sent to all branches of the League by the National Secretary, Martin Abern. It announces a decision of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League, which is endorsed by the Executive Council of the Workers Party. It instructs the Chicago League as follows: "It so happens that a good many of our members are actively engaged in raising funds for the Daily Worker NOW. We want to know how much our members raise. If you have already raised any money for the Daily Worker campaign, make a record of it and send it in to your city organization who in turn will give it to the National Office.

The Chicago League calls upon those who are Party and Young Workers League members that they MUST purchase their shares and make their contributions through the Young Workers League. Further action will be announced later by the Executive Committee of the Chicago League.

First Young Workers League Orchestra.

Music will not be missed by the Young Workers League. The Englewood branch announces the organization of a Young Workers League band, of five competent musicians; a splendid pianist, 2 experienced violinists, a fine clarinetist and a cornet-flugelhorn artist. When this orchestra makes its debut be sure and be on hand. Everybody will be in for a good time.

Every one don't forget October 20th! Keep this date open. It's Halloween Nite and the Young Workers will celebrate.

The Rum War In Chicago.

By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY.

Pitched battles are being fought in the streets of Chicago between rival gangs of bootleggers or "beer runners" as they are now called. Within the past two weeks three men engaged in the business of violating the Volstead Act have passed on to the great unknown as the result of the attempts alleged to have been employed by their competitors.

A deputy sheriff is arrested charged with the murder of one beer runner. The other two were killed at one of the busiest crossings in the city but their murderers cannot be identified. The gunmen of both camps strut about the city, call on the mayor and the chief of police, know what the shooting is about and grant interviews to the newspapers. Seemingly they have nothing to worry about. Why?

Walter O'Donnell, one of a family of gangsters, as well known to the police as Charlie Chaplin is to the movie fans, declared that if he told what he knew, the city would blow up and half the police department would stand on its head. A judge said that he suspected the same percentage of the police force was implicated in the bootlegging business. The mayor of the District of Surrey is fussing like a squirrel in front of a sand pile and raising as much dust without accomplishing anything. The gunmen laugh at them and say that they dare not do anything.

During the recent mayoralty election we told the workers that capitalist politicians looked on the city of Chicago as a good place to loot. Rival groups of grafters compete for the privilege of raking in all the money they can lay hands on through the machinery at City Hall. It is a well known fact that the best political workers are the gangsters and they must be taken care of after the smoke of battle clears away and a new mayor is installed in office.

The gangsters who were part of Thompson's political machine had to give way to the "boys" who won their place in the sun as a result of Dever's victory. And the sun of prosperity never shone with greater splendor than it does on the gangsters and learned that the "people" were getting nervous. Something must be done.

The mayor got busy. He called the chief of police. The latter called in his captains. The captains called in the patrolmen and the latter went out, arrested some soft drink parlor proprietors and their customers, and the merry war is on. But the average citizen is cynical. He believes it is all bluff and the cause of the rumpus is a refusal of the rum sellers to come across. When you see a drunk come out of a corner saloon followed by a policeman equally drunk and when you see the same policeman go right back for another load—well when your pick up the paper and read that Chicago is now as dry as the Sahara desert your skepticism is not diminished.

The fact is, according to seasoned political veterans that the political bosses of this glorious city are up to their necks in the rum graft. The police are afraid to tell what they know, as is everybody else. This bubble will burst and the amber fluid will flow again. It is capitalists politics. Nothing is sacred but gold. "Get the coin," is the slogan. That is the great incentive. Civic pride, civic purity—that is all bunk to be peddled to the fellow who has nothing between the ears. There is money to be made by selling beer and so long as there is the political hacks of both the Democratic and Republican parties will share in the profits of the preservation of order will be only a sideline for the police department.

The present administration is in a rather ugly predicament. Its friends must be protected. And there is no doubt but that back of the scenes secret diplomacy is working to square things between the "boys" so that the ends of justice can be attained by silence and "business as usual" again becomes the order of the day.

Joint Federation Action is Planned in Party Campaigns

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

An important and successful meeting of editors, secretaries, and industrial organizers of the foreign-language federations, representatives of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League was held in Chicago during the past week. The reports made by the Federations and Party campaigns, the Daily Worker and organizational campaigns, the policies of the press were discussed in detail and acted upon. The reports made by the Federations brought out many important and characteristic points.

Comrade Jakira reported for the C. E. C. on the question of coordination of the work of the various Federations. In 1926 past this coordination of work was far from satisfactory. The Federation leadership is responsible to a great extent for the failure in securing the affiliation of Federation membership to respond to this or other campaigns conducted by the Party. It was agreed that in the future meetings of the Federation leaders shall be called by the C. E. C. before a campaign is started, so that all the Federations and the Party can proceed with the work as one unit.

Comrade John J. Ballam reported on progress made so far in the drive for the Daily. He showed that steps must be taken by every federation to boost the campaign both in the press and organizationally.

The report of the secretaries showed the campaign to be well under way. Many branches have already disposed of their quota of shares. Many members are buying at least two shares each. Some of the Federations are carrying on a campaign for the Daily in fraternal and other organizations in which they have membership and expect good results. The secretaries are confident that the Federations will have their quotas of shares disposed of before the time limit is over.

Comrade C. E. Rathenberg reported the organization campaign now on. He urged the Federations to get the need for the Federations immediately to get behind the campaign. The pamphlet "Why Every Worker Should Be a Communist and Join the Workers Party," should be given the widest possible distribution among the American workers. Many Federations will have it translated in their own language.

Comrade A. Louis Engdahl pointed out the need of our language press to help the campaign. He explained our labor movement, to carry more news of party activities and to take active part in the campaign and drive.

The discussion showed clearly that the Party has for the last few months made remarkable progress. The Federation membership is fast getting to realize the importance of taking an active part in the affair of the Party. This was especially emphasized by the Lithuanian comrades. There is hardly a single meeting, at which one Lithuanian comrade does not speak a few words in behalf of the Party in which the comrades of the Lithuanian Federation are not taking active part. And it is only the citizen is cynical. He believes it is all bluff and the cause of the rumpus is a refusal of the rum sellers to come across. When you see a drunk come out of a corner saloon followed by a policeman equally drunk and when you see the same policeman go right back for another load—well when your pick up the paper and read that Chicago is now as dry as the Sahara desert your skepticism is not diminished.

There is money to be made by selling beer and so long as there is the political hacks of both the Democratic and Republican parties will share in the profits of the preservation of order will be only a sideline for the police department.

The present administration is in a rather ugly predicament. Its friends must be protected. And there is no doubt but that back of the scenes secret diplomacy is working to square things between the "boys" so that the ends of justice can be attained by silence and "business as usual" again becomes the order of the day.

Russia Plans New Film.

It is announced that the Russian Soviet film authorities are preparing a great historical film, which will give the history of the Soviet revolution. Trotzky, Zinoviev and other Communist leaders have consented to appear personally. Lenin's part, however, will be taken by a substitute, as he is still far from well.

The Bondwoman in the United States Must Fight for Her Own Liberation

By SOREI SHOMAKER,
State Chairman, Farmer-Labor Party of Washington.

Why are the court dockets filled with cases for divorce? Why is the establishment of law besieged by endless complaints and clamors showing so many failures in the existing social system? When those questions are answered, to the satisfaction of all concerned, there may be some rays of hope for a better day—a day of better days—on the troubled sea of matrimony.

Just as a dry hill of gravel, in a cleared spot of the forest of Western Washington, I saw a woman working in the fields of agriculture. She was trying to coax nature to give her a crop of potatoes. The man of the farm great mass of workers live on such small incomes that they are real bondswomen.

Getting religion is not enough to save the women from bondage. Sarah had religion but it did not prevent Sarah, the class wife of Abraham, from driving the bondwoman and her boy into the desert to starve. Religion suggests the thought of turning the other cheek after the profiteer has robbed the one supposed to contain the family money.

Going into social clubs and organizations of women will not be of any material value to the bondwomen. Such alleged society combinations are generally mere side shows to partisan politics of the old school type. Women in Sandage—these whose name is spelled in dollars—soon find that they are nothing more than outlaws in society, tolerated because of political necessities.

Voting the tickets of partisan politics cannot do the bondwoman any good on earth or in the world to come. The old parties have been tried and found faulty. They have been weighed and found to be short in pounds, ounces and even the petty things used in getting at the weight of the average man. Popular politicians sometimes go about the country kissing babies and doing many funny stunts, just before election. But they do not know the bondwoman mother after election.

The working women of city and country must organize, in political groups, for personal and collective protection. They cannot continue an existence of anything but slavery if they stand out alone and work their unorganized channels. United they can stand and demand all that women are entitled to in this world. More than that they can get what they ask for without begging, lowering the standard of life or selling their souls to representatives of plutocracy.

Is it any wonder that drunkenness is on the increase? Is it any wonder that men get discouraged, take to drink, go into gambling and other dens to change their thoughts on the uneven chance of making a living for their wives and children? Is it any wonder that there is more crime in this nation today than ever before in history?

The farmers are bankrupt. They cannot pay their debts that are estimated to be at least fifteen billions of dollars for the agricultural class of the United States. That amounts to three times the total of all money, including gold, silver, paper and small specie, issued by the treasury of the nation. Neither of the old parties has done anything to change conditions. Matters have been growing worse for the past twenty-five years.

Will it be any surprise if the million people have the farmer desert and enter the cities and organize industry to prevent actual starvation? Will it be any surprise if a number of those suffering from the system become tools of the capitalists to be used in fighting organized labor? Every observer must see the making of the dark plan of capitalists to make peasants of farmers and slaves of laborers.

The women of this nation have a mission to perform. They must wake up their sleeves and work for liberty. "Save the Women" would be an excellent slogan, much more appropriate conditions than any of the numerous silly sayings put forth by the agents of dollar politics nine per cent minimum commercialism.

The women who work should get together. They should organize. They need a campaign of education. They must assist in:

Organizing the unorganized.
Amalgamating trade unions.
Making the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.
Getting a daily newspaper.
Defending class war prisoners.
Educating the boys and girls.
Recognizing Soviet Russia.
Building a government of farmers and workers.

It is useless for the women to wait day to waste their time taking out a protective tariff—a dead issue.

The League of Nations—a failure.

The World's Court—a dab of ink.

There are live issues that must be settled. They involve the rights of humanity, in every avenue of life, being attacked every day, by the hordes of capitalism, militarism and political bosism—three destructive forces.

Women voters should stand firm on their demands for better conditions. They should get a thore understanding of the fundamentals of government. They should be prepared to help drive the capitalists from the land.

Our Programless Progressives

The reactionaries are clearing the decks for 1924. With Coolidge at the helm they are busily at work charting their course to victory at the coming national elections.

Coolidge's campaign managers are taking advantage of the few months respite they still have before Congress opens in December. Secretary of Agriculture, Wallace, has been sent on the road to sell the administration to the farmers. He is making a tour of the discontended areas of the Northwest. Wallace, very discreetly, keeps quiet about the past and Harding. The reactionary of the blackest stripe, he has his face turned to the future. The Secretary of Agriculture is talking about subsidies to farmers, about price-fixing schemes for the wheat market, and about taking the farmers into the inner councils of the Administration.

At the same time Coolidge is seeking to disarm the progressives by another section of the political front. He has dropped the open dishonored policy pursued by Harding of denying the LaFollette followers patronage. Coolidge has decided to swing the patronage doors wide open to the progressives in order to draw them closer to the "regular" fold. Now the followers of LaFollette in the House and Senate will be permitted to hand out jobs to their own agents. The practical politicians around Coolidge feel that the war-like policy pursued by Harding has not netted them any results and that, tho this new outbreak of amenability on their part may not get them all they would like to obtain, yet things can't be any worse than they have been. At least some of the bitterness that Harding's old practice has engendered will disappear, according to Coolidge's managers.

And Coolidge himself is supplying the soft, sweet words to camouflage the sordidness of the whole deal. He has discarded Harding's fetish of normalcy. Coolidge has drifted into a new slogan. From now on the country will be piloted to "stability." Political handbooks will be re-written in line with this new keynote, of which the President has proclaimed himself high-priest. While all this feverish preparation is going on in the camp of the reactionaries, the progressives seem to be programless. LaFollette, their leader, has not yet returned. When he left for Europe last summer, he did not know what his plans were. In view of the renewed efforts of the reactionaries to cement the Republican organization, it will be interesting to note how long the progressives are going to drift. The question now is: Will they have the courage to carry the fight into their reactionary opponents, or will they waver and surrender at the decisive moment as they have often done in the past.

The progressives are in a highly strategic position in Congress. They now have a better chance than they ever had before. Price-fixing pools for wheat won't fool the farmers, whose condition is growing more desperate. The defeat of the Republican congressional candidate in the recent Washington state by-election shows that the temper of the dissatisfied farmers has not changed one bit.

LaFollette and his followers now have the opportunity of their lives to show if there is any real progressivism in them. The only way the progressive can prove that there is something more than voluminous loud talk in their ranks is by definitely assuming the initiative in their fight with the reactionary regime of Coolidge and by breaking completely with the "old guard" of the G. O. P.

Castor-Oil Constitutionalism

Of all the benefits of the victory of Allied imperialism in the World War two advantages have stood out most pre-eminently in the propaganda columns of the international financial overlords. These two most vaunted achievements of the victorious Allies are the preservation of constitutional democracy and the organization of the League of Nations.

But the whole history of European politics since the conclusion of the World War has been only a history of a series of failures and defeats for both constitutionalism as peddled by the imperialist apologists and the League of Nations as baptized by Woodrow Wilson and run by Lord Robert Cecil.

The spread of Fascism, which is an open repudiation of even the faintest pretense of capitalist constitutionalism, shows quite forcefully that the democracy at stake in the world slaughter is waning rapidly despite its victory. First, we had the Fascist revolution with the impotence of the "people's" Chamber of Deputies in the victorious Kingdom of Italy. Then one of the "little" Allies, Greece, came along with its own petty vest-pocket edition of Fascism. We were next treated to the assassination of Stamboulinsky and the rise of the Fascist military dictatorship in triumphed Bulgaria. And now we have another mortal blow struck at democracy by the brazen overthrow of constitutional government and the setting up of a government by a Fascist military directorate in neutral Spain.

And the poor mummified League of Nations! One might blame it on the irony of history if it please him, but it rather smacks of poetical justice to find that it was left to the Fascist Government of Italy to throw the last shovelful of earth on the grave of the League of Nations. Italy's outright, uncamouflaged disregard of the League and its Council of Ambassadors and other High Priests of world peace in the Corfu and Fiume crises can mean only that the time has already arrived when even the mere empty talk about the League of Nations is wearing thin.

Aid for Japanese Workers Followed Earthquake

The Russian Soviet government quick to respond to the call of suffering humanity, organized a relief unit with the Red Cross as its nucleus and dispatched the ship Lenin, laden with medicines and supplies to the quake-stricken area of Japan. The supplies and medical assistance were intended for the suffering workers of the Japanese empire. The Soviet Republic has exhausted a part of their meager means to fight the famine, that has swept a great section of Russia.

The proletarian government of Russia, knowing that the Japanese bourgeoisie would not want that their class in every land would come to their assistance, seized the opportunity to carry on the international solidarity and brotherly love across the international frontiers.

But when the Lenin arrived in Yokohama harbor, the Japanese reactionary officials refused her permission to land the supplies and the medical assistance for the relief of the Japanese workers. This emphasis on the proletarian character of the act of the Soviet government was snubbed by the bourgeois rulers of Japan and they compelled the Soviet ship to turn away the brave from the workers she came to succor and steam back to Vladivostok. But the Japanese authorities did not succeed in keeping the news of this episode from the workers. The latter have one more token of the loyalty of Soviet Russia to the international working class and the Japanese bourgeoisie will learn that they can prevent a Soviet ship from relieving the distress of their wage slaves they cannot prevent the message of communism and internationalism from breaking down the national barriers that now separate the workers.

Ready for the Next War

We are assured by none other than Col. Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, that the United States is prepared for "the next war." Col. Davis says this with considerable pride. During his direction of the mobilization of industry, more than 700,000 industries have been catalogued by the war department as possible sources of supplies. All is ready in the American department of the world human slaughter house.

Other nations profess to be equally "prepared." The earthquake wrecked but a part of the Japanese navy, which doesn't matter, since the Mikado has greater faith in his war fleet in the air, which he hopes will rival that of France.

All industry in the United States is mobilized for certain war. Yet capitalism will not organize and conduct industry for the immediate needs of the people. Millions will freeze this winter, altho the coal is in the ground and hundreds of thousands of miners are idle. Millions will go hungry while food rots in the fields and farmers go into bankruptcy. Millions will continue to live in hovels, altho there is every facility for creating building materials, and a great army of idle building workers is to be found on every hand.

But the many cannot pay the profits the few demand for housing, clothing and shelter. So we have the hungry and homeless. But wars must be fought so that markets established abroad by American imperialism can be protected and new fields of exploitation won. The bankers' loans abroad must be made safe and new opportunities created for lending at exhorbitant rates of interest. Loans must be forced upon subject nations whether they want them or not.

So the Assistant Secretary of War is happy that the human slaughter house is ready for the new day of killing, when the millionaires will again send the millions of workers to fight new wars for them, to die gloriously in order that the power of the almighty American dollar may live and prosper. While the workers continue to applaud and uphold this capitalist joy.

Menace of Fascism in America

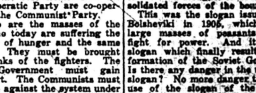
That the American labor movement, or at least that portion of it which sees beyond its nasal appendage, is aware of the growing danger of Fascism is shown by the publication in the September number of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, of an article on the Fascisti by Arturo Giovannitti, secretary of the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America. The danger of the Fascisti movement is not confined to the Italian unions but to the entire American trade union movement.

The editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal refers to Fascism as "one of the ugly aftermaths of the war." "The menace to America," he says, "is not an imaginary bogey. Already Fascista organizations have been formed here, which, small tho they are yet, boldly announce their intention to break existing American unions, which have Italian members, and supplant them with Fascista unions."

Giovannitti shows that Fascism, which boasts of having established the supremacy of the nation over classes, on the contrary has succeeded in suppressing the workingclass and rendering them helpless to defend themselves against the rapacious greed of their masters. It has outlawed labor organizations and forced their leaders into exile, filling the dungeons and graves with their most active members.

The debacle of unionism in Italy is looked on with favor by the American capitalists. The propaganda of Fascism is in great demand thruout Europe and by the American capitalists. Men like Judge Gary, the steel king, Ambassador Child, at Rome, Julius H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and others of the same stripe praise Fascism highly. Its poison would be very valuable in destroying even the puny labor movement that we have here in the United States. Puny tho it undoubtedly is, it is, nevertheless, a thorn in the side of the American capitalists, and they want to destroy it.

The first line of attack of the Fascisti is against the 200,000 Italian workers who are members of the American Federation of Labor. That would be the entering wedge. With the support of Gary, Morgan and the Chamber of Commerce, the entire labor movement would soon fall under the assault of Fascism unless the trade unions wake up in time to the menace that confronts them. It is encouraging to see the official organ of a powerful union take up the issue seriously thus throwing light on the activities of this baneful and pernicious movement.



THE REASON LABOR LOSES
Capital is about 90 per cent organized; labor only 50 per cent.

This Week

The DAILY WORKER will represent the interests of ALL the workers.

Rev. Basil E. Newton, of Oklahoma, speaking at Hurricane, Ark., declared that 37 members of the Ku Klux Klan are members in the house of representatives and 37 in the United States Senate. He also informed the audience that the Klan intends initiating ceremony in the dining room of the White House, used by the late President Harding's cabinet. Dr. H. T. Churchman, who lived in the Klan, whispered to a journalist that the speaker forgot to mention the high officials' wives who were also members of the Klan. Our readers may remember that a Senate committee was appointed about a year ago to investigate the Klan. Perhaps the Klan appointed a committee of Klansmen to investigate itself!

Daily newspapers are the heavy artillery of the modern labor struggle.

It took an incipient (or aspient) rebellion in the State of Oklahoma and the establishment of a capitalist dictatorship in Germany to drive the Chicago bootleggers and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes off the front pages of our daily papers, if even for a brief period.

Calvin Coolidge takes the old saying that "speech is silvery but silence is golden" quite seriously. He was invited to speak at a New York banquet in honor of the memory of President Harding. "Silent Cal," expecting that he might be expected to say something besides a eulogy of his generous predecessor, declined with thanks saying that he could honor Harding much better by carrying out his policies than by praising him. Yes, and he can honor him still better by declining to say anything that might prevent him from wearing Harding's crown for the next four years. Wise Cal!

We wonder what signal honor Samuel Gompers will confer on his favorite member of the American Legion, George L. Berry, when the latter appears at the Portland convention and reports that he succeeded in breaking another strike.

The conventhon of the International Molder's Union went on record for a Labor Party. This action must have caused Johnny P. Frey, the philosopher of doubt, who edits the Moulders' Journal, some anxious moments. But Frey is the super phraseologist who proves that black is white at A. F. of L. conventions. He failed in convincing the rest of his own union that there are no classes in America and that a Labor Party is an unnecessary as fifth wheel on a wagon. The betrayal of the Labor party movement by Plumptucks and Gompers-Woll-Green-Lewis does not seem to have killed the movement, though it may kill the traitors politically so far as the workers are concerned.

LABOR needs the DAILY WORKER in its climb to political power.

The League of Nations began to congratulate itself that it still has some excuse for remaining out of the undertakers parlor when Mussolini agreed that he would evacuate Corfu. But it chortled too soon. Mussolini hates to see anything look like a bad cowboy in the movies and fired a couple shots over Greece as the same time asked for his $2,600,000 right away or sooner. The shot gave the League another fit of apoplexy and the black bandit got his money.

The first move made by the Capitalistic-Socialist dictatorship of Germany was to prohibit free speech and the right of free assembly. This was the principal count in the Socialist indictment against the Soviet Russia. The Russian workers, however, prevented the capitalists and counter revolutionists from carrying on anti-labor activities while the German Socialists have established their dictatorship for the preservation of the capitalist system. That is the difference.

The Mormons are growing in wealth and numbers. This is not surprising, everything considered. We wonder how Benjamin, of the House of David, is getting along!

A Mrs. McCormick, wife of the head of a medical college of the same name, is wanted by the Chicago police on a charge of embezzling the funds of the college. Her husband had the school strike off circulars with her photograph and description; the latter not very flatteringly. He gave her ass as 51 but mentally only 16. She has brains enough to get away with $9,000 which was not so bad for sweet sixteen.

Zinoviev on the German Revolution; Letter on 9th International Youth Day

By GREGORY ZINOIEV,
Chairman of the Communist International.

The International Day of Youth is of special significance this year. A new, severe storm is approaching. The German working class is braving tremendous struggles. It is a long time since we have felt them so near to us as now. The German working class fighting! Twenty million workers lift their voices—the quintessence of the international proletariat, the basic force of the international proletarian revolution is entering the arena.

The new struggles of the working class in Germany can assume such proportions, that they will be in a position to bring about for us the beginning of the Socialist era in one of the most important parts of the world.

There is no power on earth which could vanquish the twenty million workers! Twenty million workers, every one of whom can read and write, who have gone through the hard school of Social Democratic betrayal, and have drunk to the dregs the cup of preparatory defeats!

If one reads over the chronical of the revolutionary struggles of the working class of the various countries, one might conclude that the working class cannot conquer the bourgeoisie before the workers have suffered one defeat or another. Without the defeat of 1905 and 1906, there would hardly have been the victory of the Russian proletariat in 1917, or the victory would have been much more difficult. The German working class too, has undergone its trials. In 1918-19, its revolutionary class was steeled and received the lessons which will enable it not only to revolt, but also to conquer.

The events which are now perhaps in preparation in Germany, lead us to the most important phase of the history of the struggles of the international proletariat and of the fate of entire mankind. With trembling hands the proletarian youth especially, are approaching this phase.

Let us be clear on the matter—the struggles which today have already begun in Germany and can grow more violent every day may mean also the hastening of that new series of wars against the Socialist states, which Comrade Lenin some years ago foretold would be inevitable. Tremendous events are brewing! We must not shut our eyes for a moment to the danger with which these events are bound up.

The young generation of proletarian youth which has grown up since the great victorious Russian revolution of 1917 and the unsuccessful German revolution of 1918, is the one to decide in a great measure the fate of the approaching crisis.

It is especially great but also honorable duty lies upon the German youth. The German League of Youth which, we do not wish to keep it secret, has at times fallen behind in the last years, must now strain every muscle in order to rise to the great occasion which is approaching. The German League of Youth must be the healthiest, most energetic, most self-sacrificing, in a word, the most glorious fighting unit of the German Communist Party in the battles of the future. The German League of Youth must be the light cavalry of the proletarian army. It will have to take the most difficult struggles against capitalism.

Just as great a task is facing the French youth. Tomorrow the French army will be sent against the German workers. The attempt will be made to make of them the executioners of the German workers. The French Communist Party and first and foremost the French League of Youth must say this loudly in all of France and must set itself against it.

The Communist Youth of Russia, and with it the other Sections of the Young Communist International, must consider it the greatest honor to help its brother army, the Youth of Germany, and through it the German revolution. The proletarian youth should be thoroughly convinced that their penetration will in any case be through the decisive battles of the world proletariat. The best cohorts of our young comrades will in any case have the opportunity to fight against the bourgeoisie and its Fascisti offspring not only on the streets of their home towns, but also in the streets of Europe's famous capitals.

We say it right out: the Comintern is proud, that in a few years of the most difficult struggle there has never arisen any serious difference of opinion between the Comintern as a whole and its international Communist young troops. While in all other international organizations, conflicts between "Fathers and Sons" are a usual phenomenon, there is no such thing in the Comintern, not even in thought and there will be no such thing. One exception does not count. Only in a distant corner of Europe (in Sweden) we see a case, where a few "old" comrades who became old too early (we mean of course only political old age) and with their snarling and toothless criticism against the Communist youth, come dangerously near resembling the "Papas" of the Second and Two and a Half Internationals. That is a single case. In all countries where the Comintern has had conflicts with oppositional remnants in our Sections we have had the good fortune to see the Communist Youth on the side of the Comintern. It was that way a short time ago in France. It is that way now in Italy. The situation is the same also in Sweden and Norway.

Stir up, young workers of the whole world! May the International Day of Proletarian Youth this year be the day of the greatest mobilization of our young forces.

Deeper into the masses! With all the enthusiasm of youth, with all the conviction of Communists we are ascribing ourselves in the masses! Let there be no factory, no works, no shaft, no shop, where the International League of Youth has not its honeful nucleus! Let us say also to the village. The village youth is the great reserve of the international working class in the international revolution. Tens of thousands of young men and women into the winning over of the youth of the city and country!

For the Workers' and Farmers' Government, New Slogan of the Communist International

NOTE—In this space each week The Worker" publishes a new installment of a detailed report on the proceedings of the recently enlarged executive commitee meeting of the Communist International. This week's article traces the development and interprets the slogan of "The Farmer and Workers' Government." Next week's installment will deal with "Fascism, the Immediate Menace."

The situation in Europe demands that the workers prepare for struggle in the near future. Capitalism is in decay. The workers are being robbed and crushed. Fascism is rampant, the bourgeoisie is determined to place the whole burden of the war debt and the "reconstruction of Europe" on the backs of the workers. The workers must prepare not merely to enter into the struggle, but to secure victory and assume power. Can the workers accomplish this task alone? When the United Front tactic was announced at the Third Congress, it was not fully understood. When the slogan of the Workers' Government was taken up at the Fourth Congress, there were many voices against it. But events have proven that the slogan was a correct one. Even in the German party there were comrades who did not comprehend its meaning and who protested against its application. But Saxony has shown the merit of the idea: the slogan of the Workers' Government has forced the Social-Democratic leaders into an uncomfortable position. They have had to yield to the force of the Social-Democratic workers, who perceive that the workers must be united against the bourgeoisie and that the natural expression of this United Front is a Workers' Government—for which now the best Communists must arouse them against the system under which they are suffering. They must point out to the peasant's and farmers that today they are exploited by the capitalists and are under their political dominion. It is in the interests of the peasants and farmers to unite with the workers of the towns in the struggle for power. This struggle is not merely an election scramble for offices. It is a struggle that will enroll all the forces of the workers and farmers—a struggle to down the consolidated forces of the bourgeoisie.

This was the slogan issued by the Bolsheviki in 1905, which brought large masses of peasants into the fight for power. And it was the slogan which finally resulted in the formation of the Soviet Government. Is there any danger in the use of this slogan? No more danger than in the use of the slogan of the Workers' Government. Neither the Workers' Government nor the Workers' and Farmers' Government is a substitute for the Proletarian Dictatorship. The Workers' and Farmers' Government is a natural extension of the idea of a workers' government—as a natural absorption and utilization of all elements in opposition to the bourgeoisie—the United Front of all workers, of all categories on farm and in the city.

The fight for the establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government will meet with the united opposition of the whole bourgeoisie. The struggle for power will begin—a struggle that will and cannot be confined to the parliamentary field. Saxony is revealing what the bourgeoisie will resort to, in order to nullify the efforts of the workers. The Fascists are growing in power and the German federal government is waiting for the favorable moment to send the Reichswehr (federal troops) into Saxony to smash the workers and the workers' coalition government. The idea will have to be extended in all Germany. The Social-Democratic leaders must take a stand. The struggle for power will begin—the dictatorship of the proletariat as the goal.

Will the peasants and farmers as a backward element join the workers in the construction in the process of the revolution to the proletarian dictatorship? No, this will not be automatic with the Communists as their most valiant and far-sighted vanguard. The farmers are not organized in the same way; they will accept the more militant leadership of the Communists, recognizing that a government together with the workers, WHO WILL NOT EXPLOIT THEM, is far better than a government under the capitalists, which must necessarily end in the exploitation of workers and farmers alike.

In making his speech he outlined the policy, which, after considerable discussion was accepted almost unanimously. Zinoviev showed that the Workers Party of America was the center of the new situation. Without any suspension of the ties of solidarity internationalist, but deriving the tactics from the very conditions under which the Communists of America have to work and the political and economic conditional obtaining within the country, the Workers Party realized that a government of the workers without the farmers would be impossible.

Dunne Defies Gompers' Terror

"I Will Continue to Fight on Lines I Have Chosen," Says Delegate of Montana Workers, Expelled from A. F. of L. Convention

William Green, of Miners' Union, Appears in Role of Prosecutor, Gompers Judge

(Special to "The Worker.")

PORTLAND, OREGON.—William F. Dunne, delegate of the Silver Bow (Butte, Mont.) Central Labor Council, has been expelled from the convention of the American Federation of Labor. The charge is that Dunne is a Communist. This is the climax of the red baiting that his been developing hysteria here for the past week. The vote was 27,838 to 130. Leaving the convention hall after the vote had been taken, Dunne declared:

"It will not strengthen the trade union movement to expel me, who I have no doubt the Michigan prosecutor would be glad to hear of it. I will continue to fight the battles of labor on lines I have chosen."

William Green, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers' Union, appeared as the chief prosecutor, with President Samuel Gompers as the judge. The real jury, the broad masses of the American workers, was not present. The fake verdict was turned in by the grand dukes of the Gompers' reactionary bureaucracy.

Green's attack against Dunne was but a cheap rehearsal of the so-called Lewis-Searles expose of "red activities." This expose has been repudiated by the members of his own union, chiefly by President Frank Farrington, of the Illinois Mine Workers.

Those voting against the expulsion of Dunne were: Ed. S. Lasner of the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill workers; M. P. Sillinsky and Gus Soderberg of the Tailors' union; Dunne, representing the Silver Bow Labor Council; D. W. Stevens of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly; James A. Duncan, of the Seattle Central Labor Council, and [illegible] of the Tacoma Central Labor Council.

"This is not the first time I have faced a white collared mob aroused to fury by the press of its masters and bent upon my destruction," was the opening sentence of the speech by W. F. Dunne, editor of the Butte Bulletin to the convention.

The campaign of the A. F. of L. officialdom against minority expression culminated in the expulsion from the convention of William F. Dunne, delegate from the Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council of Butte, Mont. The motion for his expulsion was made by Vice-President Phillip Murray of the United Mine Workers of America and followed the demand made for action by William Green, secretary of the same organization.

Ever since Tuesday the daily press has been carrying advance notices of the action to be taken and a steady campaign of publicity has been carried on by the Chester M. Wright, Matthew Woll and John L. Leary syndicate.

There was no spontaneity about the presentation of the case by the prosecution headed by William Green. The evidence consisted solely of charges of criticisms of the officers of the American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers. Green as prosecutor cut one of the poorest

Ammen Makes Great Speech at the British Trade Union Congress

The most outstanding feature of the proceedings of the recent Brit-

by Ted Ammen, Secretary of the Amsterdam International. Ammen is not a Communist; indeed, in speaking of the division of the working class in Europe, he failed to show that in every case the Communists have striven for the united front, which has been explicitly refused by the Reformists. Nevertheless, he told the Congress the plain facts of the European situation, and his simple inescapable statement of the revolutionary issue facing Europe created a tremendous impression.

Ammen, for his honesty, is likely to be hounded out of his post of Secretary of the Amsterdam Trade Union International.

In his speech he declared, "This may be the last Congress I shall attend in my present capacity." He said:

* * *

I am sorry I cannot bring you good tidings. I might, in addressing Congress on behalf of the international labor movement, use some pleasant phrases, convey fraternal greetings from the Continent, extend my best wishes for the future development of the British labor movement, thank you for your kind reception, and then sit down.

But you do not want me to do that, you prefer to hear the truth in pref-

Ku Klux and Governor Walton Playing Tag With Democracy

By HARRISON GEORGE.

The American Civil Liberties Union states that the "feud between Governor Walton and the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma is the greatest spectacle so far offered in the klan's violent progression into the limelight."

It is not only that, but as the governor enlarges his martial law and other devices for thwarting the klan-controlled legislature, and to prevent the people from voting at an election he himself called, the spectacle is one which may be offered as illustrative of the decay of popular rights and so-called "democratic" forms of government. Democracy was a pretty baby when it was born in the cradle of the bourgeoisie, but now it is an orphan child wanted by nobody.

It is an amusing fact that the Ku Klux Klan has recently had two members arrested in Kentucky under that state's "criminal syndicalism" law, the American Civil Liberties Union naively observes that when "all Yacoma" suffer under the same law there is some hope that a majority opinion for its abolition may result. When it is an ages-old adage that laws are only made for the poor and the subject class, not for the rich or the ruling class, it is clear from all working class experience that the capitalist courts will find some way to compose the quarrels between sections of the bourgeoisie while keeping any restrictive law possible to apply to communist agitation as in the Michigan cases.

Now that the election first called, then called off by Walton was held and resulted in Walton being beaten, Walton "won't recognize" democracy (?); while—on the other hand—McBee, leader of the klan, says that he can tell the day and hour on which Walton will be impeached. Having dressed up "representative government" in the klan's fancy night shirt, McBee is all for it, with the exception that he wants the klan block in the state legislature to remove the governor elected by the popular vote. Further rough treatment for popular government is certain to result in the issues being submitted to the courts, which will give dua and even-handed justice to whomsoever will bully or bribe them the most.

Parliamentary forms of government are but the playingthing of contending forces in Oklahoma and elsewhere. In the meanwhile, let those who mourn the passing of "democracy" dry their tears with the embla zoned shirt-tail of the Knights of Ku Klux Klan.

COOLIDGE RESTORES THE STATE OF WAR

By JOHN PEPPER.

New dangers tower over the workers and farmers.

Coolidge, the strike-breaker president of the government-strikebreaker, is welding tremendous plans to restore the state of war in the United States.

The federal government is planning three far-reaching measures: 1. The restoration of the United States War Grain Corporation. 2. A federal anti-syndicalist law. 3. A national registration of all aliens.

These three measures mean a complete restoration of the state of war in the United States. Coal mining and railroading are already under the claws of the federal government, and the revival of the War Grain Corporation means the absolute rule of the government of bankers and trusts over farming industry. It means restoring the situation of the world war, when the whole of industrial life was put under control of the federal government.

A federal anti-syndicalist law means the reviving of the espionage act, means the consolidation on a national scale of the existing thirty-eight state laws against sedition and overthrow of the government by force and violence.

The registration of all aliens in the United States means the restoration of the state of war, when the persons and property of foreigners were placed under control of the federal government, which meant that millions of immigrant workers were virtually outlawed.

The War Grain Corporation.

The bankers and trust-czars are the real rulers in the United States. It is, therefore, obvious that the initiative for these new bills and measures comes from the bankers, and, of course, the public, the people of the United States, is informed of the new plans of the government and congress only through the various convention of the bankers.

The plan for a revival of the United States War Grain Corporation was drawn up and submitted to Coolidge by a committee of bankers, congressmen and some big landowners and proprietors of farmers' organizations masked as farmers. The statements of these bankers and fake farmers submitted to President Coolidge were:

"We want it distinctly understood that our mission is not alone in behalf of the wheat growers and farmers of the Ninth District, but we speak for the wheat growers and farmers of the entire country. We wish to safeguard the investors in farm mortgages throughout the country, and we are especially interested in saving for thousands of farmers their rights of ownership in their land and to prevent farmers from being forced to leave their present location for other states and occupations."

The revival of the United States War Grain Corporation is not in the interest of the farmers, but aims "to safeguard the investors in farm-mortgages throughout the country." The revival of the War Grain Corporation is not in the interest of the exploited farmers, but in the interest of the bankers. The committee of bankers itself admits this, and it is truly the greatest kind of shortsightedness or betrayal, that politicians like Frazier or Magnus Johnson, elected by the masses of farmers, now howl together with the banker wolves, demanding the revival of the War Grain Corporation. The first War Grain Corporation during the world war helped to prepare the present bankruptcy of the farmers, and if Frazier or Magnus Johnson are today advocating the creation of a second grain corporation, it means that consciously or unconsciously they are delivering the farmers to the bankers and to the federal government of trusts and bankers.

The farmers are demanding public ownership of the railroads, mines and big industries, and the answer of the government of railroad corporations and coal barons is to proclaim the governmental ownership of the farmers. The War Grain Corporation, headed by well-known bankers, means nothing else than monopolistic power on a national scale over the products of the farmers. Frazier and Magnus Johnson were elected against the bankers, and to overthrow the government of bankers; and now they are helping to complete the rule of the bankers over the farmers, they are helping to transform the farmers into the slaves of a capitalist government.

Federal Anti-Syndicalist Law and Registration of Aliens.

The constitution of the United States speaks only of the House of Representatives and the Senate, but the unwritten constitution of reality, recognizes a third part of Congress —the American Bankers' Association. It is, of course, evident that the latest plans of the government affecting the vital interests of millions of workers are first introduced, not in the House of Representatives or the Senate, but at the convention of the American Bankers' Association. Solicitor General James M. Beck in his big speech against menacing red radicalism at the Bankers convention revealed the plans of the Coolidge government:

"The Federal government has not been indifferent to the spread of such propaganda and only the last week the Attorney-General has taken step by co-operation with the state authorities to establish more effective supervision of the revolutionary and criminal elements in this country.

"Nor is the next Congress likely to be indifferent to the danger which too many men have hitherto minimized. Two bills will be urged for passage—one to register all aliens in the country, and the other to make it a crime to conspire to overthrow the national government by force and violence. Today it may be doubted whether there is any specific federal statute which enables the federal authorities to arrest an alien, even if he is carrying a bomb to blow up a customs house. The registration of aliens, if adopted, will probably cause a speedy and welcome begiraof alien Communists who are now under cover and who are cleaselessly plotting day and night to destroy the ordered principles of liberty for which the constitution stands. It may be that this peril is unduly exaggerated, but it is well to exaggerate, for forewarned is forearmed."

Our country is facing a new economic depression. Production in the steel and textile industries is declining. Many mills are shutting down, and yet the remedies of the government against menacing wholesale unemployment are: a federal anti-syndicalist law, registration and finger-printing of aliens, and wholesale deportations of Communists. But we know from experience that everybody is a Communist who is not an humble servant of capitalists. Everybody is a Communist who fights for higher wages and shorter hours. Everybody is a Communist who participates in strikes against the rulers of the steel and textile mills or railroad corporations. And in the kingdom of Gary everybody is a Communist who tries to organize the hundreds of thousands of unorganized steel workers.

And just as the elected leaders of the farmers—Magnus Johnson, Frazier and the others—have betrayed the interests of the exploited farmers, in advocating government ownership of the farmers, in the same way, the elected leaders of the workers—Gompers, Lewis and the others—betray the interests of the workers, in advocating government ownership of the workers. The six articles of the Lewis machine against the red menace and against the foreign-born workers who are penetrated with Communism and the speeches of Gompers in the Portland convention provide the best pretext for the government to persecute the foreign born workers—in other words, the overwhelming majority of the laboring masses of the basic industries. Registration of aliens is but the first step towards government ownership of the workers. Registration of aliens means that the capitalists are virtually making an inventory of their living possessions in the same way as, at the end of the business year, they take an inventory of their non-living possessions.

The reactionary bankers, landlords and government are crying that Communism is a big menace for the country. What is Communism? Simply public ownership of trusts, industries, banks, railroads, mines, the political rule of workers and farmers. What does President Coolidge offer with the help of Magnus Johnson, Frazier, Gompers, Lewis, the farmers and workers? Nothing but government ownership of farmers and workers, and political rule of the big capitalists of industry, banks and railroads.

The workers and farmers must choose now. Do they want government ownership of the workers and farmers, or do they want public ownership of industries, banks and railroads by the workers and farmers?

"Obey or Starve!" Is Perlstein's Terror Slogan in I. L. G. W.

"Obey me or starve," says Perlstein, vice president [illegible] Ladies' Garment Worker[illegible] who has resorted to the [illegible] to drive the opposition [illegible] the shop and [illegible]

His rabid attempts [illegible] U. for two months, in a climax Perlstein first started his drive [illegible] the left wing, his stated [illegible] were to remove them from the [illegible] Board. This was changed to expel [illegible] from the union and now he is determined to expel them from the shop. That his hatred for anything progressive has developed into a mania is self evident by the stupid and criminal rulings he has made, which have demoralized the whole organization.

For two months the [illegible] and has shown him in a hundred different ways that they are opposed to the wholesale expulsions and to the disruptive tactics. So far he has been able to get a single local union to endorse his fight against the left wing. His answer to this almost unanimous protest is to carry the fight from the union hall to the shop.

He is centering his attack upon the shop, Hyman Brothers, which no doubt is a forerunner to what will happen in other shops if he is successful in this one. Altho no actual expulsions from the shop have taken place, the whole of Perlstein's activities have been directed to create the proper atmosphere favorable for this action. Many of these shop meetings have been adjourned in confustion because Perlstein insists on carrying his dirty politics from the union hall into the shop, the results of which will be seen in a very near future.

That Perlstein will go to any length to destroy the left wing movement is self evident. Here are a few of the crimes that Perlstein has committed against the organization within the past two months that require serious attention of the rank and file:

"Nine members expelled without trial. Two members arbitrarily expelled after Trial Committee found that they were not guilty. Secretary removed from office because she refused to sign the minutes of a meeting that endorsed the expulsions. Another member of this same local discharged for the same reason. He made the motion. A delegate to the Joint Board who stated at a meeting of the Joint Board that the head of the Amalgamation Dance, given by the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League, was to solicit or give donations to the Freiheit or to distribute circulars in the union hall or on the streets or in any way sympathize with or help the expelled members. The penalty for the infraction of these instructions is expulsion from the union. The right of the membership to petition

Workers of New York! Join the United Front of Labor at the Coming Election

...dorsed by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York City.

We stand for a United Front of labor at the coming elections. We have done, and will continue to do, all in our power to bring every labor organization of this city, favoring independent political action, into a federated body for joint action against the capitalists in the coming elections.

Previous to the conference of Sept. 1923, where the New York branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was formed, our provisional committee made an attempt to bring into the United Front also the American Labor Party. A delegation, appointed by our provisional committee, appeared before a meeting of the general council of the American Labor Party, signed, and proposed that the Council elect a committee empowered to negotiate and agree with our conference of Sept. 16th on a common slate for the November elections. This proposal was rejected, and for a while the political unity of Labor in this city remained suspended in the balance. This unwarranted action by the American Labor Party failed to discourage us from continuing our efforts.

Acting on the report of its provisional committee, the conference of Sept. 16th decided to send a delegation to the last conference of the American Labor Party, Sept. 30th, and to submit to it the following proposition: "The Conference of Labor Organizations of New York City held Sept. 16, in the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St., endorses whole-heartedly the action of its Provisional Committee in extending an invitation to the American Labor Party to agree on a joint ticket for the coming elections. The Conference believes that by rejecting this brotherly offer, which was prompted by no other motive save the interests and well-being of the working masses of this city, the American Labor Party committed an ...unpardonable mistake, whose harmful consequences may still be checked if the Executive Committee for the American Labor Party can rise to the occasion and place the interests of labor above party politics."

"By action of this Conference composed of 216 delegates representing 60 local unions with a membership of 60,000, fraternal, co-operative and miscellaneous organizations with a membership of 25,000, political organizations with a membership of 15,000, representing in all 75,000 workers. The New York City branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party becomes a fact. Together with the thousands of workers and farmers represented at the Chicago Convention, which formed the National body of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, we, the founders of the New York organization, firmly believe that the day for independent political action by labor has already arrived.

"Furthermore, every week of delay in bringing labor's forces together into one federated political body spells ...for the reactionary forces of the capitalist masses and their ...of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, therefore, this field of political struggle must be left open for the reactionary forces to organize and ...against the workers. Every ...delay means a victory for the ...Labor Party. Every week ...we fail to join us in this ...it thereby frustrated the complete realization of our united purpose to bring into the federated body all labor organizations of this city fundamentally opposed to political action. The American Labor Party stands by. Whatever its motives, the effect of its last refusal to join in the common purpose is highly detrimental to the best interests of labor. And should the American Labor Party continue to persist in its present attitude, it will soon find itself in the ranks of the very same forces of reaction, when it is at present committed to fight.

"We need a political party of its own. Labor can no longer afford to feed with its life blood, and advances with the strength of its numbers, the ...ranks of the ...

Workers Party Drive for New Members Is Making Big Headway

The reports received by the National Office, Workers Party, indicate that the campaign for ten thousand new members is getting under way and results are beginning to be achieved.

During the first week in October, 15 new branches were chartered by the national organization of the party. Eight of these branches are new English branches, three Italian branches, two Scandinavian branches, one Slovenian and one South Slavic branch. Two of the English branches were chartered in North Dakota, where the party organization work among the farmers has recently been begun.

September Initiations.

The sale of initiation stamps for September also showed an increase. All the organization reports for the month of September have thus far not been received, but those which are in indicate substantial progress in the campaign.

The Pope's Eyes on Moscow.

The Chicago Tribune publishes a radio from Madrid, Spain, to the effect that the Spanish government has learned that the Vatican, at Rome, is planning to recognize the Russian Soviet Government. It is declared that Father Walsh, of the Catholic Georgetown University, near Washington, handled the negotiations.

We have no way of confirming the above dispatch at present. But there may be some truth to it. The Roman Catholic Church, continuing to survive through the centuries, has always sought to adapt itself to social changes. In Czarist Russia it was always kept under the heel of the imperial Greek Catholic Church. Recognition of Soviet Russia by the Vatican would be a bid on the part of the Pope for an equal right with the Greek Church to proselyte among the religiously inclined in the Soviet Republic.

Since Workers' and Peasants' Rule recognizes religion as a private affair, for all to believe as they wish, there is no doubt that the Vatican's recognition will be received with favor. It could be used as a club to weaken the opposition to recognition in Roman Catholic countries.

The Catholics in the American Federation of Labor, for instance, are divided on the question of Russian recognition. Tim Healy, of the Stationary Firemen, has signed the resolution demanding recognition, while Daniel Tobin, president of the Teamsters' Union, is standing solidly with the Gompers' opposition.

The Madrid radio is another confession by upholders of capitalism of the stability of Soviet Rule. If Moscow accepts the Pope's advances, it is an indication that the Russian workers and peasants are too intelligent to be swayed by ancient dogmas against their own government. Blind religious fanaticism has lost its power among Russia's free workers and farmers. The Vatican may recognize Soviet Rule, but the Russians will continue to live as they think, for the building of a new civilization, and not as the Pope prays, for the continuance of an old outworn social order.

Myerscough Is Indicted in War on Progressive Labor in Pittsburgh

(Special to "The Worker").

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Thomas Meyerscough, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, has been indicted on a charge by the grand jury here. The indictment has been handed down simply because, when the raids were made on the Workers Party headquarters last April, certain literature was found in the names of working miners of this district.

This is the last blow struck at the workers of Western Pennsylvania under the guise of violation of the infamous Flynn Anti-Sedition act.

The persecution of militant workers in the steel and coal districts of Western Pennsylvania is a result of the demands made upon the local authorities by the Coal Trust. The coal barons are bent on getting rid of the Workers Party in their territory. In this plea they are supplied by the connivance of officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

As one prominent citizen of Pittsburgh told the writer: "The National Coal Association and some United Mine Workers' officials have gotten together to clean house here. They are bent on getting Foster and the Workers Party out of here. That's why you fellows are being persecuted."

The appeals of Jay Lovestone, Fred Merrick, Denn, Toohey, Mikadas, and the writer in the McKeesport free speech fight has been postponed in the Allegheny County Court, at the request of the McKeeport authorities.

Because of the seriousness of the danger to all organized labor in these attacks on the Workers Party, the State Federation of Labor is actively getting into the fight. Yesterday, James H. Maurer, president of the Federation, came to Pittsburgh and conferred with Andrew T. McNamara, chairman of the Labor Defense and Free Speech Council and Fred Merrick and Tom Meyerscough, two of the indicted workers.

After a thorough investigation of the whole situation, Brother Maurer declared he was very favorably impressed and assured us that the State Federation of Labor would be heartedly get into the fight for free speech by launching a vigorous campaign for the repeal of the State Sedition Act under which the workers are now being persecuted.

Governor Pinchot and United States Senator Pepper have again written to Lovestone telling him that they are glad to see that the Workers Party is taking steps to prevent the disregard and infringment of constitutional rights.

Chicago Machinists in Stand with New Yorkers on Strike

By ANTON OVERGAARD.

All the machinists employed by the Hoe Printing Press Machinery Co., in New York, have been out on strike since August 4th, demanding $1 an hour. Considerable effort has been made to bring about a settlement. Both publishers and the Department of Labor have been in conference with the company but it seems that the bosses are determined to establish the open shop. All of the members of the organization came out including the foreman.

The usual blind ads have appeared in the Chicago newspapers and we warn all Chicago machinists not to pay any attention to them, however promising they may look.

The members of the International Association of Machinists employed at the Goes Printing Press Co. in Chicago, have voted to assess themselves $1 a week assessment in order to help their fellow workers in New York. The District Council in Chicago at its last meeting took action and instructed the executive board to bring in recommendations at the next meeting.

It is highly important for the Chicago men to help finance the New York organization to carry on this fight to a finish inasmuch as the printing press machinery companies are organized here in Chicago.

O'Flaherty Sees Socialist Party Gobbled by Klan

A number of speakers and field organizers of the party are seen from a partial list given in this issue, are now touring the country from coast to coast. Comrade Wicks is covering the East, while Comrade Bedacht is attending to the Pacific Coast. Comrade J. O. Bentall, recently released from Leavenworth prison, is now proceeding East. He is to address a series of meetings for the Scandinavian Federation which will then be followed by meetings arranged by the various Districts of the Party. Comrade Thomas J. O'Flaherty, former editor of the Voice of Labor, is touring the Mid-Western cities addressing both party membership and public mass meetings. Extensive preparations are now being made for speaking dates throughout the ifall and winter. Many large cities, like Chicago and Cleveland, have organized Open Forums which will be addressed by the most prominent members of the party, and which are expected to be a great success.

The report of the speakers are very encouraging. They show very clearly that the Workers Party is actually the only working class political organization now active throughout the country.

"Most of the Workers Party members here," reports O'Flaherty again, from Terra Haute, were one time members of the Socialist Party. The Socialist Party has now only four dues paying members in this city, which includes Eugene V. Debs and his brother, Theodore. The great majority of the 2,500 members who belonged once in the Socialist Party in Indiana are now in the Ku Klux Klan. They are not of the vicious type, but they believe that they have at last found themselves and that the Ku Klux Klan philosophy of race prejudice, ...and religious bigotry is what they have always believed in."

Similar reports reach the National Office of the party from other speakers.

"The meeting in Jamestown, N. Y.," writes Comrade Wicks, "was well handled and had a fair attendance for Jamestown. The audience was keenly interested in the talk and two young men signified their willingness to join the party. The Scandinavian Branch is also coming into the Workers Party after remaining unaffiliated for some time."

All the speakers report that the campaign for the Daily is making headway everywhere.

Many Meetings Arranged.

Public and membership meetings arranged by the national office of the Workers Party are as follows:

E. E. Weber, Duluth: Oct. 14, Lyon, Minn., Mass meeting; Oct. 15, Lyon, Minn., Membership meeting; Oct. 17, Revere, Mass., Mass meeting; Oct. 18, Providence, R. Armour and Fimmen

It is interesting to study Europe's future as pictured by the king of the American meat trust, J. Ogden Armour, of Chicago, and Edo Fimmen, secretary of the Amsterdam TradeUnion International.

Armour said, after a four months' pleasure tour of France and England: "I did not visit Germany, but I know that conditions will greatly improve with the settlement of the Ruhr, and that settlement apparently is in sight. My outlook toward European conditions is optimistic."

Fimmen, who is close to the whole European labor movement, declares: "The German people have been starved during four years of war, and starved great many during five years of peace. They are at the limit of endurance. When the Ruhr question is settled, the capitalists will take out of the German workers what is still left to them. Then will come the stabilization of the mark, and Germany will be stricken with unemployment more severe than the unemployment in this (Great Britain) country. A starving working class seeing its women and children dying for want of food, will take it, and when the German working class is driven to desperation, which is still ahead, will turn their weapons against the workers. Revolution must come. The exploiting class will show the German workers the meaning of national self-help by taking for help from France, Britain, Belgium, Turkey and Poland to assist them in crushing the German workers' movement."

These two utterly divergent views can easily be interpreted, Mr. Armour travels France and England for pleasure. He is on a holiday. His wish is, upon his return to the United States that European orders will be piling high in his Chicago office. So he gives an interview to the kept press, not showing the European situation as it is, but as he would wish it to be.

The labor official, Fimmen, on the other hand, has no reason to hide the facts. He is in close touch with organized labor and its problems thruout Erope. He helped build the united front of the European transport workers recently at Berlin. He paints conditions in Europe, not as he would wish them to be, because he knows pious wishes cannot change these conditions, but he displays them as they really are. Fimmen's wiova, at greater length, are set forth in his speech before the British Trade Union Congress, that is published in another column of this issue. They are well worth studying.

Workers College Started by Labor in New York City

NEW YORK CITY.—An organization for the establishment of a workers' school has been launched by a group of labor and political leaders headed by the locals of the Amalgamated Tobacco Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and the Amalgamated Meat Workers, District 1. The purpose of the college as stated by A. R. Gerhardy, of the Executive Council of the Amalgamated Metal Workers, is to open classes in history, economics, sociology and allied subjects for workers of this city.

At a conference held at Stuyvesant Casino, a telegram of regret for the absence was received from Senator Nearing. Besides union representatives, there were present at this conference Solon De Leon, Dr. Simkhovitch, Dr. Goldstone, Margaret Daniels, Arnold Ruller, Dr. Luttinger and many others.

The conference approved of the following courses and teachers presented by the Educational Director: Social Evolution, by Scott Nearing; Applied Economics, by Solon De Leon; Social Theories, by Julia Stern; Psychology of Immigrant Peoples and Movements, by Arnold Ruller; Social Forces in Current Literature, by Jacobson; Economic Interpretation of History and Economic Theories, by Dr. A. Goldstone; Social and Biological Problems, by Professor Simpson; History of the Internationals, by Lundeen.

A special course for union officials and workers covering the routine of financial, secretarial and organization work of unions will be given by Benjamin Holland, certified public accountant.

Courses have also been planned in English to foreigners, Trade Union Problems, Current Events, Hygiene to be given by additional teachers, including Jacob Potofsky, of the Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing Workers, and Via Konald, of Bernard College, and James Fuchs, former editor of Pravda.

The Soviet Russia Pictorial.

At the sixth anniversary of the Russian revolution approaches, accounts of the "October Days" become of increasing interest. The ultimate account is given in the October number of "Soviet Russia Pictorial." It brings one a vivid picture of the stirring days, and the spirit of the article and the times it writes about—is sustained thruout the magazine. A short autobiography of one of the great heroes of the October Days, Trotsky, the organizer of the Red Army is packed with interesting facts about an important part of the Red Army, the Russian air fleet, is given special attention. Perhaps the most encouraging features for revolutionists all over the world is the growth of an international young movement—a movement which augurs that the ideal of Communism will meet die with this generation. Articles concerning the International Children's movement, the Children's Colony of Russia, and the problem of women in Soviet Russia are all found in the interesting style which the Soviet Russia Pictorial assures its readers. The regular features of the magazine are continued in the October issue. Soviet Russia Pictorial serves to bring its readers into close contact with Russian problems and as such it should be earnestly read and studied by American radicals.

Newark, N. J., opened the campaign for The Daily Worker at the Labor Lyceum, 704 S. 4th St., Oct. 12.

...tion Jeers at ...rogress Won by ...Chicago's Workers

...backward! Turn backward! ...in thy flight!" sums up ... of the Chicago Federation ... at its meeting held Sunday, ...r.

...occasion was the report of its ... delegates to this Decatur Con... of the Illinois Federation of ... Their report and recommend... approving the action of the De... Convention on Amalgamation ... Labor Party and recognition of ... Russia caused an all-day dis...

...e report was about to be hur... voted on when Delegate Wil... K. Foster was recognized. In ... ...ining his speech, he pointed out ... the approval of this recom... ...dation of the delegates would ... ...sent to a repudiation of the many ...gressive measures the Chicago ...deration of Labor had stood for, ...uding the very resolution on a ...bor Party which it had unanimous... endorsed and instructed these same ...legates to introduce at ...Decatur ...d that their report showed was de... ...ated by an overwhelming vote.

Foster said, that "he had ceased, ... call Fitzpatrick and Nockels ... friend since the last issue of the copy ... the Illinois News Letter contain... the letter of John Fitzpatrick ... Ed Nockels was used in the De... Convention to destroy the sen... ...timent for amalgamation, and that ...Fitzpatrick and Nockels had not been ...instructed by any action of the Chi... ...cago Federation of Labor on this ...matter, and therefore had no right ... issue this kind of a statement." ...Delegate Oscar F. Nelson, Demo... ...cratic alderman, followed Foster, with ...a bitter attack upon him and the ...Trade Union Educational League. He ...sprung a new argument, that "the ...Trade Union Educational League is ...responsible for the loss in member... ...ship of the American Federation of ...Labor." He complained that Foster ...spent his time in building up the ...League instead of the American Fed... ...eration of Labor, and "charged" that ...Foster would no doubt be leading ...the Decatur Convention if it had ...done things that agreed with him. ...Meaning of course, if it had approved ...Amalgamation, Labor and Recogni... ...tion of Soviet Russia.

Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, also took the floor and made a rambling speech that lasted an hour and a quarter. He said the opposite of Nelson, that is, that Foster had mis... ...used the good name and reputation ...of the Chicago Federation of Labor, ...by spreading broadcast its stand on ...amalgamation. Which goes to show ...you're damned if you do and you're ...damned if you don't."

Olander performed many other ...mental somersaults in condemning ...Foster, the Communist leader. His ...best and would-be dramatic story ...of how, at the Decatur Convention, ...he had "Snatched the mantle of fame, ...which Foster was so furtively wear... ...ing, and placed it on the rightful ...owner—Fitzpatrick," who is behind ...was the real originator of the won... ...derful plan (federation), that Foster ...would applied in organizing the Stock ...Yards Workers," was a real gem. ...His speech was typical of the Gom... ...personnel line of remarks hopelessly ...filled with Anarcho-Syndicalist: phil... ...osophy and statements about "pre... ...serving the freedom of the individ... ...ual" while not denying "the princi... ...ple of mutual aid" (shades of Kro... ...potkin). He wound up in a Swing... ...tone, with a tribute to the wonderful ...efforts of "brotherly love."

It has been many a day since the Chicago Federation listened to this kind of psuedo-intellectual bunk. Few were deceived by the voice that spoke with a catch in it about broth... ...erly love, while at the same time, a ...dagger was plunged into the heart of ...the rank and file demand for amal... ...gamation.

After a discussion of this kind that lasted many hours the report of the delegates, together with their rec... ...ommendations, was approved, many of the delegates being brought to the meeting for the occasion, by those opposed to any semblance of prog... ...ress, while others were very much influenced by the temporary red hys... ...teria that is driving the Chicago Fed... ...eration of Labor to "Out-Gompers Gompers." The officialdom is now engaged in a campaign of repudiation of everything progressive it has ever stood for. They are now rejecting radical measures that have given the Chicago Federation, not alone a na... ...tional but an international reputa... ...tion. Where is it heading to and where will it end?

Dunne Defies Gompers' Terror Regime

...figured out what conservative ... ability Dunne needed to secure the re... ...sult which had been carefully ar... ...ranged and for which all hands, in... ...cluding the votes of the international ... officers, had been mustered.

Dunne defended himself in what opinion generally concedes to be the most remarkable speech ever delivered at an A. F. of L. convention. Not one inch did the target of all the abuse and foul up charges recede. His speech consisted of a direct attack upon the policies of the officialdom of the A. F. of L. and never has the machine had a more thorough going over than he gave it. After he had been speaking a few moments, the convention listened in absolute silence to the Communist viewpoint that he expressed. The Lewis-Green-Murray machine got into a straight row at his statements, nor did they run the risk of contradicting statements contained in an article in The Butte Bulletin dealing with the charges of bribery and corruption preferred by Lewis against the Executive Officers of the Illinois Mine Workers District and by Farrington against Lewis.

Green got himself into an awful mess in attempting to question Dunne concerning alleged statements in an article, dealing with the anthracite controversy, and Gompers was forced to come to his rescue when Dunne challenged him to read the statements he claimed were made. Immediately following Green's statement Murray moved that the credentials of W. F. Dunne be revoked. The motion specified no charges against Dunne, but the speeches made before and after the motion clearly indicated that the ingratiation of the misleaders of American labor had been severely injured by the statements of Dunne and the communist press. The loudest complaints were made against the sarcastic statements reflecting upon the intelligence and fighting spirit of the international officialdom. Back of this, of course, was the desire to intimidate the proponents of the Labor Party and Amalgamation ideas and the effort to use the vote on the credentials as a test of the strength of the supporters of these measures to the minimum. In this there can be no doubt that the Machine has been completely successful and there is not enough opposition to cause officialdom any worry whatever.

In closing his attack on Dunne, Green mentioned as a precedent the expulsion of the devil and his angels from heaven as an example of how the convention had acted in the case of Dunne. Dunne replied that the comparison was a good one, as the devil and his angels were expelled for attempting to overthrow the dictatorship of the Almighty, and that he was glad to be in such good company. Dunne's speech was frequently interrupted by applause, which was in marked contrast to the silence that greeted the speeches of the officialdom.

Party Federation Spokesmen Discuss Industrial Problems

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

...ecutive Committee of the Workers Party and Federations met with ... representatives of the Central Executive Committee of the... Workers Party (for report of first session see last week's "WORKER"), was held on Tuesday, Oct. 2. The meeting was devoted mainly to the immediate problems now facing the party.

C. E. C. was represented by comrades Earl Browder and Abram Jakira.

A review of the situation ... the party to be in a very favorable position for Communist work in the trade unions, and that the Language Federations of the party have a very important task to perform. This is true especially in regards to the big industries where the workers are mainly foreign born and very favorably disposed towards the Communist ideas and to the Communist movement. About 50 per cent of the total organs of our Italian Federation, for instance, with a circulation of about 10,000, is being distributed among the coal miners alone. The efforts which the language federations were making during the last few months have produced good results, and to these efforts a large portion of our language comrades have devoted their energies. The trade unions are now taking a more active part and a keen interest in the trade union movement of this country. The effort of the Federations must not slacken. It must continue with even greater strength now, when the tasks of the party become greatly increased and greater and when the reactionary bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor is in open alliance with the capitalists and the Department of Justice against every element that is progressive in the labor movement.

Special efforts must be made by the federations to utilize the favorable situation that has developed in the labor movement to recruit new members into the party. There must be no doubt that many of our federations can increase their present membership many fold with but a slight effort on their part. Every federation speaker or organizer must pay special attention to this problem.

An industrial registration of party membership was started some time ago. The results, due to a number of reasons, have been far from satisfactory. Yet, the importance for the party to secure the correct data about its members in the trade unions can hardly be overestimated. The representatives of the federations pledged themselves to co-operate with the C. E. C. to have the industrial registration completed without any further delay.

The question of helping to increase the circulation of the Labor Herald, official organ of the Trade Union Educational League, received special attention. It was suggested that the language papers of the party publish every month a resume of the contents of that splendid magazine, and that language comrades be requested to order copies of the Labor Herald for distribution among the English speaking workers.

It was pointed out that the reactionaries of the A. F. of L. are trying to discredit the radical trade union unity by waging a most vicious attack thru numerous lies and insinuations against the trade union movement in Soviet Russia. Two pamphlets dealing with the real facts about the Russian trade unions have been published recently by the Friends of Soviet Russia and by the Trade Union Educational League. It is of vital importance that these two splendid pamphlets be given the widest possible circulation. Many federations already have them translated into their own languages.

The Industrial department of the party is to supply the federations press with short articles dealing with the role of the communists and the party in the American labor movement. The federation editors, in turn, are to make a special effort to write for the general party press and for the Labor Herald articles dealing with the experience of the foreign born workers. This would help considerably in the establishment of closer contact between the federations and the party generally.

"If there is any doubt about the hostile attitude of Harding or Daugherty, or for that matter, any of the other politicians in power, they are in sympathy with, this book completely dispels that doubt. They are shown to be in league with the financial pirates who are robbing the American public and using their every effort to destroy every vestige of the trades union movement in this country."

New York Defies Chicago

By JULIUS GOSKIND.

NEW YORK CITY.—A New York agent concealed in the Chicago camp forwarded a secret communication to the Chicago branches in the drive for The Daily Worker. In this letter the Chicago City Campaign Committee calls upon the branches for help to keep up with the pace set by New York. On the basis of the receipts of the first week, sums of The Worker" was: ...n these trade union posts of the ...erican Legion are being developed ...basis for the Fascist Party." ...This should have read: ...n these trade union posts of the ...erican Legion are being developed ...e basis for the Fascist trade unions in America. The trade union ...resarists of America will probably furnish much of the leadership ...r the coming Fascist Party." is ahead on cash and ladies Chicago to overtake her.

In New York the Williamsburg Harlem Branch was building up a large sum of money for shares. Williamsburg commenced to work to overtake Harlem. Harlem heard of this, and its branch director, Comrade Louis Hyrahman, promptly started a canvass of absentee members. When the branches finally reported, Harlem and Williamsburg each had $500 in pledges, for which they had $115 each. However, both were foiled, for the Lithuanian Williamsburg branch had $125, while the Czecho-Slovak branch had $120. The Bronx Section turned in a check for $145. With so many branches so nearly even, the competition becomes hotter and hotter, and should the Finnish branches continue to hold back their reports it promises to be a pretty race.

Leader: $1,190 Per Cent.

The Daily Worker Campaign Committee of District No. 2 is in receipt of a letter from Linden, N. J., where the party has a Hungarian branch with 13 members. This letter advises the committee that two comrades have bought one share each, two comrades have contributed $15 between them, and the thirteenth bought two shares.

Newark, New Jersey, has arranged a mass meeting to open the campaign for a Daily Worker, at the Labor Lyceum, 764 S. 4th St., at 2:30 p. m. today.

Some of the best speakers now appearing on the public platform in New York have been secured for this meeting. Among the concerts, but it was finally decided to let Chicago all speed with their pledges—New York is ahead on cash and ladies Chicago to overtake her.

Workers Party Opens New Book Store in Heart of New York

Revelling in orange and blue tables and shelves, and thousands of new radical and Communist books, newspapers, pamphlets and magazines, the new bookstore of the Workers Party, "The Jimmie Higgins' Book Shop," has opened its doors, at 127 University Place, near 14th St. and Union Square, New York City.

The opening of the book store marks another step forward in the Workers Party program of propaganda and organization work. Thru this store, the entire distribution of sales of the party literature in New York City and this district will be handled. A re-organization of the distribution machinery of the party will be made so as to increase the sales, and the efficiency of the work.

All branch literature agents hereafter will secure all literature supplies from JIMMIE HIGGINS' BOOK SHOP.

In choosing the name of the store, the party has paid tribute to the legendary hero of the American revolutionary movement. To hundreds of thousands of workers in this country "Jimmie Higgins" is well known. He symbolizes the active, rank and file member devoted to his party and union work. He is the rank and file member who sells literature at meetings, who sees that the platform is on the street corner at the right time, who holds you up with collection boxes and does a thousand and one things incidental to the carrying on of party work. He is unselfish, unambitious for himself, and renders invaluable service to the movement.

About JIMMIE HIGGINS' BOOK SHOP, the party will enlist the services of scores and hundreds of local comrades in building up the institution, and building up the party.

In addition to Communist literature, the book shop will carry the world's classics and all the new higher-quality books which even a Communist finds time to read. Comrade Elmer T. Allison will be in charge of the store. Every party member is requested to buy all his reading matter of every kind in the party's new book store.

"Ten Miles Away" in Los Angeles.

On October 16th, at the Walker Auditorium, 738 S. Grand Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., the workers of that city will present, for the first time, an evening of entertainment, of which a feature will be "Ten Miles Away," a one-act drama illustrating the undying love of liberty of the Jewish revolutionist.

The funds secured by the sale of tickets will be used for the defense and relief of the victims of the Criminal Syndicalism Law in California.

The entertainment was previously announced for Sept. 30 but the remodeling of the theatre was not completed and it was necessary to postpone it to Oct. 16th.

"God and the Fascisti Save the King."

By EUGENE LYONS.

And now the Fascisti are saving Great Britain from the still "ever increasing menace of Socialism and Bolshevism."

A mere matter of trifle, you know, for a leisure class.

With Italy and Spain in black straitjackets, with Bulgaria and Bavaria playfully elected by Fascisti, time of course hangs heavy and the British people are the beneficiaries of this leisure.

A leaflet issued by the British Fascisti shows that saving England, when one gets down to it systematically is really child's play. The entire plan is summarized in a few paragraphs.

You see, there are Units of seven "under a chosen leader to take active measures against the revolutionary elements in their own districts." Then, for purposes of "swift mobilization in the event of general strike or revolution," to quote the document,

"Three Units form a Troop under a Troop Officer.

"Three Troops form a Company under a Company Officer.

"Three Companies form a Division under a Division Officer."

All that is necessary, under this scheme, is to get the original sevens. But that may be left to the patriotism of the Britons.

The extra-legal forces for the maintenance of law, according to the plan, are supplemented by a "Transport Section," comprising the owners of autos, motorcycles, bicycles, tricycles and perambulators (though the last two are not listed specifically). With this Socialism functionless, the railway and marine workers are automatically shorn of their influence in a national crisis. Then there is also to be an Intelligence Department, to keep Great Britain effectively frightened by fake "revolutionary" reports.

The leaflet bears the imprint of the Boswell Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., 2, White friars Street, E. C. 4, and ends with the pious cliché "God save the King!" Everything that precedes, however, makes it quite clear that the Fascisti will not leave it to God.

The Dope Peddlers

One of the best stay-on-the-fence artists among the officials of the United Mine Workers' Union is William Green, its international secretary-treasurer. But he has definitely climbed down into the camp of President John L. Lewis, thru endorsing the recent anti-radical propaganda issued by Ellis Searles for publication in the capitalist press.

Green is a delegate at the Portland Convention of the American Federation of Labor. He gave a signed interview to one of the Portland dailies, owned by the bosses, in which he reiterates the Lewis-Searles fabrications. Green has joined with Lewis, Gompers, Woll and other anti-Communist dope peddlers, "to wipe out the trouble makers", the terms in which he refers to the militants in the miners' union.

We take it that Green's efforts constitute an attempt to save the face of Lewis at Portland. The Lewis-Searles propaganda has been repudiated by Frank Farrington, head of the Illinois Mine Workers' Union, the strongest district organization in the International. Walter Nesbit, Secretary-Treasurer of the Illinois Mine Workers, also takes his stand with Farrington against Lewis and Green.

It is significant that most of the miners' officials are entirely mum on this issue. "The Worker" sent a letter to every district president, secretary-treasurer and international board member, about 100 in all urging them to state their stand on this issue. Not a single reply came in support of the Lewis-Green-Searles propaganda. The few replies received rejected it. Most of these officials did not reply at all, no doubt preferring to have their silence register their repudiation.

Palmer, Burns, Daugherty, Lusk and all the other agents of the open shop, anti-labor interests have shown themselves failures at peddling anti-radical dope. When Gompers, Lewis, Green, Woll and other bureaucrats of organized labor joined these dope peddlers, they confessed their inability to successfully reply to the arguments and contentions of the thinking elements in the American labor movement.

"Noisy But Not Formidable."

When Lloyd George was premier of the British Empire, he declared that he would never recognize Russia, that he would never shake "the bloody hand of the Soviets." But he has since been converted and he is now urging that the Moscow Workers' and Peasants' Government be given recognition.

It is the same shifting Lloyd George who has come to this side of the Atlantic Ocean for a short tour of the United States and Canada. Landing at New York City, he was asked by the reporters of the metropolitan press:

"Are the Communists on the gain over there?"

He replied, "Well, the Communists—I don't think they are formidable. They are noisy, but they are not formidable."

If Lloyd George does not fear the formidability of Communists, why did he sit so quietly in his seat in the British Parliament, while J. T. Walton Newbold, one of its Communist members, was being expelled for daring to voice the demands of exploited labor?

Lloyd George, upon his arrival, announced thru the press of his friend, William Randolph Hearst, that, "Europe is in a desperate condition—but Europe will recover."

He also told an audience of New York newspaper publishers, editors and business men, in the great Hotel Biltmore ballroom, "Take one of your great New York buildings. Drench it with gasoline. Scatter matches about, and then go to an insurance company and ask them if they will take the risk. That is Europe today."

After painting these vivid pictures Lloyd George offers no way out, no hope, except that "the Communists are noisy but not formidable."

All he urges is unity,—unity of the capitalist nations. Poincare, Stresseman and Curzon were working that out on the other side of the Atlantic; unity of the imperialists of Berlin, Paris and London, not only against the German workers, but against all European labor. Lloyd George thus offers the program of the Versailles peace that has been in action for four years, accompanied with increasing violence and misery, unity of decaying capitalism against rising Communism.

And all the time the New York police were mauling and arresting Irish men and women, demonstrating wherever this capitalist apologist appeared with placards and banners that denounced George as the "murderer of Irish women and children."

Lloyd George came to this country in the midst of the world crisis. He is expressing the views of the ruling class of the world's problems in speeches and interviews. But these problems never can be settled. The only wise thing Lloyd George said was that he is planning to retire. He wishes to get out before the Communists kick him out.

The Wobbling "Progressives."

The progressive movement in the political arena is as shapeless, formless, sporadic and unrelated in its various activities as it ever was. The leaders of the insurgents are not and never were true wavering representatives of the vacillating economic group in society, whose class interests they represent and reflect. The latest of them, Brookhart, wants to wait to see how Coolidge will behave in the next Congress. Magnus Johnson, the nearest impersonation of a dirt farmer in the progressive camp, talks of a third party IF the Republican standpatters will not co-operate and will not get together with the farmers and workers. Apparently Magnus Johnson will really base his policy on his impression of Coolidge being "a nice chap."

The reactionary Washington Post, speaking semi-officially for the Coolidge crowd, has lined up the Minnesota senator properly when it recently said that Magnus will change quite a bit once he gets the chance to see that the "terrible reactionaries" aren't such bad fellows after all. Borah is discreetly silent. Hiram Johnson, who dons progressive overalls, when the progressive winds blow westward, is keeping mum. And even the fighting La Follette has not yet answered the attempts of Coolidge to break up his ranks thru the offer of restored patronage on a silver platter.

If there is to be any blow struck against the reactionaries in the coming elections, it will have to be struck by the organized political power of the workers and exploited farming masses. They alone can organize to strike effectively against the two old parties of the big capitalists. Exclusive of the treacherous bureaucracy in their camp, this mass of city and rural workers has the courage and will and power to deliver the most telling punches in the coming political fights.

The middle-of-the-roaders of every stripe and description have neither the plan nor the purpose to fight the powerful interests to a finish. The workers and farmers have both. The conditions, economic and political, are rotten ripe for the building of the all-inclusive mighty independent political party of the industrial and rural masses—the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Tom Mann Urges Need for Daily Red International of Labour Unions

(BRITISH BUREAU)

[illegible] TOM MANN [illegible] 9 Wellington Street [illegible] LONDON, W.C.2

[illegible] Y. S. 134

Sept. 12th 1923.

TO THE WORKING PARTY OF AMERICA.

Comrades,

I learn that you are taking steps to issue a Daily paper; allow me to express the hope that you will be entirely successful in this. We all stand in most urgent need of our own press free from the Capitalist Control; until we have this our work is doubly hard; to keep, to depend upon Capitalist owned papers for our daily information is humiliating and terribly harmful.

It is because this portrait so largely that they, the owners of the press, are able to get in such an amount of propaganda entirely of an anti-Labour nature. Once more Comrades,

The best of Success.

Yours fraternally
Tom Mann

The above is a reproduction of a letter received from Comrade Tom Mann of England. Tom Mann has inspired the working class of England for two generations with his magnificent spirit and has led them to victory in many a hard fought battle against the British capitalists. Tom Mann became prominent as a world leader of the hosts of labor during the famous dockers' strike in London in 1899 and has continuously since then been in the forefront of every battle waged by the workers of Great Britain and its colonies. Tom Mann was sentenced to jail in 1912 for issuing a manifesto to the soldiers calling upon them to refuse to shoot their striking brothers. As a result of the mass demonstrations of the whole working class of England the British Capitalist Government was forced to release Tom Mann after he served about two months of his sentence. Today Tom Mann is at the head of the British Section of the International of Labor Unions. No one is more qualified to speak upon the question of the need of the working class for its own daily paper and his message should spur our comrades on to ever greater activities to establish the first English-language daily Communist newspaper in the world.

The Struggle of the Working Class

The workers are today engaged in a struggle for simple immediate things, for food and housing and the barest needs of life.

But they cannot win these things while a ruling class stands in the way, and for the sake of profits condemns a mass of men to poverty, unemployment and war. Therefore the struggle of the workers becomes the struggle

European Capitalists still coining misery into money, but—

The Bosses and Their Judges

Fitzpatrick and Nockels, of the Chicago Federation of Labor and Walker and Olander, of the Illinois Federation of Labor have turned their backs on the united political front of the workers, and the bosses are making a holiday out of Chicago's November judicial elections. The employing interests do not fear the divided ranks of the workers and so they are permitting their own democratic and republican politicians to stage separate exhibitions in this years' election of judges.

In 1917, when the workers were protesting against America's entrance into the world war, against profiteering, against the oppressive anti-labor measures, the bosses were forced to put up a united, non-partisan front, with one ticket, including both the democratic and republican candidates. In spite of this united opposition, the workers' candidates made a tremendous showing.

But this year the bosses have no fear. The Fitzpatrick elements repudiated the labor party idea when they deserted the conference that organized the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The Socialists did not even enter the conference. There is no workers' political unity, therefore, in Chicago, at the present time. The bosses, with complete safety, allow their republican and democratic stool pigeons to go ahead staging rival circuses.

Let us pick three candidates each from the full opposition slate of the democrats and republicans. On the republican side we find Judge Jesse Holdom, so-called king of the anti-labor injunction judges. He is so crooked that the higher courts, in order to save their own faces, must occasionally reverse him. There is Judge Albert C. Barnes, with his record in the appellate court where he was sure to strangle, if possible, in the bosses' interests decisions affecting the workers. The third republican is Judge Oscar Hebel, well known for the part he played in the judicial attack on the Communist Labor Party following the infamous Palmer-Burns-Hoyne raids in January, 1920.

Now we turn to the full democratic slate. It is headed by Judge Dennis E. Sullivan, against whom Secretary Edward N. Nockels of the Chicago Federation of Labor, in a letter to democratic Mayor William E. Dever, protests as follows:

". . . a notorious injunction judge who issues illegal injunctions as against the workers in industrial disputes, forbidding them being free men and women, free speech, free press and free assemblage, as against their constitutional rights, and in this he is the king pin and lends encouragement to other judges to do likewise."

On the democratic slate is Martin J. Isaacks, counsel for the clothing manufacturers in their war on the needle workers, charged with being the keeper of the employers' blacklist. His law partner and also his partner in the blacklist business, John P. McGoorty, is also a candidate, as is Marvin E. Barnhart, pal with Judge Hebel in the court war on Communists.

The open shoppers are therefore well protected. They have their candidates on both the democratic and republican slates. No matter who is defeated or elected, the bosses are the winners. The workers are divided and can offer no effective resistance. Fitzpatrick broke with the July unity conference and the result in the first election to follow in Chicago, is the picture of Nockels writing pleading letters to the democratic mayor of Chicago. Name-calling against the Communists, and letter writing to the old party politicians exposes the complete bankruptcy of the enemies of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. Fitzpatrick and Nockels must be held responsible for hamstringing labor in the present, very important judicial campaign in Chicago.

Workers Must Oppose Fascism, the Last Hope of Capitalism in Decay

Fascism, the Immediate Menace.

The capitalist system is in decay. All attempts to reconstruct it have failed. The destruction wrought by the war was so great and the imperialist rivalries have been so intense that a disintegration of capitalist power has set in, which cannot be stopped. Seeing that regularly constituted government no longer satisfies their needs and demanding a "strong" government irrespective of its "democracy," the bourgeoisie has organized all the elements that have suffered from the war—the ex-army officers, the petty bourgeoisie (which has been ground to pieces by the after-war troubles), the flotsam and jetsam of society, and above all the small peasants, as the backbone of a movement and of a capitalist, dictatorial, military dictatorship, which calls itself a Fascist government.

Sections of the workers yield to the siren call, especially the renegade and right-wing socialists, as in Italy.

As a matter of course, the fight is directed against the organized workers and their most militant section, the Communists. It is unnecessary to repeat the deeds of vandalism and destruction committed in the name of "law and order" by the Fascist government of Italy, and by Fascist organizations in Germany, Austria, Hungary.

But one fact must be remembered. Fascism becomes dominant where the workers are not revolutionary and are not organized. Where they are not revolutionary, the workers and the petty bourgeoisie see their safety in what appears to be a "strong" government. Thus Fascism is rampant in Bavaria, which has a weak revolutionary movement, (it was destroyed in the overthrow of the short-lived Soviet Government of Bavaria), but it hardly raises its head in Saxony. This means that the organized labor movement has an idea of its immediate and urgent tasks the organization of counter-forces to deal with Fascism in its various manifestations.

But even Fascism must disintegrate owing to the very contradiction of the elements composing it. There are many elements under the spell and guidance of Fascism who naturally belong to the working class. The momentary discouragement arising from the failure of the revolutionary movement to seize power has driven them to the embrace of a capitalist military dictatorship. The small peasants, the exploited and crushed intellectuals, teachers, etc., must be won away from the influence of Fascism. We must begin a militant campaign of education and propaganda explaining the nature of Fascism. It must be exposed as an act of desperation of the ruling capitalist system which no longer trusts its own institutions and resorts to naked violence in order to retain control and power. It must be shown that, as in Italy, where agrarian capital stands in opposition to industrial capital, when in a moment of despair the two unite in struggle against the workers, dissolution must eventually take place, owing to the very antagonism between agrarian and industrial and financial capital.

Hence the struggle against Fascism is also an ideological one. The natural allies of the working class must be won over, or at least neutralized. This is essential for the establishment of the Workers' and Farmers' Government, which is the surest safeguard against Fascism.

Immediate measures must be taken, however, to combat the violent methods of the Fascisti. In Germany, the most effective organization has been found in the "Factory Hundreds." All workers irrespective of party and trade union membership are formed into bodies of one hundred and put under military discipline. Although unarmed their very formation is the best protection against the Fascisti. To protect their labor temples, presses, meetings, clubs, they carry on systematic propaganda against Fascism and by their solidarity convert the vacillating elements. The Communists must penetrate the farmers' organizations and bring them close to the Party and the trade unions. Solidarity of all working people against the violent phase of the disintegrating capitalist system must be preached and cultivated.

As Fascism is an international phenomenon and is internationally organized, the workers and farmers must present international organization to fight against it. The workers of every country must support the workers of other countries where Fascism rules. The American workers, in particular, should fight for a boycott of all shipments of grain and coal to Italy. This will be the best help against Mussolini and his blackshirt gangs.

The thesis and address on Fascism was delivered by Comrade Zetkin, the "Grand Old Woman" of the Proletarian Revolution. Owing to an injury to her leg, she was unable to stand. Sitting in a gilt chair, once occupied by the czarina, Comrade Zetkin, with the fire and eloquence of a young agitator, inflamed her audience, and made one wish that the movement possessed many more of her ability and enthusiasm.

In the midst of the discussion Radek delivered an address that is destined to remain as a brilliant star in the vast galaxy of speeches and writings of this brilliant thinker. "Schlageter, the Wanderer of the Void" was an episode of clear thinking couched in the language of a poet. The story of the young Fascist who thought he was serving the German fatherland by fighting first against Soviet Russia then against the workers in the Ruhr, to be shot down by French imperialism, the story of Stinnes and his colleagues, who themselves are the patrons of Germany Fascism—is a lesson for the masses guided.

Dunne's Portland Speech

UNSEATED DELEGATE ALSO WRITES COMPLETE STORY OF A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

Court Orders Paul Glaser, Workers' Lawyer, Deported

(Special to "The Worker")

GARY, Ind.—Paul P. Glaser, prominent lawyer and active in the radical labor movement of this city, has just been notified that his citizenship papers have been revoked by the U. S. Supreme Court and that he is to be deported to Russia.

Glaser, who is a member of the Workers Party branch here organized the first Socialist Party local in this city and joined the Workers Party on its formation. During the steel strike in 1919, he was very active in leading the strikers, and his house was raided by soldiers and sleuths and doors and windows broken by them. He was ordered arrested by General Leonard Wood, of Proctor and Gamble soap-suds fame.

Glaser was also the attorney for the three union men who were framed up in the Michigan Central train wreck and he secured the acquittal of all of them including Charles Usellis.

It is significant that Glaser's deportation comes after the steel company had tried to bribe him with $50,000 during the steel strike and again at the time he was defending the Michigan Central defendants. Glaser's refusal to double cross the men resulted in the revocation of his citizenship papers and the deportation which will soon take place unless a stay can be procured.

Why Pass This By?

Governor Warren T. McCray, of Indiana, a charged with having passed from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 of worthless notes on 207 banks in 64 counties of his home state. Latest reports indicate that no effort, as yet, has been made to fasten these crimes of a capitalist politician on the Communists. Compers, Lewis and Judge E. H. Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, are missing a splendid opportunity.

Don't Throw This Paper Away
Pass it on to Your Neighbor

The complete speech of William F. Dunne, at the American Federation of Labor Convention at Portland, Ore., in reply to the prosecution that demanded he be unseated as the delegate of the Silver Bow (Butte, Mont.) Labor Council, follows:

MR. CHAIRMAN: This is not the first time I have faced a white-collared mob aroused to frenzy by the press of its masters and bent upon my destruction. It is not the first time that my head has been asked as the price of peace and harmony, but in the capitalists courts I am not called an enemy of the trade union movement; rather do they say that I call upon the workers to resist the attacks of the employers.

I am glad that Delegate Green for the prosecution has succeeded in finding a Biblical precedent for the action you are about to take, —in the expulsion of Lucifer from heaven. It not only aids what is a weak case, but it gives the proper religious atmosphere to a proceeding that is entirely consistent with the heresy-hunting proclivities of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor. The accusations themselves cite only criticisms of officials of the United Mine Workers and the American Federation of Labor. The prosecution has had to stoop to interpretation, insinuation and construction just as do the district attorneys of the employers and with all this labored effort the charge simmers down to the accusation that I do not worship at the shrine of John L. Lewis, Phillip Murray, William Green and the rest of the hierarchy.

This I do not deny, nor do I intend to defend myself. Before a capitalist court I would offer a defense and take advantage of every loophole, but before the lackeys of the employers, NO! Any statements I may make will be merely for the purpose of making my position clear.

I did not come into the trade union movement by the back door, as Mr. Frank Hodges inferred some of the reds do when he made his inspired speech. Neither did I come into the trade union movement by the back door as did Mr. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, the individual who has been responsible for the attacks upon the radicals and who asks the co-operation of the employers in the witch-burning campaign.

I have been a trade unionist for more than 14 years and for almost that length of time an active member of the Electrical Workers' Union. My record in the labor movement has no flaws in it; my efforts have been devoted to building a better and a stronger movement and in no single place where I have been has the trade union movement not profited by my activities. I have in my pocket now about the international officers of the electrical workers thanking me for my assistance at a critical time.

The patched up story of my activities in the Pennsylvania coal fields during the 1922 strike of the miners is interesting, but incomplete. I made two speeches to miners in that district after the strike started and in both instances they came out on strike and stayed out. So far as I know there was not an organizer of the United Mine Workers within 15 miles.

In Fayette County, Pa., where it is said, by the prosecution, communists were active, it is a matter of record that the strike there was continued for weeks after an agreement, which meant them to the membership, had been signed by the international officers of the union.

Now about the charge of opposition whose strike they won.

I make a distinction, however, between you, international officers, and the membership. When I said in a speech the other night that this was not a working-class war I meant exactly what I said. I told the truth, you know I told the truth and none of you dare deny it. Workers' Drawing the same salaries as the employers, living in the same hotels, eating the same food, belonging to the same fraternal orders, hobnobbing with them in their clubs! What do you know or care about the eternal struggle of the wage-earners except that it forces you to apologize to the bosses from time to time and disavow any radical tendencies?

You say that I have contempt for you and you are right. I have. I know you all and I know your silly pretentions to leadership. So do the employers, and they laugh at you while using you. Even the men in the press box, upon whom you fawn, despise you while they cater to your petty vanities.

Sam Gompers, head and shoulders above 90 per cent of you intellectually, also despises you, yet he is more to blame than any of you for the present pitiable situation in which American labor finds itself—forced to beg for favors and continually excuses itself for being here at all. Gompers understands you; he knows your prejudices and your ignorances, your preferences and your idiosyncrasies, and he plays upon them as a violinist does upon his instrument. He wants no intelligent leadership and he sees that none develops.

Ignorance, I said. What do you men who shape the policies of labor know of the great struggles of labor that made history? What do you know of Socialist Policeman Stops Anti-Fascisti Meeting in Cicero, Ill.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 15. Cicero Branch of the Anti-Fascisti Alliance of North America, Antonio Press Room 214, 1009 North State Street, Chicago, Ill.

Anti-Fascisti Alliance of North America protests most vehemently against the unwarranted arrest of Engedali, Camarda, and Giordano at Cicero anti-Fascisti meeting. The Alliance expresses its deepest feeling of sympathy and appreciation for your splendid endeavor to keep Fascisti scourge out of America.

Arturo Giovannitti,
General Secretary.

"Call the wagon" was the order given by a Lithuanian policeman, member of the Socialist Party, to an Italian detective and an enthusiastic Anti-Fascisti mass meeting at Cicero, Ill., the 60,000 industrial suburb of Chicago, was broken up with the arrest of J. Louis Engdahl editor of The Workers' Monthly, Emilio Giordano, business manager of Alba Nuovo, the Italian C weekly, and Ignazio Camarda, organizer for the Workers Party.

Under local Fascist leadership, the Cicero police force, which has been entirely reorganized. The second meeting, however, was nearly over when the arrests were made, following Engdahl's address.

The three comrades were given a free ride to the local police station, where the chauffeur announced to the desk sergeant that the charge was "Overthrowin' the government." In legal parlance, however, it developed that the booking was for "disorderly conduct," with bail fixed at $60 each in cash. The money was raised by local workers, and when the case came up in police court, Saturday, a jury trial was asked and granted for Saturday, Oct. 20.

The Cicero officials, with the local police administration, are evidently being led into support of the Fascisti movement. The Italian workers of Cicero are uniting in the struggle for the freedom of expression and are planning another meeting in conjunction with Lithuanian workers.

The A. F. of L. Convention,—Safe and Sane,—for Whom? Asks Dunne

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.
(Written Especially for "The Worker")

The forty-third annual convention of the American Federation of Labor will go down in history as the most reactionary gathering of trade union officials ever held in America. Five years after the signing of the armistice the official trade union movement allowed itself to be swayed by the same hysteria-bred slogans with which the employing class coaxed and coerced the workers to do their bidding during the war period.

The Portland convention was frankly a red-hunting gathering. The official publicity furnished the capitalist press and published by it with gusto weeks before the convention was the weather-vane showing towards which quarter the winds of oratory would blow. It was an accurate guide; no resolution which the Gompers machine opposed was too innocuous to escape the would-be piercing gaze of the chief inquisitor—Matthew Woll, whom some call the crown prince but to whom the ribald left-wingers refer as the clown quince.

The Portland press gave noble assistance to the crusaders who were to deliver the sacred shrine of American trades-unionism from the profane touch of the infidel hordes of red Russia. The hordes were not present in any great numbers apparently, but the result of their machinations were seen in resolutions for amalgamation, a labor party and recognition of Russia that came from unlooked for sources. For example, just as it seemed that the loathing for any form of political action by the workers had been fully demonstrated, the Molders' Union in convention in Cleveland went on record for Russian recognition and the establishment of a labor party. The president of the Molders' Union is Joseph F. Valentine. He is a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. This profanation of the inner shrine aroused the furv of its defenders to the highest pitch yet reached and the proceedings from here on are marked by considerable incoherence but with one objective kept in plain sight—showing the employers that labor—ten to fifteen thousand per year labor, limousine-owning labor, Masonic, Knights of Columbus and Elk lodge labor, twenty-five dollar per day expense account labor, American legion labor and Civic Federation labor—was against any change in the present system and that the only reason employers were ever embarrassed by wage demands was because the rank and file must be thrown a sop or two or they would continue to support the magnificent edifice housing so many pillars of the wage-system.

Should Not Mention Classes.

The unseating of the writer was a stratagem move designed to disarm the opposition in the Gompers machine and place it on the defensive in addition to being concrete proof of the sincerity of patriotic purposes actuating A. F. of L. officialdom. This proceeding aroused the only show of interest during the entire convention and it was only at this time that the debate took on a workingclass character, the continual references to the workingclass made by Dunne in reply to the prosecution established a precedent for A. F. of L. conventions and embarrassed very much indeed the

These candidates will comply with all the requirements of the election law. These efforts must not be lost. We have candidates in most of the working class districts that are of importance in our campaign for Independent Working Class Political Action. This gives us an unparalleled opportunity to bring the message of a UNITED FRONT OF WORKERS AND FARMERS to large masses of the people of New York whom we could not reach in any other way. And this opportunity must not be lost. Every member and sympathizer of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party must do all in his power to utilize this opportunity for propaganda, collect money on subscription lists, distribute our literature, and to make our mass meetings a huge success.

Butte Workers Protest Ousting of Their Delegate

(Special to "The Worker")

BUTTE, MONT.—The Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council held a lively session last Tuesday night. Delegates scored the ousting of their delegate, William F. Dunne, and the high-handed action of the A. F. of L. officialdom. The craristic attitude of the reactionary labor leaders who refused to hear the constructive criticism of the rank and file as expressed by Dunne on the floor of the Portland convention was denounced. The Council instructed the secretary to send the following protest telegram to the secretary of the American Federation of Labor:

Mr. Frank Morrison, Secretary,
American Federation of Labor,
Multnomah Hotel, Portland, Ore.

The Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council, having learned through the press that our delegate to the convention of the A. F. of L. has for some reason been unseated, hereby protests such a high handed outrage by an officialdom that apparently cannot stand before an enlightened criticism. We selected our delegate, Brother W. F. Dunne, on account of his political views because of his intense loyalty to the cause of labor and because of his community and activity in all our struggles against the powers that derive pleasure from the act of the convention that deprives him of a seat as delegate and would if they could deprive every organization of labor in this state. They have succeeded in laying some organizations of labor prostrate, but happy to relate not one in Butte owing to the sincere efforts of Dunne and others. We would like to suggest that the officials of the affiliated organizations get in closer touch with the rank and file before it is too late and efforts be put forth to prevent losses in membership instead of attacking persons that have put forth the best that is in them fighting the open shop.

Signed:
J. C. WHITELEY, President.
CLEM BURKARD, Secretary.

Demand for New Charters Grows!

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Secretary, Workers Party.

The number of applications for charters for new branches of the Workers Party is growing from week to week as a result of the drive for 10,000 new members. During the last week in September the number of charters issued was 11; the first week in October, 15, and for the second week of October, 23 charters were issued.

Among the 23 charters were 8 for new English branches, 5 for Armenian branches, 2 Italian and 1 each Finnish, Lithuanian, Ukrainian and South Slavic branches.

The five Armenian branches alone have 155 new members and the total for the 23 branches is 400 members.

The initiation stamp payments for the month of September reported as 399 in the reports received up to the end of last week has now been increased to 449, with a number of reports still missing.

With new members coming in at the rate of 500 per week as indicated by the applications for charters and sale of dues stamps, and the campaign just getting under way, the 10,000 new members by January 1st seems well within reach of the Party.

If all the Party units throw themselves into this campaign as some have already done, even a larger increase in the Party membership is assured.

A VOICE FROM PRISON

"Western Penitentiary, Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 11, 1923.

"Daily Worker Campaign Committee, Chicago, Ill. Dear Comrades: Am sending herewith five dollars for the Daily Worker fund. The left wing is facing the severest test in its history. The desertion of the flabby "progressives," the slugging and expulsion of the militants, the "socialist" controlled garment trades, the gunman attack on Foster and finally, the publication under the Compers-Lewis shield of the despicable concoction bearing the fine finger prints of Ellis Searles, all these are unmistakable signs of a concerted and ruthless campaign to blockade the left wing and crush every expression of militancy in the ranks of organized labor.

"This vicious attack must be defeated. The militants must forge a new, powerful weapon—a Communist daily paper—to batter the enemy lines day after day.

"Fraternally yours—Israel Blankstein."

All Communists—all workers, should answer this call and copy this example of Comrade Blankstein, who sends his last dollar from prison to aid THE DAILY WORKER.

An A. F. of L. Editor at Minneapolis Protests Against Gompers' Attacks on Radical Labor

LABOR MUST DEFEND LABOR.
(From "Minneapolis Labor Review", owned by Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly.)

While the rank and file of organized labor is contributing time and money to the defense of W. Z. Foster and other members of organized labor criminally arrested by federal authorities in a raid at Bridgeman, Michigan, it is to be deplored that part of the officialdom of the labor movement loses no opportunity to put these workers in the most unfavorable light possible.

It is the right of every official and every member of organized labor to disagree with Foster and those who believe as he does, and also the right of Foster and his followers to disagree with every official and with members of organized labor.

But with logic lacking to answer the arguments for amalgamation and independent political action, no good will is to be aroused for those who differ with Foster and his ideas by attempting to make it appear that Foster and his associates have never done anything constructive for the labor movement, and are a menace to it.

Foster was years ago a member of the I. W. W. He toured Europe in working class fashion. He studied the labor movements of that continent and returned to this country convinced that dual organizations like the I. W. W. were a menace to the welfare of the labor movement.

Acting as he believed, he left the I. W. W. and became a staunch member of the American Federation of Labor. Then while he was the prize boy with the A. F. of L. officialdom. He was asked to contribute and did contribute articles to the Federalist, official organ of the American Federation of Labor.

Things went smoothly until it became apparent that while Foster was an opponent of dual unionism he believed that there should be but one union for each industry, and that the A. F. of L. should work to bring about this needed change in organization. Then the ardor of officialdom for Foster commenced to cool.

During the war Foster was active in organising the Chicago packing house workers of many nationalities into A. F. of L. unions that forced something like decent conditions and wages in the packing industry.

That these unions in later years were unable to meet the onslaught of the employers was not the fault of Foster but of those who inflicted the disintegration of a council that had been formed to bring more united action among the packing house unions.

In the big organizing campaign in the steel industry it was Foster who was intrusted with its leadership by the international union officials. Although the campaign did not succeed, it was the strongest move ever put forth by unorganized workers in a trustified industry operating at many points.

Had the money necessary to put on the campaign at all points at once been forthcoming, as it was understood it would be from interested international, victory would have been achieved.

But forced, through shortage of funds, to put on an intensive campaign at one point while little or nothing was done at other points, it proved a handicap that could not be overcome.

Men organized at one point would become restless and demand action. Finally this culminated in a premature strike. Premature for the reason that the A. F. of L. with $70,000 left over from the campaign which Foster managed.

Could that $70,000 have been available at the start of the steel organizing campaign led by Foster, it is most probable that it would have culminated in complete success.

Foster and those who believe with him are often assailed for their friendliness toward Soviet Russia. It is worthy of notice that conservative United States senators refrain from Russia with praise and commendation for improving conditions in Russia.

It also should not be passed without consideration that one of the greatest influences against dual unionism in the United States has come from the leaders of the soviets. Radicals who could not be influenced by the conservative A. F. of L. officials have been influenced to stay in the A. F. of L. where they belong by the leaders of the Russian movement.

And in this fight against dual unionism none has been more active and loyal than Foster.

It is the influence of Foster, together with the opposition to dual-ism by Russian Radicals, which as much and more than anything else is its own selfish self, checking the headway of dualism in the United States.

Foster and those arrested with him at Michigan face penalties of from one to ten years in prison under the criminal syndicalist law of Michigan. They face that penalty notwithstanding they were doing to prevent their own selfish self, checking what they conceived to be for the benefit of the workers of the nation. Hunted and harried by government and employers' hostile organized labor, it is astounding to see labor officials lining up to pack that would send Foster and others to the dungeon.

It is the right of every worker and official to disagree with Foster, but it is also the duty of every worker and official to defend workers' organized labor when persecuted by those employers and that government that have attacked and persecuted labor at every opportunity.

The November "Young Worker."

The November issue of the Young Worker, official organ of the Young Workers League of America, has just come off the press with a Gardland two-color cover which is in honor of the Russian Soviet Revolution's sixth year. This is consecrated in over four pages of letters from young workers on the job describing their jobs and conditions in the "Hell-holes of capitalism." Harry Gannes writes on the next step in the League's campaign to organize the young workers into the unions and Sidney Bergson exposes for the first time the complete capitalistic control of the radio industry—a thing which should interest every young worker who owns one. John Williamson shows that Armistice Day, which is celebrated next month, really means to the soldiers, most of whom were young workers. Numerous other articles and poems enliven the magazine and together with the cartoons make it one of the best in the country. It can be obtained for 15 cents by writing to the Young Workers League, Room 214, 1009 N. State, St., Chicago, Ill.

Free Speech Victories.

Two important victories in the nation-wide fight for freedom of speech at Brockton, Mass., and New Kensington, Pa., are reported by the American Civil Liberties Union. In both towns the efforts of local officials to suppress lawful gatherings of their citizens have been nullified through the pressure of public opinion and the intercession of the civil liberties body.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has donated $1,000,000 to the New York Zoological Society. This gift no doubt calls for religious services every Sunday for the monkeys and the elephants, in the New York Zoo, while the Henry Dubbs who work 12 hours per day, and seven days per week, stick right on the job coining new and increased oil profits for "John D."

ohnstone Explains Flip-Flop of Chicago Labor Officialdom

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

It seems a mere coincidence that the conservatives headed by Hutcheson and Olander, who for the past two years have been in open opposition to the Chicago Federation of Labor, by the way, did not, at the last minute, make a grand marshalling of the reactionary forces determined to place Hutcheson on the anti-Communist-but-the-radicals program of Gompers and Company.

It was a tragic and pitiful sight to see the old leaders, "Fitz" and Nockles, fade into the background and quietly relinquish the leadership to their old and consistent opponent, Oscar Nelson, the Democratic aldermanic vice-president of the Federation. How well I remember the admonition that "Fitz" administered to Nelson in one of their many controversies, "You are playing with fire, Brother Nelson, and if you get burned that is your look out." How well Nelson could remember this and say, "You have been playing with fire, Brother Fitzpatrick, and now it has consumed you."

The fight was over the report of the delegates to the Decatur convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, which declared the action of that gathering to be representative of the labor movement of Illinois. The acceptance of such a report would naturally carry with it the negation of the previous stand taken by the federation on amalgamation, the recognition of Soviet Russia, and the Labor Party. This of course was denied by those who spoke in favor of the recommendation. The discussion, however, soon brought out just what the adoption of the report carried with it.

The report proper was a brief account of what took place at Decatur, and its adoption would have been in order. It would not have in any way committed the federation to the policies adopted there. In view of this fact, the writer, in order to clear the issue, made an amendment to the motion that the report be adopted and the recommendations of delegates not concurred in. This amendment was immediately, without discussion, laid on the table. This showed plainly that it was not the report that was being considered, but the recommendations. Further, the recommendations were not concurred in by the convention, but were referred to the executive council of the federation, which is composed entirely of officials who were in the convention opposing the recommendations in question. This childish interpretation, we could see, not even Fitzpatrick himself.

The issue was amalgamation, the recognition of Soviet Russia and the Labor Party. None of these subjects were discussed, however, by those opposing them. The same old red herring was dragged across the trail. That the effectiveness of baiting the reds has not diminished is shown in the vote of 112 for and 26 against the recommendation.

Oscar Nelson and Victor Olander were the main spokesmen for this red herring brigade, consuming about two hours between them. Nelson spoke for over half an hour. If he said anything of any consequence it passed me by. Olander, however, was prepared for the occasion, and for over an hour very cleverly misrepresented everything that has touched upon. His speech was no doubt the result of careful study, if not rehearsal.

He accused Foster of every crime under the sun except bootlegging. Foster had stolen from Fitzpatrick the glory of having drawn up the plan upon which the Stockyard's Labor Council was organized. (The plan applied to the stockyards was the Railroad Federation Plan.) Foster had refused to say anything before the steel strike Senate Investigation Committee (altho there are forty pages of Foster's testimony in the records). Foster, altho a railway carman, had not spoken at any strike meetings (altho Foster really spoke to over 100 meetings of railway strikers from Chicago to the coast, invited to do so by international officials as well as the rank and file), and so on.

His attack on the T. U. E. L. and the Communists, was on the same order. They were responsible for the great loss in membership that the trade unions suffered during the strike. Gitlow and Lovestone were the ones who betrayed the steel strike by their "red" agitation. Foster was the author of the Communist resolution at the Federation convention that the Federation send out a call for a conference of the Communist Party, the Labor Party, the Socialist Party, the Workers' Party, the Railroad Labor Board, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the Conference for Progressive Political Action, the Committee of 48, the Women's Trade Union League, the Women's Committee for World Disarmament, the Committee on Militarism in Education, the Committee on Militarism in Industry, the Committee on Militarism in Literature, the Committee on Militarism in Motion Pictures, the Committee on Militarism in Religion, the Committee on Militarism in Universities, the Committee on Militarism in Women's Clubs, the Committee on Militarism in Young People's Societies, the Committee on Militarism in Public Schools, the Committee on Militarism in Boy Scouts, the Committee on Militarism in Girl Scouts, the Committee on Militarism in Camp Fire Girls, the Committee on Militarism in Boys' Clubs, the Committee on Militarism in Girls' Clubs, the Committee on Militarism in Boys' Brigades, the Committee on Militarism in Girls' Brigades

Are the American Workers Ripe for Communist Organization?

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

The question whether the American workers are ripe for organization in Communist movement, is a very important one in relation to the proposal by our Party for 10,000 new members.

It is in the United States, those conditions exist which demand the call of the workers' Communist Party, their own campaign for membership which alone can achieve results if it carry on the campaign with the proper spirit and initiative.

On the other hand, if the conditions in the United States are such that they are not ripe for Communist mass organization, then our campaign, no matter how aggressively made, will not bring the organizational results which we are seeking.

The Conditions for Communist Organization.

There are two fundamental conditions which make possible the organization of a Communist party. The first of these conditions is the development of capitalist industry to large scale collective production. So long as industry is still carried on in small factories by small groups of workers, the Communist ideology does not spring up among the workers. It is only when industry is consolidated and great industrial organizations employing thousands of men with the tasks of these men divided into machine-like operations comes into existence that the workers' ranks are prepared for the Communist ideology.

It is only when centralized state power is openly used against the workers in their struggle for better conditions that the workers are forced to the conclusion that the whole power of the capitalist state is against them. Then the workers' attention is turned toward the political struggle, the struggle for control of the state power.

During the five years since the end of the war, the workers of the United States have had many lessons to prove to them that the government of this country is a capitalist dictatorship, fighting the battles of the Ford autocracy. In the past we have had the idea, fostered by the ruling class, that in this country we have a government "of the people, for the people and by the people" and this has been the greatest obstacle to the organization of the workers as a class for the struggle for political power. So long as the workers believe the fairy tale about the government "of the people, etc.," they believe that their interests can be protected by the machinery of the existing government. This ideology can only be destroyed by the bitter experiences of the workers in dealing with the government.

That process has been under way in an intensive form since 1919.

In the great strikes of 1919, the miners' strike, the steel strike,—the government appeared openly on the side of the employer. In the open shop campaign of 1921-22, with its persecution of the workers in the garment workers, of the miners, of the railroad workers, there have been immeasurable lessons to the workers that they are not only fighting the employers, but the power of the capitalist state. In the present railroad strike, with all its power, the government has issued an injunction, the numerous governmental boards, such as the Railroad Board and the Coal Commission, have been used to break the strike, the state militia, police and soldiers of the regular army against the workers; all these strike steps, in the minds of the workers, the role of the government in the class struggle. Since 1918 the lesson of the part of the government in the class struggle has been driven home to the workers as never before in the history of the United States.

Our Task.

Since an examination of the fact shows that all the conditions exist which make possible the organization of a powerful Communist mass party, we may well ask: why the Workers Party has not increased in membership at a greater rate than it has during the last two years.

It is easy to find the answer to this question. It is in the attitude of the great body of our membership. They grew up in our party the viewpoint that a Communist party can only exist when its ranks the select few, and that we must use exceedingly great care in admitting members to our organization and as a consequence of this hardly any effort has been made to bring the workers, whom capitalism is preparing for Communism into membership, into the party organization.

It is our immediate task to remedy this condition. We must begin within the ranks of our party, with the members of our party. They must be made conscious of our opportunities and our responsibilities. Every one of our organizations must bring to every worker in its vicinity the message that the party needs him. Every worker who joins our party will be a full-fledged Communist at the time he joins. It is our task to see to it that there education after he joins the party.

The Membership Campaign.

All of the above however how favorable are the conditions for the growth of the Workers Party, if we can mobilize the party members of the organization for the membership campaign. Every member of our organization must throw himself into the work of bringing new members into the party, he must reach out among his shop mates, brother trade unionists, friends and acquaintances and draw those whom capitalism has prepared for Communist organization into the Communist Party.

A united effort of the whole party during the next three months will not only bring us to the ten thousand members we have set as our goal, but will increase our membership by a far greater figure.

Let us make use of our opportunities.

Let us take advantage of what capitalism has prepared for us.

Let us build a COMMUNIST MASS PARTY!

Salutsky Tries to Explain a Little

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Secretary Workers Party.

In the September number of the American Labor Monthly, J. B. Salutsky, former member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, tries to explain away the charges on which he was expelled from the Workers Party and in doing so makes some misstatement of facts which cannot be permitted to go unchallenged.

Salutsky was a delegate to the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action representing the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in that conference. He states in his article that his mandate as a delegate had been withdrawn but the fact remains that he had a delegates card and sat on the floor of the convention, to which only delegates were admitted.

On Monday afternoon of the first day of the conference when the Credentials Committee brought in its report, Keating, the editor of "Labor," made a vicious attack upon the Workers Party charging that it was a disruptive organization and was financed by the employers of the United States. This tirade against the Workers Party was made after he writer had risen in the convention to demand a report on the credentials of the Workers Party which had been submitted to the Credentials Committee and on which no action had been taken.

Altho Keating made a vicious and untruthful attack upon the Workers Party, Salutsky, a member of the Central Executive Committee of that party, sat silent. In his article he has to explain this by stating that the question of Workers Party credentials was a question for the Credentials Committee and that the whole business was off of order. This is by no means true but it is also true that nothing made his attack on Keating was answered by R. D. Kramer, of Minneapolis, a non-Workers Party member, and by Dennis Batt, of Detroit, a non-Workers Party member, while Salutsky, a member of the Central Executive Committee of the party, remained in his seat and did not say a word in defense of his organization.

Workers Party Before the Credentials Committee.

Salutsky's second alibi is that he did not support the Workers Party in the second day of the convention because the writer, as Executive Secretary of the Workers Party had stated before the Credentials Committee on Monday afternoon that the Workers Party would support the Conference for Progressive Political Action even if it continued the policy of supporting candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties in the primaries. Salutsky does not dare to say directly that such a statement was made but by inference he conveys the impression that some such statement was made before the Credential Committee. This is an out and out falsehood.

The question of the Republican and Democratic primaries and the supporting of candidates in those primaries was not raised at any time before the Credentials Committee. That I stated before the Credentials Committee when the question of disagreement between the principles of the Workers Party and the conference for Political Action was raised was "The Workers Party believes that a Labor Party will be organized in the United States. Even if this conference does not organize a Labor Party, the Workers Party will remain in the conference and continue its work for the Labor Party."

That this would have been the policy of the Workers Party had it been admitted has since been shown by the fact that it strongly urged the Farmer-Labor Party not to withdraw from the conference after the Labor Party was defeated at Cleveland. Salutsky's view of the tasks of a Communist party in the United States is that it must remain a small propaganda sect. This is not the view of the leadership of the Workers Party. The Workers Party is following the policy of maintaining contact with the present day struggles of the workers and if it had been admitted to the Cleveland conference it would have sat in that conference until it could have won a substantial portion of the delegates and organizations represented for the formation of a Labor Party and then it would have split that group away from the reactionaries who refused to organize the Labor Party.

That would not have meant that under any circumstances the Workers Party would have supported candidates in the Republican and Democratic primaries, and Salutsky knows that it would not have meant that. His raising of this issue is a weak attempt to find some excuse for his cowardly act in not defending the organization of which he was a member and which had honored him by making him a member of the Central Executive Committee.

The American Labor Monthly.

Altho Salutsky's conduct at Cleveland was universally condemned by the membership of the Workers Party, the Central Executive Committee of the party was ready to give him another opportunity to prove his right to membership in a Communist party. It offered him the solution of making a public statement that he would in the future support the party policies and submit to party discipline.

While this question was under discussion a second issue was raised by Salutsky becoming editor of and beginning the publication of an Independent political magazine, "The American Labor Monthly." This action was a direct violation of Communist discipline. The Central Executive Committee of the party tried to solve the problem on three different ways. 1. It offered the solution of the "American Labor Monthly" being turned over to the Workers Party for its disposition. 2. It offered the alternative of combining the "American Labor Monthly" with the "Liberator." And if neither of these two solutions could be carried thru because others were interested besides Salutsky it offered Salutsky the third alternative of severing his connection with the "American Labor Monthly."

It was because Salutsky tried to bargain and took no definite action that the matter dragged on for five months without any solution. The Central Executive Committee was finally convinced that there was no earnest desire on the part of Salutsky to remain a member of the Workers Party and rectify his previous errors and directed that he be expelled from the party. The record of the case shows the infinite patience exercised by the party executives before resorting to the last action. As far as Salutsky's trying to explain his action at Cleveland is concerned his record of the case only shows that he had no comprehension of what it means to be a Communist and a member of the Communist party.

Chicago Workers Party Forum.

The Forum conducted by the Workers Party every Sunday evening, Room 210, Capitol Bldg., 159 N. State St., is meeting with great success. Robert Minor, editor of the "Liberator," who opened the forum season, October 7, with a lecture on "who owns the United States," fulfilled the expectations of the large audience who eagerly listened to his masterly lecture.

J. Louis Engdahl, who was scheduled to speak on Sunday, Oct. 14, but was suddenly called to Cleveland, Ohio, was replaced by James P. Cannon, speaking on the subject as originally announced, "REVOLUTIONARY TRENDS IN THE LABOR MOVEMENT." Comrade Cannon analyzed the recent developments in the ranks of American labor, tracing the great rank and file demands for Amalgamation, a Labor Party, etc., pointing out the role of the Communists as leaders of these movements. Interesting discussion and questions followed.

This forum is being conducted every Sunday night thruout the winter season. From Pippet, labor press correspondent, will speak next Sunday, Oct. 21, on the "Winnipeg Convention." Bill Bridgeder, C. E. Ruthenberg, Carl Haessler and Ludwell Denny will be the speakers for the month of November.

Kennedy Is Telling Them.

"The Western Progressive Farmer," in its current issue, reports that John C. Kennedy is explaining the Chicago Federated Farmer-Labor Convention to crowds over the state (Washington), and "we predict that never again will the old parties or politicians fool the people as they did last year." Kennedy is a member of the executive committee of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

To All Units and Members of the Party

Comrades:—The Central Executive Committee of the Party after a thoro consideration decided to have an Industrial Registration of the entire Party membership twice a year, November was set aside as the month for the first registration. During this month every unit of the Party must elect its Industrial Organizer and forward his name and address to the National Office of the Party on special cards provided for this purpose. The new organizers are to be elected for a period of six months, until the next registration takes place. During the same month every member of the Party MUST register with the Industrial Organizers on special cards supplied for this purpose by the National Office of the Party. These cards remain in the Branch.

The Branch Industrial Organizer is to enter the secured data on blanks provided especially for that purpose. These blanks must be filled out and returned to the National Office not later than Nov. 30.

The reasons on the old registration were so negligible that it was considered advisable to discard them entirely and begin the work all over again. Every unit of the Party, every individual member must see to it that the registration is not made a failure this time. The National Office will from now on pay special attention to this work and no unit will be allowed to neglect it. No excuses for failure to carry out these instructions will be accepted by the Central Executive Committee.

The C. C. C. are to get from the delegates reports on progress of the registration regularly and spare no efforts to have the registration completed within the time limit. Failure on the part of the branches to complete their registration within the time limit will involve serious difficulties and unnecessary waste of time and expenses. The National Office will not allow a single unit to neglect this important work no matter what the cost may be.

Comrade Abram Jakirs has been appointed Assistant Executive Secretary and will be in charge of this work.

Comrades, do not compel the National Office to keep on reminding you of the importance of the Industrial Registration. Assure willingness to cooperate with the Central Executive Committee in its efforts to make the Party an efficient fighting body. Act upon this recommendation without delay. Fraternally yours,

G. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

TUEL Dance at Canton, Ohio.

All workers of Canton, Ohio, are invited to attend the Trade Union League dance, Saturday, October 27, at Polish Hall, 1726 Eleventh St., N. E. Comrade Max Lerner, of Cleveland, Ohio, will deliver a short talk on the activities of the Trade Union Educational League. All proceeds go to the national office of the league.

Mayor Dever, of Chicago, has a novel way of killing prohibition. He intends to make life so miserable for the prohibitionists who like their little nightly drink that they will join the Free Hootch League. Of course, Dever was speaking to a German audience when he made mean an awful lot. If there is anything a German hates more than near-beer it must be water.

Upton Sinclair, World Famous Author and Journalist, Endorses Campaign for "Daily Worker" in Chicago

If there is anyone in the United States competent to speak upon the need of a real, militant daily paper for the working class, it is that vivid personality called Upton Sinclair.

For two decades or more Upton Sinclair has been the foremost pioneer in waging war upon the iniquities of capitalism, particularly the capitalist press. The capitalist press drew blood from the young crusader many times, and by adverse comment upon Sinclair's life and work has no poisoned the minds of the American people that Sinclair's realistic and graphic stories of American working class life are more popular in Europe, where his books have been translated into all languages and circulated extensively, than in this country.

The tremendous resonance given internationally to Sinclair's dramatic exposure of life and labor in Chicago's stockyards in his book, "The Jungle"—which Sinclair published himself in 1906 after five leading publishers refused it—brought the author wide renown in spite of the silence or ridicule of the capitalist papers. "The Jungle" was filmed in 1914, but because of capitalist opposition, the picture has yet to be seen by the great mass of workers.

In recent years Sinclair has settled down at Pasadena, California, and produced an astonishing number of invaluable books, among which are "The Cry For Justice," an anthology of the literature of social protest; "King, Coal," "Jimmie Higgins," a story based upon the wonderful character given to the world by Ben Hanford; "The Profits of Religion," which is recommended by the fact that it has been boycotted by all literary reviewers; "100%, the Story of a Patriot," "The Goose Step," and—one of Sinclair's prize books, "The Brass Check," to which Sinclair says he had wished to add the sub-title, "A Study of the Whore of Journalism."

It is in "The Brass Check" that Sinclair exposes in convincing and comprehensive detail just how the capitalist press works to keep the masses ignorant and divided and powerless. Every worker should get "The Brass Check," read it and lend it to other workers. Above all, every worker should understand that, although Upton Sinclair is not a member of the Workers Party, the vigorous and enthusiastic manner in which he greets THE DAILY WORKER shows his earnest and broad sympathies with the purposes to which THE DAILY WORKER is dedicated and his a direct call upon all who believe in Upton Sinclair to follow his advice as given in the accompanying letter and "by all means work for the new daily in Chicago."

I cannot express my sentiments; they are inexpressible. The thing I want to see most of all in these United States is a newspaper of the calibre of the Russian Worker's movement depends upon that. So long as the workers read the newspapers of the capitalists, they will vote with the capitalists and think with them. In fact they really want to take sides at all. The Gold Hunters

Friday, Oct. 12, was a national holiday—especially for the banks—in these United States. It was Columbus Day. Just 431 years before, Christopher Columbus, of Genoa, Italy, working for King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, of Spain, discovered this western world.

In the wake of Columbus' first voyage came the gold-hunters of the old world. Cortez conquered Mexico, and Pizzaro visited the same fate on Peru—all for gold. The Spaniards and Portugese were having the monopoly on the gold hunting, in the 16th century, until Francis Drake came along and plundered their ships so successfully that Queen Elizabeth, of England knighted him with the title, "Sir".

But in spite of the fact that Europe has been very busy these last 400 years, trying to get all the gold possible out of North and South America, we find that the United States still retains the greater part of the world's gold supply. It is the richest nation on earth.

Yet the gold hunters still continue to come, as beggars, however, instead of conquerers. General Joseph Haller, the Mussolini of Poland, is here attending the American Legion convention at San Francisco. He is also calling on the big bankers for a handout in order to keep up the Polish threat against Soviet Russia: Count Apponyi, the agent of the Hungarian Mussolini, Horthy, is also here panhandling a loan for his Fascist government, that has sent thousands of workers to death, and other tens of thousands to prison to safeguard the Versailles Peace.

The basis of gold hunting is the desire to become rich, the hope of the few to fatten off the many. While Cortez, Pizzaro, Balboa, Drake and Raleigh are lauded as great discoverers, they were in reality mere adventurers seeking an easy way to accumulate wealth. Haller and Apponyi, with the finance experts of Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and other poverty stricken and bankrupt lands, come and go for the same reason. They want American gold to help perpetuate the capitalist system of rob and plunder in their own countries. They wish to keep the workers enslaved to the desires of the parasite few.

Yet on this Columbus Day, 1923, the world is nearer an end to gold hunting than ever before. The Russian Soviet Republic is building a social order that will in time provide enough, and more, for all within her domains, so there will be no desire to seek altered riches elsewhere. Western Europe, now starving and in misery, will be compelled to follow the Russian example or see the complete destruction of white civilization. Instead of hunting gold for their masters today, the exploited workers in the cities and on the farms are striving to achieve their own emancipation from this shining, yellow metal, thru the new classless social order—Communism.

From Education to Action

There is an important judicial campaign on in Chicago at the present time. Sitting judges with black anti-labor records appear on both the democratic and republican tickets. The bosses feel safe. Only those judges, according to the present outlook, will be elected who will issue injunctions to help break the strikes of Chicago's protesting workers.

It is interesting in this crisis confronting labor in the nation's second largest city, to study the report of a committee of Chicago labor officials, appointed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the misuse by the bosses' judges of the power to issue injunctions in labor disputes. The report is signed by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, heading a list of 16 labor officials, many of whom have been breaking into print these past few days with their attacks on the Workers Party and the Communists.

No one will disagree with the facts in the report. Everyone can endorse, with emphasis, the denunciation of the judicial lackeys of the circuit and superior courts. Here are loud sounding words, for instance:

"When an injunction judge, exercising the power which has the force of law, issues a proclamation, or so-called, restraining order, in obedience to which has the effect of restraining men from exercising their constitutional rights in a manner calculated to improve the conditions under which they live and work, he is endeavoring, either consciously or unconsciously, to tear the robes of liberty from the shoulders of the free men and women affected by his order and compelling them to accept the shameful garb of slaves."

And here is another high-power extract:

"Injunction judges have not only revived the arbitrary power of kings, but have retained for their own use even the very titles and terms originated by his royal majesty."

All of which spurs the reader of the report on to expect some definite program of action. But no! We are casually informed that the Illinois Federation of Labor, at its recent convention, "declared that the injunction problem is the paramount legislative issue in this state." The decision of this Gompers "committee of 17," headed by Fitzpatrick, is to support the Illinois Federation in its "campaign of education on this subject."

No mention is made of any effort to secure a united political front of Chicago's workers against the republican and democratic judicial candidates. Gompers could not urge such action, since he believed in the old policy. Disunited on the political field, the fight against the parties and the candidates of the bosses, whom he quit the Chicago conference of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Walker and Olander, the anti-Communist state labor leaders, are for the Wall Street parties, and against the labor party.

It is behind their false cry of "educate the workers" that these misleaders hide, and direct the fire streams of disunited labor. Education is a delusion if it cannot be followed up with a program of action. The logical step for the workers to take, after denouncing the robed tyrants of the employers, is to organize their power to sweep these court lackeys from power.

Gompers, Woll, Fitzpatrick and Olander, among others, have shown themselves good talkers this past year, especially against the Communists. But the workers will demand something more than talk. They will want action,—united political and industrial action against the bosses. They will be asking, in the days ahead, why these leaders do not follow up their attack on the injunction judges with an attempt to remove them from power. In that hour the misleaders will not be able to answer with fresh attacks on Communism. They will be forced to adopt the Communist program for the United Front or confess themselves traitors to the whole working class.

The Decreasing Wage

Wages will be coming down this winter. The American worker is facing another crisis in spite of the rosesta declarations of Samuel Gompers, at Portland, Oregon, in his personally conducted war against the Communists.

The Babson's Statistical Organization deals with figures. Its report for Oct. 9 shows that the summer's upward trend of wages has been checked as follows: September, 71 increases; August, 98, and 161 last June, more than double September's showing. On the other hand, while the summer has seen but few reductions in wages, "the first cuts are now beginning to appear," declares Babson's, continuing as follows:

"During the coming months we should expect to see the number of reductions tending to balance the increase. The net result probably will be a sidewise movement in the total average wage rates, with a weakening tendency as the winter goes on. Labor supply in almost every industry is adequate. Strikes are on the decline. In September only 62 strikes were reported, compared with 99 in August, 90 in July, and 145 in June."

Gompers' preparations for this storm ahead consists only of attacks on the progressives in the labor movement. Instead of building up the trade unions, thru organizing the unorganized, he tries to hide the fact that the Federation has lost one million members during the last two years. Instead of strengthening the ranks of labor thru amalgamation, he does everything to keep the workers divided. Instead of developing the labor party as a powerful weapon in the hands of the workers, he opposes every effort at political unity. Babson's statistics, coupled with the actions of the Portland Convention, should expose Gompers' sham pretentions to work for the best interests of labor.

And while wages will be tobogganing ever downwards, the workers will also realize, as indications now show, that the profit takers are increasing the cost of living.

The Immigration Problem

The new Congress, which does not seem to be able to get together until the regularly scheduled time for its opening, the first Monday in December, is due to give much attention to the problem of immigration. Gary, Rockefeller and the other billionaire corporation interests want a greater reservoir of labor to feed into the steel, oil, railroad, mining and other industries. They want, however, selective, rather than unrestricted immigration. The bosses want to pick out the kind of workers coming to this country.

The kind of bosses' propaganda that is being sent out to influence sentiment on this question is shown in a special bulletin issued by Babson's Statistical Organization. This bulletin deals especially with German immigration, pointing out that "the greatest single source of foreign labor supply probably will be Germany, between the present time and the end of the immigration year ending June 30."

"Internal conditions in Germany are rapidly approaching a complete economic and political breakdown," declares this bulletin, claiming that German workers are seeking to avoid this situation by rushing, in large numbers, to these shores. But it is argued that there are many objections to German labor. In spite of Socialist sabotage, the United Germany has won more power, since the overthrow of the Kaiser than labor has ever had in any country, except Russia. At least 85 per cent of the German Industrial workers are today members of unions, compared with 30 per cent before 1919. Nearly ten millions of workers in Germany, with a population of 50 millions, are organized, compared to a mere three millions in the United States, with more than double the population. The German worker, therefore, will make a poor strike breaker. The Gary and Rockefeller interests will, as a result, oppose immigration from Germany. But they will push their agreement with Mussolini for desirable Fascisti elements to be sent to this country. Gary will continue to rush his agents to Mexico, to the West Indies, to the Hawaiian Islands, to the Phillippines, to Japan, China and India for an increasing flow of labor to increase the ranks of unemployed.

The American Federation of Labor convention at Portland, Oregon, went on record against unrestricted immigration. The Gompers regime takes the stand that the monopoly of American labor on existing jobs here must not be broken. The solution of the immigration problem. Gompers cannot erect a Chinese wall high enough to prevent foreign-born workers landing here. Against Gompers' restriction policies and Gary's selective program, the workers must pit the international solidarity of labor. The workers' organizations in every country must handle with strong enough to dictate immigration to all other countries. Thru the knowledge of conditions everywhere, the workers will be able to combat union-smashing immigration policies proposed by Gary, Rockefeller and Colt, in the United States, and by their counterparts in foreign lands. Against the efforts of organized greed to crush union labor thru wholesale importation of foreign labor, the trade union program must be—develop the unity of the workers everywhere.

With the Children

By PETER BERG.

The Children's Movement in Chicago has gotten well under way, and promises to result in results in the near future. Immediately following the Second National Convention of the Young Workers League, a definite plans were drawn up for both phases of our work. Comrade Bill Esdon was placed at the head of the Children's Movement in America. With his very able assistance, Chicago has progressed to a marked degree since June of this year.

Different Aspects.

The movement in this city takes on two different aspects: 1. Working within already existing children's organizations; and, 2. Organizing Communist Children's Groups, our basic form of organization. Penetration of the former being for the purpose, eventually of turning Sunday schools, etc., into groups, organized on the basis of Y. W. C. I. decisions, if this is at all possible.

Within Children's Organizations.

Dealing with the first of these two phases, considerable progress can be reported. The United Workers' Sunday Schools are the center of our activities in this regard and at this time, as they are, to a large degree, dominated by the Workers Party, and, therefore, more susceptible to our penetration. The program committee of this organization, whose major membership is League workers, has formulated a program very much unlike any other hitherto put into practice in any Working Class Sunday School. The committee realized the necessity of scrapping old, dead and gone dogma, and of substituting for it definite, living issues of vital importance and interest to the Proletarian child. With this aim in view, the larger portion of the program now being put into effect in the Sunday Schools has a distinctly working class character.

Y. W. L. and W. P. Teachers.

To date there are ten Y. W. L. and two W. P. party members teaching in these schools and their number is gradually being increased. This is a step for further developing our tactics in the school.

Parents' Organizations.

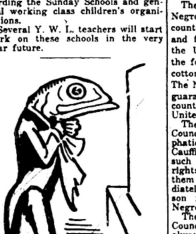
Tho the work goes on comparatively smoothly, there are obstacles, tho of minor importance, at this time. Parents' organizations in the children's movement are, as a rule, rather an impediment than a help, but we must admit that the United Workers' Sunday Schools Parents' organizations have been of help to us in our work, up to this time.

The latter, however, is usually hampered by these older comrades who have yet failed to grasp the essence and real meaning of the children's movement. "To teach our children class hatred, culture they will become working class fighters," is their idea and aim, and not to help the children right now and now to develop into real fighters in the cause, by assisting and guiding them in the class struggle which surrounds and engulfs them every hour of their young lives.

Miscellaneous Organizations.

Other organizations, such as "Future Blossom Sunday Schools," are also being brought under our attention gradually. The school mentioned, as such an outstanding "Working Class" nature that Jewish comrades cannot be used as teachers, as the parents would not allow their children to frequent these schools. The name "Future Blossom" gives a self-explanatory picture of the conceptions of these comrades regarding their schools and general working class children's organizations.

Several Y. W. L. teachers will start work on these schools in the very near future.



THE POOR FISH

The Machine Age

Mine Owners for Unity

Let the mine workers of the United States learn a lesson from the success of all the coal mine owners, union and non-union, in uniting their forces in the Bituminous Operators' Special Committee. The soft coal barons now have a united front over the whole country. Their dictatorship extends practically over the mining of the whole soft coal tonnage—500,000 000 tons.

The mine bosses have been solidifying their forces in sessions held at the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, while the mine international officials have been active, in Portland, Oregon, denouncing the militants in the labor movement. It was William Green, the miners' secretary-treasurer, who launched the attack on William F. Dunne, the Communist. Green was supported by Phil Murray, the miners' vice-president, and by Fred Moonen, of the struggling West Virginia coal miners.

Thus the miners' officials, linking up with Gompers' reactionary bureaucracy, are doing all in their power to weaken the organized labor movement by attacking its progressive elements, while the mine owners are doing all in their power to solidify their ranks in preparation for the expiration of the soft coal agreement in the spring. It is a tragic situation that should call for quick action by mine workers everywhere.

The soft coal barons were unanimous in denouncing "the monopolistic tendency of the United Mine Workers of America in branding the nation-wide strike as the principal deterrent to an uninterrupted supply of coal and condemning organized violence in the coal fields." This means that the coal barons will fight for a closed shop and union recognition, with the expiration of the present agreement, that they will try to divide the coal miners of the country thru district and local agreements, and that they will continue, thru their kept press, to charge the union miners with the crimes of their own thugs, mine guards and hired strike breakers.

The danger that confronts the miners' union at the present time calls for the greatest possible unity. Attacks by Frank Green, Murray and the press agent, Searles, on the progressives is treason to the miners' union and loyalty to the bosses. There no doubt where the rank and file of the miners' union stands. When it realizes the present situation to the full, it will be 100 per cent united front against the bosses and their allies. Lewis continues to choose, as he is doing now, to be an agent of the bosses, then the membership of the miners' union will know how to get along without him.

Pledge Aid in Defense of Negro Wor

The sinews, blood and tears of the Negro Workers helped to make this country what it is. For two hundred and fifty years, the Negro toiled in the United States, helping to clear the forests, build the roads, raise the cotton and lay the railroad tracks. The Negro is entitled to the rights as guaranteed to the people of this country by the constitution of the United States.

The Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of Western Pennsylvania emphatically condemns the act of Mayor Cauffiel, of Johnstown, in committing such an outrage against the civil rights of the Negroes by ordering them to get out of Johnstown immediately. The Mayor had no just reason for ordering out the resident Negroes of Johnstown.

The Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of Western Pennsylvania is always ready to defend, if necessary, all Negro workers in Western Pennsylvania who are persecuted and arrested in the exercise of their civil rights. The council makes no distinction as to race or creed.

All Negro organizations and individuals interested in the principle of free speech, press and assemblage will write to the following address for information regarding the work of this council. All Negro workers are requested to co-operate with the council so that our work in defending workers who dare to fight for their civil rights, irrespective of their color or creed may be more effective. Labor Defense and Free Speech Council of Western Pennsylvania, James St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Civil Liberty Outlook

A number of important court decisions of the principles of civil liberty will come up during the next few months. Ten men will face charges under the Anti-Sedition Act in Pennsylvania. Ernst Schleifer will again be tried in Connecticut for alleged seditious utterances at a meeting of strikers in New Haven, and the Bridgman (Communist, trials under the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism Law will be resumed. The increasingly arbitrary rulings of such men as Judge Bledsoe in Sacramento, Calif., are daily heightening the situation in that state now a crisis.

Disorder in the ranks of the bosses is noticeable in various states. Strike activities have been greatest principally Texas, Oklahoma and New Jersey. An attempt to establish "higher order" without masks, and with a more exclusive membership may be welcomed as a step to extinction for this essentially lawless and under-cover organization.

The renewed efforts to free the remaining 33 political prisoners, and appeals to the President has been made with California citizens taking the lead in demanding the release of the men convicted in Bisbee, who are still confined on a technicality.

Up with the Fight for the Emancipation of the German Worke

A warning note over the German situation has been sent out by the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions. This note tells clearly what the position is in Germany and what it means to workers everywhere. Every worker who reads our paper should study this note and awaken other workers to what is ahead. The issues it describes will soon be on us. We must be prepared.

Comrades.—The whole German working class is in position of the utmost peril. The Ruhr, the industrial heart of Germany, is occupied by the armies of French imperialism. They have prohibited the export of coal and iron from the Ruhr to unoccupied Germany. They are now preventing the entrance of money for the payment of the Ruhr workers' bill of wages. The Ruhr has become a powder magazine which the least spark may explode.

In unoccupied Germany the economic chaos grows ever greater. The capitalist refuse to pay taxes, the government issues ever more paper money to cover its deficits. The value of the mark falls each day. Prices rise while the cost of living goes up and up. The position of the proletariat becomes increasingly more intolerable, at Berlin.

At the same time organized capital begins its offensive against the workers. It threatens to close down the factories in protest against the new taxation. In Berlin the whole transway system is on the point of being closed down. The municipal undertakings are to be let to private capitalists who will make up the deficit on the undertaking by dismissing half the workers and cutting down the wages of the remainder.

The object of all these measures is to drive the workers to desperation and to provoke them to premature action so that they can be suppressed before their ranks are formed.

Meanwhile the organization of armed Fascist bands continues. At the given moment they will hurl themselves on the unarmed proletariat.

Comrades, the German proletariat has lived thru the revolution of 1918-1919. It knows from experience that democracy is nothing but the mask for capitalist dictatorship. It will neither allow itself to be provoked nor massacred. The workers are streaming into the Communist Party of Germany, which has become a great mass party.

The social democrats are receiving their deserts for the shameful assassination of Rosa Luxembourg, Karl Liebknecht, and Leo Jogiches, for the massacre of 20,000 armed workers, for all their other services to capitalism. The sharper grows the class struggle in Germany, the more rapidly proceeds the decomposition of social democracy.

The situation becomes more and more critical. All the signs indicate that Germany is on the way to revolution.

But the German proletariat has not only to face the armed forces of the bourgeoisie. At the moment when the latter attack it, it runs the risk of being isolated in the back by the Entente powers and their vassal states, France, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, will hurry their legions to intervene in Germany to bludgeon the workers' movement and to sign a pact with the German bourgeoisie. This danger is imminent. It may be also that British imperialism will attempt by a naval blockade and the policy of encirclement to drive the workers to surrender from hunger.

HANDS OFF WORKERS' GERMANY!

"Soviet diplomacy will in the present circumstances make every effort to impress on all whom it may affect the fact that the capitalist world must leave the question of Germany's future to the German masses themselves, and not attempt to cast a sword on the scales of history, as swords are not the exclusive possession of capitalist countries. They are also to be found in the hands of the proletarian State of Soviet Russia."

Comrades, workers of the whole world, we appeal to you to hold out a supporting hand to the German proletariat.

In mass meetings concentrate your attention to the situation in Germany, and collect funds for the support of the German strikers and locked-out workers, for revolutionary working-class press and organization.

Demonstrate in the streets with the slogans—

Peace with the German working class! Hands off Workers' Germany! Withdraw the armies from the Rhine land, the Saar, and the Ruhr!

Make the soldiers of France, Belgium, and Great Britain realize that they are only being used as the miserable tools of their exploiters in order as the executioners of the German proletariat!

To the revolutionary workers and [illegible] of France, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia falls the historic task of opposing an impassable barrier to their capitalists and the German proletariat. To them falls the task of making the international solidarity of labor a material support of the German proletariat.

Long live the international solidarity of labor!

Help the German proletariat in its struggle against the bourgeoisie!

Up with the fight for the emancipation of the German workers from the yoke of Entente and German capital!

Down with capitalist international against the German workers!

Long live the international working class solidarity!

Withdraw the armies from the Rhineland, the Saar, and the Ruhr!

Make the soldiers of France, Belgium, and Great Britain realize that they are only being used as the miserable tools of their exploiters in order as the executioners of the German proletariat!

Hands Off Workers' Germany!

MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA.

The hungry and starving workers of Germany are rising against their oppressors and exploiters. They are preparing for the struggle to establish in Germany the rule of the workers and farmers in place of the rule of the capitalists who starve and oppress them.

The hour of decisive struggle draws nearer daily. In Red Saxony and Thuringia the workers rule. The Berlin government of the capitalists and the Bavarian dictatorship of Ludendorf and his autocratic generals are moving to destroy these governments of the workers with the sword. The German working masses will not permit the White Guard generals, the Ludendorfs and Hindenburgs, to re-establish their rule over all Germany without a bitter struggle.

During the four years of Imperialist war the German workers served as cannon fodder for the autocrats who ruled them. When, in 1918, they overthrew the government of these autocrats, they were betrayed by the Yellow Socialist leaders and found victory snatched from their hands by the capitalists.

For nearly five years the German workers have paid the price of the Socialist betrayal. The Allies demanded their pound of flesh in the form of reparation. Germany was stripped of movable wealth to satisfy their demands. The capitalist government of Germany knew well how to shift the cost of paying reparation to France, England and Belgium to the shoulders of the workers.

The German capitalists have flourished and grown richer while the German workers slowly starved to death. Each time France has turned the thumb-screws to compel Germany to pay more, the capitalist government of Germany has forced down the standard of living of the workers.

Germany today is a financial wreck. The process of destruction of the capitalist system, let loose upon capitalism by the world war, is nearing completion in Germany.

The German workers cannot suffer any longer. They have reached the limit of endurance. They cannot pay—pay—PAY, in misery and suffering, in hunger and starvation, for the crimes of capitalism. Their only recourse is to resort to the mass strength of the workers to throw their capitalist rulers from their backs and to establish a Soviet republic in Germany.

When the workers and peasants of Russia established their Soviet government, the whole pack of imperialist capitalist nations made common cause to destroy it.

These same Allied imperialist nations, which for four years preached hatred of the Kaiser and his generals, will ally themselves with these generals, with the autocrats, with the capitalists of Germany, in an effort to destroy the workers' and peasants' rule in Germany.

For three years of the World War, the role of the United States was to furnish money and munitions to the Allies. Then tens of hundreds of thousands of American soldiers followed when the loans of the international bankers and the accounts of the munition makers were endangered. The United States entered "the war for democracy," "the war to end war," slogans which everybody now knows were lies.

When Soviet Germany arises and the allied imperialist nations move to destroy it, the United States will again become the banker and munition maker for Europe. And soon again will come the demand from the American capitalists that the American soldiers follow the money and munitions. The government of the bankers and munition makers—of the capitalists—in this country, will make common cause with the German generals against the German workers.

Only the mass opposition of the workers and farmers of this country will prevent the capitalists of the United States from sacrificing the lives of the workers and farmers to aid in preserving capitalism in Europe.

Now is the time for the workers and farmers to organise their strength to stop American capitalism from involving them in new wars.

Let the voices of the workers and farmers rise against a war of imperialist capitalist nations against the workers and peasants of Germany struggling to preserve themselves from the slow starvation which Capitalism has brought upon them.

STAND BY WORKERS' GERMANY!

The workers and farmers of the United States must speak now. They must voice their unalterable opposition to support, in any form, by the United States, of a war against workers' Germany.

Every workers' organization, every farmers' organization, must express itself in resolutions and demonstrations in opposition to intervention against workers' Germany.

On November 7th, the SIXTH ANNIVERSARY of the establishment of Soviet Russia, will be celebrated. The Workers Party of America has called mass meetings in all the large cities for this celebration. It calls upon the workers and farmers to join in these meetings and to rally around the slogans:

NO INTERVENTION IN GERMANY!
NO LOANS FOR WAR AGAINST THE GERMAN WORKERS!
NO MUNITIONS FOR USE AGAINST THE GERMAN WORKERS!
HANDS OFF WORKERS' GERMANY!

Gompers Regime in Rhode Island Shows Treachery

By H. M. WICKS.

(Special to "The Worker")

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The convention of the Rhode Island State Federation of Labor closed in this city with nothing accomplished on the way of solving the problems that confront the masses of labor in this domain of the textile octopus. Altho the smallest state, geographically, in the Union, Rhode Island has a population of 600,000, the immense majority the lowest paid slaves in the United States. Here discontent is widespread and in January, 1922, flared up in a spontaneous strike that swept the great industrial sections known as Pawtuxet and Blackstone Valleys. The rank and file of the workers were

A Challenge to the Lewis-Searles Machine

In the October 15th issue of the United Mine Workers Journal, there appears in an article defending the issuance of the infamous attack on the Communists by the United Mine Workers officials the following statement:

"There is still much more to be uncovered and learned about the work of these reds in this country, and the Miners Union believes that a thorough investigation of the matter should be undertaken by a Committee of the United States Senate. If the Senate will undertake such an inquiry and go to the bottom of the entire subject, the International Union of the United Mine Workers of America will place before the Senate Committee all of its information and data and co-operate in every way."

The Workers Party will welcome an investigation of the Communist movement in the United States by the Senate, the labor unions, or any other organization. It desires nothing more than that all the facts about Communism and the activities of the Communist organization in this country, and of the Workers Party, should be spread broadcast among the industrial workers and exploited farmers.

To tell the truth about Communism and the Workers Party to the working masses in this country even tho it be thru Senate investigation will show these working masses that there is not a single proposal nor a single policy of the Communists which is not in the interests of these working masses.

The Workers Party challenges the United Mine Workers' officials to go ahead with their proposed investigation. It is even willing that these officials use as a part of the governmental machine of the capitalists, which has proven itself the bitter enemy of the United Mine Workers, for this purpose.

Representatives of the Communists of the Workers Party, have faced the Capitalist court and stood unflinchingly for their principles. They are ready to face the capitalist Senate and state their principles to the working masses of this country.

Henry Ford--Friend of Labor

By HARRISON GEORGE.

Those among the Gompers famuly who, while bitterly opposing an independent political party for labor, laid the idea of Henry Ford for president in 1924, these may profit in wisdom from the experience of organized labor in St. Paul, Minn., where there is now weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

The Ford Motor Company is constructing a plant and a high dam in the Mississippi River at the Twin Cities. St. Paul labor and its spokesmen did all in their power to get the power rights for Ford as against the Northern States Power Company. The St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly, which fought for the Ford company now expresses "disappointment" that labor did not prevent the water power grant to Ford.

Why all this regret over "aiding a friend of labor"? It lies in this: The Ford Motor Company, after receiving the support of St. Paul labor, refuses to meet the requests of organized labor in the Twin Cities that all the construction work be paid the union scale and given union conditions. Labor did not dare, or even dream of asking a full recognition of the union and the closed shop from this "friend of labor." Labor went, hat in hand, to ask only that union wages and conditions might prevail on the jobs. The "friend of labor" refuses to consider the request and labor in the Twin Cities faces the prospect of itself undercutting the union scale or watch the mass of unemployed take the jobs and work nine or ten hours at less than union wages. Unemployment will drive the building trades of St. Paul to scab on themselves and—since the craft union rules will not permit non-residents joining the unions—the union men will be making the other workers scabs as well as scabbing themselves.

Business men who also helped get Ford to build in St. Paul, have been repaid to the tune of $70,000 and a clean-up on real estate speculation by the ones "in the know." Organized labor gets out of it some experience, from which it will doubtless learn very little, and a probable chance to vote for Henry Ford in 1924 because he is "a friend of labor."

Negro Workers' Open Forum.

Negro workers on Chicago's south side have established an open forum at 3201 S. Wabash Ave., for every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker," was last Sunday's speaker. An excellent program of speakers is being secured for the whole winter season. The talks are followed by an open discussion.

Chicago Workers Display Spirit in Defi to Reaction

Chicago's workers are not satisfied with the slipping backward of some of the officials, shown in their repudiation of amalgamation, the Labor Party and recognition of Soviet Russia, both at the December convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor, and at a recent meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor. The rank and file persists in maintaining its progressive stand.

This was shown in a letter sent the Chicago Federation of Labor meeting, Sunday, by Carmen's Union, Local No. 453, which William Z. Foster represents, protesting against the malicious attacks against Foster at the previous meeting. The union expressed its full confidence in Foster.

Four motions greeted the appearance of the letter as follows: to receive and file, to receive and enter in the minutes, to receive and make notation in the minutes and to table. The last motion cut off the debate and was carried by vote of 64 to 43, showing that the line-up that supported the reactionaries at the previous meeting is already dissolving.

The temper of the rank and file workers is also shown in resolutions adopted and forwarded to the Chicago Federation of Labor by Painters' Union, Local No. 275, as follows:

WHEREAS, The Illinois State Federation of Labor, meeting in Decatur, September 10th to 14th, voted against amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia and the organization of a labor party, and

WHEREAS, The Chicago Federation of Labor, at its meetings October 7th, voted on recommendation of its delegates to endorse the action of the Illinois Federation of Labor, thereby repudiating principles for which the Chicago Federation of Labor has stood for years, and

WHEREAS, This is a reactionary and backward step for the labor movement, and comes at a time when the trade unions are in dire need of more solidarity, then amalgamation of related crafts, thru coming us of the Russian revolution to the world and to the establishment of a powerful labor party, and such a repudiation is most harmful to the labor movement, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Local Union 275 of the Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America protests against the action of the Chicago Federation of Labor and declares itself emphatically in favor of amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia and a labor party, and be it further

RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Germany,--Field of the Decisive Battle

By JOHN PEPPER.

The following description of the German situation is a part of Comrade John Pepper's article, "The New Wave of World Revolution," which will appear in the November issue of "The Liberator."

The greatest and most important battle of the world revolution and world counter-revolution is now being fought out in Germany. The German working class is today the vanguard of the world proletariat. Beat the German capitalist class is today the prize-fighter of world capitalism. The victory of the German revolution means a whole series of new revolutionary movements in Poland, in Czecho-Slovakia, in hopeless Austria, in suppressed Hungary—it is the best guarantee for the definite victory of Soviet Russia. The victory of the German capitalists will mean the victory of military dictatorship throughout Europe, will mean a new invasion against Soviet Russia.

The German capitalists, the present ruling class, are losing more and more the leadership of the nation.

Capitalism, the Bankrupt Leader.

The German capitalists are not in a position to assure the continuity of production. Every week thousands of factories close down; unemployment is increasing at the average rate of 400,000 more workers per week losing employment. The inflation of paper money grows to astronomical figures. The dollar is now one, two, six, eight, ten billion marks. Credit has ceased to exist. Prices change with the rapidity and unreasonableness of the thoughts of a madman.

The capitalist class is no longer in a position to provide the most elementary needs of the masses. The workers, the petty bourgeois and intellectuals literally haven't anything to eat. Shopping for bread or potatoes has assumed in Germany the form of raids, robbery and hunger-riots.

The capitalist state power is in process of decomposition. Armed

THE AMERICAN LEGION.

Next week's issue of "The Worker" will contain a complete story of the gathering, just adjourned, of the American Legion, at San Francisco. The article is written by James H. This issue, therefore, in addition to its being our Soviet Anniversary Edition, should have a specially large circulation.

Foster Meeting in Newark, N. J., Stopped by Police

A meeting under auspices of the Labor Defense Council in Newark, N. J., with William Z. Foster as principle speaker, was stopped last night by the manager of Iroquois Hall, 262 Washington St., where it was to have taken place, the American Civil Liberties Union has been informed.

Altho the place of the gathering was prominently displayed in advertisements for several weeks, the hall keeper stated that it was engaged for something else and drove out the crowd which came to hear Foster. The Labor Defense Council charges that the hand of the local police is behind the action of the Iroquois Hall.

A local union offered a hall at 74 Market St. for the meeting when the situation became known, but the police interfered on the grounds that the hall did not measure up to fire regulations and that there was no permit.

Arthur Brisbane almost thinks as much of Lloyd George as he does of John D. Rockefeller. Perhaps Hearst has made some deal with the former concerning some mining properties in some colony of Britain provided the tricky Welshman comes back into power. Hearst was opposed to the recognition of Mexico until Obregon got fixed up, and Hearst was given an assurance that he was within Mexican law in robbing his peons.

Manley Shows Federated Party Making Progress

By, JOSEPH MANLEY.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party is steadily and surely forging ahead. It has recently organized two new branches, one in Allegheny County, Pa., and the other in Essex County, New Jersey. Tho barely in its infancy it is acquiring an international reputation. Its Vice-Chairman, W. H. Green, a well known figure amongst the progressive farmers of Nebraska, is in Moscow attending the first world congress of farmers. He has been elected to the Presidium, the governing body of the first farmers' international.

The Allegheny County Branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is located in Pittsburgh the home of the steel trust and headquarters of the Lewis machine. It is here that Philip Murray, Vice-President of the U. M. W. of A. won his spurs as a politician in the circles of the labor movement presided over by Al. Hamilton, millionaire mine owner.

The Allegheny County Branch has affiliated with it local unions of bakers, machinists, clothing workers, steel workers, miners, independent workmen's circle, Workers Party and other elements. The branch is holding regular meetings and is preparing an aggressive campaign for the affiliation of workers' organizations in this most important industrial section the steel heart of America.

The Branch in Essex County, N. J., includes the great city of Newark with its tremendous manufactures, large working class population. Many unions and workers' organizations are affiliated with it and is entering the coming elections with real workers running for state senator, assemblymen, sheriff coroner and freeholder.

W. H. Green, who has just been elected to the executive of the first world farmers' international is well known in the state of Nebraska. He is the chairman of the Nebraska Progressive Party, an organization of typical western working farmers and city workers. Green is a good speaker and on his return will go into the farmers of the great West the new message of their brothers thruout the world. This message will be of particular significance to the American farmers as it will represent a world point of view in handling the many complicated problems of the American farmer.

This world point of view and pro-

(Special to "The Worker")

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Christian Rakovsky, the leader of the Ukrainian workers and peasants through revolution, civil war, and famine, and now the envoy of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, has arrived in London. The accusations made against him have been proved to be the usual pictures of lies and forgeries.

Christian Rakovsky was born at Kotel, a small town in the Dobrudja, now Roumanian territory, but then belonging to Bulgaria. He left Bulgaria early, having already as a schoolboy incurred punishment for translating a work of Engels, and studied in various universities in Switzerland, Germany, and France. He came during this period into contact with Plekanoff, Axelrod, and Vera Zasulitch, the Leaders of Russian Social Democracy.

From 1900 on Rakovsky gave his whole energies engineering the labor movement in Roumania. He was repeatedly imprisoned and driven from the country, but finally in 1907, a rising of the whole of the organized labor compelled the government to come to terms and to release him.

Rakovsky's connection with the Ukraine began with his reception of the Ukrainian crew of the Russian battleship "Potemkin," who mutined in 1905 and were compelled to take refuge in Roumania. His name became a household word thruout the Ukraine.

With Lenin and Trotsky he was among those chiefly responsible for calling the International Socialist Conference at Zimmerwald in 1915. He was again imprisoned in Roumania for his propaganda against the war, but was released by Russian soldiers when the Russian revolution broke out in March 1917. He at once went to Odessa and began a "stop the war" campaign. This was, however, stopped by the Kerensky government. After the outbreak of the November revolution, he was found at the head of the fight against counter-revolution both in Russia and in the Ukraine. In 1919 he became President of the Council of People's Commissaries in the newly-founded Ukrainian Soviet Republic.

In this office he proved his worth both as a statesman and as an economist. He himself says that the bulk of his energy has been devoted to the task of feeding the population of an area repeatedly devastated by civil war and invasion, and then stricken by famine and disease, and to the restoration of its agriculture and industry. At the same time, he was one of the most prominent figures at the Genoa Conference, and later was sent to Lausanne. It was his success, these posts that marked him out for the post of representative in London in succession to Krassin.

N.D. Non-Partisan League Helpless as Farmers Face Woes

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

(Special to "The Worker.")

BISMARCK, N. D.—"Practical politics" seemed to rule at the recent convention of the North Dakota Non-Partisan League here. Two hundred and thirty delegates attended, a large proportion of whom were actual working farmers, many more anxious to subscribe to a real program, but were prevented from doing so by the factional fights and the lack of real leadership all of which indicates the disintegration of the Non-Partisan League.

This convention accomplished nothing for the working farmers of North Dakota. It had an opportunity to follow the lead of other states by launching a Farmer-Labor Party, but the "practical" politicians prevented this, for they say: "We are the Republican Party of North Dakota."

Before Dan A. Fargo, several trade union political clubs attempted to form a provisional Farmer-Labor Party, this organization had delegates in the Bismarck Non-Partisan League convention, they were prevailed on to drop the word "Farmer" and simply call themselves the Labor Party.

Some facts brought out in this convention were that 18,000 farmers in the state are leaving the land, bankrupt and are moving to the cities where they will compete with the poor farmers. Last year's wheat crop of North Dakota was 123 million bushels and this year it will only be about 50 million. Thirty six farmers and their families left a single community in North Dakota after driving their horses and cattle in front of the bank of a small town, selling the bankers to take them and feed them as the burden was too great for them. The people of the state mostly farmers are between 60 or 80 millions of dollars in arrears in payment of their taxes. Prices of farm products are much below the cost of production. The mention of these facts caused a lively discussion and debate but little of a constructive nature was proposed by the leaders of the League.

Alfred Knutson, Secretary of the United Farmers' Educational League, proposed a program which called for the formation of "a political party representing the interests of the farmers and workers." This was defeated.

The question of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party did not come before the convention. Many of its supporters were in this gathering. It was they who were most militant in the demand for a genuine state Farmer-Labor Party. It was they who pointed out the dangers of playing the old "non-partisan" game and of the foolishness of trying to solve problems growing out of a national condition on a state basis.

The next convention to be held in February will be looked forward to, by that time the shakeout in the real condition of the farmers will be even more and the sentiment for a state party of the rank and file of the farmers and workers of North Dakota will be greater. In the meantime the United Farmers' Educational League will carry on a vigorous organizational and educational campaign. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will cooperate so that the coming convention will witness a much more militant attempt to organize a North Dakota Farmer-Labor Party.

Engdahl to Speak at Chicago YWL

With the launance of the "Daily Worker" the Young Workers League of Chicago will be faced with new ways and means of reaching the working youth of Chicago.

In order that the Chicago membership of the Young Workers League may be familiarized with their coming tasks, the directors of the various departments that make up the city executive committee will report on past and future activities.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker" will point out the numerous events in the labor movement and its effect upon the Young Workers League.

This meeting has been called for the fifth Monday, Oct. 29, inasmuch as this is the best evening for such meeting since there are no other functions for YWL members on that night. From Palmer to Gompers

By JOHN KEPPEN

The Red Scare of 1919-20 is over. No one seems to be afraid of it. No one seems to be afraid of the 250,000 labor leaders who draw their salaries for nothing. Of course, they do not fight against the capitalists, but at least they work hard fighting against the Communists. Indeed the Communists have no charge in trade unions; but at least they are exerting themselves to the utmost to ruin the Communists.

Red-hunting has become the favorite sport of the trade union bureaucrats. And really no one blames them if they want a little exercise for their bodies, which have grown flabby during the years of office work at their desks.

Gompers has become the successor to Palmer. The Attorney General of Wilson's cabinet tried to destroy the Communist movement in the United States by means of persecution. His weapons were wholesale deportation and shameless and unscrupulous terrorization. He had such a great ultimate success that Gompers is forced to start all over again the persecution of the Communists. He cannot deport the Communists, therefore, wants to expel them. He cannot take away their citizenship papers, but he threatens to take away the charters. He cannot employ detectives, but he employs labor spies.

It is a long way from Palmer to Gompers. "There lies a good bit of political and social history between the two persecutions." The persecution by Palmer could not indeed exterminate the Communist party, but it was able to drive them underground. What will be the result of the persecution by Gompers? Will the bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor the power or possibility to drive the Communists from the labor movement?

From the "Outside" to "Boring from Within."

In order to be able to give a clear answer to this question we must examine the conditions of the period of Palmer and those of the period of Gompers. The chief source of the old persecution by Palmer was the weakness of the Communist movement. The chief source of the new persecution by Gompers is on the contrary the tremendous growth and strengthening of the Communist movement.

At the time of the old persecution by Palmer the Communists were a small, insignificant sect with a great world-historical idea, but with almost no following in the labor movement. Now, the new persecution by Gompers reveals an entirely different picture. The Communist Party, the Workers Party, is not as yet a mass party, but is on the way to becoming the party of the masses. It has not as yet the masses inside of the party-organization, but it does have its party members inside of the masses.

At the time of the old persecution [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] and

Five Years Have Passed

Leninism is the highest expression of revolutionary Marxism in the epoch of the direct struggle for power on the part of the working class. Leninism is accomplished when it is proved by workers and leaders of the working class throughout the world. Hitherto Czech Communism will be the powerful torch which lights the way for the further solution of the problems of the world proletarian revolution. Czech communism is the world proletariat which is destined to be the grave digger of the capitalistic world order.

We do not know of any other leader of the people, in the whole history of the world, whose name has become so dear to the masses of the people so near to their hearts, so closely bound up with them, as the name of our Comrade Lenin. The memory of Comrade Lenin's death has not yet been accomplished by the restless and anxious expectation of millions of workers, not only in Russia, but all over the world. The improvement which has taken place in Comrade Lenin's health during the last few days has called forth profound and genuine joy thruout the world. It is high time that the captain was once more at the helm.

Five years have passed since the treacherous deed was committed, since an attempt was made upon his life. During these years the idea of Leninism has borne rich fruits in proletarian Europe, and has attained its culmination in the mighty movement of the Communist proletariat of Russia. Five years more, and the seeds scattered by the great sower will spring up thruout the entire East; that East where hundreds of millions of human beings live lives of unspeakable misery, and where the fate of the proletarian world revolution will be finally decided.

Today all the love of millions and millions of proletarians is given to Vladimir Ilitch Lenin, the spirit of proletarian world revolution.

Ignorance and Treachery of Gompers Regime Shown at R. I. Convention

anxious for effective organization, but the leadership of labor in this state was so ossified, so wedded to its reactionary past, that it was unable to consolidate the forces of this spontaneous movement into definite organization. As the result of this failure there is today no organization worth mentioning among the textile slaves.

When one looks at the delegates to the Rhode Island Federation of Labor convention and listens to the puerile and insipid speeches from the so-called labor leaders of the state one almost despairs of the future of labor in this section. It is certain that the present leadership of labor here has neither the will nor the intelligence to organize the exploited masses in these dismal valleys.

The two-day convention was consumed in futile talk that for the most part was directed toward convincing the capitalist class and the old party politicians that the labor leaders of Rhode Island could be trusted to play the scullions to the employers on all occasions.

Repudiate Labor Party.

The calibre of the delegation was revealed when the resolutions committee reported unfavorably on a resolution introduced by Delegate W. J. Smith, of the Painters' Union, in favor of a political party of labor. The chairman of the resolutions committee was one John H. Powers, who represented the Loom Fixers' Union, and who is a state senator, elected on the Republican ticket. In his report on the resolution he declared that in his opinion "no explanation of the action of the committee is necessary."

Delegate Smith took the floor and defended his motion and appealed for a state labor party under control of the Federation of Labor. His remarks were received with applause from the delegates. Then Powers took the floor and launched into a childish attack upon the resolution, accusing Smith of being "one of them horers from within." An individual with a receding forehead and a raucous voice, Powers proceeded with his crude, ungrammatical attack upon radicals in general and screeched like he was holding a political office and that he always defended labor. He was followed by another labor politician, one Costigan, who is a member of the state legislature—also an illiterate blatherskite—who harrangued the delegates about the inherent superior virtues and the efficacy of the policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies" and wound up with a hurling defiance at the "borers from within." Both of these creatures are so-called 100 per cent Americans—unable to speak the English language and not being able to speak any other language, they are typical of the "American" leadership of labor in this section—ignorant, vicious, blatant, they use their position in the labor movement as spring boards to join the ranks of the capitalistic class political parties. For years it has been notorious that the State Federation of Labor has been a hand maid of the Republican machine in this state. Naturally the proposal to create an independent political party of labor draws fire from the beneficiaries of this spoils system, Labor fakirs are desperately on the lass ditch for their graft in the old parties, and for a time Sunday the whole crew of hard headed, labor fakirs and gangsters were on the defensive. Thru a campaign of personal terrorism among the delegates and support of the resolutions committee was sustained.

The resolution in favor of recognition of Russia was also defeated in the same manner. This resolution was introduced by Delegate Slavin, of Machinists' Union No. 119 of Newport, R. I.

Organize the Unorganized.

Every reactionary on the floor loudly proclaimed that nothing sponsored by red "borers from within would get through the convention. However, this same resolutions committee reported favorably a resolution to organize the unorganized and it was passed without debate. The moron, the avowedly never head of the Workers Party has sponsored this campaign to organize the unorganized, while every labor faker has fought against that proposition.

It is clear that nothing will be done by the State Federation to enforce the resolution, as the labor fakirs of this state dare not jeopardize their political jobs by any real attempt to organize the textile slaves. There is a very considerable sentiment among the union conditions in the textile mill asere and the old party activities of the Democratic and Republican class masquerading as leaders of labor. The textile mill owners finance the state political machine of the Republican Party and also the Democratic Party and they will not permit these political machines to grant favors to labor leaders who really make an effort to organize their slaves. These labor leaders understand this perfectly well, so they merely pay lip service to textile organization, but never take any steps that will produce results. Powers belongs to the loom fixers' organization, a weakling that never did function as a union, while Costigan belongs to the weavers'. Both of these organizations are craft unions absolutely without power and are only tolerated by the employers because the so-called leaders are bound to them thru ties in the old parties.

The Rhode Island State Federation of Labor has a total affiliated membership of less than 13,000, out of thirteen serious mass of labor. These include the skilled trades, such as printing, building trades, etc. These trades, enjoying fair conditions in other parts of the country, are fighting a losing struggle for their existence in this city and state. Their leadership is of the same low level as that of the textile unions.

Militants Gaining.

But in spite of the depressing reaction and dark outlook for labor in this section there is a small, militant element at work that is gradually gaining in strength. There is a fairly militant sentiment thruout the textile industry and it is the task of this militant nucleus to crystallize that sentiment into organization. With proper direction victory over the reaction here ought to be easy, as there is not one man of ability in the whole crew. The militants capable of putting up a fight at this state convention could have routed the whole machine. Powers was the leader of the reaction, and altho he beat the air with his fists in denunciation of the "reds," if there had been a genuine red in the convention who could fight, the reaction would have been dismayingly routed. There was a large percentage of business agents and political adventurers, willing to sell labor to the highest bidder, but there was also a large representation of the rank and file—confused, baffled by the incessant blundering of the reaction—that could have been swept into a fight against the politicians.

Before another convention rolls around the militants should conduct an intensive campaign against the reaction and use pressure to defeat them thus clearing the movement of its barnacles so that it can proceed to the organization of the seething masses of workers who vegetate in unutterable misery in this state.

Young Workers Are on the Job in the Rhode Island Party

By H. M. WICKS.

(Special to THE WORKER)

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The Young Workers League in this city is rapidly developing into a dynamic force in the labor movement. It is doing fine things. At the last meeting held in this city on Sunday night they initiated much new members. They enjoyed the preliminary work of arranging and advertising the meeting in order to insure a good attendance, but they actively participated in the meeting, opening it with songs and creating enthusiasm from the start.

The meeting was successful, there being four new members and one of the Workers Party from the ranks of the former Socialists, Socialist Laborites and I. W. W.'s in this section. Many union members were present, some of them delegates to the State Federation of Labor, which just closed in a nearby hall.

The Young Workers do not confine their activity to singing songs and arranging meetings. They also fight in the ranks of labor. Some of the most active were leaders in the great textile revolts of last year—one of them being the leader of the famous "Iron Battalion" that marched from mill to mill through two large valleys, carrying the message of solidarity to the wage slaves and rallying them to the struggle against the despotism of the mill owners.

One of the delegates to the State Federation of Labor who attended the meeting remarked that there was a vast contrast between the old, staid, ignorant reactionaries who imagine they control the labor movement of the state, and the young, aggressive, intelligent militants who helped in the Workers Party meeting. He said he wished the reactionaries could have seen the determination of the Young Workers as they sang the Red Flag and the International and participated in other features of the meeting.

Indeed, the two meetings—that of the Federation of Labor and that of the Workers Party—were symbolic. One represents the dead past with its forty years' betrayal of the working class while the other represents the living, vibrant present in the struggle against reaction and also heralds the victorious future of labor.

Red Apples

A Look at the October Liberator.

As brilliant as the leaves of the autumn forest, the new number of the Liberator magazine flashes from the news stand for the month of October. There has been something about that "red" magazine that gives it a sway over the imagination, ever since the old days when Max Eastman and Floyd Dell, with a bunch of young and somewhat wild artists started the first Liberator under the name of "The Masses." The queer thing about the Liberator is its power to stir the dramatic instinct in everything it touches and to flash out a picture of it in a way that captures the eye and the imagination.

It is interesting to notice that the Liberator has brought forward to the public more than one genuine poet of poetry, of pictures and of short stories than have ever been introduced by any other modern, magazine of publication. This month, for instance, appears for the first time in the Liberator a young artist-worker, a plain working man engaged daily in his trade of painting signboards to instruct the public to "Chew Star Tobacco," and to "Wear Arrow Collars." The man is Fred Ellis, and he shows here in a full double-page cartoon which marks him immediately as one of the ablest cartoonists in America. The subtle delicacy of drawing and the romantic atmosphere in his cartoon of Sam Gompers marching to Portland in an "Unpowered Wagon" loaded with red paint and with signs reading "Damn Russia." "Damn the Labor Party," and "Damn Amalgamation," puts Ellis high among the best of the traditionally good artists that has always found the Liberator their heart's outlet.

George Sterling is only one of the brilliant American poets that appears again and he does it with a verse called "Paradox" that touches the subject and mind. With striking simplicity, J. Louis Engdahl, who was once the editor of the famous old "Chicago Daily Socialist," tells of the real romance that lay behind that audacious experiment, the first time that widespread interest was aroused in the old "Daily Socialist," how it lived vividly, even before the first few days the big and great thing in Chicago, and then how it died, and why. The same peculiar flash of illumination is thrown on the Labor Party movement by John Pepper, a writer whose original sketches always startle the reader. Harrison George, a famous member of the I. W. W., tells a story from Spain that is a gem of humor, and we think it is for the first time told —of how Ricardo Flores Magon, the famous Mexican anarchist, came to his death in that hideous dungeon; and we'll say that Monte Cristo has nothing on it for interest.

But the pictures, after all, are the first things that strikes you. Art Young takes a fall out of J. P. Morgan, the "King of the United States," with a sketch from life of that supreme billionaire, and a humorous biography, Maurice Becker, famous cartoonist of the old "Masses," shines with a very amusing cartoon taking off John Lewis's recent "exposure" of the Communists.

And all of this fruit of art and literature appears in a whimsical cover designed by Lydia Gibson—a drawing of fantastic peddler of Red Apples. Red apples they are.

"What Do You Mean—Free Speech?"

By HARRISON GEORGE.

To ask a fellow who was born and bred in 1917, to write something on free speech for Americans! The very idea! But in reviewing the little pamphlet, "What Do You Mean—Free Speech?" issued by the Civil Liberties Union, 100 Fifth Ave., New York City, I find some of the most convincing and readable arguments to kill off that provincial intolerance which pervades American life.

"The courts and laws being enacted by dominant classes increase the threat to labor is real, as we have seen in the cases of "syndicalist laws" in Michigan and California." But public opinion, as the pamphlet concedes, "have gotten the habit of interfering with speakers they don't like." Are we in favor of these public officials to prosecute themselves?

"The cry of free speech," says the Civil Liberties Union, "is raised in most conflicts between employers and employees." Correct, but not by the employers. They have all the "free speech" they need under the above noted custom of public officials supine to any employer "as they don't live." Thus the only real basis for law—general custom—is against the formal and legitimate rights of the workers.

So, the Civil Liberties Union in this excellent little treatise answers its own question, its own postulate that free speech "is the one means of securing their interests (the conservatives) from ultimate violent attack," by adding that, "But the conservatives don't want change by any method, violent or peaceful. So they oppose all radicalism by repression. All through history they have always behaved true to that form.' Why should a Communig say any more!

Chicago Daily Campaign Activities

By GUS SCHULENBERG.

The Daily Worker Campaign in Chicago is not looked upon as a mere money raising proposition. The results of this campaign, as well as of any other campaigns, which the Party has carried on during the past two years or which it is carrying on at the present time, must be judged in the light of its effect in consolidating our organization and increasing our influence among the masses of city workers and working farmers in this country.

Can this be done? While the Party must and will raise the $100,000 required to establish the first Communist Daily in the English language in this country, it cannot and must not neglect its other campaigns. In endeavoring to raise this sum, we are merely putting on an extra effort. And while we are doing so we are, at the same time, furthering our other campaigns. In getting subscriptions for shares or donations for the campaign, we further the membership drive, the industrial campaign, and all the others. With the establishment of the "Daily," the Party will have attained its greatest accomplishment thus far. This will make possible still greater attainments, an intensification of our propaganda, a consolidation of the Communist movement, not possible without an English Daily.

With various other campaigns partly under way in Chicago, when the campaign for the Daily Worker started (among others the campaigns of various language papers), the Daily Worker was a little slow in starting. Chicago has now consolidated its forces and the language units are functioning at high speed in the Communist Daily is the supreme need of the hour. Past campaigns have shown Chicago in the forefront and while its Party membership is but 60 per cent of that of New York City and with a smaller English speaking membership, it nevertheless bids fair to not only equal its share now but exceed its allottment assigned by the National Campaign Committee.

With a great drive and membership meetings of the language units between Oct. 24th and Nov. 6th, it will justify the confidence placed in it by the establishment of the "Daily" in the city of Chicago.

The English branches are ahead in the subscriptions for shares thus far. The North Side English has turned in $145.00 with the North West Eng-

Shortell Is Freed After Four Years In San Quentin

The Native Sons of the Golden West have many times marred the fair lustre of their highly burnished escutcheon, and the fact they would permit of such barbaric treatment to a free-born American citizen as was accorded to J. A. Shortell, the writer of the following brief tale, is not altogether unbelievable.

By A. J. SHORTELL.

To be blinded by red pepper; to have one's entire lower teeth knocked out in the space of a trice, while ostensibly under the protection of the Oakland police department, while speaking under a permit at Tenth Street and Broadway, Oakland, Calif., in the fall of 1920; to be thrown in Oakland's majestic city prison on a charge of Criminal Syndicalism, and to be sentenced-still-blind to San Quentin prison for a period of five years, would read more like a characteristic experience in Russia, under the old Czaristic regime than that of one under the standard of our vaunted "Old Glory."

All of this happened to me merely because—with many others—I tried to tell the good people the truth about Tom Mooney, Warren Billings and Mooney, now languishing in San Quentin prison, wrongfully condemned to life sentence there.

That the thumbscrew and jibbet are not now in use in California is not the fault of the capitalist authorities there. Nay, verily, they are not used there because there are those living within the state's far boundaries who dare to turn the searchlight of Truth upon the fawning scoundrels; the panderers to capitalistic favor, who spend sleepless nights inventing some new form of devilishness to tickle the vanity of those unholy masters whose coffers are stuffed and bulging to the bursting point from the life's blood of the worker.

I remained totally blind from the effects of the red pepper nearly four months after my entrance into the San Quentin prison, after which I was introduced to the June mill, where no fresh air ever enters; where many contract tuberculosis and die from the flying particles which fill the mill.

Later I was transferred to the kitchen, where, with others, I helped peel daily so many barrels of potatoes—the piece de resistance in Quentin's menu. I was later pedogogue in the jute school, where I had more than 100 pupils ranging from 17 to 70 years in ages. I left the prison in August, having spent three years and seven months within the serried ranks of those whom the masters' standing system have converted into unassimilated floatsam. The tale is told.

Plan Tour for Polish Speaker.

The Bureau for the Polish Section, Workers Party, is arranging a speaking tour for two comrades well known in the revolutionary movement. They will cover the following territories: New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Kansas, West Virginia, Delaware and Maryland. All comrades having connections with Polish workers in localities of the above mentioned states are urged to assist the Polish bureau to make this tour a success by arranging meetings in places where there are no Polish branches of the party. More information can be secured in this matter from Polish Section, Workers Party, 1009 N. State St., Room 214, Chicago, Ill. The tour in the Eastern states, including Pennsylvania, begins Oct. 18. The Mid-Western tour begins Nov. 1.

ussia Prepares to Help Workers' Rule in Germany

An Associated Press dispatch from Moscow, dated Oct. 17, that was published in full in the New York Times, at received very little space in the columns of the kept press, is republished here because of the many interesting facts it contains for all workers and farmers in this country.

* * * *

Soviet Russia today called up the ree military classes of 1898, 1899 d 1900 for territorial army training. Simultaneously there appeared the official newspaper, Izvestia, a striking cartoon depicting a determined Red soldier watching the Polish border, with the caption: "They are ridding it to pass the frontier of patience."

The calling up of the territorials is line with the long contemplated litia training plan and probably has particular significance, but it is rious from declarations made on all des that the Moscow government, hile seeking to avoid participa ion the German struggle, nevertheless taking no chances that it will be prepared for eventualities.

The so-called "White Terror" in land, where Communists are apparently suspected of causing the astrous explosion in one of the army forts, occupies a prominent ace in the newspaper, and the efects of "the German reactionaries to ush the budding workers' governments in Saxony and Thuringia" are occupying the close attention of the Communists here.

G. S. Zinoviev, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Third International, said in a speech to the peasants' International that Premier nin was greatly interested in the ference which was likely to be a cornerstone of history. Meanwhile, d Zinoviev, the present slogan ould be "Down with imperialistic and long live the great proletarian German revolution, which approaches us and which, like a refresh- storm, will pass over decayed rope and discharge the atmosphere."

The newspaper Laboring Moscow splays a symposium of the views of rious leaders of the Third International on the question of "the German revolution." One of those quoted is Ignati Amter, representative of the Workers Party of America, who predicts that a revolution in Germany will occur in the near future and cannot be avoided.

"The capitalist governments of Europe," Amter is quoted as saying, certainly will attempt to intervene. ance, England and Italy will be the st to stab the revolution in the ck, while America will play the me role as she did in the great war, plying the imperialists with unlimited credit and ammunition, keeping her army in reserve and entering when the spoils of war are in ght.

"It is our duty to see that the merican workers do not allow any ips to leave American ports laden th ammunition destined for the pression of the German revolution. We shall strive to induce the merican workers to refuse to manufacture munitions for use against the rman proletariat."

Others, representative of France, gland, Italy, Switzerland and Poland, indicate a similar view, all expressing the hope that the proletariat their countries will be able to help e Germans when the time comes.

Efforts of the Communists to gain e support of peasants thruout the orld, which hitherto have been more less spasmodic and unorganized, are now to be directed with the same ve that the red trade unions employ to win city workingmen to their ndards.

This is the immediate net result of e first International peasants' conference, which closed at the Kremlin aturday with the adoption of a program the effect of which will be to ve the Communists a new auxiliary their world struggle.

The Keynote motto of the new Red asants' International will be "Peasants and Workers of the World, ite!" instead of the original Marxian slogan, "Workers of the World, ite!"

W. H. Green, Vice-President of the ederated Farmer-Labor Party, and ago Gafvan, President of the Mexican Peasants' League, were elected the permanent presidium of the asants' International, together th nine other delegates representg various countries.

World's greatest source of platinum.

Vast deposits of iron ore, three times those of Europe.

Most valuable timber resources in Europe.

Largest potential wheat supply in the world.

Second largest oil reserves in the world.

Smash Censorship of I. W. W. Bureaucracy!

By HARRISON GEORGE.

It is a shame that a member of the Industrial Workers of the World is compelled to use the columns of papers other than those of the I. W. W. to set forth his ideas to his fellow workers. I have offered articles to the I. W. W. press, after being impressed with the necessity of an error in official publications, which bore upon matters of vital interests to the membership. Publication has been refused my comments, written in the spirit of fellowship, which I feel toward the ideals of the I. W. W. and its membership generally.

Very well. I am not egotistic enough to think that articles must be printed because I write them. Hence I was silent. Silence, however, can make me feel that the time for silence has passed. I claim no special right to speak to or for the membership of the I. W. W. But I believe that every member in good standing in activity entitles me to speak as a member to members—and I say that I am error in official publications, which bore upon matters of vital interests to the membership. Publication has been refused my comments, written in the spirit of fellowship, which I feel toward the ideals of the I. W. W. and its membership generally.

When I say that I am not egotistic enough to think that articles must be printed because I write them, I was either a fool or a knave when I made me feel that the time for silence has passed. Very well, I am not egotistic enough to think that articles must be printed because I write them. Hence

Dollar Rule in the Courts

Not long ago it was the Stillmans. Now it is the Stokeses. Soon it will be some other millionaire family fighting out its domestic troubles in the divorce courts. All of which has no vital interest to labor, except that these court battles show that the millionaires use some of the same frame-up tactics against their own wives, that they use against the workers.

The parade of chauffeurs, maids, errand boys, red light habitues and others, high and low, that the aged millionaire, W. E. D. Stokes, has paraded over the witness stand to incriminate his wife, Helen Elwood Stokes, reminds one of the underworld characters that the open shop bosses supporting the frame-up of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, trotted thru the courts of San Francisco to secure the conviction of these young militant workers.

There is this big difference, however. Because of the great wealth of their husbands, large attorneys' fees and huge court costs were ordered given the wives attacked, by the judges hearing the cases. Mrs. Stillman and Mrs. Elwood, therefore, were able to shatter the conspiracies launched against them.

But the defense forces fighting for the lives of Mooney and Billings, of Sacco and Vanzetti, of the victims in the Centralia, Wash., case, to mention only a few, had but meager funds. The facts of these frame-ups came to light only after these workers had been convicted when, as in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, these victims of capitalist justice were about to be put to death in the electric chair.

The real judge, that plays with the scales of justice, in every American courtroom, is the Almighty American Dollar. The sooner labor realizes this fact, the sooner will the struggle to change this condition gain strength and make progress.

The Lugubrious Gompers

Sam Gompers and his henchmen get an attack of the Anti-Bolshevik Blues every time the Soviet Republic is mentioned. Note the unanimity of their wail at the Portland Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

We take it that Gompers will rally Woll, Lewis, Berry, Tobin et al, to his midst and shed copious tears over the fate of the British workers who, thru the British Co-operative Wholesale Society, are creating, with the Russian workers and peasants, the Russo-British Grain Export Company.

One of the objects of this export company is to immediately arrange for the export of 2 000,000 tons of wheat, about 70,000,000 bushels, from Soviet Russia, to Great Britain, France, Italy and Southern Europe. Gompers will, no doubt, feel relieved that none of it is coming to the United States, because he sees, we are sure, in every kernel of grain, some hidden Communist propaganda.

The British workers are not worried, like Gompers, that the Russian workers do not pay the czarist debts, that they helped themselves to the estates of the landlords and that they run industry without profiteering bosses. The British workers know that the sale of those two million tons of Russian wheat will give the Soviet Government funds with which to purchase the things the Russian workers and peasants need. That will help keep British factories and workers busy. Gompers looks thru the other end of the telescope. He would rather safeguard the international loans of the Wall Street bankers than provide jobs for America's workers. British labor will have the big laugh on America's toilers if Gompers can keep up his Wall Street alliance without losing his job.

They Shouldn't Be Surprised

It looked like such a good joke, that both Chinese and foreign-language papers, outside the censored Peking area in China, laughed openly in their columns when the United States diplomatic corps recognized Marshal Tsao Kun as president.

Tsao Kun was elected thru open bribery and it is charged that he won recognition in the same manner. The diplomats of the powers, thru their Suchow note, demanded punishment of all officials in bandit-infested Shantung, whereas it is claimed that Tsao Kun is the chief bandit and responsible for conditions in Shantung.

Yet the Chinese should not be surprised at all this. American diplomacy has always been happy to deal with the men it could buy. This is but a phase of the old party politics in this country that hands out the jobs to the highest bidder. Tsao Kun had no doubt heard of Newberry and Lorimer, two senators among many others, who bribed their way into the U. S. Congress and ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, who tried to buy the presidency in 1920. He evidently thought they were good examples to follow in an effort to get a little power and cash for himself.

But the Chinese masses are not as self-satisfied as the American "see-pul." They do not intend to accept the decisions of Standard Oil gold, or those of whatever American trust it was that put up the money. Marshal Tsao Kun's government will probably last as long as one of the Standard Oil regimes in Mexico, or an American Fruit Company's dictatorship in one of the Central American Republics. The great American monopolies, seeking foreign fields of exploitation, find it is not as easy to keep subject peoples down as it was once, especially before the Soviet Revolution in Russia.

The 65 Cent Dollar

While America's workers are laughing at the wild plunges of the German mark, while they view with humor stories of the Italian lira, the Swedish krone, the Polish mark, and the Greek drachma, forgetting the once mighty British pound, they must study the value of the American dollar. There is plenty of cheap money on this side of the Atlantic Ocean.

The Department of Labor, at Washington, D. C., which is very conservative, under the administration of the Pittsburgh banker, Davis, tells us that the purchasing power of the still Almighty Dollar is only 65 cents.

The result of a ten years' survey of the dollar's varying value, based upon fluctuations from 1913 to 1923, shows that at times the dollar has been able to purchase only 40 cents worth of goods in the American market. It was down to this low figure in 1920.

It is stated that in foodstuffs the low point of 40 cents was reached in May, 1920, with gradually rising power thereafter, the average today being 70 cents. When purchasing clothing the dollar was worth less than the proverbial 50 cents, in 1920, but we are assured that it has now crept back to an average of 50 cents this year.

The latest government statistics, however, assure us that the cost of all living commodities is increasing, which puts the dollar on the toboggan for a downward trip once more. It is with this gloomy outlook for the whole working class that the open shop bosses are again clamoring for reductions in wages. The French army in the Ruhr and the jobless army of almost two millions in England, are battering down living conditions in Germany and Great Britain. But the American worker will also feel the pinch of increasing poverty this winter if he does not develop greater solidarity in his ranks and present a stronger front to the bosses. The time for laughing at the plight of Europe's oppressed should be about over. The time for a little real thinking and more realistic action is at hand.

The Drive Toward Unity

Danger of a Fascisti dictatorship in Germany is driving the workers together thruout Europe. Where the Communist plea for the United Front has failed in the past, it is succeeding now.

In Red Saxony and in Red Thuringia the Left Socialists stand solid with the Communists against the threatening Fascism. The Socialist Trade Union Congress, at Berlin, was forced to issue the demand for the general strike in case the Stresemann capitalist coalition sent white armies against the two red German states.

Edo Fimmen, recently resigned as secretary of the Amsterdam Trade Union International, who urged British aid to the German workers' revolution, has now appeared before the workers of Czecho-Slovakia with the same message, that, "The German workers are fighting the coming fight; unless the united working class of all countries comes to its aid."

One of the first results of Fimmen's plea to the Czecho-Slovaks was that the Red Trade Unions were invited to meet and act jointly with the Miners' Strike Committee. The miners have been out on strike for six weeks against reductions in wages, but the offer of the Red Trade Unions to help them has hitherto been refused. The workers failed to present a united front in the recent elections and lost heavily to the reactionary parties. This is also pushing the Czecho-Slovak workers towards unity. It was in these elections that the Communist proved the strongest single party among the workers, getting over 500,000 votes. Both the Czech and the German Social-Democrats suffered heavy losses.

In spite of the yellow social democratic leadership, that has held them in leash to capitalism much too long, European labor will win the united front that will triumph over Fascism everywhere, that will usher in, in time, the All-European Workers' and Peasants' Republic.

A Threat to All

There is a threat to all foreign-born in this country, who insist on doing their own thinking, in the order to deport Paul Glaser, an attorney who has stuck it out in the midst of labor's struggle in the United States Steel Corporation town—Gary, Indiana.

They couldn't chain Glaser to a work place in a steel mill. Glaser readily adapted himself to conditions in this country, became a lawyer, but remained a working class viewpoint. He became active in the first Socialist Party branch in Gary. He came into the Workers Party when it was created. He stood by the steel strikers in 1919. He unmasked the attempt, during the railroad strike, to twist a fatal wreck on the Michigan Central Railroad into a "red plot." At every turn he proved himself a valiant defender of the workers, a dangerous enemy of the bosses.

And now the bosses have hit back. The bosses were not satisfied to revoke Glaser's right to practice law. They were not satisfied to withdraw his citizenship rights. They have gone to the extreme of securing his deportation from the country. Glaser fought the case thru to the United States Supreme Court. He knew that a great principle was at stake, a principle involving the future of millions of foreign-born workers in this country. So he carried the case to Washington, D. C. But the Supreme Court refused to interfere, thus endorsing, without rendering an opinion itself, the decisions of the lower courts, that Glaser must be driven out of the country. Glaser will go back to Russia, now under Soviet Rule, and he will not object. But if the precedent established in his case is upheld it will mean that foreign-born workers in this country, accepted citizens of the United States, may have their citizenship revoked and be returned to lands in Europe now under murderous Fascisti rule.

The fight for the rights of the foreign-born in the United States must be waged with increased vigor with the opening of the new Congress. There were 1,500 paid admissions. More than $800 was paid in for shares, with additional pledges. The collection totalled $460, making a total income of more than $2,000.

With the Children

By PETER REED

The Communist Children's Groups, our basic form of organization, differ fundamentally from the Sunday Schools, as such. Firstly, they are formed for study classes formed along capitalist lines, and, second, no parents organizations dictate or in any other way, wield an undue hand in the work amongst these young comrades. Furthermore, in these groups the leaders come into their own. Here at last, has a start been made to center in the hands of the Communist Youth the fascinating and guiding power of working class children. These youthful comrades by virtue of age and superiority are best adapted to assume this control over the younger movement. And the Young Workers League is beginning to assert itself in this as in other regards.

The Children's movement, or Junior Section of the Young Workers League, must not be conceived of as a waterboy to the YWL. It is not this by any means. On the contrary, the children's movement, at least during its first stages, must be considered as a self-sufficient entity, even as the YWL is absorbed in its own particular problems, apart from the Workers Party.

Since the child spends the greater part of his time in school, the school room must be the basis upon which our Junior Groups must work. Moreover, the capitalist class, thru its educational institutions, take good care to work for the complete mental control of the working class child, even as it now completely controls both old and young workers, physically.

Before we can become sufficiently enlightened on the actual school situation, the children themselves must be drawn out. This will be accomplished by having each member of the group prepare a written or verbal report on school conditions, generally, including: lighting, insufficient or inadequate windows; ventilation, not sufficient air, resting conditions, overcrowding; methods of teaching, hysterical or other harmful features; the trend of religious or patriotic teaching; whether patriotic and religious songs are in vogue in the school; the procedure in celebrating "holidays" of different kinds; the extent of military, or potential military training; the nature of bourgeois history, geography and arithmetic; the composition, language study, etc; the attitude of the teacher towards the working class movement and its leaders; the teachers' attitude toward the European situation and so on.

When this work is carried to a successful conclusion the practical aim of the groups will be developed within the schools as such. Definite plans for the later phase of this task will not be drawn up, but this will be accomplished in due time.

Apart from the actual educational, or class struggle, in its narrow sense, of the school activity, general affairs will also be indulged in. Trips to the wealthy residence districts and those of the poor will be planned. Games, plays, etc., all of a Communistic nature will be part of the activities. Organizational campaigns, apart from those existing thru school contacts will also be organized. The Young Comrade," our official organ, is being disposed of in considerable numbers and generally the whole movement is progressing in a satisfactory way.

THE FORK-TAILED MONKEY

The New York Times states that a terrible misfortune afflicts the residents of Kwelchowang, China. The 3,500,000 inhabitants are so ignorant that "they do not know that the world war was fought" to console Kweichowanese! Never to know of Pershing, Hard-Boiled Smith and Alice Roosevelt!

But there are compensations! If they don't know of the war, then—by Jingo—they have other gifts visited upon it. The National Geographical Society asserts that there dwells in far Kweichow the shing-hsing-erh-lichi, alias The Forked Monkey, which likewise to the Kweichowanese may live in ignorance of the world war.

The Society is going after the Fork Tails, however. With a Standard Oil feaut in the party, doubtless. While the Society does not announce what they will do with the fork-tailed monkeys when they find 'em. Probably capitalism will put them going the rounds of the organ-grinders' employ. Perhaps this biological remnant is wanted to perpetuate the race of those who oppose amalgamation and a labor party in the U. S. A. The ways of evolution are full of surprises. "Perhaps similarity to the antics and physiognomy of Gompers may entitle the Chief of the Fork Tails to be an understudy for the head of the A. F. of L. But it may be an improvement after all!

The Price of Food Is Increasing

An Associated Press report from Washington, D. C., declares that the retail food prices, on the average of reports of 51 cities to the bureau of labor statistics, crawled up another 2 per cent during the month from Aug. 15 to Sept. 15.

Los Angeles, Louisville and St. Louis, with 4 per cent, were the high group out of forty-six cities showing an increase. Among others were Buffalo, Cincinnati, Columbus, O., New Haven, New Orleans, Portland, Ore., San Francisco and Seattle, 3 per cent; Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Kansas City, Little Rock, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Newark, New York, St. Paul and Springfield, Ill., 2 per cent; Denver, Indianapolis, Peoria, Philadelphia and Washington, 1 per cent.

Manchester, N. H., Charleston, S. C., and Portland, Me., showed a decrease of less than one-half of 1 per cent, while no change was reported at Boston and Butte.

Retail food price increases for the fifty-one cities during the year ending Sept. 15 ranged from 11 per cent at Cleveland to 3 per cent at Seattle.

And still the bosses say the workers do not need an increase in wages.

Burst Gompers Terror Bubble

That Sam Gompers is not succeeding in frightening great masses of the progressives into his reactionary camp, thru his red raiding activities, is seen in editorial declarations appearing in a large number of labor papers. Last week we published the views of the Minneapolis, Minn., Labor Review, the official organ of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly. This week we publish an interesting editorial from the Minnesota Union Advocate, the official organ not only of the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly, but also of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor. Its editor is William Mahoney, one of the active workers for the creation of a class political movement of the farmers and industrial workers in his state. The editorial declares:

THE MARTYRIZATION OF WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

Between the public press, the courts and the labor officials, William Z. Foster manages to occupy the center of the stage, and is gaining in popularity each day. An increasing number of progressive, particularly members of organized labor, are asking just what this "terrible" man is advocating that everyone seems to be jumping on him.

Everything he touches or advocates is shunned as a plague by the prominent labor leaders, and regardless of their virtue worthy measures are fought viciously when espoused by Foster.

The idea of industrial unionism was considered and advocated and even embraced long before Foster was heard of, yet men who have long been classed as progressives have renounced their advanced views to oppose Foster.

Foster advocates an independent political party of the farmers and workers; now this movement is taboo.

We suppose some of these reactionaries will change their costumes because Foster wears pants!

We do not know what Foster has in the back of his head as to future plans and forms of working class activity; but we do not see anything about the program of the present that any sensible pe son should shy at.

We believe in the industrial form of labor organization, and, whether we like it or not, it must come. It may be retarded but cannot be averted, and the longer it is delayed the greater is the disadvantage the workers will suffer. But we are not so foolish as to believe that it is the solution of labor's difficulties—it is just a step towards the goal, and a necessary one.

We favor independent political action by and for the producing class, and believe it to be the shortest route to freedom. Success politically does not consist in electing representatives to office so much as in forcing thru progressive legislation.

Sometimes it is absolutely a misfortune to have control, when the ability to "deliver the goods" is missing. It is better to reach this point hapa no by a long series of successes, a force the hand of the opposition.

The progressive legislation in Minnesota is due not so much to the power as to the threat of the Farmer-Labor movement. We cannot take the credit and the benefit without the responsibility. But the day will come when we will take control and then we will be in a position to make good. So why hound and persecute a villify Foster for urging the solidarity of the workers, politically and industrially? Is it envy or fear that actuates his assailants?

There is no denying but the thing that Foster advocates are the most dangerous to the exploiting class, and the enemies of the workers are glad to have the authorized union representatives as allies in discrediting him and the measures he advocates.

We refuse to be stampeded from the advanced position we took long before Foster appeared on the stage. He has not an original idea in his program, and we are perfectly willing to march along the road of progress with him and with all others willing to boost!

Matthew Woll, Clown Prince of the American Federation of Labor, declares that realization has surged ahead of 98 per cent of the unions. That Matt spoke for an hour and a half on the perils of Communism. What a waste so much time on the puny 2 per cent Matt? Will declared that by next year not even one radical will be able to appear as a delegate to the annual American Federation of Labor circus. Perhaps yes and perhaps no.

French Workers Realize Their Duty in the Present Revolutionary Crisis in German

By BORIS SOUVARINE.

The first German revolution was crushed, and this was not only due to the treachery of the social-democracy, which took sides with the defenders of capital, and joined forces with the bourgeoisie, for the purpose of accomplishing the bloody suppression of the working class vanguard gathered around the Spartacus group, but it was also due to the fact that the foreign aid which could have freed it from the pressure of the imperialist armies of the Entente was not given.

In the years 1918 and 1919 the then majority of the French Socialist Party still made common cause with the bourgeoisie. And the then leaders of the party, which gained the majority later on and developed into the Communist Party, was incapable of any foreign political action. Things were practically the same in the trade unions, although here the left wing was considerably more powerful.

Neither the party nor the C. G. T. (General Confederation of Labor) was at that time inclined to manifest practically its solidarity with the German working class, although theoretically, they proclaimed such solidarity very eloquently in their congress resolutions.

But even had they been so inclined, they were not in a position to do so. As to the proletariat as a whole, the great majority of this class was completely under the influence of every kind of nationalist feeling.

It was tired of war, in need of rest, and remained for the most part deaf to the warnings and appeals issued by the revolutionary minorities in the party and the trade unions.

Five years have passed since then, and the tide of revolution is rising again in Germany. But now the small Spartacus group has become a great Communist Party, counting over 300,000 members. The German bourgeoisie is divided against itself, social democracy becomes weaker from day to day, falls more and more into discredit, and does more and more lose confidence of the broad masses of the workers. The impending civil war begins under very different conditions to those of the years 1918 and 1919.

But what changes have taken place since then outside of Germany, and, in particular, in France?

One striking fact at once forces itself upon our attention—the existence of a Communist Party which did not exist at all five years ago, a proletarian party we l disciplined and led by no labor party in France has been let since the Commune. A party which has been taught and tempered by several internal crises, which has already given many proofs of its fighting capacity and initiative, and which is developing from day to day into a really militant section of the Communist Internationl.

Without doubt, this fact is in itself an excellent witness to the awakening of revolutionary consciousness in an important part of the French proletariat, and is at the same time a guarantee of its real solidarity with the German proletariat. Neither friend nor foe has any right to doubt that the Communist Party of France will at all costs do its duty when the time comes.

But what can this party, with its 60,000 members, do against the powerful, rich and well organized bourgeoisie, unless it finds allies among the other political or so-called non-political tendencies of the French working class, particularly of the revolutionary trade unions?

What role does the C. G. T. U. think to play in the coming struggle? Up to now our comrades in the C. G. T. U. or at least a part of them, do not seem to have clearly recognised this situation in Central Europe. While at the present time there could be nothing more important than the solidarity of the workers as to how best and most effectually to aid the German proletariat in its hard struggle, the latest conference of the national committee of the C. G. T. U. did not even adopt any definite attitude with regard to this problem, but permitted itself to be completely dominated by internal conflicts.

There is no doubt that the C. G. T. U. possesses a large majority fully aware of its duties and responsibilities, and this will not allow itself to be led astray by the immoral anti-Communistic coalition.

And France possesses today a Communist Party which has already shown itself capable of taking the initiative against reaction and imperialism under the united front of the proletariat. The influence of this party on the unorganized masses increases from day to day, and it will be able to mobilize a magnificent army for the defence of the German revolution.

This task is doubtless very difficult in a country where the working class has not yet suffered in its own person the effects of the post-war crisis, where natural egoism easily grips the upper hand over the spirit of solidarity and self-sacrifice, where the reformists of the Socialist Party and of the C. G. T. increase the inertia of the masses by every available means, and the démoralisers of every shade of opinion are united in spreading dirt at every truly revolutionary fighter and in spreading confusion.

But events have also an element of their own. They shed such a brilliant light on the actual situation that any attempt to sabotage the struggle being carried on by the Communist Party is bound to appear to the class conscious workers in its true colors—as a purely counter-revolutionary action

Coolidge's World Conspiracy!

PLOTS WORLD CONFERENCE AGAINST SOVIET RUSSIA AND WORKERS' GERMANY

By John Pepper

The American government, that is, President Coolidge, the Steel Trust and Wall Street, have devised the most enormous conspiracy since the world war. Their objectives are, to rescue capitalism in Germany thru a big international loan, to prepare a new invasion against Russia, and to halt the radicalization of the farmers and workers in the United States.

This is the most ambitious plan of American imperialism; it is the biggest and boldest attempt to bring about a general capitalist restoration in the world.

That is the sense of the American-British plan for an international conference for solving the German reparations problem. This International Conference will be but a gathering of the wolves of the Stock Exchanges of New York, London, Paris and Rome to pass upon the future of Europe and thereby also upon the future of America.

The U. S. Wants to Assassinate the German Revolution.

The backbone of the entire conspiracy is the great international loan by American bankers to Germany, guaranteed by the United States government. The primary purpose of the loan is to save the present capitalist rule in Germany.

The masters of Wall Street recognize with hearts beating with fear, that the decisive battle is being fought out today in Germany, between the forces of world capitalism and the world revolution. They know that without a huge international loan the German capitalists would be unable to buy the raw materials necessary for maintaining industry, or the food to insure the bare existence of the urban population. They realize that the revolution in Germany is inevitable, not only because the Communist Party there is gaining more and more the support of the working class, but because the ruling class is no longer capable of fulfilling even the most elementary duties and tasks of leadership in production and government administration.

American capitalism perceives with growing anxiety that not only the workers, but also the lower middle class and intellectuals are coming to see more and more clearly that their only salvation from suppression by a military dictatorship, from national humiliation and starvation, is an alliance with the Russian Red Army and the overflowing stores of food of Soviet Russia. American capitalism is now broaching a plan for helping the German capitalist class in order to enable it to provide food, clothing and fuel to the hungry and half naked German masses. American capitalism is prepared to give an international loan to German capitalists, not from humanitarian motives, not because it cares whether the German workers perish or not, but to maintain the German Workers as wage slaves, to prevent the creation of a German Soviet Republic.

The United States could have saved Germany before, if it had taken a stand against greedy French imperialism, but it never made a move in that direction. It is only now, only very lately, that President Coolidge has declared the readiness of the United States to "help" Germany through an international loan. American capital was not willing to help Germany as long as such help would have meant a fight against French imperialism. But President Coolidge forthwith discovers the soft humanitarian heart of the United States at the moment that aid for Germany means a fight against the German workers, means hindering of a German Soviet Republic.

Calvin Coolidge is in his element at last. He was elected as president of the United States because he broke the police strike in Boston. American capitalism wanted a strike-breaker on a national scale. Coolidge now goes a step forward and upward; he is beginning to play the role of strike-breaker on an international scale.

Bringing Back the Kaiser.

An official statement of Coolidge shows still more clearly the criminal designs of American capitalism. Coolidge has declared that the policy of the United States government is, "Hands off Germany!"—that the United States government does not desire to interfere in case the present republican form of government changes to a monarchical form of government.

What does that mean? This statement of the President of the United States is nothing less than the greatest and most brazen encouragement of the plots for a German monarchist counter-revolution. Child, the ambassador of the United States to Italy, congratulated Mussolini when he overthrew the elected government and destroyed the Parliament. Moore, the ambassador of the United States to Spain, was the first diplomat in Spain to congratulate General Primo Rivera, when he overthrew the elected government and parliament with armed power. The foreign policy of American imperialism has made considerable progress since 1917. At that time American imperialism declared war against the Central Powers with the slogan of making the world safe for democracy. In 1923 American imperialism is the open champion in Europe, of the most brutal form of anti-democratic, militarist dictatorship. In 1918 Wilson declared to the German people that it could not have peace before it drove out the Kaiser and the Hohenzollerh dynasty. In 1923, Calvin Coolidge declares to the German people that they cannot receive a piece of bread as long they do not restore the monarchy, the Kaiser, and the Hohenzollern dynasty.

The reason of the big change is that American capitalism has a vital interest in conserving capitalism in Germany through a big international loan. But the steel trust and Wall street know that the present half-petty bourgeois, half Socialist republic in Germany is impotent. It must collapse under the more and more powerful attacks from the right by the monarchists, that is, the big landowners and big industrialists, and from the left by the Communists, that is, the mighty German working class. American capitalism encourages monarchist restoration in Germany because this direct rule of the big landowners and big industrialists is a much greater security against the workers and for the international loan, than the vacillating, shilly-shally Stresemann government.

A New Invasion Against Russia.

The second motive of American capitalism for giving an international loan to Germany is to create possibilities for a new invasion against Soviet Russia.

Coolidge knows that he cannot repeat the example of Wilson. He cannot send American troops to Murmansk. But he wants to revive the intervention policy on a thousand times greater scale! He wants to destroy the German workers, to help the German monarchists to political power; he wants to arm and to equip the German counter revolutionary army of Generals Ludendorff and Hoffman with American money. He wants to isolate Soviet Russia, and thereby prepare a new invasion against Russia, more frightful than any previous one.

They Want to Deceive the Farmers.

But American capitalism has another, third, motive. It wants to grant this big loan to Germany and eventually also to other countries of Europe, but wants to compel the debtors to purchase American wheat, corn and other food-stuffs.

The editorials of the newspapers are silent on this plan; but the financial reports state that Coolidge is ready to extend loans to Germany or other countries, either through reviving of the War Grain Corporation or in some other form, in order to make it possible for those countries to buy American wheat. American capitalism sees with growing anxiety that the bankruptcy of the farmers is producing an ever deeper and more radical revolutionary discontent in the farmer masses. It wants to buy the farmers off politically by enabling them to sell their wheat to foreign countries. Bankrupt Europe cannot, however, buy wheat, hogs and cattle from the American farmer unless the American capitalists lend money to Europe.

They Want to Postpone the Industrial Crisis.

But the trust rulers and masters of Wall Street have still a fourth motive when they declare their readiness to give Germany or other countries a loan of a few billion.

The prosperity of American industry is nearing its end. The oil industry is in a deep crisis of over-production. Copper experienced the lowest price in a year, with 12½ cents a pound. The unfilled orders of the steel industry are diminishing. The building boom has come to a halt. The American trusts see with teeth chattering, a new crisis approaching, with the ceasing of production, with millions of unemployed, with an irresistible radicalization of the laboring masses. American capitalism is anxious to prolong artificially the duration of industrial prosperity in America, through a loan to Germany. It is granting the loan, but in turn it will compel Germany to buy American steel, copper, oil and textiles.

The Party of Wall Street, the Republican Party, views with a deadly fear the presidential and congressional elections of 1924. It knows for a certainty that it will suffer a sure defeat if it fails to appease the dissatisfaction of the farmer and if the laboring masses will be once more driven to despair by an industrial crisis.

The Republican Party is broken into factions. The lower middle class and farmers today no longer see their leader in the capitalists. The Third Party movement is becoming more and more concrete. Ford's candidacy on a Third Party ticket is an ever greater probability. The Labor Party sentiment is crystallizing more and more, despite Gompers, Johnston and Hillquit, into active organizations. If 1924 will be a year of industrial crisis, America will face its deepest-going political and social crisis since the Civil War.

We Must Alarm the Workers!

The idea of the international loan for Germany is the most far-reaching plan of American imperialism. Wall Street's hope is that, supported upon the almighty, magical, most potent force of the most tremendous gold reserve of the world, it would be able to bring into realization this many-sided world conspiracy.

The American loan to Germany at this time means the destruction of the German revolution, the restoration of the German monarchy and the saving of German capitalism.

The American loan to Germany means the preparation of an invasion against Soviet Russia.

The American loan to Germany means handing the biggest gift to the grain gamblers and meat packers under the cover of the slogan that the government wants to help the bankrupt farmers. The exploited farmers do not own their own crops. Their products from the moment of harvesting are not their possession, but the possession of the mortgage-holding bankers, grain elevator companies, and greedy grain-brokers.

The American loan to Germany means the artificial postponement by a few months of the industrial crisis due, in order then to render it so much the deeper and more devastating.

The American loan to Germany means the attempt of United States imperialism to turn Europe into an American colony. It means a new war-menace. The bankers first send American dollars to Europe, and afterwards they will send American soldiers. In the first world war it was the same. America entered the war first with industrial products and international loans, and afterward with armies. The bankers' conspiracy can postpone perhaps by a few months the industrial crisis, but it means compulsory military service for workers and farmers. Coolidge is but the pace-maker for General Pershing.

The American loan to Germany means the most ruthless attack upon the whole working class of the world. It means robbing the German workers of the eight-hour law and perpetuating their wage slavery. It means a menace for the workers' and farmers' rule of Russia. It means the greatest deception of American workers and exploited farmers.

Against this consniracy of the White House in Washington and the Stock Exchange in New York, the American working class must oppose a powerful and aggressive united front.

We must defend in Chicago and in New York and in San Francisco the German workers of Berlin and Dresden and Hamburg. We should not forget that the only possibility for saving Soviet Russia is to save workers' Germany. If is too late to defend Russia at the Beresina. It must be defended at the Rhine. It is too late to fight in Petrograd and Moscow or in Odessa; the victory must be secured in Berlin and Dresden and Hamburg.

Let not the future American revolution forget that its first battle was fought in Petrograd and Moscow, and that its second battle is even now being fought in Berlin and Hamburg. The occupation of the Winter Palace in Petrograd six years ago, on November 7, 1917, was likewise an assault against the citadels of American capitalism. And we must see that the barricades in Hamburg are barricades not only against Stinnes, but also against Gary, Morgan and Rockefeller.

The American workers must fight now for Soviet Russia and workers' Germany because this fight is the fight for the life and future of the American working class.

Treason to the Working Class.

PARIS.—A resolution in the chamber of deputies to resume trade relations with Soviet Russia was supported by the Communists, who demanded that no strings be tied to the proposal. Locheur, the finance minister, with the Socialists behind him, replied that France might on the contrary to oppose with all her might the resumption of relations as long as the Soviet Republic refused to conform to the rules of international law. He was applauded by all the members, except the Communists. The latter accused the Socialists of treason to the working class.

The Interview.

Senator King asked about the possibilities of Russian [illegible] ...German affairs in case of a revolution there. Trotsky replied, "We will not send a single Red Army man beyond the borders of Soviet Russia if we will not be compelled to do so by force. Our peasants and workers would not permit us to take the initiative in any kind of military operations. If our government would be forced by force to accept a policy of aggression, naturally if the German monarchists would win and enter into armed war with the Entente for the purpose of invading Russia (and this was actually what [illegible] ...ed), we will fight and, I hope, we will be the victors. But I do not think that this will happen. In any case, we will not interfere in an internal civil war. The reasons for this are plain. Our interference would necessarily [illegible] ...war with Poland, and we are opposed to war. We are not hiding our sympathies with the German working class and with its heroic struggle for liberty. To be exact, I must say, 'if we could guarantee the success of the German revolution without taking the risk of war we would do everything possible to have it achieved. But, as I said before, we are opposed to war, and war would also harm the German revolution. A revolution can be long-lived if it wins by its own forces, especially when a great nation is involved. We are with Germany against the savage and bloody French imperialism. We are heart and hand with the German working class in its struggle against exploitation—both external and internal. But at the same time we are for peace."

The question was asked whether Russia would attack Poland. Trotsky replied, "If the Germans would only get a schooling in patience and tact we advise them to refer to the volume of our diplomatic correspondence with Poland. In its attitude towards Poland Russia has really shown an angelic patience. Nevertheless, the agreement reached at Riga Poland has refused to recognize our government re-organized on the basis of our new Federated Constitution. Poland has conducted and still conducts an underhanded war. Farmers in turn wipe off the surface of the earth the remnants of European civilization. The Americans could take travel to Europe to observe the cemetary of the old culture."

To Senator King's question as to the military aims of the Soviet government and active participation in favor of revolutions in Europe, Trotsky replied, "Naturally we have an opinion of our grain to us and a bad one. We have 600,000 soldiers. This is not a small number, but in comparison to France, for example, or with our nearest neighbors, our army is very small. For our immense population, the size of our country, our border lines, our attractive natural resources, you will have to admit we have a very limited army. We once offered—and if America would support it, we are ready to make another offer—to limit our army to a minimum absolutely necessary for the full guarantees of internal safety, if our neighbors would make a corresponding cut in their armies. It would be insanity on our part, considering the difficult economic conditions under which we live, to wish to increase our army. We have succeeded in getting moderate but firm economic gains during the last two years. We hope that our economic development will proceed more steadily during the next two or three years if we will succeed in keeping peace. Under such conditions military adventures would only mean a serious danger to the economic reconstruction of our country. Russia is not inclined towards an aggressive war. We have plenty of land and our railroad system is not sufficiently developed. But on the other hand, the additions together with our severe winters only help to strengthen our defense. This has been proven during the last civil war, the anglo-american invasion and also during the latest interventions. This fact is the starting point for all our military structure. We are at present building up a purely defensive territorial army, gradually converting the Red Army into a militia. Permanent armies are more easily turned into a tool of aggression. A territorial militia is everywhere in itself a guarantee of peaceful, purely defensive policy."

The question was asked as to how the Soviet government, in its present commercial relations with other countries when it does not recognize the old debts. Trotsky answered, "We are paying our debts and we will pay, but they must be our own debts. As far as December, 1906, the Provisional Soviet, the forth runner of the present government, had sent out a warning to all the foreign consuls and foreign capitalists, to the effect that the Russian revolution does not recognize any debts contracted by the Czars, and will not pay for any form of help given by the foreign capitalists to the Czarist regime. This may appear unjust, but the land owners of the Southern States have during the Civil War of the sixties contrived it unjust to deprive the owners of the negro slaves of their property rights. Nevertheless, the victory of the Civil War the present mighty America was born. History does not travel on the road of text books of international law. We may regret this, but life is not based on jurisprudence. Still we have learned of the past, undermine the possibilities of getting together at present and in the future."

"You ask where are the guarantees that we will not refuse to pay our own debts? My reply is—in the logic of things. It would be suicide on our part not to recognize the obligations which we ourselves took upon us, if we want to keep the confidence of the business world. We can assure you that as long as private property exists in America we will recognize the American investments in Russia. We recognize all the technical difficulties which at present the foreign business man finds on our territories, but these difficulties are to a great extent the result of unregulated relations. We, on our part, are ready to assist the American firms in every way possible, if they only refrain from placing in our industries. The relations between governments, especially with widely different economic structures, cannot be based on sentimentalities. There is no need for it. Naturally we are very thankful to the American people for the help extended to us during the famine, but business relations cannot be based on mere expression of gratitude. They must be based on mutual advantages. The geographical situation of both governments are such as to include any possibility of military imperialist danger. The relations, therefore, can be regulated from a purely business point of view. I am firmly convinced that the American business world will very soon realize the importance to America to the Soviet market. The United States has for the last two years had a period of industrial prosperity. According to the economic laws this period must prosperity will be followed by depressions and crises. The first symptoms of this are already evident. To avoid serious collapse of its industry America must look for foreign markets. Europe will remain in ruin for many years as the factory industry America must look for foreign markets. Europe will remain in ruin for many years as the factory industry America must look for foreign markets. Europe will remain in ruin for many years as the factory
